2. Setting aside report. The report cannot be attacked, except for error or mistakes of law, shown on its face, or by motion for a new trial. Goodrich v. Mayor and Common Council, 5 Cal. 430; Porter v. Barling, 2 Cal. 72; 2 Cal. 112; 56 Am. Dec. 319; Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 362; Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 407; Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322; Cappe v. Brizzolara, 19 Cal. 607; McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 92; Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122. If the referee to take an account commits an error at the outstart, which unsettles the account, the court is not bound to go over the account and correct the error, but may set aside the report and again refer the case. Hidden v. Jordan, 32 Cal. 397. The report of a referee upon conflicting evidence has the same effect as a verdict of a jury, and will not be disturbed in the supreme court, upon an appeal from an order refusing to grant a new trial in the court below. Ritchie v. Bradshaw, 5 Cal. 229. Though a pleading would be bad upon demurrer, yet if no objection be taken at the time, and the case is submitted to a referee, the defect of the plea is not sufficient reason to set aside the report. Ritchie v. Davis, 5 Cal. 453. If there is no exception taken to the ruling of a referee, and the rule of law by which he arrived at his conclusions be not disclosed, the court cannot disturb the report. Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 130; Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 125; but see Butte Table Mountain Co. v. Morgan, 19 Cal. 609. When a case is referred to a referee to hear and determine the issues of fact and of law, and report the same to the court, and he makes his report, wherein no errors of law or fact occur, and no exceptions are taken, the court below should not set aside the report and grant a new trial. Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 125. It would be an abuse of discretion for a court to set aside a report of a referee, correct in all its parts, without any other apparent reason than the mere volition of the judge. Goodrich v. Mayor and Common Council, 5 Cal. 430. After judgment upon a report of referee, the court may set aside the report and grant a new trial for any reason that would be sufficient to set aside the award of an arbitrator, and for no other. Headley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322. The provisions of the Practice Act relating to new trials apply to cases tried by a referee, as well as to cases tried by the court itself, or by a jury. Cappe v. Brizzolara, 19 Cal. 607. If the alleged error consists in the final conclusion of law or fact drawn from the testimony, and the evidence is certified to the court by the referee, the proper course is to move to set aside the report and for a new trial. Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353. See note to § 645 of this code. If a referee reports the facts upon all the issues, but draws an erroneous conclusion of law from the facts found, and also reports a judgment in accordance with his conclusions of law, the court may set aside the conclusions of law, and direct the proper judgment to be entered. Calderwood v. Pyser, 31 Cal. 333.

3. Motion to set aside. The time within which a notice of a motion must be filed to set aside the report of a referee is the same in which a notice of motion for a new trial must be filed, and a failure to appear and prosecute a motion to set aside the report is an abandonment of motion, and the order made denying the motion for such failure to appear, is not the subject of review on appeal. Mahoney v. Wilson, 15 Cal. 43; Frank v. Doane, 15 Cal. 303; Green v. Doane, 15 Cal. 304.

4. Appeal. The appellate court will not review a judgment entered on the report of a referee, if no objection was made in the court below to the report. Porter v. Barling, 2 Cal. 72. When a report of a referee has been erroneously set aside and a new trial granted, and plaintiff appeals, the supreme court will correct both errors at the same time, in a chancery case. Grayson v. Guild, 4 Cal. 125. An order setting aside a report of a referee, appointed to take an account, is not the subject of appeal before judgment. Johnston v. Dopkins, 6 Cal. 83. Where a cause is tried by a referee and the testimony is conflicting, the findings will not be disturbed. Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 179. The appellate court will not review the findings of a referee to ascertain whether they are contrary to the evidence, except on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11. An order setting aside the finding of a referee in a divorce case, and sending the case back to the referee for further testimony, is not the subject of appeal before judgment. Baker v. Baker, 10 Cal. 528. Where the record on appeal does not disclose a motion for new trial, it will be presumed that the findings of the referee were based upon sufficient evidence. Donahue v. Cromartie, 21 Cal. 80.

CHAPTER VII.

PROVISIONS RELATING TO TRIALS IN GENERAL.

Article I. Exceptions. §§ 646–653.
II. New Trials. §§ 656–663a.

ARTICLE I.

EXCEPTIONS.

§ 646. "Exception" defined. When taken.
§ 647. Verdict or order in absence of party, deemed excepted to.
§ 648. Exception, form of.
§ 649. Bill of exceptions, when to be presented, etc.
§ 650. Bill of exceptions. Presentment of bill.
Duty of judge to strike out useless matter.
§ 651. Exceptions after judgment.
§ 652. Proceedings if judge refuse to allow bill of exceptions.
§ 653. Settlement of bill of exceptions.

§ 646. "Exception" defined. When taken. An exception is an objection upon a matter of law to a decision made, either before or after judgment, by a court, tribunal, judge, or other judicial officer, in an action or proceeding. The exception must be taken at the time the decision is made, except as provided in section six hundred and forty-seven.

Matters deemed excepted to. Post, § 647.
Amendments to exceptions. Post, § 650.

Legislation § 646. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 188, which read: "An exception is an objection taken at the trial to a decision upon a matter of law, whether such trial be by jury, court, or referees, and whether the decision be made during the formation of a jury, or in the admission of evidence, or in the charge to a jury, or at any other time from the calling of the action for trial to the rendering of the verdict or decision. But no exception shall be regarded on a motion for a new trial, or on an appeal, unless the exception be material, and affect the substantial rights of the parties." When enacted in 1872, § 646 read: "Exceptions may be taken by either party to any ruling or decision made by a court or judge, either before or after judgment, in any action or proceeding, but except in the cases provided for in the next section, must be taken at the time the ruling is made."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 312, to read: "An exception is an objection upon a matter of law to a decision of a court, judge, or referee in an action or proceeding, and may be taken by either party to any decision made either before or after judgment; and except as provided in the following section, it must be taken at the time the decision is made."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 91.

Construction of section. Decisions under special statutes, prior to the adoption of the codes, requiring an objection to the findings in the court below, are of no authority now. Cargnani v. Cargnani, 16 Cal. App. 96; 116 Pac. 306. Failure of the court to pass on the question of the admissibility of evidence, taken subject to a subsequent ruling as to its admissibility, need not be excepted to, where no decision is made. Raymond v. Glover, 122 Cal. 471; 55 Pac. 398.

Exception, defined. The exception to be taken to the decision of the court is an exception to the findings of fact, which, ordinarily, is based on the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings. Thompson v. Hancock, 51 Cal. 110. An essential part of the definition of an exception is, that it must be taken upon a fact or facts not denied. Will of Bowen, 34 Cal. 682.

Necessity for exception. Prior to the amendment of § 647, post, in 1909, an exception had to be taken to the admission of evidence, before it could be complained of (Crackel v. Crackel, 17 Cal. App. 600; 121 Pac. 295); and where an objection was taken to evidence by counsel, and overruled, and no exception taken thereto, it was presumed, on appeal, that counsel acquiesced in the ruling. Turner v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; Keeran v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 580; Russell v. Dennison, 45 Cal. 337; Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 618; 10 Pac. 183; McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312; Dickerson v. Dickerson, 108 Cal. 351; 41 Pac. 475.

Waiver of objections. Where evidence is offered and received for a certain purpose, the party excepting to the action of the court in overruling his objection thereto may accept the decision for the purposes of the future conduct of the case, and his doing so does not constitute a waiver of the objection made. Guardianships of Boyes, 151 Cal. 143; 90 Pac. 454.

Objections not taken at trial, consideration of, on appeal. Where evidence is objected to upon a particular ground, a contention that it was inadmissible for another reason cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Le Mesnager v. Hamilton, 101 Cal. 532; 40 Am. St. Rep. 81; 35 Pac. 1054. Where an exception is not taken at the time a decision is made, except as provided in § 647, post, no objection to the ruling can be urged on appeal. Randall v. Freed, 154 Cal. 299; 97 Pac. 669. An objection to the admissibility of evidence cannot be considered on appeal, where no objection was taken thereto at the trial (Estate of Arnold, 147 Cal. 583; 82 Pac. 252; Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125); nor an objection to the propriety of a question asked by the court of a witness (Woods v. Jensen, 130 Cal. 200; 62 Pac. 473); nor an objection to the opinion evidence of a physician, on the ground that it was not adapted to the facts in the case, and was not based on a hypothesis consistent with those facts (Healy v. Visalia etc. R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585; 36 Pac. 125); nor an objection to the testimony of an expert witness, that he did not possess the requisite knowledge to testify on the subject matter of the case (Brumley v. Flint, 87 Cal. 471; 25 Pac. 683; Ah Tong v. Earle Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679; 45 Pac. 7); nor an objection on the ground of variance between the evidence and the allegations of the complaint (Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Stockton etc. Agricultural Works v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 121 Cal. 167; 53 Pac. 565; Barrett v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129; 54 Pac. 594; Cushing v. Pires, 124 Cal. 663; 57 Pac. 572; Dikeman v. Norrie, 36 Cal. 94; Bell v. Knowles, 45 Cal. 193; Hutchings v. Castle, 48 Cal. 152; Henry v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 176; Scott v. Sierra Lumber Co., 67 Cal. 71; 7 Pac. 131; Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125; Knox v. Higby, 76 Cal. 264; 18 Pac. 381; Everson v. Mayhew, 85 Cal. 1; 21 Pac. 431; 24 Pac. 382; Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 670; 41 Pac. 806; Swamp Land District v. Glide, 112 Cal. 85; 44 Pac. 451); nor an objection to the allowance or settlement of a bill of exceptions (Estate of Dougherty, 139 Cal. 14; 72 Pac. 357); nor an objection to the legal capacity of the plaintiff to sue (Phillips v. Goldtree, 74 Cal. 151; 13 Pac. 313; 15 Pac. 451; Cook v. Fowler, 101 Cal. 89; 35 Pac. 431); nor an objection that an action cannot be maintained, by reason of the plaintiff's delay in bringing it (Larkin v. Mullin, 128 Cal. 449; 60 Pac. 1091); nor an objection to the delivery of a sealed verdict to the coroner, instead of to the clerk, and the failure of the court to ask the jurors whether they had agreed upon their verdict (Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483); nor an objection that there was no proof of the genuineness of the indorsement of an instrument offered in evidence (Shain v. Sullivan, 106 Cal. 208; 39 Pac. 606); nor an objection to the refusal of the court to allow an amendment to the complaint, after a demurrer thereto had been sustained (Durrell v. Dooner, 119 Cal. 411; 51 Pac. 628); nor an objection to the instructions of the court to the jury (Sharp v. Hoffman, 79 Cal. 404; 21 Pac. 846; Lynn v. Southern Pacific Co., 103 Cal. 7; 24 L. R. A. 710; 36 Pac. 1018; Merguire v. O'Donnell, 103 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 1023; Anderson v. Hinshaw, 110 Cal. 682; 43 Pac. 389; Laver v. Hotaling, 115 Cal. 613; 47 Pac. 593; Bryant v. Broadwell, 140 Cal. 490; 74 Pac. 33; Story v. Nidiffer, 146 Cal. 549; 80 Pac. 692), not taken until the return of the jury (Garoutte v. Williamson, 108 Cal. 135; 41 Pac. 35, 413; Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183; Mallett v. Swain, 56 Cal. 171), as the law, in determining the merits, is fixed by such instructions (Lynn v. Southern Pacific Co., 103 Cal. 7; 24 L. R. A. 710; 36 Pac. 1018); nor an objection to the action of the court in giving contradictory instructions (Sierra Union Water etc. Co. v. Baker, 70 Cal. 572; 8 Pac. 305; 11 Pac. 654); nor an objection to further instructions of the court to the jury, given at their request (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627); nor an objection to the uncertainty of the verdict of the jury, in response to special issues (Shaw v. Shaw, 160 Cal. 733; 117 Pac. 1048); nor an objection to the allowance of costs (People v. Marin County, 103 Cal. 223; 26 L. R. A. 659; 37 Pac. 203); nor an objection to the method of procedure, where the complaint gave jurisdiction to a court of equity (Broadway Ins. Co. v. Wolters, 128 Cal. 162; 60 Pac. 766; Wood v. Currey, 49 Cal. 359; Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752); nor an objection to an order striking out the statement on motion for a new trial (Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304); nor an objection to an order striking a bill of costs from the files (Brown v. Delavau, 63 Cal. 303); nor an exception to the refusal of the court to hear evidence in support of the defense that work contracted to be done was not done, or that the specifications were disregarded, or disregarding such evidence in its decision (Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Bowie, 104 Cal. 286; 37 Pac. 934); nor an objection to the action of the court in recognizing the right of petitioners to ask for the revocation of the probate of a will, and the court heard the petition and rendered a judgment denying the revocation (Estate of Robinson, 106 Cal. 493; 39 Pac. 862); nor an objection to a ruling granting a motion for a nonsuit (Schroeder v. Schmidt, 74 Cal. 459; 16 Pac. 243; Flashner v. Waldron, 86 Cal. 211; 24 Pac. 1063; Warner v. Darrow, 91 Cal. 309; 27 Pac. 737; Malone v. Beardsley, 92 Cal. 150; 28 Pac. 218; Craig v. Hesperia Land etc. Co., 107 Cal. 675; 40 Pac. 1057; Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830; Estate of Kasson, 141 Cal. 33; 74 Pac. 436; Cravens v. Dewey, 13 Cal. 40); nor an objection to the ruling of the court in the allowance or exclusion of ballots in an election contest (Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661; 38 Pac. 447); nor an exception to a ruling denying an application to file a complaint in intervention (Grand Grove v. Garibaldi Grove, 105 Cal. 219; 38 Pac. 947); nor an objection to the sufficiency of the complaint to raise a particular issue (Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 285; 47 Pac. 60; King v. Davis, 34 Cal. 100; Horton v. Dominguez, 68 Cal. 642; 10 Pac. 186; Moore v. Campbell, 72 Cal. 251; 13 Pac. 689; Sukeforth v. Lord, 87 Cal. 399; 25 Pac. 497; Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419; Cushing v. Pires, 124 Cal. 663; 57 Pac. 572; Casey v. Leggett, 125 Cal. 664; 58 Pac. 264); nor objections to the form of the action, or to the pleadings, or to the admission of evidence, or to any ruling of the court (Morse v. Wilson, 138 Cal. 558; 71 Pac. 801); but an objection that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action may be taken at any time, and may be taken for the first time on appeal. Holly v. Heiskell, 112 Cal. 174; 44 Pac. 466.

Order, defined. An "order," as that word is used in this section, is a decision made during the progress of the cause, either prior or subsequently to final judgment, settling some point of practice, or some question collateral to the main issue presented by the pleadings, and necessary to be disposed of before such issue can be passed on by the court, or necessary to be determined in carrying into execution the final judgment. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312.

Necessity and sufficiency of objection and exception to improper argument of counsel. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 229.

Failure to object to admission of evidence at former trial as precluding objection at subsequent trial. See note 19 Ann. Cas. 1279.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 661 of this code.

1. When and how taken. To the rulings of a referee during the trial. Tyson v. Wells, 2 Cal. 122. To a deposition at the time it is offered in evidence. Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 384. To the form of a deed at the trial in the court below. Posten v. Kassette, 5 Cal. 468. To the introduction of evidence at the time it is offered. Covillaud v. Tanner, 7 Cal. 38. A party cannot, by consenting to admit evidence, "subject to all legal exceptions," avoid the necessity of taking exceptions to the relevancy or sufficiency thereof, and devolve the responsibility of discovering whatever objections may exist in the court below, and for the first time assign his objections in the supreme court. Id. If a party objects to the admission of evidence on trial, he must state the point of his objection at the time. General objection will not do. He must lay his finger on the point at the time of trial, otherwise the appellate court cannot review it. Martin v. Travers, 12 Cal. 243; Leet v. Wilson, 24 Cal. 399; Baker v. Joseph, 16 Cal. 177; People v. Glenn, 10 Cal. 32. An objection to the sufficiency of evidence must be made at the time the evidence is offered to be introduced, so that a party may have the opportunity of supplying the necessary evidence. Goodale v. West, 5 Cal. 339; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533. An objection to the admissibility of a deed in evidence must be made on the trial of the cause, at nisi prius, and an exception taken, or the point cannot be considered on appeal. Pearson v. Snodgrass, 5 Cal. 478. Where the objection to the introduction of testimony was, in general terms, that it was irrelevant, it will not be considered in the supreme court, if the testimony could under any possible circumstances have been relevant. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83. The one hundred and eighty-eighth section of the Practice Act did not fix the precise time when an exception to the charge of the court to the jury must be taken. St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 265. If, under it, an exception to the charge of the court is taken after the jury have withdrawn to consider their verdict, and before the verdict is rendered, the question of allowing or disallowing the exception rests in the discretion of the court, and whether allowed or disallowed, the supreme court will not interfere with the exercise of this discretion. A party cannot take his chances for a verdict on instructions given or refused without exceptions taken, and after the verdict, except to the action of the court. Letter v. Putney, 7 Cal. 423. Exceptions to the charge of a court must point out the specific portions of the charge excepted to, and ought to be made at the time of the trial, and before the jury retires. Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 123; 85 Am. Dec. 103.

2. Exceptions by prevailing party. Unless the respondent takes an appeal, the appellate court will not look into exceptions taken by him. Frank v. Doane, 15 Cal. 304; Pierce v. Jackson, 21 Cal. 636; Travers v. Crane, 15 Cal. 12; Jackson v. Feather River etc. Water Co., 14 Cal. 18.

3. Technical exceptions. If the judgment is right on the merits, the appellate court will not sustain mere technical exceptions taken in the course of the trial, unless compelled by law so to do. English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574.

§ 647. Verdict or order in absence of party, deemed excepted to. The verdict of the jury, the final decision in an action or proceeding, an interlocutory order or decision, finally determining the rights of the parties, or some of them, an order or decision from which an appeal may be taken, an order sustaining or overruling a demurrer, allowing or refusing to allow an amendment to a pleading, striking out a pleading or a portion thereof, refusing a continuance, an order made upon ex parte application, giving an instruction, although no objection to such instruction was made, refusing to give an instruction, modifying an instruction requested, an order or decision made in the absence of the party or an order granting or denying a nonsuit or a motion to strike out evidence or testimony, and a ruling sustaining or overruling an objection to evidence, are deemed to have been excepted to.

Legislation § 647. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 191, which read: "When a cause has been tried by the court, or by referees, and the decision or report is not made immediately after the closing of the testimony, the decision or report shall be deemed excepted to on motion for a new trial or on appeal, without any special notice that an exception is taken thereto." When enacted in 1872, § 647 read: "The adverse party is deemed to have excepted to the verdict of the jury, or the final decision of the court or referee, to an order granting or refusing a new trial, sustaining or overruling a demurrer, striking out a pleading or any part thereof, granting or refusing a continuance, granting or refusing to change the place of trial; and is also deemed to have excepted to every order, ruling, or proceeding made or had in the action or proceeding, either before or after judgment, upon an ex parte application."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 92, to read as at present, down to and including the words "refusing a continuance," the section, after these words, reading, "an order made upon ex parte application, and an order or decision made in the absence of a party, are deemed to have been excepted to."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 146; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 715, adding, after "refusing a continuance," the words "modifying, giving, or refusing to give, in whole or in part, an instruction to the jury."

5. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 586, changing the section, after the words "refusing a continuance," to read as now printed.

Final decree. No exception is required to a final judgment. Thompson v. Hancock, 51 Cal. 110. A summary dismissal of an action, before the amendment of this section in 1909, without any motion for a nonsuit, was a final judgment, "deemed excepted to"; and, where the evidence for the plaintiff was sufficient to support a judgment in his favor, no exception was required as a prerequisite to reviewing such judgment upon appeal. Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452.

Interlocutory order or decision. This section makes express recognition of interlocutory orders or decisions. Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505. An order denying a motion to set aside a default judgment on the ground of surprise is deemed excepted to. Roberts v. Wilson, 3 Cal. App. 32; 84 Pac. 216.

Order refusing amendment of complaint. An order denying the right to amend a complaint is deemed excepted to. Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472; 63 Pac. 1025; 67 Pac. 759.

Appealable order. An order after judgment, denying a motion for the entry of a different judgment on the findings, being appealable, is deemed excepted to. Rahmel v. Lehndorff, 142 Cal. 681; 100 Am. St. Rep. 154; 65 L. R. A. 88; 76 Pac. 659. Previously, an exception to an order setting aside a default (Grazidal v. Bastanchure, 47 Cal. 167), and an order of the probate court directing a conveyance of real estate, was not deemed excepted to, and a bill of exceptions was required. Estate of Corwin, 61 Cal. 160.

Order striking out pleading. This section does not make an order striking out a pleading, or a portion thereof, a part of the judgment roll, though it is deemed excepted to: such order must be presented by a bill of exceptions. Hawley v. Kocher, 123 Cal. 77; 55 Pac. 696. An order striking out a cross-complaint is deemed excepted to (Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171); as is also an order striking out a demurrer (Davis v. Honey Lake Water Co., 98 Cal. 415; 33 Pac. 270); but an order refusing to strike out an amended answer and cross-complaint was not formerly deemed excepted to. Ganceart v. Henry, 98 Cal. 281; 33 Pac. 92.

Ex parte order. An ex parte order after judgment, correcting the record to correspond to the facts, is deemed excepted to. People v. O'Brien, 4 Cal. App. 723; 89 Pac. 438.

Instructions. Prior to the amendment of this section in 1907, instructions could not be reviewed on appeal, unless excepted to. Fleischhauer v. Fabens, 8 Cal. App. 30; 96 Pac. 17; Randall v. Freed, 154 Cal. 299; 97 Pac. 669; Story v. Nidiffer, 146 Cal. 549; 80 Pac. 692.

Order made in absence of party. An order made in the absence of a party, although deemed excepted to, must be shown by the bill of exceptions to have been actually made in his absence; and where it does not appear that an order granting plaintiff's motion for judgment on appeal was made in the absence of the defendant, it will not be deemed excepted to. Lamet v. Miller, 2 Cal. Unrep. 679; 11 Pac. 744.

Order granting or denying nonsuit. Prior to the amendment of this section in 1909, it was necessary, in order to protect the right of appeal, to reserve an exception to an order on a motion for a nonsuit (Saul v. Moscone, 16 Cal. App. 506; 118 Pac. 452); and previous to that amendment the improper granting of a nonsuit was not deemed excepted to (Smith v. Hyer, 11 Cal. App. 597; 105 Pac. 787; Flashner v. Waldron, 86 Cal. 211; 24 Pac. 1063; Hanna v. De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830); nor an order refusing a nonsuit. Witkowski v. Hern, 82 Cal. 604; 23 Pac. 132; Schroeder v. Schmidt, 74 Cal. 459; 16 Pac. 243.

Order admitting or excluding evidence. Before the amendment of this section in 1909, a ruling either admitting or excluding evidence was not deemed excepted to. McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312; Randall v. Freed, 154 Cal. 299; 97 Pac. 669.

Order refusing supplemental complaint. An order refusing to allow a supplemental complaint to be filed is not deemed excepted to. Giddings v. 76 Land and Water Co., 109 Cal. 116; 41 Pac. 788.

Order for judgment on pleadings. An order granting a motion for judgment on the pleadings, when made in the presence of a party, was, formerly, not deemed excepted to, but, being a final decision in the action, determining the rights of a party, and also a decision from which an appeal may be taken, it is deemed excepted to by the provisions of this section. Lamet v. Miller, 2 Cal. Unrep. 679; 11 Pac. 744.

Rulings in calling a jury. Rulings in calling a jury are not deemed excepted to. Randall v. Freed, 154 Cal. 299; 97 Pac. 669.

Time of service of statement for new trial. An objection, that the statement on motion for a new trial was not served in time, is not deemed excepted to. Perry v. Noonan Loan Co., 1 Cal. App. 609; 82 Pac. 623.

Under Practice Act. An order admitting a will to probate was deemed excepted to, under the Practice Act (Will of Bowen, 34 Cal. 682); and also the report of a referee, not made immediately after the close of the testimony. Hadley v. Reed, 2 Cal. 322.

Effect of stipulation. Where it is stipulated that the cause be submitted to the court upon the record of a former trial before a jury, without expressing any reservation of rulings and exceptions taken upon the former trial, there can be no review. Grunsky v. Field, 1 Cal. App. 623; 82 Pac. 979.

Necessity for exception. Objections as to matters not deemed excepted to are not available, unless an exception is taken. Kearney v. Bell, 160 Cal. 670; 117 Pac. 925; Grazidal v. Bastanchure, 47 Cal. 167; Perry v. Noonan Loan Co., 1 Cal. App. 609; 82 Pac. 623.

Necessity for objection in addition to exception in order to save giving of instruction for review. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1231.

Effect of failure to move to strike out testimony which has been admitted over objection with question reserved. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 711.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The verdict, decision, order, or ruling, in the instances specified in this section, may be rendered or had in the absence of the losing party, and it was for this reason that provision was made giving him an exception by operation of law.

§ 648. Exception, form of. No particular form of exception is required, but when the exception is to the verdict or decision, upon the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify it, the objection must specify the particulars in which such evidence is alleged to be insufficient. The objection must be stated, with so much of the evidence or other matter as is necessary to explain it, and no more. Only the substance of the reporter's notes of the evidence shall be stated. Documents on file in the action or proceeding may be copied, or the substance thereof stated, or a reference thereto sufficient to identify them may be made.

Legislation § 648. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 190, which read: "No particular form of exception shall be required. The objection shall be stated, with so much of the evidence, or other matter, as is necessary to explain it, but no more; and the whole as briefly as possible." When enacted in 1872, § 648 read: "No particular form of exception is required. The objection must be stated, with so much of the evidence or other matter as is necessary to explain it, and no more. But when the exception is to the verdict or decision, upon the grounds of the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain it, the objection must specify the particulars in which such evidence is alleged to be insufficient."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 92.

No particular form of exception required. No particular form of exception is required. Estate of Piper, 147 Cal. 606; 82 Pac. 246. The provisions of this section are mainly intended as a guide to the judge in settling the bill, though a duty is imposed on the moving party to proceed in good faith, and to do his share of the work in the settlement of the bill, and he cannot impose on the adverse party, or on the judge, the labor of preparing matters which he knows a proper and fair bill of exceptions ought to contain, nor should he include statements or matters that are untrue or irrelevant; and a corresponding duty rests on the adverse party. Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac. 890; and see Hearst v. Dennison, 72 Cal. 228; 13 Pac. 628. This section cannot be construed to mean that the party desiring a bill of exceptions must propose a perfect bill in the first draft, or forfeit his right to a review of the decision from which he appeals. Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac 890.

Bill must specify wherein evidence is insufficient. A bill of exceptions, containing only a general exception to the decision and order of the court for entry of judgment, without any specification of particulars, is insufficient to authorize the appellate court to examine the evidence for the purpose of determining its sufficiency to justify the findings. San Francisco v. Pacific Bank, 89 Cal 23; 26 Pac. 615, 835. The mere statement that a party excepted to the decision of the court, unaccompanied by the objection, and the grounds on which it was made, does not constitute an exception available on appeal. Estate of Page, 57 Cal. 238. A specification that the judgment is contrary to the evidence, and stating wherein, does not enable the court to inquire whether the findings are justified by the evidence. Coveny v. Hale, 49 Cal. 552; Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523; Bonner v. Quackenbush, 51 Cal. 180; Eltzroth v. Ryan, 89 Cal. 135; 26 Pac. 647; Winterburn v. Chambers, 91 Cal. 170; 27 Pac. 658; Commercial Bank v. Redfield, 122 Cal. 405; 55 Pac. 160, 772; Estate of Behrens, 130 Cal. 416; 62 Pac. 603. A general specification, "that the evidence is wholly insufficient to justify a judgment in favor of the plaintiffs," is improper, as not giving the particulars. Rousseau v. Cohn, 20 Cal. App. 469; 129 Pac. 618. Where a finding is assailed as unsupported by the evidence, there must be specifications of insufficiency. Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 146; 124 Pac. 998. The sufficiency of the evidence to support the decision cannot be reviewed, when the bill of exceptions contains no specifications of the particulars in which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient. Hawley v. Harrington, 152 Cal. 188; 92 Pac. 177. A specification of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the decision cannot be noticed on appeal, where it is impossible to ascertain in what particular the evidence fails to support any finding referred to. Bell v. Staacke, 7 Cal. Unrep. 28; 70 Pac. 472. A bill of exceptions containing no specification of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the findings, and no assignment of error in any particular, cannot be considered on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Sather Banking Co. v. Briggs Co., 138 Cal. 724; 72 Pac. 352; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012. The court cannot consider a statement on motion for a new trial to determine whether or not the evidence supports the findings and decision, where the statement contains no specifications of error, as prescribed by this section. Meek v. Southern California Ry. Co., 7 Cal. App. 606; 95 Pac. 166. A finding is conclusive upon appeal, where there is no specification of insufficiency of the evidence to justify it. Estate of Piper, 147 Cal. 606; 82 Pac. 246.

Sufficient specification of error, what is. A general specification of error in findings is insufficient, where there is more than one finding, and it is impossible to ascertain which finding is attacked. Meek v. Southern California Ry. Co., 7 Cal. App. 606; 95 Pac. 166. On appeal from an order refusing to revoke letters of guardianship, and to set aside an order fixing the amount of the guardian's bond, the bill of exceptions must contain a specification of the particulars wherein the evidence is insufficient to justify the findings; otherwise the court cannot review the evidence and consider its sufficiency to support the order. Guardianship of Baker, 153 Cal. 537; 96 Pac. 12. Each distinct proposition excepted to on the ground that it is not justified by the evidence should be separately specified, and no statement of the evidence, or deduction therefrom by way of argument, is proper in connection with the specification. Baird v. Peall, 92 Cal. 235; 28 Pac. 285. Upon a specification that the evidence is insufficient to justify the decision, where the evidence concerning the fact in dispute is full and complete, an objection to the consideration of its sufficiency, on the ground that certain evidence is not set out in the bill was by stipulation considered evidence, will be overruled. Sullivan v. Washburn etc. Mfg. Co., 139 Cal. 257; 72 Pac. 992. Specifications clearly designating the findings and parts of findings which it is claimed the evidence does not justify are sufficient: no reference to the evidence is required, except to say that it is insufficient to justify the particular finding called in question. Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700. Specifications of the particular items, in an action on account, which the appellant deems to be unsupported by the evidence, sufficiently advise the respondent of the particulars wherein he should take note whether the evidence, if any, sustaining the account appeared in the bill of exceptions when proposed. Estate of Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479. Specifications, in an action to recover property, ignoring the release of property by a sheriff, and based on a statement that it was never taken by the sheriff, constitute an insufficient statement that the jury disregarded the evidence relating to the release. Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127. Where a bill of exceptions expressly shows that the only question to be raised on motion for a new trial was as to whether or not the plaintiff was entitled to damages, and the bill included all the evidence bearing on the question, a specification pointing to the sole question professedly involved in the motion, so that the opposite party might see that all the evidence bearing on the issue, and proper to be considered by the court, was set forth in the bill, is sufficient. Livestock Gazette Pub. Co. v. Union Stockyard Co., 114 Cal. 447; 46 Pac. 286. A specification that the evidence does not show certain facts, is equivalent to saying that the evidence is insufficient to justify a decision on those particular facts, and is insufficient. Estate of Fath, 132 Cal. 609; 64 Pac. 995. A specification that the plaintiff showed no right of possession to premises sued for, as against the defendant, or at all, is not a sufficient specification of the particulars in which the evidence failed to show a tender of the purchase-money, in an action to foreclose a contract to purchase: such specification is as applicable to any other of a series of alleged facts on which the plaintiff relied to make out his right of possession. Thorne v. Hammond, 46 Cal 530. A specification that the court erred in finding certain facts is insufficient (Coglan v. Beard, 67 Cal. 303; 7 Pac. 738); as is also a specification that the court erred in its finding, inasmuch as the testimony did not disclose the state of facts found (Gamble v. Tripp, 99 Cal. 223; 33 Pac. 851); and an objection to the introduction of evidence, as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial without showing in what respect it is so. Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. Where testimony is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial upon a particular ground, a contention that it was inadmissible for another reason cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Le Mesnager v. Hamilton, 101 Cal. 532; 40 Am. St. Rep. 81; 35 Pac. 1054; and see Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. Where a particular finding is assailed as being wholly without evidence to support it, a more particular specification is not required. Rousseau v. Cohn, 20 Cal. App. 469; 129 Pac. 618. Where there is no evidence to sustain a finding, it is not necessary to specify the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient: the burden, in such case, is on the party sustaining the finding to point out enough evidence to justify it (San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 168; 48 Pac. 1075); but where there is slight evidence to sustain the finding, the specification of the insufficiency cannot be dispensed with. Estate of Behrens, 130 Cal. 416; 62 Pac. 603. An order striking out a complaint, duly excepted to, may be reviewed, though the bill of exceptions contains no specification of the particulars in which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient (Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528; 24 Pac. 292); and errors of law occurring at the trial may be reviewed, although no specification of the particular errors of law on which the appellant relies is contained in the bill. Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 355; 18 Pac. 403.

Evidence to be set out in bill of exceptions. In preparing a statement or bill of exceptions for use in the appellate court, it is not necessary to give the evidence in full: only such of the evidence or other matter as is necessary for explanation should be incorporated; the exceptions should be presented as briefly as possible; and all redundant matter should be stricken out. Cripe v. Unangst, 20 Cal. App. 75; 128 Pac. 345; Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. All the evidence need not be given, where the question presented is solely as to the sufficiency of conflicting evidence to sustain a particular finding: it is sufficient if there is enough evidence, on each side of the question, to show a substantial conflict, since the decision of the court will not be interfered with. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. The mere rescript of the notes of the shorthand reporter, in which the evidence is detailed by question and answer, with objections taken and rulings thereon, is insufficient. Caldwell v. Parks, 50 Cal. 502; Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133. The requirement that the petitioner shall prepare a proper statement or bill of exceptions, so as to sustain his contention of the insufficiency of the evidence, does not mean that the statement or bill of exceptions shall embody all the notes of the reporter. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. A bill of exceptions, merely setting forth other findings, and stating that such facts were established by the evidence, is not a statement of so much of the evidence as may be necessary to explain the objection that a portion of one finding is not sustained by the evidence, it not being a statement of evidence at all, but a general conclusion that certain facts were established by the evidence. Cox v. McLaughlin, 2 Cal. Unrep. 858; 18 Pac. 111. It will be presumed, on appeal, that all the evidence tending to explain an objection taken at the trial is inserted in the bill of exceptions; and where, from the evidence, it appears that the court erred in ruling as to a material matter, a reversal will be granted (Wilson v. Atkinson, 68 Cal. 590; 10 Pac. 203; Couson v. Wilson, 2 Cal. App. 181; 83 Pac. 262); and if there is any evidence which will explain or overcome that set forth in the bill, it is the duty of the respondent to cause it to be incorporated therein. Couson v. Wilson, 2 Cal. App. 181; 83 Pac. 262. The evidence need not accompany the objections to the conclusions of fact from other facts specifically found. Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac. 890. The evidence or other matter which may be stated in the bill of exceptions for the purpose of explaining the exception taken, does not include exceptions taken by the party proposing the amendment, or any evidence or other matter necessary to explain the same. Application of Gates, 90 Cal. 257; 27 Pac. 195.

Bill of exceptions may include what. The party who moves for a new trial must prepare the bill of exceptions, statement, affidavits, or whatever is relied on as the ground for his motion, and the record, as thus presented, must contain specifications for the purpose of furnishing the appellate court with the grounds upon which he expects to rely should his motion be denied. Byxbee v. Dewey, 128 Cal. 322; 60 Pac. 847; Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 355; 18 Pac. 403. Where an exception is taken on the ground of error of law, in an action tried by the court without a jury, it is proper to ask the court to decide a principle of law considered applicable by counsel, and on a refusal, to have it noted in the bill of exceptions. Estate of Page, 57 Cal. 238; and see Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17; Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150; 81 Am. Dec. 108. The judgment roll on the admission of a will to probate, being a matter of record, should not be included in the bill of exceptions (Estate of Robinson, 106 Cal. 493; 39 Pac. 862); nor should the notice of intention to move for a new trial be included (Kahn v. Wilson, 120 Cal. 613; 53 Pac. 24; and see Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627); nor an order refusing a new trial (Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122); but an original complaint, necessary to explain an exception to an order of the court, may be included. Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40. Affidavits, not read at the trial for any purpose, and such parts thereof as were not so read, nor necessary to explain the parts which were read, are redundant and useless matter, and their insertion is not reversible error, as they will be disregarded on appeal; and this is the only remedy for the error, except that the appellate court may tax the costs of the redundant matter to the party causing the insertion. Wolff v. Wolff, 102 Cal. 433; 36 Pac. 767, 1037.

Inclusion of papers by reference. Reference to documents, in the engrossed statement, by the direction, "Here insert," is countenanced by this section. Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 127 Cal. 37; 59 Pac. 206. Reference, in the proposed statement, to a document or record by means of the direction, "Here insert," is a sufficient notification to the adverse party that such document or record is to become a part of the statement, though such reference would not be sufficient in the engrossed statement. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074. A reference, in a bill of exceptions, to certain documents as marked, and thereto attached and therewith filed, is not a sufficient reference to exhibits so marked in a separate bill of exceptions separately filed and not attached. Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162.

Papers must be identified. The papers and evidence used at the hearing of a motion to set aside the service of summons by publication must be authenticated by setting them forth in and making them a part of the bill: a mere reference, in the bill, to the different papers and documents, is not sufficient, where they are authenticated merely by stipulation of counsel. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299.

Skeleton bill. The practice of proposing a bill in skeleton form does not find any support in the code, but is one created by the profession, and is possible, merely because no absolute limit is placed on the time within which the judge can certify the bill; but, recognizing the practice, the certification of a bill is not delayed by reason of its engrossment before it is presented, where the settlement thereof does not require a new engrossment. Houghton v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 352; 60 Pac. 972.

Sufficiency of exception to charge. Exceptions to an oral charge must be specific, and point out the particular portion of the charge claimed to be objectionable, though counsel subsequently claim that all the propositions laid down in the charge are objectionable. Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127; Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294. An exception to a charge, in the clause, "to which charge, and the whole thereof, the defendant then and there duly excepted," is insufficient, as not sufficiently specifying the portion thereof assailed. Love v. Anchor Raisin etc. Co., 5 Cal. Unrep. 425; 45 Pac. 1044; Rogers v. Mahoney, 62 Cal. 611; Frost v. Grizzly Bluff Creamery Co., 102 Cal. 525; 36 Pac. 929.

Terms defined. The "decision," as that word is used in this section, is the statement of the facts found, and conclusions of law therefrom, mentioned in § 633, ante. Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528; 24 Pac. 292; Coveny v. Hale, 49 Cal. 552. A judgment of dismissal, taken after the lapse of sixty days, without findings, and without an opportunity to the appellant to prepare a record, is not an "exception to the decision or verdict," within the meaning of § 939, post, and the judgment may be reviewed upon the evidence. Rickey Land etc. Co. v. Glader, 153 Cal. 179; 94 Pac. 765.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Form of exception. See subd. 1 of note to § 646 of this code.

2. Object of the bill of exceptions. Parsons v. Davis, 3 Cal. 425.

3. What it should contain. Not matter of record. Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 151. But must contain documents and affidavits, to be reviewed by the appellate court. Gates v. Buckingham, 4 Cal. 286. And affidavits as to the incompetency of a juror. People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 411.

4. Reserving questions of law. Where the court tries the cause without a jury, the mode of reserving questions of law is to ask the court to decide them, and note the decision in a bill of exceptions. Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17. Where plaintiffs have excepted to the ruling of the court excluding certain evidence, take a nonsuit with leave to move to set aside, they do not waive any of their rights as to the exceptions. Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 549.

5. Exceptions to be attached to judgment roll. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170.

§ 649. Bill of exceptions, when to be presented, etc. A bill containing the exception to any decision may be presented to the court or judge, for settlement at any time after the decision is made, but the same must be presented within ten days after written notice of making such decision, and after having been settled must be signed by the judge and filed with the clerk. When the decision excepted to is made by a tribunal other than a court, or by a judicial officer, the bill of exceptions must be presented to and settled and signed by such tribunal or officer.

Legislation § 649. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on the first two sentences of Practice Act, § 189, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 360, which read: "The point of the exception shall be particularly stated, and may be delivered in writing to the judge; or, if the party require, it shall be written down by the clerk. When delivered in writing, or written down by the clerk, it shall be made conformable to the truth, or be at the time corrected until it is so made conformable." When enacted in 1872, § 649 read: "A bill containing the exception to any ruling may be presented to the judge at the time the ruling is made. It must be conformable to the truth, or be at the time corrected until it is so, and signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 92, the changes therefrom being noted infra.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 147; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 715, in first sentence, substituting (1) "within ten days after" for "at the time," and (2) "must" for "shall," in both sentences; the first sentence then reading, "A bill containing the exception to any decision may be presented to the court or judge for settlement within ten days after the decision is made, and after having been settled, must be signed by the judge and filed with the clerk."

5. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 402, recasting the first sentence.

Time of presentation and settlement. Under §§ 188, 189, of the Practice Act, a bill of exceptions, if not reduced to writing and settled by the judge immediately upon the taking of the exception, could be brought before the court for review only by a statement settled as provided in § 195 of the Practice Act. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247. This section, prior to the amendment of 1907, was, in terms, permissive; and the privilege of presenting the bill of exceptions for settlement at the time of the ruling was not necessarily exclusive (Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 98 Cal. 134; 32 Pac. 863); and did not fix any specific time for presenting the bill of exceptions; and if not done immediately, the right was not taken away. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501. Where the case falls under this section, the bill should be allowed and settled, if presented within a reasonable time: the analogy furnished by §§ 650, 651, post, should determine what is a reasonable time (Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 98 Cal. 134; 32 Pac. 863; Smith v. Jordan, 122 Cal. 68; 54 Pac. 368); hence, a proposed bill, not prepared and served until twenty days after the order was made, is too late. Smith v. Jordan, 122 Cal. 68; 54 Pac. 368. A bill of exceptions, dated more than four months after a ruling striking out a portion of the answer was made, should not be allowed. Levee District v. Huber, 57 Cal. 41. This section prescribes no time within which the exception shall be settled, but § 650, post, fixes the time for presentation of the draft of the bill. McCarty v. Wilson, 2 Cal. App. 154; 83 Pac. 170. Where the certificate of the judge recited that the bill was "duly presented within the time allowed by law," it will be assumed that it was presented when the decision was made; and if the court actually settled it at a date later than that of its presentation, it cannot affect the right of the appellant to use the bill. Estate of Gordon, 142 Cal. 125; 75 Pac. 672. This section contemplates the settlement of a bill of exceptions at the time the decision is made, during the trial, and in the presence of counsel for both parties, and does not contemplate a settlement of the bill after the adjournment of the court, without any notice to adverse counsel. Estate of Scott, 128 Cal. 578; 61 Pac. 98; Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162.

Signing and filing. Exceptions taken during the progress of the trial should be written down, settled, and signed by the judge, filed in the case, and afterwards attached to the judgment roll. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170; Kavanagh v. Maus, 28 Cal. 261.

Consent of parties as conferring jurisdiction on court to sign bill of exceptions after time fixed by statute. See note 13 Ann. Cas. 1115.

Effect on bill of exceptions of neglect of judge to sign same within time required by law. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 914.

§ 650. Bill of exceptions. Presentment of bill. Duty of judge to strike out useless matter. When a party desires to have exceptions taken at a trial settled in a bill of exceptions, he may, at any time thereafter, and within ten days after the entry of judgment, if the action was tried with a jury, or after receiving notice of the entry of judgment, if the action was tried without a jury, or if proceedings on motion for a new trial be pending, within ten days after notice of decision denying said motion, or other determination thereof, or such further time as the court in which the action is pending, or a judge thereof, may allow, prepare the draft of a bill, and serve the same, or a copy thereof, upon the adverse party. Such draft must contain all the exceptions and proceedings taken upon which the party relies, and may contain all matters reviewable on the same appeal whether occurring at the trial or on motion for a new trial. It may also contain a statement of any matters occurring upon the trial, in the presence of the court, showing any of the matters mentioned in subdivisions one and two of section six hundred and fifty-seven of this code. Within ten days after such service the adverse party may propose amendments thereto, and serve the same or a copy thereof, upon the other party. The proposed bill and amendments must, within ten days thereafter be presented by the party seeking the settlement of the bill, to the judge who tried or heard the case, upon five days' notice to the adverse party, or be delivered to the clerk of the court for the judge. When received by the clerk he must immediately deliver them to the judge, if he is in the county; if he is absent from the county, and either party desires the paper to be forwarded to the judge, the clerk must, upon notice in writing of such party, immediately forward them by mail, or other safe channel; if not thus forwarded the clerk must deliver them to the judge immediately after his return to the county. When received from the clerk, the judge must designate the time at which he will settle the bill, and the clerk must immediately notify the parties of such designation. At the time designated the judge must settle the bill. The bill must thereupon be engrossed and presented to the judge to be certified, by the party presenting it, within ten days. If the action was tried before a referee, the proposed bill, with the amendments, if any, must be presented to such referee for settlement within ten days after service of the amendments, upon notice of five days to the adverse party, and thereupon the referee must settle the bill. If no amendments are served or if served are allowed, the proposed bill may be presented, with the amendments, if any, to the judge or referee, for settlement without notice to the adverse party.

It is the duty of the judge or referee, in settling the bill, to strike out of it all redundant and useless matter so that the exceptions and proceedings may be presented as briefly as possible. When settled, the bill must be signed by the judge or referee, with his certificate to the effect that the same is allowed, and must then be filed with the clerk.

No bill of exceptions, notice of appeal, or notice or paper, other than amendments to the pleadings or an amended pleading, need be served upon any party whose default has been duly entered, or who has not appeared in the action or proceeding.

Legislation § 650. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on the third sentence of Practice Act, § 189, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 360, which read: "When not delivered in writing, or written down as above, it may be entered in the judge's minutes, and afterwards settled in a statement of the case, as provided in this act." See ante, Legislation § 649. When enacted in 1872, § 650 read: "If a bill is not presented at the time of the ruling, a bill containing the exceptions, or any of them, relating to any ruling had up to the time of the entry of judgment, may, upon one day's notice to the adverse party, at any time after such ruling is made, and within thirty days after the entry of judgment, be presented to the judge and settled, as provided in the preceding section."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 313, the changes therefrom being noted infra.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 147; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 715, (1) in first sentence, (a) changing "Where" to "When"; (b) adding "at any time thereafter, and," before "within ten days"; (c) changing "were" to "was" before "tried," in both places; (d) substituting "by copy" for "or a copy"; (2) in second sentence, inserting "and proceedings" after "exceptions"; (3) adding the sentence beginning "It may also contain"; (4) in sentence beginning "When received by," (a) substituting "is" for "be," in both instances, and (b) "desires" for "desire"; (5) adding the sentence beginning

"The bill must"; (6) in sentence beginning "If the action," substituting "must" for "shall"; (7) in sentence beginning "It is the duty," adding "and proceedings" after "exceptions"; (8) in last line, substituting "must" for "shall"; the code commissioner saying, "The changes add the words 'at any time thereafter, and' before the words 'within ten days,' add the words 'and proceedings' after 'exceptions,' and also add the words 'It may also contain. . . .' These amendments permit the bill of exceptions as to any matter occurring at the trial to be tendered before the entry of the judgment, and to contain, when presented, a statement of any matter occurring at the trial in the presence of the court mentioned in subds. 1 and 2 of § 657. A provision is also added providing the time within which the settled bill must be engrossed, and for its service on the adverse party."

5. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 993, (1) in first sentence, substituting "or a copy" for "by copy" (a restoration); (2) in sentence beginning "When received," substituting "paper" for "papers," after "desires the"; (3) in sentence beginning "The bill," after "ten days," striking out "and upon being certified must within five days thereafter be served upon the adverse party"; (4) making a new paragraph of the then last two sentences, beginning "It is the duty."

6. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 400, adding the final paragraph (compare change therein in 1915).

7. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 207, (1) in first sentence, inserting "or if proceedings on motion for a new trial be pending, within ten days after notice of decision denying said motion, or other determination thereof"; (2) in second sentence, inserting "and may contain all matters reviewable on the same appeal whether occurring at the trial or on motion for a new trial"; (3) in final paragraph, striking out "statement on motion for a new trial," after "No bill of exceptions."

Construction of section. This section provides how all papers, proceedings, and exceptions, not otherwise part of the record, may be made such by bill of exceptions. Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472; 22 Pac. 299. It is applicable where the order excepted to is appealable, as well as where the ruling can be reviewed only on an appeal from a final judgment. Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 98 Cal. 134; 32 Pac. 863. Under the Practice Act, an order made after rendition of judgment, unless founded on affidavits, could be reviewed only by a statement on appeal. Caulfield v. Doe, 45 Cal. 221. This section applies in an election contest. McCarty v. Wilson, 2 Cal. App. 154; 83 Pac. 170. Its provisions, so far as they relate to the service of notice, are not merely directory. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946. The statute must be followed closely to perfect an appeal, but no more is demanded. Broaddus v. James, 13 Cal. App. 478; 110 Pac. 164.

Exceptions taken when. This section does not refer to exceptions taken after trial and judgment (Sacramento County v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal. 250): it provides for the settlement of a bill of exceptions based on errors of law occurring at the trial, which may be done after entry of judgment and after the judgment roll is made up (Estate of Gordon, 142 Cal. 125; 75 Pac. 672); and includes exceptions taken in the course of proceedings before the trial is commenced. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501.

Draft of bill, and time of preparation and service. Failure to prepare the bill of exceptions within the time allowed, or any authorized extension thereof, justifies a refusal to settle the proposed bill: the right to have it settled is thereby lost (Estate of Clary, 112 Cal. 292; 44 Pac. 569); and a bill not prepared and served within the time allowed cannot be considered (Kelleher v. Creciat, 89 Cal. 38; 26 Pac. 619); neither can a bill of exceptions to an order dissolving an attachment, not prepared and served until twenty days after the order was made. Smith v. Jordan, 122 Cal. 68; 54 Pac. 368. Where the proposed bill and the amended bill were served, and no objection was made that they were not, respectively, in time, an objection on that ground will be disregarded on appeal, though not made within the time provided by law, and although no order was made extending the time. Hungarian Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Moses, 58 Cal. 168. The time within which the bill of exceptions to an order making a family allowance must be prepared and served is prescribed by this section. Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614; 29 Pac. 235. This section does not authorize the court to grant an indefinite extension of time for the preparation and serving of the draft: it is to be read in connection with the restriction in § 1054, post, on amount of time allowed by court. Cameron v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 129 Cal. 279; 61 Pac. 955. The law allows ten days, or such further time, not exceeding thirty days, as may be allowed by the court, within which to serve a proposed bill of exceptions. Oppenheimer v. Radke, 165 Cal. 220; 129 Pac. 798. An order extending the time for preparing and serving the draft of the bill of exceptions gives the defendant the time specified, in addition to the ten days allowed by this section. Cameron v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 129 Cal. 279; 61 Pac. 955. An order, made after the expiration of the statutory period within which to propose a bill of exceptions, extending the time for such proposal, is ineffectual and void (Estate of Clary, 112 Cal. 292; 44 Pac. 569); but not when the extension is made by stipulation of counsel. Simpson v. Budd, 91 Cal. 488; 27 Pac. 758. The pendency of a motion to amend or change a finding does not operate to extend the time for service of proposed bill of exceptions. Hole v. Takekawa, 165 Cal. 372; 132 Pac. 445.

What bill should contain. An exception to the ruling on motion for a new trial must appear in the stating or substantive part of the bill of exceptions, and the bill must affirmatively show that the ruling actually took place at the trial and was excepted to. Craig v. Hesperia Land etc. Co., 107 Cal. 675; 40 Pac. 1057; Hanna v.

De Garmo, 140 Cal. 172; 73 Pac. 830. A statement on motion for a new trial and a bill of exceptions may be incorporated in the same paper. Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 150 Cal. 124; 88 Pac. 701. The mere fact that the exception was referred to in the assignment of errors relied on is not sufficient. Craig v. Hesperia Land etc. Co., 107 Cal. 675; 40 Pac. 1057. Specifications in a bill, that the conclusions of law embraced in the findings are erroneous, are not available on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Mentone Irrigation Co. v. Redlands Electric Light etc. Co., 155 Cal. 323; 17 Ann. Cas. 1222; 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 382; 100 Pac. 1082. The fact that reference was made to the pleadings, on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, need not be presented by a bill of exceptions (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627); nor need the bill contain any particular errors of law on which the appellant will rely (Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572; 11 Pac. 463; Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 355; 18 Pac. 403; Hagman v. Williams, 88 Cal. 146; 25 Pac. 1111; Barfield v. South Side Irrigation Co., 111 Cal. 118; 43 Pac. 406; Snell v. Payne, 115 Cal. 218; 46 Pac. 1069; Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183; 48 Pac. 730; 51 Pac. 183; Harper v. Gordon, 128 Cal. 489; 61 Pac. 84), though required in a statement under the third subdivision of § 659, post. Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 150 Cal. 124; 88 Pac. 701. The specification of such errors though an essential part of the statement, is the act of the attorney, annexed to the bill after the trial (Braverman v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 101 Cal. 644; 36 Pac. 386); and the statements of fact in the bill are made only to explain the exceptions which it shows were taken (Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162); and the matters to which the specification of errors points must be found in the substantive portion of the bill; hence, exceptions incorporated in an assignment of errors, coupled with the statement that it was given against the objection of the appellant, cannot be considered. Braverman v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 101 Cal. 644; 36 Pac. 386; and see People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17; 30 Pac. 837. It is not necessary to make a specification of particular issues on which findings were omitted. Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 146; 124 Pac. 998. Where a bill of exceptions is necessary, it must contain a statement of the facts which will authorize the review of the action of the court below; hence, an order, not deemed excepted to, must be shown by the bill to come within the statutory exception that it was made in the absence of the party. Lamet v. Miller, 2 Cal. Unrep. 679; 11 Pac. 744. The draft of a proposed bill must contain a prayer or request that it be allowed or certified as a bill of exceptions. Landers v. Lawler, 84 Cal. 547; 24 Pac. 307.

Bill must be authenticated. The draft of the bill of exceptions must be authenticated, either by the signature or the indorsement of the attorney, or of the party if he appear in person. Landers v. Lawler, 84 Cal. 547; 24 Pac. 307. An unauthenticated bill, consisting entirely of specifications of error, will not be considered. Houghton v. Trumbo, 103 Cal. 239; 37 Pac. 152.

Service on whom. Upon motion for a new trial, the bill of exceptions to be used must, under the new method of appeal, be served upon all adverse parties. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946. Persons claiming as devisees under a will, who oppose an application for partial distribution, are adverse parties, within the meaning of this section, and must be served with a draft of the bill of exceptions. Estate of Young, 149 Cal. 173; 85 Pac. 145. Where an interlocutory decree has become final by affirmance, only such matters can be reviewed on appeal from the final decree as have intervened subsequently to the interlocutory decree; and a bill of exceptions upon such appeal need only be served upon such parties as might be affected by a modification of the final decree. Gutierrez v. Hebberd, 106 Cal. 167; 39 Pac. 529, 935.

Amendments to the bill. The amendments which may be proposed to the draft of a bill of exceptions relate to the evidence or other matter authorized to be stated in the bill to explain the objection taken, and do not include exceptions taken by the party proposing the amendments, nor any evidence or other matter necessary to explain the same. Application of Gates, 90 Cal. 257; 27 Pac. 195. An amendment by the court, after an appeal taken, inserting particulars of the insufficiency of the evidence, is proper, where the appeal is from a decision made before the bill was settled. Estate of Lamb, 95 Cal. 397; 30 Pac. 568. The determination of the judge who tries and hears the case is final as to the allowance of the matter by way of amendment to the bill. Application of Gates, 90 Cal. 257; 27 Pac. 195. A bill authenticated by the trial court cannot be amended on appeal. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122; Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 461; Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107; Satterlee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489; Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280; Warren v. Hopkins, 110 Cal. 506; 42 Pac. 986. It is error to refuse to permit an amendment to a statement embodying the reporter's notes, by condensing it to the narrative form, or in any other particular (Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133); and the fact that no amendments were proposed to the draft of a bill proposed by the appellant does not preclude the judge from amending the bill to conform to the facts. Hyde v. Boyle, 89 Cal. 590; 26 Pac. 1092. Where, in the proposed draft of a bill, there is inserted a ruling, deemed by the party preparing the same to be erroneous, the opposite party should present, in his amendments, any matter which would obviate the error; and it will be assumed, on appeal, that the judge, in settling the bill, has caused to be inserted therein all matter which is relevant to or which will explain his ruling. Bedan v. Turney, 99 Cal. 649; 34 Pac. 442. Where amendments proposed to the draft of a bill of exceptions are merely attached thereto, and not inserted in their proper place in the bill as engrossed, the bill cannot be considered on appeal. Fritsch v. Stampfli, 117 Cal. 441; 49 Pac. 559; Marlow v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 259; Skillman v. Riley, 10 Cal. 300; Baldwin v. Ferre, 23 Cal. 461; Kimball v. Semple, 31 Cal. 657.

Service of amendments. Where the attorney who proposes a bill of exceptions acknowledges, by letter, the receipt of proposed amendments, served by mail, this does not amount to personal service, so as to shorten the time for the doing of an act as indicated in § 1013, post. Prefumo v. Russell, 148 Cal. 451; 83 Pac. 810.

Notice of presentation of bill and delivery for settlement. The delivery of a proposed statement and amendments to the judge, without notice of the day when such statement will be presented for settlement, is insufficient. Estate of Kruger, 130 Cal. 621; 63 Pac. 31. Failure to give the five days' notice of the presentment of a proposed bill to the judge, until after the expiration of the ten days in which it may be presented, renders the subsequent notice too late, and a settlement of the statement thereafter is erroneous. Witter v. Andrews, 122 Cal. 1; 54 Pac. 276. The designation of a time for settlement, in open court, both parties being present, is sufficient Horton v. Jack, 115 Cal. 29; 46 Pac. 920. Written notice of the presentation of the proposed bill to the court for settlement, being for the benefit of the adverse party, may be waived by him. Hicks v. Masten, 101 Cal. 651; 36 Pac. 130. Objection to a defective notice of settlement, which failed to specify that the proposed amendments would be presented to the judge with the bill, is waived, if the bill and amendments were presented in the presence of both parties at the time specified, and the hearing was postponed from time to time by consent, and without objection urged prior to the final hearing. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 122; 57 Pac. 225. Where the judge settles the bill in the presence of the attorneys for both parties, without fixing a time for settlement, or giving previous notice thereof, and no objection was made at the time, the bill is not invalidated. Horton v. Jack, 115 Cal. 29; 46 Pac. 920. No notice of the settlement of a bill is required, where there is no contest in reference thereto. Broaddus v. James, 13 Cal. App. 478; 110 Pac. 164. Under this section and the third subdivision of § 659, post, a party moving for a new trial, who has presented his proposed statement and amendments thereto to the clerk of the court for delivery to the judge for settlement, is not required to give the adverse party the five days' notice of delivery required when such papers are presented directly to the judge. Curtin v. Ingle, 155 Cal. 53; 99 Pac. 480. Notice to the adverse party, at the time of the delivery of the bill to the clerk, of intention to present the statement and amendments to the judge, is not required. Mellor v. Crouch, 76 Cal. 594; 18 Pac. 685. If the amendments are allowed, the bill and the amendments may be presented to the judge or the referee, without notice, within a reasonable time. Gay v. Torrance, 143 Cal. 14; 76 Pac. 717; and see Pendergrass v. Cross, 73 Cal. 475; 15 Pac. 63; Houghton v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 352; 60 Pac. 972; Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481.

Presentation and settlement of bill. Bills of exceptions to any decision, whenever made, may be presented and settled as provided in this section. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501. Leaving the engrossed bill with the clerk, during the absence of the judge, without even a request to present it to him for his signature, is insufficient: it is not the duty of the clerk to deliver the engrossed bill to the judge for his signature. Miller v. American Central Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 271; 83 Pac. 289. An engrossed bill, not signed or settled, cannot be considered on appeal (Pereira v. City Sav. Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524); and a bill of exceptions, appearing in the transcript, will be stricken out, where there is no showing that it was either settled or allowed by the court. Keller v. Lewis, 56 Cal. 466. When the judge settles the bill or statement, the record is made up. Henry v. Merguire, 106 Cal. 142; 39 Pac. 599. The time for the filing of a transcript on appeal does not commence to run while there is a proceeding pending in the lower court for the settlement of a bill of exceptions on appeal from the judgment. Dernham v. Bagley, 151 Cal. 216; 90 Pac. 543.

Time for presentation and settlement. The time for the settlement and presentation of all bills of exceptions is fixed by this section. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501. Failure to comply with the requirement that the proposed bill and amendments must, within ten days after service of the proposed amendments, be presented for settlement to the judge who tried or heard the case, deprives the party of his right to have the bill settled, unless he is relieved from the effect of such failure by the trial court, under § 473, ante, on account of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; but no bill of exceptions can be made effectual for any purpose after the expiration of the statutory period of six months. Moultrie v. Tarpio, 147 Cal. 376; 81 Pac. 1112. A bill of exceptions is not required to be presented at the time of the refusal of the court to open a default. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501. Where the trial court is in doubt as to a party's right to have a bill or statement settled, because not presented in time, the better practice is for it to sign the bill or statement, subject to objections thereto, the evidence in support of which should be incorporated in the bill. Calkins v. Monroe, 17 Cal. App. 324; 119 Pac. 680. Where the original proposed bill was signed by the attorneys, and the opposing counsel were notified that it was proposed as a bill of exceptions, and the judge certifies that he was asked to settle and certify it, and that he refused simply because it was not in time, an objection that the judge was not asked to settle and certify the bill cannot be sustained. Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 101 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 95. Failure to settle the bill of exceptions within the time specified by law authorizes the dismissal of the appeal, where there is also an unexcused failure to file the transcript on appeal within the time prescribed by the rules of the appellate court. Smith v. Solomon, 84 Cal. 537; 24 Pac. 286. The service of a copy of the findings and judgment on the attorneys of the losing party, after entry of the judgment, is sufficient notice of the entry of judgment so as to require the bill of exceptions to be settled within ten days thereafter. Kelleher v. Creciat, 89 Cal. 38; 26 Pac. 619. A judgment rendered by the trial court according to the directions of the appellate court, is the final judgment in the case; hence, the losing party has ten days after the entry of such judgment in which to have exceptions taken at the trial settled. Klauber v. San Diego Street Car Co., 98 Cal. 105; 32 Pac. 876.

Extension of time. The bill of exceptions need not be presented at the time of the ruling, but it may be settled at any time within the limit prescribed by this section, and within such further time as the court may grant by an order made before the expiration of such time. Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501; and see Berry v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 435; Higgins v. Mahoney, 50 Cal. 444. The trial court may, by order, relieve a party from the failure to deliver a proposed bill and proposed amendments thereto to the clerk for the judge, within the time required by this section, where they were mailed to the clerk in due time, but were lost in transmission. Long v. Long, 162 Cal. 427; 122 Pac. 1077.

Judge who heard proceedings, authorized to settle. The bill of exceptions should be presented to the judge who made the ruling, either at the time of the ruling or after judgment; and where the ruling was made by one judge, and the trial was had before another, two or more bills may be settled and properly presented for consideration on appeal. Turner v. Hearst, 115 Cal. 394; 47 Pac. 129; and see Cummings v. Conlan, 66 Cal. 403; 5 Pac. 796, 903. A bill signed by the judge who heard the motion for a new trial, and not by the judge who tried the case, cannot be considered. Pereira v. City Sav. Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524. The settlement of a bill before a judge, other than the one before whom the proceedings were heard, is improper, where the bill was not one to be used on the motion for a new trial, and the former judge was not dead nor had refused to settle it. Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162.

Redundant and useless matter in bill. The provision of this section, that the judge shall strike out all redundant and useless matter, so that the exceptions may be presented as briefly as possible, is not a limitation of his functions in settling the bill, but is in the nature of a definition of the course he is authorized to adopt in settling the bill. Hyde v. Boyle, 89 Cal. 590; 26 Pac. 1092. The judge should settle the bill when properly presented, and should also strike out redundant or useless matter, whether the parties consent thereto or not, and make the statement truly represent the case. Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133. Setting up a will twice in a bill of exceptions is improper: one copy should be stricken out. Estate of Robinson, 106 Cal. 493; 39 Pac. 862. Matters not occurring in court, and concerning which no showing was made in court, cannot be noticed upon appeal, though recited in the bill (Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162); neither can irrelevant matters incorporated into the bill of exceptions, nor matters which show upon the face of the bill that they were not presented to the court at the time it made its rulings, or could not have any weight in determining the correctness of such rulings. Hyde v. Boyle, 89 Cal. 590; 26 Pac. 1092. The insertion of a clause in a bill of exceptions, by the judge, stating that the evidence was sufficient to prove all the allegations of the complaint, will be disregarded on appeal, as an attempt to forestall the question to be examined on the evidence brought up. Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773. Additional costs will not be imposed on the respondent by reason of his insertion of redundant matter in the bill, where the judgment is reversed and costs of appeal are imposed on him. Estate of Robinson, 106 Cal. 493; 39 Pac. 862.

Refusal to settle. Where the party proposing a bill of exceptions refuses to adopt the amendments, and fails to present the same for settlement within the time limited by this section, without offering any excuse therefor, the court is justified in refusing to settle the bill (Whipple v. Hopkins, 119 Cal. 349; 51 Pac. 535; and see Henry v. Merguire, 106 Cal. 142; 39 Pac. 599); and also where the appellant fails to file the proposed bill, with the amendments thereto, with the clerk, or to present them to the judge, until several months after the time limited. Gamache v. Budd, 129 Cal. 554; 62 Pac. 105. A failure to serve some of the necessary parties with a proposed bill does not require or authorize the trial court to refuse to settle the bill at all, nor does it affect the jurisdiction of the appellate court to entertain the appeal. Estate of Young, 149 Cal. 173; 85 Pac. 145. Failure to serve a copy of the notice of the time and place of settlement of the bill on the attorneys of the adverse party renders the refusal to settle the bill proper (Gallardo v. Atlantic etc. Telegraph Co., 49 Cal. 510); and failure to give notice of intention to ask the court to disallow the amendments to the bill, and settle the bill as proposed, within ten days after service of such amendments, renders a refusal to settle the bill proper, where no excuse was offered for not so doing (Whipple v. Hopkins, 119 Cal. 349; 51 Pac. 535); but when no amendments are proposed, failure to present the proposed bill for settlement within the ten days does not justify a refusal: no absolute limit is placed upon the time in which the judge may certify the bill. Houghton v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 352; 60 Pac. 972. It is not the duty of the judge to make the statement on motion for a new trial; hence, where a proposed statement is a mere pretense and fraud, its settlement is properly refused. Hearst v. Dennison, 72 Cal. 227; 13 Pac. 628.

Compelling settlement. Mandamus lies to compel a judge to settle a bill of exceptions, or a statement of the case (Hearst v. Dennison, 72 Cal. 227; 13 Pac. 628; Landers v. Landers, 82 Cal. 480; 23 Pac. 126; Tibbets v. Riverside Banking Co., 97 Cal. 258; 32 Pac. 174; Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; Miller v. American Central Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 271; 83 Pac. 289); and to compel a referee to settle a statement on motion for a new trial, in an action tried by him (Careaga v. Fernald, 66 Cal. 351; 5 Pac. 615; Hicks v. Masten, 101 Cal. 651; 36 Pac. 130); and to compel the court to allow the amendment of a bill of exceptions or a statement (Kruse v. Chester, 66 Cal. 353; 5 Pac. 613; Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614; 29 Pac. 235; Tibbets v. Riverside Banking Co., 97 Cal. 258; 32 Pac. 174; Winters v. Buck, 121 Cal. 279; 53 Pac. 799; Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133); but the correctness of a settled bill of exceptions cannot be tested in mandamus proceedings; and the appellate court will not order a reference so that evidence may be taken on that issue. Thornton v. Hoge, 84 Cal. 231; 23 Pac. 1112. A petition for a writ of mandamus, made more than five months after refusal to settle the statement, will not be granted (McConoughey v. Torrence, 124 Cal. 330; 57 Pac. 81); nor will a petition for mandamus be granted to compel the insertion of an improper affidavit. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144; 78 Pac. 540. A petition for mandamus, to compel the court to settle a bill of exceptions, should allege that the proposed bill contains everything that the petitioner believes it should contain to make it a fair and proper draft of the bill. Walkerley v. Greene, 104 Cal. 208; 37 Pac. 890. Where the bill of exceptions presented does not show an attempt to present a fair and bona fide statement of the case, a writ of mandate will not be granted to compel its settlement. Pacific Land Ass'n v. Hunt, 105 Cal. 202; 38 Pac. 635. Where the refusal of the court to settle a bill, to which no amendments were proposed, was based on an erroneous construction of the code, on the ground that it was not presented for settlement in time, and that there was no excuse for delay, and the question of unreasonable delay, under the true construction of the code, was not passed upon by him, mandamus lies to compel the court to settle the proposed bill (Houghton v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 352; 60 Pac. 972); and also where, after many agreed conferences by counsel for both parties, the moving party attached to the proposed amendments a written allowance of them all, four days after the expiration of the time allowed by law, and thereupon filed them with the clerk for the judge, and presented them to the judge on the following day, the bill and amendments were presented within a reasonable time, under the circumstances. Gay v. Torrance, 143 Cal. 14; 76 Pac. 717.

Engrossing of bill. Whether a party has exercised due diligence in causing a bill of exceptions to be engrossed after it is settled, or in presenting it to the judge for his signature after it is engrossed, is to be determined by the judge, under the circumstances of each case, and, in the absence of abuse of discretion, his determination is conclusive. Miller v. American Central Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 271; 83 Pac. 289; and see Galbraith v. Lowe, 142 Cal. 295; 75 Pac. 831. An unexplained delay for a period of five months in causing the bill to be engrossed, where the parties have agreed on its form and contents, is inexcusable. Miller v. Queen Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 267; 83 Pac. 287. Any objection to the laches of the moving party in engrossing the statement, as ground for denial of the motion, must be embodied in a separate bill of exceptions as ground for his own appeal from an order made after final judgment. Ryer v. Rio Land etc. Co., 147 Cal. 462; 82 Pac. 62.

Certification of bill. The bill of exceptions is not settled until it is certified as correct: this cannot be done until it is engrossed, if engrossing is necessary. Houghton v. Superior Court, 128 Cal. 352; 60 Pac. 972. Relief from the filing of a settled and engrossed bill, without being certified, through the inadvertence of the judge or referee, should be granted, if a timely request is made for a certificate of allowance to the court; and, on appeal, such filing will be considered as premature and unauthorized. Jackson v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 115 Cal. 632; 47 Pac. 603. The trial judge must determine whether a bill of exceptions has been correctly engrossed: his certification thereof is a determination to that effect (Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866); and his determination is final. Ryer v. Rio Land etc. Co., 147 Cal. 462; 82 Pac. 62. He may properly refuse to sign and certify an engrossed bill, if it fails to speak the truth. Galvin v. Hunt, 153 Cal. 103; 94 Pac. 423.

Refusal to certify. The court has discretion to refuse to sign an engrossed bill of exceptions, where there is evident lack of diligence in engrossing the same, after knowledge of the action of the judge in relation thereto. Galbraith v. Lowe, 142 Cal. 295; 75 Pac. 831. Failure to serve an engrossed bill on the attorney for the opposing party, before presentation to the judge, does not justify an absolute refusal to certify, though it might justify a refusal to certify until counsel examine it. Ryer v. Rio Land etc. Co., 147 Cal. 462; 82 Pac. 62.

Delay in filing bill. The question whether delay in filing the bill is unreasonable is for the lower court to determine, and its determination will not be reviewed on appeal, in the absence of a bill of exceptions setting out the facts (Jaffe v. Lilienthal, 101 Cal. 175; 35 Pac. 636); nor can a bill, filed two months after the order appealed from was entered in the minutes of the court, be considered on appeal (Pereira v. City Sav. Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524); nor a bill filed more than nine years after the ruling excepted to. Estate of Carpenter, 127 Cal. 582; 60 Pac. 162.

Service of settled bill unnecessary. Where the statute simply requires that a settled bill of exceptions shall be "filed," it need not be served upon the adverse party. Broaddus v. James, 13 Cal. App. 478; 110 Pac. 164. The mere failure to serve a bill of exceptions, under the amendment to this section in 1907, after such bill had been settled, engrossed, and certified, did not warrant the striking of the bill from the record on appeal. Smith v. Goethe, 159 Cal. 628; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1205; 115 Pac. 223.

Burden of acting is upon whom. The burden is at all times on the party moving for a new trial to take the steps necessary to enable the court to hear the motion (Miller v. Queen Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 267; 83 Pac. 287; Estate of Depeaux, 118 Cal. 522; 50 Pac. 682); and, whether the proposed amendments are adopted or not, it is the duty of the moving party to present the statement and amendments to the judge, and it is not the duty of the opposing party to take any further proceedings towards the settlement of the statement. Lee Doon v. Tesh, 131 Cal. 406; 63 Pac. 764. Delivery of the proposed bill and amendments to the clerk for the judge is not sufficient: the moving party should obtain an order from the judge, setting the day for the settlement of the bill; the adverse party is not required to move in the matter. Miller v. Queen Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 267; 83 Pac. 287.

Bill constitutes record. A bill of exceptions, when certified by the judge, is filed with the clerk: it then becomes the record of the court, and the only record in the matter. Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866.

Statement not considered as bill when. Where there is a failure to serve adverse parties with a proposed statement on motion for a new trial, or to give them an opportunity to serve amendments thereto, the statement cannot be considered as a bill of exceptions to be used upon appeal from the judgment. National Bank v. Mulford, 17 Cal. App. 551; 120 Pac. 446.

Waiver of notice. The waiver of notice by one adverse party does not dispense with the necessity of notice to other adverse parties. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Appeal, use of bill. Alleged errors in an award of arbitrators, entered as an order of the court by stipulation of the parties, if reviewable upon appeal, cannot be reviewed upon an ex parte affidavit of the appellant, which cannot take the place of a bill of exceptions or of a statement of the case. Arbitration of Connor and Pratt, 128 Cal. 279; 60 Pac. 862. The certificate of the judge, that, of his own motion, both in hearing and deciding the defendant's motion, he took notice of and used the court's own records in the case, and that the attorney who appeared in behalf of the motion did not use or present any papers save those annexed to the certificate, is not the equivalent of a bill of exceptions, and cannot be considered on appeal. Ramsbottom v. Fitzgerald, 128 Cal. 75; 60 Pac. 522. The mere fact that a bill of exceptions was technically presented for settlement, and used on an appeal from a non-appealable order, cannot preclude its use for the purpose of reviewing such order on an appeal from the judgment. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122. The fact that the appellant presented for settlement what he termed a proposed statement on appeal will not deprive him of the fruits of the appeal, but the document will be treated as a bill of exceptions; there being no substantial difference between a statement and a bill of exceptions. Witter v. Andrews, 122 Cal. 1; 54 Pac. 276; People v. Crane, 60 Cal. 279; Jue Fook Sam v. Lord, 83 Cal. 159; 23 Pac. 225. An appeal from an order directing the conveyance of real estate by an executor is properly brought by bill of exceptions. Estate of Corwin, 61 Cal. 160. A bill of exceptions, made out in behalf of one defendant, to be used on motion for a new trial by him, cannot be used by a co-defendant upon an appeal by him. Houghton v. Trumbo, 103 Cal. 239; 37 Pac. 152. Whether parties, not served with a bill of exceptions or with notice of appeal, will be affected by a proposed modification of the judgment, or whether a bill of exceptions, not served upon them, can be considered upon the appeal, must be determined by the appellate court, and the appellant should not be refused the right to ask the appellate court to consider the bill of exceptions by reason of the possibility that the bill might not be considered upon appeal. Gutierrez v. Hebberd, 106 Cal. 167; 39 Pac. 529, 835.

Appeal from refusal to settle bill. Refusal to settle a bill of exceptions cannot be reviewed on appeal. Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; Whipple v. Hopkins, 119 Cal. 349; 51 Pac. 535. That the moving party was interested in other causes, wherein the time of his attorney was occupied, is a circumstance to be considered by the judge in determining whether there was undue negligence in the settlement of the bill, and his determination on that point will not be reviewed on appeal. Miller v. Queen Ins. Co., 2 Cal. App. 267; 83 Pac. 287.

Terms defined. The word "trial," as used in this section, means the trial of an issue of law, as well as the trial of an issue of fact. Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49, 27 Pac. 40. The term "adverse parties," as used in this section, includes persons claiming as devisees under a will, in an application for partial distribution. Estate of Young, 149 Cal. 173; 85 Pac. 145. The words, "when there is a proceeding pending for the settlement of a bill of exceptions," found in a rule of court, include any proceeding, looking to the settlement of such a bill, that has been actually inaugurated by a party. Dernham v. Bagley, 151 Cal. 216; 90 Pac. 543.

Power upon rendition of judgment to allow or extend time for preparing and filing bill of exceptions. See note 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 625.

§ 651. Exceptions after judgment. Exceptions to any decision made after judgment may be presented to the judge at the time of such decision, and be settled or noted, as provided in section six hundred and forty-nine, or a bill thereof may be presented and settled afterward, as provided in section six hundred and fifty, and within like periods after entry of the order, upon appeal from which such decision is reviewable.

Legislation § 651. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "A bill containing the exceptions to any ruling made after judgment, except to a ruling made granting or refusing a new trial, may be presented to the judge at the time of such ruling, and be settled as provided in section six hundred and forty-nine; and, if not so presented, may, upon one day's notice, and at any time after, and within ten days of, such ruling, be presented and settled as in such section provided."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 314, to read as at present, except for amendments of 1907; q. v., infra.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 148; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 716, (1) changing the word "and" to "or" before "a bill thereof," and (2) changing "afterwards" to "afterward."

Bill necessary when. Papers used on the hearing in the court below must be authenticated by a bill of exceptions. Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472; 22 Pac. 299. On an appeal from an order made after judgment, heard on affidavits, a bill of exceptions is the only proper mode of authenticating such affidavits. Somers v. Somers, 81 Cal. 608; 22 Pac. 967; Manuel v. Flynn, 5 Cal. App. 319; 90 Pac. 463; Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278; 77 Pac. 904. The refusal of the court to hear any evidence in support of the defense, or its disregard of such evidence in its decisions, must be presented in the bill of exceptions or statements of the case: it cannot be considered if presented merely in ex parte affidavits containing the evidence presented at the trial, and the rulings thereon. Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Bowie, 104 Cal. 236; 37 Pac. 934. An order denying a new trial, being appealable, is deemed to have been excepted to, and need not be embodied in a bill of exceptions. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627.

Bill may show what. A person desiring to appeal from an order granting a new trial may always show what was used on the hearing of the motion, by a bill of exceptions settled as authorized by this section. Wyckoff v. Pajaro Valley etc. R. R. Co., 146 Cal. 681; 81 Pac. 17. Exceptions to decisions after judgment may be preserved by a bill thereof, where the matter is heard on oral evidence. Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559; and see Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472; 22 Pac. 299. Neither the findings of fact and conclusions of law, nor the decree entered thereon, nor the notice of appeal, with proof of service, nor the recital that a sufficient undertaking on appeal has been filed with the clerk, can be properly included in a bill of exceptions. White v. White, 112 Cal. 577; 44 Pac. 1026.

Compelling settlement. On an appeal from an order striking out competent affidavits to be used on a motion for a new trial, on the ground of irregularity in the proceedings, the appellant is entitled to a bill of exceptions containing such affidavits, and mandamus will issue, where the court refuses to settle the bill. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 141; 78 Pac. 540.

Stipulation as to affidavits used on hearing. A stipulation of attorneys, that certain affidavits were used on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, does not authorize the consideration of such affidavits upon appeal, where it does not appear that they constituted all the affidavits and papers used on the hearing. Manuel v. Flynn, 5 Cal. App. 319; 90 Pac. 463.

§ 652. Proceedings if judge refuse to allow bill of exceptions. If the judge in any case refuses to allow a bill of exceptions in accordance with the facts, the party desiring the bill settled may apply by petition to the supreme court to prove the same; the application may be made in the mode and manner, and under such regulations as that court may prescribe; and the bill, when proven, must be certified by the chief justice as correct, and filed with the clerk of the court in which the action was tried, and when so filed it has the same force and effect as if settled by the judge who tried the cause.

Legislation § 652. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and read the same as at present, except for amendments of 1907; q.v., infra.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 716, changing (1) "refuse" to "refuses," and (2) "an exception" to "a bill of exceptions," in first line.

Jurisdiction of appellate courts. The powers of the supreme court, under this section, are restricted. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098. The district court of appeal has jurisdiction of a petition for proving exceptions. Glass v. Lawlor, 152 Cal. 602; 93 Pac. 490. The propriety of making the procedure in criminal cases correspond with that in civil cases, as to the method of proving a bill of exceptions before the appellate tribunal, is for the legislature, and not for the courts. People v. Knoblock, 11 Cal. App. 333; 104 Pac. 1012.

When appellate court will settle. This section does not apply where the trial judge refuses to settle any statement or bill of exceptions: it applies where the trial judge, in settling a bill, erroneously refuses to allow one or more exceptions. Landers v. Landers, 82 Cal. 480; 23 Pac. 126; Hyde v. Boyle, 86 Cal. 352; 24 Pac. 1059; Tibbets v. Riverside Banking Co., 97 Cal. 258; 32 Pac. 174; Hudson v. Hudson, 129 Cal. 141; 61 Pac. 773; Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098. It limits the authority of the appellate court to interfere in the settlement of a bill of exceptions to the single instance in which the judge refuses to allow an exception. Application of Gates, 90 Cal. 257; 27 Pac. 195; Hyde v. Boyle, 86 Cal. 352; 24 Pac. 1059. The appellate court is not required to discharge the duties of the judge of the court below, but only to provide a mode for the settlement of the bill, where the trial judge, on proper application therefor, refuses to settle any bill of exceptions, or to settle the bill in accordance with the facts; and the appellate court will not settle a bill which the trial judge below properly refused to settle. Gallardo v. Atlantic etc. Telegraph Co., 49 Cal. 510. The refusal of the trial judge to allow an exception to the erroneous denial of an application to prove certain facts justifies an application to the appellate court. Estate of Hill, 62 Cal. 186. A judge refusing to settle a proposed statement may be compelled to do so, by proceedings under this section. Hearst v. Dennison, 72 Cal. 227; 13 Pac. 628. Where no exception has been disallowed, a petition to the appellate court, under this section, does not lie to settle a bill of exceptions, merely to determine whether the judge has inserted or refused to insert a correct statement of proceedings and evidence in the action. Vance v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 390; 25 Pac. 500.

Time of application. The right to apply for relief under this section accrues when the judge has concluded the settlement of the proposed bill or statement, and directed its engrossment, without including an exception which the party seeking the allowance of the bill claims to have reserved; the application should be made promptly; but where the trial was protracted, and the engrossed statement was bulky, a delay of two months is excusable. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098. Where the statement has been settled, and a motion for a new trial based on such statement has been denied, it is too late to apply to the appellate court to prove an exception. Frankel v. Deidesheimer, 83 Cal. 44; 23 Pac. 136.

Who may apply. "The party desiring the bill settled," who is authorized to apply to the appellate court to prove exceptions allowed, is the party who takes the exception and presents the bill to the judge for settlement: that phrase does not include the prevailing party, who has no right to have exceptions in his favor inserted by way of amendments to the bill proposed by the losing party. Application of Gates, 90 Cal. 257; 27 Pac. 195.

Contents of petition. The petition in an application to the supreme court for the settlement of a bill of exceptions should set forth fully and specifically the exceptions taken and the evidence in support thereof, and notice of the application should be given to the trial judge (Guardianship of Hawes, 68 Cal. 413; 9 Pac. 456; People v. Bitancourt, 73 Cal. 1; 14 Pac. 372; Landers v. Landers, 82 Cal. 480; 23 Pac. 126; and see Wormouth v. Gardner, 35 Cal. 227); but only a general statement of the tendency of the evidence is required, so that the materiality of the ruling may appear. People v. Bitancourt, 73 Cal. 1; 14 Pac. 372. The party seeking the allowance of exceptions should present his whole case in his original petition, or before the hearing on the reference. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098. A petition for leave to prove a bill of exceptions, which has annexed thereto, as an exhibit, a document containing the evidence, ruling, and exceptions taken on the hearing, is sufficient. Guardianship of Hawes, 2 Cal. Unrep. 656; 11 Pac. 220. The petition for leave to prove an exception must show that the proper steps to procure the settlement of the bill were taken, and that a statement of the particular exception desired to be proven was included in the proposed bill, and that the judge, in settling the bill, refused to allow that such an exception was taken: no presumptions are indulged. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1089.

Amendment to petition. The petition cannot be amended after a reference has been ordered and a hearing had. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098.

Evidence admissible on application. Where an exception is disallowed contrary to the facts, the party may prove to the appellate court that the exception was taken, and, in connection therewith, may prove sufficient surrounding facts to show the point of the exception; and where he succeeds in making his proof, his exception will be put into a bill certified by the chief justice and filed with the clerk below, where it will form part of the record (Vance v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 390; 25 Pac. 500); but this section does not authorize any evidence or other matters to be added, alleged to have been improperly omitted, in addition to the statement of the ruling and exception. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098. It authorizes the appellate court to order an instrument, to the exclusion of which an exception was taken, to be certified for its inspection, where the trial court refuses to insert it in the bill of exceptions, since it cannot be said that the judge allowed an exception to a ruling admitting it in evidence, when the instrument itself, the very thing objected to, is excluded from the bill (Jennings v. Brown, 109 Cal. 290; 41 Pac. 1085; and see Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661; 38 Pac. 447); but it does not give authority to the appellate court, when an exception to a particular ruling has been allowed, to strike out any evidence or other matters stated in connection with such ruling, on the ground that such evidence was not given, or that such matters are untruly or incorrectly stated. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098; Hyde v. Boyle, 86 Cal. 352; 24 Pac. 1059; 89 Cal. 590; 26 Pac. 1092; Cox v. Delmas, 92 Cal. 652; 28 Pac. 687. Where it is conceded in the petition that the judge settled and signed the bill, but it is alleged that it is not a true bill, and the petition has annexed thereto a copy of the bill as settled, and also a copy of the proposed bill, a case is presented, in which the petitioner should be allowed to prove the truth of the issue thus made. Curran v. Kennedy, 3 Cal. Unrep. 259; 24 Pac. 276. Evidence that the statements contained in the bill as settled by the judge, in connection with the exceptions which he allowed, were incorrect, either as to the omission or inclusion of matter not properly omitted or included, is immaterial. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 569; 82 Pac. 192.

Burden of proof on petitioner. Where the allegations of the petition are not established by a preponderance of evidence, the petition will be denied. Crow v. Minor, 85 Cal. 214; 24 Pac. 640. Where the evidence is directly conflicting as to whether certain alleged exceptions were made, it cannot be held that the judge erred or abused his discretion in not allowing them. People v. Scott, 121 Cal. 101; 53 Pac. 364.

Presumptions as to exhibits. Instruments marked at the trial as exhibits are presumed, on a petition to compel the allowance of exceptions by inserting them, to be in the same condition as when the court ordered them to be sealed up; if their identity is questioned, the matter can be inquired into on appeal. Jennings v. Brown, 109 Cal. 290; 41 Pac. 1085.

Settlement of new bill by appellate court. On a petition to prove exceptions, there may be a settlement of a new bill, based upon the reporter's notes; and the bill certified by the chief justice constitutes part of the record upon appeal. Estate of Dolbeer, 147 Cal. 359; 81 Pac. 1098.

Mandamus to compel signing of bill of exceptions. See note 98 Am. St. Rep. 902.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to article II.

§ 653. Settlement of bill of exceptions. When the decision excepted to was made by any judicial officer, other than a judge, the bill of exceptions shall be presented to such judicial officer, and be settled and signed by him in the same manner as it is required to be presented to, settled, and signed by a court or judge. A judge or judicial officer may settle and sign a bill of exceptions after, as well as before, he ceases to be such judge or judicial officer. If such judge or judicial officer, before the bill of exceptions is settled, dies, is removed from office, becomes disqualified, is absent from the state, or refuses to settle the bill of exceptions, or if no mode is provided by law for the settlement of the same, it shall be settled and certified in such manner as the supreme court may, by its order or rules, direct. Judges, judicial officers, and the supreme court shall respectively possess the same power, in settling and certifying statements, as is by this section conferred upon them in settling and certifying bills of exceptions.

Legislation § 653. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "If the judge who presided at the trial ceases to hold office before the bill is tendered or settled, he may, nevertheless, settle such bill, or the party may, as provided in the preceding section, apply to the supreme court to prove the same."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 93.

Constitutionality of section. The power of a judge who has tried a cause to settle a bill of exceptions therein, after the expiration of his term of office, conferred by this section, has been continuously recognized by the appellate court for too long a period of time to be now questioned as unconstitutional, and its validity is affirmed upon the rule of stare decisis. Miller & Lux v. Enterprise Canal etc. Co., 142 Cal. 208; 100 Am. St. Rep. 115; 75 Pac. 770.

Power of judge to settle bill. Where the successor of the judge who tried an action hears and denies the motion for a new trial, made upon the records and minutes of the court, the subsequent statement on appeal from the order denying the motion should be settled by the judge who made the order, and not by his predecessor, who tried the action. Cummings v. Conlan, 66 Cal. 403. The ex-judge has power to settle a bill of exceptions in a cause that has been tried before him as judge. Miller & Lux v. Enterprise Canal etc. Co., 142 Cal. 208; 100 Am. St. Rep. 115; 75 Pac. 770. A bill of exceptions, settled by a judge who had no power to do so, cannot be considered on appeal. People v. Knoblock, 11 Cal. App. 333; 104 Pac. 1012.

Remedy where ex-judge refuses to settle bill. Mandamus will not lie to compel an ex-judge, before whom an action was tried, to settle a bill of exceptions therein, after his term of office expired, although he is authorized by this section to do so. Leach v. Aitken, 91 Cal. 484; 28 Pac. 777. Special application should be made to the appellate court for an order directing the settlement of a bill of exceptions, where the trial judge refuses to do so after his term of office has expired, in order to render it available on appeal; and neglect on the part of the appellant to take such steps as were necessary to secure the settlement of the bill, within a reasonable time, is equivalent to his failure to file the transcript within the time limited; and where more than six months have elapsed, the conclusion is authorized that the appellant abandoned the exceptions set forth in the bill. Estate of Depeaux, 118 Cal. 522; 50 Pac. 682.

Refusal to transfer cause. Refusal to transfer the cause to the superior court of an adjoining county, in order to settle the statement of the case, is improper, where the judge is disqualified, and the judge who tried the case is no longer in office, and the judge who heard the motion is not the judge of the adjoining county. Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330; 7 Pac. 746.

Mandamus to compel judge to sign bill of exceptions after expiration of term. See note 36 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1087.

ARTICLE II.

NEW TRIALS.

§ 656. New trial defined.
§ 657. When a new trial may be granted.
§ 658. Motion for new trial. Papers.
§ 659. Notice of motion. Upon whom served, and what to contain.
§ 660. Motion, when to be heard.
§ 661. Record on appeal.
§ 662. New trial on court's own motion.
§ 663. Vacation of judgment.
§ 663a. Notice of intention, service of.

§ 656. New trial defined. A new trial is a re-examination of an issue of fact in the same court after a trial and decision by a jury, court, or referee.

Mandamus, new trial in. See post, §§ 1092, 1110.

Legislation § 656. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 192, which had, as the last words of the section, "jury, court, or referees." When enacted in 1872, these words were changed to "jury or court, or by referees."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 149; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 717; the code commissioner saying, "The meaning of the section is not changed by the amendments."

Issues of fact, only, reviewable. The operation of this section is confined to those cases in which the code has expressly authorized issues of fact to be framed: it does not apply to every order which may be made ex parte, or by the court on its own motion, simply because the court has permitted written objections to be filed. Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614; 29 Pac. 235. Whenever the action of the court is dependent on the existence of extrinsic facts presented to it for determination in the form of pleadings, which are to be decided by it in conformity with the preponderance of evidence, an issue of fact arises, which, under its decision, may be re-examined on a motion for a new trial. Estate of Bauquier, 88 Cal. 302; 26 Pac. 178, 373, 532. A finding as to attorneys' fees, being on an issue raised by law, though no reference is made to it in the pleadings, is reviewable on a motion for a new trial. Hooper v. Fletcher, 145 Cal. 375; 79 Pac. 418. A new trial is authorized in proceedings for changing the boundaries of a city, under § 803, post, where other questions of fact than those relating to such proceedings are involved, or errors of law committed at the trial. People v. Oakland, 123 Cal. 145; 55 Pac. 772; People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736; People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; 50 Pac. 668. Where only two of the issues were submitted to the jury and passed upon by their verdict, a motion for a new trial, made on the verdict, and before the decision, is premature. Estate of McKenna, 138 Cal. 439; 71 Pac. 501; and see Morris v. De Celis, 41 Cal. 331; Gaze v. Lynch, 42 Cal. 362; Baker v. Borello, 131 Cal. 615; 63 Pac. 914. A party may move for a new trial on a single issue. Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1; 35 Pac. 437; San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 63; 3 L. R. A. 83; 20 Pac. 372. When a new trial is granted as to only one of several issues, it opens for examination only that issue: the determination of the other issues remains in the record, and cannot be retried; the only remedy of the moving party as to those issues is to appeal from the part of the order denying the motion for a new trial as to them. Estate of Everts, 163 Cal. 449; 125 Pac. 1058. This section does not apply to a default, as the re-examination is where there has been a previous trial of an issue of fact (Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122); and a new trial is properly denied, where the matter is admitted by the pleadings, since, in such case, there is no issue to try, even though the findings were made on a supposititious issue. Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125. Where all the facts are agreed on, there is no issue of fact to be re-examined, and no ground for a new trial. Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364. There is no ground for a new trial where the judgment is wholly upon stipulated facts. Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204. Where every material issue of fact was decided in favor of the losing party, a new trial will not be granted (Sharp v. Bowie, 142 Cal. 462; 76 Pac. 62); nor where there was no issue of fact to be tried, and no trial. Fabretti v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 305; 19 Pac. 481. A motion for a new trial is not a proper proceeding to review the action of the court in rendering judgment in a case where there has been no trial upon issues of fact: in such case there is no office to be subserved by a new trial, and there is nothing to be reviewed upon appeal from an order denying a new trial. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122; Savings and Loan Society v. Meeks, 66 Cal. 371; 5 Pac. 624; Estate of Heldt, 98 Cal. 553; 33 Pac. 549. Where no issue as to damages is presented in an action for an injunction, a new trial cannot be granted to try the question of damages. Bigelow v. Los Angeles, 141 Cal. 503; 75 Pac. 111. Where no verdict was rendered by the jury for or against the defendant, no new trial can be had. Benjamin v. Stewart, 61 Cal. 605. A motion for a new trial is not directed at the judgment, but at the verdict or other decision of fact. Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42;

Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485; 8 Pac. 22.

Objections by demurrer or motion. Objections to form of action or pleadings, either by demurrer or motion, or objection to evidence, or that the trial was by jury, or that the verdict did not cover the material issues and is therefore insufficient, cannot be made on motion for a new trial, but only on appeal from judgment. Morse v. Wilson, 138 Cal. 558; 71 Pac. 801; and see Riverside Water Co. v. Gage, 108 Cal. 240; 41 Pac. 299. The ruling on a demurrer may be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, but not on an appeal from an order denying a new trial (Heilbron v. Centerville etc. Ditch Co., 76 Cal. 8; 17 Pac. 932; Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Evans v. Paige, 102 Cal. 132; 36 Pac. 406); and where a demurrer to the complaint has been sustained, a motion for a new trial does not lie, the demurrer raising only a question of law. Jones v. Chalfant, 128 Cal. 334; 60 Pac. 852. The sufficiency of a complaint cannot be considered on an appeal from an order denying or granting a new trial. Hook v. Hall, 2 Cal. Unrep. 459; 6 Pac. 422; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918; Petaluma Paving Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616; 69 Pac. 426; Lambert v. Marcuse, 137 Cal. 44; 69 Pac. 620; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828; Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Thompson v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 270; 57 Pac. 1015. The sufficiency of the complaint or the findings cannot be inquired into on an appeal from an order denying a new trial, but only the question whether the findings are supported by the evidence. Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Thompson v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 270; 57 Pac. 1015; Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918; Petaluma Paving Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616; 69 Pac. 426; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Burns v. Schoenfeld, 1 Cal. App. 121; 81 Pac. 713. There can be no new trial of a motion. Harper v. Hildreth, 99 Cal. 265; 33 Pac. 1103; Doyle v. Republic Life Ins. Co., 125 Cal. 15; 57 Pac. 667.

Conclusions of law. Conclusions of law drawn from facts cannot be reviewed on a motion for a new trial. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 106 Cal. 224; 39 Pac. 758; and see Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186.

Sufficiency of verdict. The sufficiency of a verdict to support a judgment, whether treated as a verdict or as a finding, cannot be considered on an appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial. Morse v. Wilson, 138 Cal. 558; 71 Pac. 801.

Objection to judgment. A motion for a new trial is not necessary to review an objection to a judgment which appears on the face of the findings. California Nat. Bank v. Ginty, 108 Cal. 148; 41 Pac. 38. That an erroneous judgment drawn from findings of fact, which are not complained of, cannot be corrected by means of a motion for a new trial, conceded, but not decided. Knight v. Roche, 56 Cal. 15; Jenkins v. Frink, 30 Cal. 586; 89 Am. Dec. 134. Where a judgment is upon stipulated facts, an objection that the decision is against law is reviewable only upon appeal from the judgment. Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204. Errors apparent on the face of the judgment roll will not be reviewed on an appeal from an order denying a motion for new trial, but only on an appeal from the judgment (Estate of Westerfield, 96 Cal. 113; 30 Pac. 1104; and see Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542); and will be considered, even if not named in the specification of errors in the statement. Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; and see Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505; Shepard v. McNeil, 38 Cal. 72; Patterson v. Sharp, 41 Cal. 133. A motion may be made, in partition proceedings, for a new trial: if there is error in an interlocutory decree in partition, it must be corrected by motion for a new trial or by an appeal. Tormey v. Allen, 45 Cal. 119.

Failure to file findings. Failure to file findings within six months after the case had been submitted for decision and the court had ordered judgment cannot be reviewed on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205; 66 Pac. 208; and see Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; Fogarty v. Fogarty, 129 Cal. 46; 61 Pac. 570; Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 530; 63 Pac. 850; 64 Pac. 253; Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918.

Nature of actions or proceedings as affecting right to new trial. A bank against which a judgment is rendered, to force it into involuntary liquidation, under the Bank Commissioners' Act, has a right to move for a new trial. People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo, 152 Cal. 261; 92 Pac. 481. Reconsideration of disbarment proceedings in the appellate court cannot be had on motion for a new trial. In re Philbrook, 108 Cal. 14; 40 Pac. 106; Disbarment of Tyler, 71 Cal. 353; 12 Pac. 289; 13 Pac. 169; Grangers' Bank v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 198; 35 Pac. 642. The provisions of the Practice Act, in relation to new trials, had no application to a motion to set aside the report of commissioners in proceedings to condemn land. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

Reversal of order denying a new trial, effect of. The reversal of an order denying a new trial, on the ground assigned, that the findings are not justified by the evidence, has the effect of awarding a new trial to the parties. Riley v. Loma Vista Ranch Co., 5 Cal. App. 25; 89 Pac. 849.

Evidence admissible at new trial. Where a new trial is awarded on appeal, the case is before the court below for trial de novo of all issues of fact, upon such proper amendments to the pleadings as the court may allow; and the parties have the right to introduce any and all competent evidence. Riley v. Loma Vista Ranch Co., 5 Cal. App. 25; 89 Pac. 849.

§ 657. When a new trial may be granted. The former verdict or other decision may be vacated and a new trial granted, on the application of the party aggrieved, for any of the following causes, materially affecting the substantial rights of such party:

1. Irregularity in the proceedings of the court, jury, or adverse party, or any order of the court or abuse of discretion by which either party was prevented from having a fair trial;

2. Misconduct of the jury; and whenever any one or more of the jurors have been induced to assent to any general or special verdict, or to a finding on any question submitted to them by the court, by a resort to the determination of chance, such misconduct may be proved by the affidavit of any one of the jurors;

3. Accident or surprise, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against;

4. Newly discovered evidence, material for the party making the application, which he could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the trial;

5. Excessive damages, appearing to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice;

6. Insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or other decision, or that it is against law;

7. Error in law, occurring at the trial and excepted to by the party making the application.

How application to be made. Post, § 658.

Discretion. Court may grant new trial of its own motion. Post, § 662.

Verdict against law. See post, § 662.

Legislation § 657. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 193 (New York Code, § 264), as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 38, which had, (1) in the introductory paragraph, the word "said" instead of "such"; (2) in subd. 2, had (a) the word "shall" before "have been," (b) the words "or questions" after "question," (c) the word "affidavits" instead of "affidavit," and (d) the words "or more" after "any one"; (3) in subd. 6, omitted the word "it" before "is against law," the last evidently an error, as the word "it" is in the original section of 1851.

Construction of section. This section applies to an action brought under the act of March 23, 1901, against the state, to recover a bounty. San Francisco Law etc. Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047.

In what classes of cases motion proper. A motion for a new trial is proper in proceedings for partial distribution. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027. A motion for a new trial of some probate proceedings will not lie, but there may be a new trial of certain issues joined in such proceedings. Shipman v. Unangst, 150 Cal. 425; 88 Pac. 1090; Carter v. Waste, 159 Cal. 23; 112 Pac. 727.

The decision, what is. The "decision" which may be vacated is that which is given on the original trial of the question of fact, and on which the judgment is to be entered. Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186. Until the findings are signed and filed, there is no decision, and consequently nobody is "aggrieved"; so that a notice of motion for a new trial before the findings are signed is premature and ineffectual. Dominguez v. Mascotti, 74 Cal. 269; 15 Pac. 773; and see Mahoney v. Caperton, 15 Cal. 313; Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126; Hinds v. Gage, 56 Cal. 486; Spottiswood v. Weir, 66 Cal. 525; 6 Pac. 381. The decision consists of findings of fact and conclusions of law, and may be set aside and a new trial granted for certain causes; hence, the judgment may be set aside. Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872. The decision of the court is found in its findings, and not in the giving of the judgment. Elizalde v. Murphy, 11

Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904. Service of a copy of the findings and judgment upon the attorneys of the defeated party, after entry of the judgment, is a sufficient notice of the entry of judgment. Kelleher v. Creciat, 89 Cal. 38; 26 Pac. 619.

Aggrieved party, who is. A party having no interest in the proceeding is not an aggrieved party, and is not prejudiced by any ruling or judgment made in the cause. Blythe v. Ayres, 102 Cal. 254; 36 Pac. 522.

Nature of motion. A motion for a new trial is an application to have the verdict or decision set aside, and is not addressed to the judgment. Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 62 Cal. 558. The motion for a new trial attacks the verdict, rather than the judgment; such motion may be made prior to the entry of judgment. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182.

Specification of grounds in motion. Where a party specifies the grounds upon which he intends to rely for a new trial, he will be considered as abandoning all other grounds not enumerated. Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117. A general order granting a new trial must be sustained, if good on any of the grounds upon which the motion was based. Smith v. Hyer, 11 Cal. App. 597; 105 Pac. 787. A party relying upon a failure to find upon material issues must make his motion for a new trial on the ground that the decision is "against law": no further specification is required. Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 146; 124 Pac. 998.

Irregularity in proceedings of court. Any irregularity preventing a fair trial is ground for a new trial. Piercy v. Piercy, 149 Cal. 163; 86 Pac. 507. The language of this section is sufficiently broad to include any departure by the court from the due and orderly method of disposition of an action by which the substantial rights of a party have been materially affected, where such departure is not evidenced by a ruling or order that may be made the subject of an exception. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144; 78 Pac. 540. This ground for a new trial is intended to refer to matters which an appellant cannot fully present by exception taken during the progress of the trial, and which must appear by affidavit. Woods v. Jensen, 130 Cal. 200; 62 Pac. 473. The appearance of a minor by guardian ad litem, without the authority of an order of court, is an irregularity which may be raised by motion for a new trial. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. The action of the court in interrupting counsel, and in an irregular way controlling the conduct of the case on the side of the defendant, and virtually threatening to prejudice his testimony, is an irregularity (Pratt v. Pratt, 141 Cal. 247; 74 Pac. 742), as is also personal misconduct of the judge, of such a nature as to make it apparent that a substantial right has been materially affected thereby (Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144; 78 Pac. 540); but improper questions asked by the court cannot be urged as a ground of "irregularity in the proceedings of the court." Woods v. Jensen, 130 Cal. 200; 62 Pac. 473. Language of the court, in ruling upon evidence, which language is proper and embodies a correct statement of the law, does not constitute misconduct on its part. Blacholder v. Guthrie, 17 Cal. App. 297; 119 Pac. 521. Where instructions, though correct, may have misled the jury, a new trial may be granted on that ground. Briggs v. Hall, 20 Cal. App. 372; 129 Pac. 288. A finding outside of the issues is not ground for a new trial. Power v. Fairbanks, 146 Cal. 611; 80 Pac. 1075. A judgment must be reversed, where there are no findings to support it. Riley v. Loma Vista Ranch Co., 5 Cal. App. 25; 89 Pac. 849. A judgment is unauthorized, where there are no findings, and there is no waiver of findings: it cannot be deemed supported by former findings set aside upon reversal. Riley v. Loma Vista Ranch Co., 5 Cal. App. 25; 89 Pac. 849. A failure to file findings for more than six months after judgment was ordered is not ground for a new trial. Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205; 66 Pac. 208.

Abuse of discretion. Where the order granting a new trial is general, it will not be reversed, unless the order itself is an abuse of discretion (Von Schroeder v. Spreckels, 147 Cal. 186; 81 Pac. 515; and see Newell v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 242; Anderson v. Hinshaw, 110 Cal. 682; 43 Pac. 389); nor will an order refusing a new trial be reversed, where there is no abuse of discretion, although, if a new trial had been granted, it would not have been disapproved. Anderson v. Hinshaw, 110 Cal. 682; 43 Pac. 389. Where the court grants a new trial without any legal reasons, its discretion has been abused. Le Tourneux v. Gilliss, 1 Cal. App. 546; 82 Pac. 627.

Order of court, when not ground for. An order, not made in the presence of the jury, committing the defendant on a charge of subornation of perjury, is not ground for a new trial (Sheehan v. Hammond, 2 Cal. App. 371; 84 Pac. 340); nor is the granting of a motion to strike out parts or all of a pleading. Stockton Iron Works v. Walters, 18 Cal. App. 373; 123 Pac. 240.

Misconduct of jury. The granting of a new trial for misconduct of the jury, such as may be shown by affidavit, is wholly different and apart from the right given by the statute to grant relief on the ground of excessive damages: the former contemplates some overt act of impropriety, while an excessive verdict does not necessarily imply misconduct, but simply that the result has been induced, perhaps unconsciously, through excited feelings or prejudice. Harrison v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 156; 47 Pac. 1019. The conduct of jurors in conversing with parties to the action, and in drinking and carousing with one of the prevailing parties, is misconduct entitling the losing party to a new trial, notwithstanding a counter-showing that the same conduct was indulged in by both parties, and that the verdict was uninfluenced by such misconduct. Wright v. Eastlick, 125 Cal. 517; 58 Pac. 87. Mere temporary separation of the jury is not sufficient ground on which to set aside a verdict, if the moving party is not prejudiced, nor his substantial rights materially affected (Estate of McKenna, 143 Cal. 580; 76 Pac. 461); nor is misconduct of a juror, of such a trifling nature that it could not, in its very nature, have been prejudicial to the moving party, sufficient. Siemsen v. Oakland etc. Ry., 134 Cal. 494; 66 Pac. 672. A new trial will not be granted on account of immaterial misconduct of the jury. Kimic v. San José etc. Ry. Co., 156 Cal. 379; 104 Pac. 986. It is not misconduct, in the jury-room, for the foreman to examine with a magnifying-glass a memorandum-book kept by the attorney for the proponent of a will, and to inform the jury what he observed in the use of the same. Estate of Thomas, 155 Cal. 488; 101 Pac. 798. In an action for personal injuries, received while ascending in an elevator, the expression of a desire, on the part of one of the jurors, to view the premises, is not such misconduct as to warrant the granting of a new trial. Judd v. Letts, 158 Cal. 359; 111 Pac. 12. In an action to recover damages for injuries to a leased building, the mere fact that the jury, on going to lunch, was casually led past such building, does not warrant a new trial on the ground that the jury had inspected the building without the consent of the defendant. Higgins v. Los Angeles Gas etc. Co., 159 Cal. 651; 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 717; 115 Pac. 313. The mere fact that a juror, of his own motion, visited the scene of the accident, during the progress of the trial, which fact was known to the defendant prior to the verdict, cannot be relied upon by the defendant as a ground for a new trial. Zibbell v. Southern Pacific Co., 160 Cal. 237; 116 Pac. 513. The jury's disregard of an erroneous instruction is not ground for a new trial. Western Pacific Land Co. v. Wilson, 19 Cal. App. 338; 125 Pac. 1076.

Verdict determined by chance. Where the assent of some of the jurors was secured by drawing lots, the verdict is a chance verdict, and should be set aside (Levy v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485); and also where the verdict was determined by the guess of heads or tails of a coin. Donner v. Palmer, 23 Cal. 40. "Chance" is hazard, risk, or the result or issue of uncertain and unknown conditions or forces: an average verdict, arrived at by dividing the sum of the various amounts which each juror believed proper, by the number of the jurors, under a prior agreement that such average verdict should be the verdict of the jury without further consultation, is a chance verdict, and should be set aside (Dixon v. Pluns, 98 Cal. 384; 35 Am. St. Rep. 180; 20 L. R. A. 698; 33 Pac. 268; Weinburg v. Somps, 4 Cal. Unrep. 10; 33 Pac. 341; and see Turner v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460); but the verdict is not a chance verdict, where the jurors agreed to divide the aggregate amount by twelve, and where it was understood that they were not to be bound by the result, and after the amount was so ascertained the jurors unanimously agreed to adopt it as the sum to be returned. Hunt v. Elliott, 77 Cal. 588; 20 Pac. 132; McDonnell v. Pescadero etc. Stage Co., 120 Cal. 476; 52 Pac. 725; and see Turner v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460.

Juror cannot impeach verdict, except when it results from chance. The affidavit of a juror cannot be received to impeach the verdict, except in the single case of a resort to the determination of chance (People v. Azoff, 105 Cal. 632; 39 Pac. 59; People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301; 64 Pac. 472; Saltzman v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 125 Cal. 501; 58 Pac. 169; and see Turner v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; Kimic v. San José etc. Ry. Co., 156 Cal. 379; 104 Pac. 986); and the fact that the affidavit is made by a dissenting juror does not change the rule. Saltzman v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 125 Cal. 501; 58 Pac. 169. An average verdict may be shown to be a chance verdict, by the affidavit of a juror. Weinburg v. Somps, 4 Cal. Unrep. 10; 33 Pac. 341; and see Dixon v. Pluns, 98 Cal. 384; 35 Am. St. Rep. 180; 20 L. R. A. 698; 33 Pac. 268. Misconduct by reading newspaper reports of the trial cannot be shown by the affidavit of a juror (People v. Azoff, 105 Cal. 632; 39 Pac. 59); nor can individual jurors impeach the verdict by showing that facts not in evidence were considered. Fredericks v. Judah, 73 Cal. 604; 15 Pac. 305; and see Polhemus v. Heiman, 50 Cal. 438. The affidavit of a third person, showing declarations or admissions of a juror, made at the close of the trial, and tending to impeach the verdict, cannot be received in evidence; and the rule is not different, whether the misconduct was before or during the retirement (Siemsen v. Oakland etc. Ry., 134 Cal. 494; 66 Pac. 672; Kimic v. San José etc. Ry. Co., 156 Cal. 379; 104 Pac. 986); nor can a verdict be impeached by statements of jurors regarding such misconduct. People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301; 64 Pac. 472. Affidavits of jurors may be used to disprove or explain alleged misconduct on their part, and such affidavits cannot be used, where the misconduct is admitted, to show that the verdict was not influenced thereby. Kimie v. San José etc. Ry. Co., 156 Cal. 379; 104 Pac. 986. Where the affidavit of a juror as to obtaining an average verdict is overcome by counter-affidavits of two other jurors, a new trial is properly refused (Hunt v. Elliott, 77 Cal. 588; 20 Pac. 132; and see Hoare v. Hindley, 49 Cal. 274); and an affidavit of one juror, showing that an average verdict was intended to control the jury, may be overcome by counter-affidavits of other jurors (McDonnell v. Pescadero etc. Stage Co., 120 Cal. 476; 52 Pac. 725); and an order granting a new trial on the ground that the verdict was a chance verdict will not be disturbed, though the affidavit of two non-concurring jurors that it was a chance verdict is contradicted by seven concurring jurors. King v. Elton, 2 Cal. App. 145; 83 Pac. 261. An affidavit by a juror, that the verdict was determined by chance, and that he was induced to assent thereto in that manner, is not conclusive upon the trial court; and where the court finds, upon conflicting evidence, that the verdict was not a chance verdict, its action will not be disturbed on appeal. Dixon v. Pluns, 101 Cal. 511; 35 Pac. 1030.

Accident or surprise. The "surprise" contemplated by this section and § 473, ante, is "some condition or situation in which a party to a cause is unexpectedly placed to his injury, without any default or negligence of his own which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against." Porter v. Anderson, 14 Cal. App. 716; 113 Pac. 345; McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312. A party moving for a new trial on the ground of surprise must show not only "surprise," as that term is used in the statute, but must also show that injury resulted to him from the cause of such surprise. Brandt v. Krogh, 14 Cal. App. 39; 111 Pac. 275. Erroneous views of the law, or the advice of an attorney contrary to the ruling of the court, is not the surprise for which a new trial will be granted. Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Bowie, 104 Cal. 286; 37 Pac. 934; Klockenbaum v. Pierson, 22 Cal. 160. Where a plaintiff has an erroneous view of the requisites of a sufficient complaint, the subsequent discovery, through a ruling of the court, of a correct view is not "surprise," upon which a motion for a new trial may be founded. Porter v. Anderson, 14 Cal. App. 716; 113 Pac. 345. Surprise at the ruling of the court, on the trial, as to the admission of testimony, or a mistake of law, by counsel, is not ground for a new trial. Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 523; 70 Am. Dec. 746; Le Tourneux v. Gilliss, 1 Cal. App. 546; 82 Pac. 627; Porter v. Anderson, 14 Cal. App. 716; 113 Pac. 345. The commencement of an action is sufficient notice to the defendant of its nature; and where he has knowledge that certain evidence may be used by the plaintiff in establishing his case, and makes no motion for a continuance, nor expresses any surprise when such testimony is introduced, there is no surprise in a legal sense. Dewey v. Frank, 62 Cal. 343. An attorney is presumed to know the rules of the court in which he appears: his want of such knowledge does not authorize relief from a judgment taken against him on the ground of surprise. Brooks v. Johnson, 122 Cal. 569; 55 Pac. 423. If a party claiming to be surprised by the introduction of testimony fails to apply, at the trial, for a continuance of the cause, or to resort to other testimony, or to ask for any relief to which he may be entitled under the circumstances, his failure is attributable to his own fault: he should not wait to move for a new trial on the ground of surprise. Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548; 4 Pac. 557; Schellhous v. Ball, 29 Cal. 605; Turner v. Morrison, 11 Cal. 21; Delmas v. Martin, 39 Cal. 555; Ferrer v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416. The refusal of the cashier of a bank to testify in an action against the bank, on the ground that his evidence might tend to incriminate him, is not a ground for a new trial on the ground of surprise, where there was no attempt to compel an answer, and where the cashier's successor and several directors of the bank were also witnesses. Nicholson v. Randall Banking Co., 130 Cal. 533; 62 Pac. 930. Failure to introduce a deposition, under an erroneous assumption, induced by judge and opposing counsel, does not authorize a new trial on the ground of surprise (Le Tourneux v. Gilliss, 1 Cal. App. 546; 82 Pac. 627); nor does failure to use depositions, by the party taking them, and such party is not bound to offer them in evidence. Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548; 4 Pac. 557. There is no surprise where the plaintiff and his counsel fail to acquaint themselves, before the end of the trial, with the terms of a lease, on which the action was based, which was in their possession, and produced in evidence by them. Borderre v. Den, 106 Cal. 594; 39 Pac. 946. Where one of the defendant's attorneys was present in court on the day the case was called for trial, and was informed that it would soon be called, and made no objection to its being disposed of at that time, and on the day of rendition of judgment requested the clerk not to have that fact published, there is no showing of accident or surprise. Preston v. Eureka etc. Stone Co., 54 Cal. 198. A judgment cannot be set aside, merely on the ground of surprise, or failure of an attorney to be present at the trial, unless there is a showing that a different result might have been reached. Brooks v. Johnson, 122 Cal. 569; 55 Pac. 423. An affidavit of surprise, leading to the withholding of testimony, without any affidavit of the evidence which would have been introduced, or anything to make it appear that a different finding would have been made, is not a sufficient showing of legal surprise to justify a new trial. Cohen v. Alameda, 124 Cal. 504; 57 Pac. 377; Fisk v. Casey, 119 Cal. 643; 51 Pac. 1077.

Excusable neglect. Excusable neglect is not one of the grounds of a motion for a new trial (McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225; 23 Pac. 312); but where the neglect is the result of the wrongful procurement of the other party, the rule is otherwise. Piercy v. Piercy, 149 Cal. 163; 86 Pac. 507.

Failure to serve amended complaint. The omission to serve an amendment of a complaint is not ground for a new trial, where no prejudice or injury results to the defendant. Daly v. Ruddell, 137 Cal. 671; 70 Pac. 784.

Newly discovered evidence. The provision that newly discovered evidence shall be of a character materially affecting the substantial rights of the party implies that it shall be such as to render a different result probable on a new trial, and such is the established rule of the court; and the determination whether the newly discovered evidence would affect the result of a new trial is within the discretion of the trial judge, and will not be interfered with on appeal. Oberlander v. Fixen, 129 Cal. 690; 62 Pac. 254. Newly discovered evidence, rendering a different result certain or probable, justifies the granting of a new trial. Oberlander v. Fixen, 129 Cal. 690; 62 Pac. 254; Levitsky v. Johnson, 35 Cal. 41; Von Glahn v. Brennan, 81 Cal. 261; 22 Pac. 596. The matter of granting a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence is with the trial court, which must say whether or not the proffered evidence, if introduced, would affect the decision of the court. Jones v. Lewis, 19 Cal. App. 575; 126 Pac. 853. The trial court must determine the effect of newly discovered evidence that is merely cumulative; if it would have changed the result in the first instance, a new trial should be granted. Smith v. Hyer, 11 Cal. App. 597; 105 Pac. 787. Merely cumulative evidence is not sufficient to justify the granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence (Christensen v. McBride, 4 Cal. Unrep. 542; 36 Pac. 398; Shafer v. Willis, 124 Cal. 36; 56 Pac. 635; Galvin v. Palmer, 113 Cal. 46; 45 Pac. 172; Niosi v. Empire Steam Laundry, 117 Cal. 257; 49 Pac. 185; Kuhlman v. Burns, 117 Cal. 469; 49 Pac. 585; Chalmers v. Sheehy, 132 Cal. 459; 84 Am. St. Rep. 62; 64 Pac. 709; Wood v. Moulton, 146 Cal. 317; 80 Pac. 92; Patterson v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 147 Cal. 178; 81 Pac. 531); nor when not so conclusive in its character as to raise a reasonable presumption that it would change the result (O'Rourke v. Vennekohl, 104 Cal. 254; 37 Pac. 930; Shafer v. Willis, 124 Cal. 36; 56 Pac. 635; Kuhlman v. Burns, 117 Cal. 469; 49 Pac. 585); and hence, where the new evidence is that of but one more witness to an accident, the discretion of the trial court will not be disturbed on appeal. O'Rourke v. Vennekohl, 104 Cal. 254; 37 Pac. 930. Where the newly discovered evidence bears only on the question of the relative degree of negligence of the two defendants in the case, a new trial is properly refused (Howland v. Oakland Consol. etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 513; 42 Pac. 983); and also where the new evidence is designed merely to contradict a witness. Chalmers v. Sheehy, 132 Cal. 459; 84 Am. St. Rep. 62; 64 Pac. 709; Wood v. Moulton, 146 Cal. 317; 80 Pac. 92; People v. Anthony, 56 Cal. 397; Brandt v. Krogh, 14 Cal. App. 39; 111 Pac. 275. Newly discovered evidence, which, if true, would contradict the averments of the complaint, and tend to show that the plaintiff was mistaken in his rights when the action was commenced, is not ground for a new trial. Bates v. Bates, 71 Cal. 307; 12 Pac. 223. Newly discovered evidence, relied on to obtain a new trial, should be presented in affidavits: it has no place in a statement. Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117.

Diligence in discovery and production of evidence. To obtain a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, the moving party must show that he has used due diligence (Broads v. Mead, 159 Cal. 765; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1125; 116 Pac. 46; Rockwell v. Italian-Swiss Colony, 10 Cal. App. 633; 103 Pac. 162; Brandt v. Krogh, 14 Cal. App. 39; 111 Pac. 275; Foley v. Northern California Power Co., 14 Cal. App. 401; 112 Pac. 467; Hawley v. Los Angeles Creamery Co., 16 Cal. App. 50; 116 Pac. 84; People v. Maruyama, 19 Cal. App. 290; 125 Pac. 924); and it must be shown that the proposed evidence was not known to him at the time of the trial; or, if not then known, could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered and produced at the trial. Olaine v. McGraw, 164 Cal. 424; 129 Pac. 460. The moving party must make a clear case, showing due diligence on his part, and the truth and materiality of the evidence (Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 125 Cal. 544; 58 Pac. 160); and where the newly discovered evidence is not of such a character as to put the moving party on inquiry, reasonable diligence is shown (Oberlander v. Fixen, 129 Cal. 690; 62 Pac. 254; Heintz v. Cooper, 104 Cal. 669; 38 Pac. 511); and where it is of such a character that it might have remained undiscovered even after the greatest diligence of the moving party, though known by the opposing party, or suppressed by him, and would be likely to change the result, a new trial should be granted. Blewett v. Miller, 131 Cal. 149; 63 Pac. 157. "Diligence" is a relative term, incapable of exact definition, and depends, essentially, upon the particular circumstances of each case; and the absence of a showing of diligence must be very marked, to justify an interference with the exercise of discretion of the trial court (Heintz v. Cooper, 104 Cal. 668; 38 Pac. 511); hence, the question whether the evidence could, with reasonable diligence, have been discovered and produced at the trial, is for the trial judge, and his determination is conclusive on appeal, unless for abuse of discretion (Oberlander v. Fixen, 129 Cal. 690; 62 Pac. 254); and the action of the trial court will not be disturbed, except upon a clear showing of an abuse of discretion. Rockwell v. Italian-Swiss Colony, 10 Cal. App. 633; 103 Pac. 162; Smith v. Hyer, 11 Cal. App. 597; 105 Pac. 787. Evidence cannot be deemed newly discovered, where there was ample time, before trial, within which to ascertain the facts. Gallatin v. Corning Irrigation Co., 163 Cal. 405; Ann. Cas. 1914A, 74; 126 Pac. 864. Where the evidence was in the possession of the moving party while the case was pending, and he did not avail himself of it, a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is properly denied (Sonoma County v. Stofen, 125 Cal. 32; 57 Pac. 681); and also where the president of the appellant corporation, who was present during most of the trial, and knew of the importance of his testimony and failed to give it. Hawley v. Los Angeles Creamery Co., 16 Cal. App. 50; 116 Pac. 84. Where the moving party must have known, from the testimony of the opposite party, of the existence of the evidence, and no application was made for time to procure the attendance of the witnesses, and no subpœnas were issued or other attempt made to procure their attendance, further than to send a messenger to one, who was found to be temporarily away from home, there is no showing of reasonable diligence (Weinburg v. Somps, 4 Cal. Unrep. 10; 33 Pac. 341); nor where the moving party failed to notify or subpœna a necessary witness, and asked for and was granted a continuance until the next day, when the witness was expected to but did not return, and the trial proceeded and judgment was rendered without his testimony (Butler v. Estrella etc. Vineyard Co., 124 Cal. 239; 56 Pac. 1040); nor where the evidence might have been procured at the trial by the use of reasonable diligence, and the moving party must have been fully advised as to its materiality and bearing on the case. Galvin v. Palmer, 113 Cal. 46; 45 Pac. 172. Where the moving party was notified by the testimony of the opposite party that the new witnesses knew the truth of the matter, and that they would contradict him if his testimony was false, the fact that he did not know what the witnesses would testify is no excuse for failure to procure their testimony at the trial (Weinburg v. Somps, 4 Cal. Unrep. 10; 33 Pac. 341); and where he had knowledge of the materiality of the testimony of the witness before the trial, and took steps to find him and procure his attendance, but failed to move for a continuance, he must be held to have entered upon the trial at his peril. Scanlan v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 128 Cal. 586; 61 Pac. 271; Berry v. Metzler, 7 Cal. 418. Newly discovered evidence, after defeat, is looked upon with suspicion, and the appellate court, in such case, is always reluctant to interfere with the ruling of the trial court, and will not do so, unless there has been a clear abuse of discretion. Harralson v. Barrett, 99 Cal. 607; 34 Pac. 342; O'Rourke v. Vennekohl, 104 Cal. 254; 37 Pac. 930; Heintz v. Cooper, 104 Cal. 668; 38 Pac. 511; Tibbet v. Tom Sue, 125 Cal. 544; 58 Pac. 160.

Excessive damages. A new trial will not be granted, unless the verdict is so excessive as to indicate that it is the result of passion or prejudice. Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460; Lee v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 118; 35 Pac. 572; Redfield v. Oakland Consol. Street Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063; Sherwood v. Kyle, 125 Cal. 652; 58 Pac. 270. Whether the verdict is excessive is to be determined solely from a consideration of the evidence in the case, as to whether it will fairly sustain the conclusion of the jury. Harrison v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 156; 47 Pac. 1019; Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 125 Cal. 141; 57 Pac. 774. An order granting a new trial on the ground that excessive damages were given under the influence of passion and prejudice, will not be interfered with, unless the discretion of the trial court was abused. Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 125 Cal. 141; 57 Pac. 774; Sherwood v. Kyle, 125 Cal. 652; 58 Pac. 270; and see Ingraham v. Weidler, 139 Cal. 588; 73 Pac. 415; Davis v. Southern Pacific Co., 98 Cal. 13; 32 Pac. 646; Etchas v. Oreña, 121 Cal. 270; 53 Pac. 798. The judge of the trial court is in a much better position than the appellate court to say whether a verdict is or could have been inspired by or tainted with passion or prejudice. James v. Oakland Traction Co., 10 Cal. App. 785; 103 Pac. 1082. In cases of damages for personal injuries, the verdict of the jury will not be disturbed, where the appellate court cannot say that the verdict is so disproportionate to the injury proved that it cannot be the result of the cool and dispassionate discretion of the jury. Gomez v. Scanlan, 155 Cal. 528; 102 Pac. 12; Scally v. W. T. Garratt & Co., 11 Cal. App.

138; 104 Pac. 325. A verdict for twenty-five thousand dollars, set aside; brakeman; loss of one leg (Lee v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 118; 35 Pac. 572); eight thousand dollars, set aside; man of about seventy years; injuries resulting in death (Harrison v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 158; 47 Pac. 1019); twenty thousand dollars, reduced to five thousand; woman; concussion of spine and other injuries, physical wreck, mind impaired (Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 125 Cal. 141; 57 Pac. 774); fourteen thousand dollars, affirmed; death of wife and mother; action by husband and minor children (Redfield v. Oakland Consol. Street Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277; 42 Pac. 822, 1063); five thousand dollars, affirmed; death of father; action by orphan girl (Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co., 3 Cal. App. 312; 84 Pac. 1010); fifteen thousand dollars, affirmed; woman; permanent injuries, rendering her unfit to labor (Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 501; 30 Pac. 601); fifteen thousand dollars, affirmed; girl of thirteen years; permanently disfigured and crippled; injuries inflicted by being hurled from street-car (James v. Oakland Traction Co., 10 Cal. App. 785; 103 Pac. 1082); seventy thousand dollars, affirmed; stock-breeder; loss of both arms and one leg; injuries inflicted by switch-engine (Zibbell v. Southern Pacific Co., 160 Cal. 237; 116 Pac. 513); sixteen thousand five hundred dollars, affirmed; laborer; right shoulder and arm permanently injured (Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460); seven thousand five hundred dollars, affirmed; boy under twelve years; improperly employed around dangerous machinery; permanent injury to hand and arm (Scally v. W. T. Garratt & Co., 11 Cal. App. 138; 104 Pac. 325); four thousand one hundred dollars, affirmed; boy of nineteen years; permanent injury to knee, received in collision (Kimball v. Northern Electric Co., 159 Cal. 225; 111 Pac. 156); two thousand dollars, affirmed; married woman; false imprisonment by constable upon pretended charge of grand larceny (Gomez v. Scanlan, 155 Cal. 528; 102 Pac. 12); three thousand five hundred dollars, affirmed; injuries to plaintiff's leasehold estate from overflow of land, caused by moving an immense timber jam in stream above plaintiff's property (Sacchi v. Bayside Lumber Co., 13 Cal. App. 72; 108 Pac. 885); eight hundred dollars, affirmed; damages caused by depriving an abutting land-owner of access over a street to and from his premises (Coates v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 1 Cal. App. 441; 82 Pac. 640); five hundred dollars, affirmed; damages for the wrongful taking, under attachment, of property valued at five hundred and sixty dollars. Ingraham v. Weidler, 139 Cal. 588; 73 Pac. 415. On a motion for a new trial, the court may, when the judgment is excessive, make a conditional order denying the motion, if the prevailing party consents to remit the excess, and granting it in the absence of such consent. Bentley v. Hurlburt, 153 Cal. 796; 96 Pac. 890.

Insufficient damages. A verdict for insufficient damages, under the influence of passion or prejudice, is not ground for a new trial (Benjamin v. Stewart, 61 Cal. 605); nor will the verdict for damages be disturbed, where the court deemed it wholly inadequate in amount, and ordered a new trial. Hearne v. De Young, 132 Cal. 357; 64 Pac. 576.

Jury's disregard of evidence and instructions. Plain disregard, by the jury, of the evidence in the case, and of the instructions of the court, so as to satisfy the court that the verdict was rendered under the influence of passion and prejudice, and a misapprehension of such instruction, will warrant the granting of a new trial. Anglo-Nevada Assurance Corp. v. Ross, 123 Cal. 520; 56 Pac. 335.

Insufficiency of evidence. It is the duty of the trial court to grant a new trial whenever, in its opinion, the evidence upon which the former decision was based was insufficient to justify that decision. Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911; Hughes Bros. v. Rawhide Gold Min. Co., 16 Cal. App. 293; 116 Pac. 969; Briggs v. Hall, 20 Cal. App. 372; 129 Pac. 288. When a verdict is not supported by the evidence, an appellate court will remand the cause for a new trial. McMahon v. Hetch-Hetchy etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400; 84 Pac. 350. A motion for a new trial cannot be based on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the judgment, nor on the ground that the judgment is against law: the motion, under the sixth subdivision of this section, should be directed to the "decision," and not the judgment. Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485; 8 Pac. 22; Elizalde v. Murphy, 11 Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904; Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42; Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872. Insufficiency of the evidence to justify a verdict or other decision, is a ground for a new trial, distinct from that of damages given under the influence of passion or prejudice; and the court may grant a new trial, where the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict, without regard to whether the verdict was the result of passion or prejudice. Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439. To say that excessive damages were given under the influence of passion or prejudice, is but to say that the evidence does not justify the verdict. Graybill v. De Young, 140 Cal. 323; 73 Pac. 1067; Harrison v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 156; 47 Pac. 1019; Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 125 Cal. 141; 57 Pac. 774. Where the verdict is unsupported by the evidence and contrary to law, an order denying a new trial will be reversed. Koebig v. Southern Pacific Co., 108 Cal. 235; 41 Pac. 469. Where the ultimate facts to be deduced from the evidence depend largely and essentially upon inferences not in themselves obvious or certain, an order granting a new trial will not be disturbed on appeal. Cauhape v. Security Sav. Bank, 118 Cal. 82; 50 Pac. 310. The granting of a new trial for want of evidence to support the verdict is usually a matter almost entirely within the discretion of the trial court. Estate of Everts, 163 Cal. 449; 125 Pac. 1058. The duty of the judge to grant a motion for a new trial when the evidence is insufficient to support the decision, is the same, whether he tried the case originally or not. Jones v. Sanders, 103 Cal. 678; 37 Pac. 649; Garton v. Stern, 121 Cal. 347; 53 Pac. 904. The sole remedy, in the trial court, of a party aggrieved by any finding of fact is a motion for a new trial. Dahlberg v. Girsch, 157 Cal. 324; 107 Pac. 616. Where the order granting a new trial is general in its terms, and one of the grounds of the motion is insufficiency of the evidence, it must be presumed upon appeal that that was one of the grounds on which the motion was granted. Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911; Hughes Bros. v. Rawhide Gold Mining Co., 16 Cal. App. 293; 116 Pac. 969.

Conflicting evidence. Where the evidence is conflicting, the action of the court in granting a new trial will not be reviewed on appeal, except for manifest abuse of discretion. Domico v. Casassa, 101 Cal. 411; 35 Pac. 1024; Lyon v. Aronson, 140 Cal. 365; 73 Pac. 1063; Houghton v. Market Street Ry. Co., 1 Cal. App. 576; 82 Pac. 972; Martin v. Markarian, 1 Cal. App. 687; 82 Pac. 1072; Frutig v. Trafton, 2 Cal. App. 47; 83 Pac. 70. Where a finding is in direct conflict with the evidence and with an admission of the defendant, it is within the discretion of the court to grant a new trial, if the defendant will not consent to the correction of the finding. Eaton v. Jones, 107 Cal. 487; 40 Pac. 798. The trial judge is not bound by the verdict of the jury, where there is a conflict in the evidence; but it is his duty, in such case, to grant a new trial, where the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. Green v. Soule, 145 Cal. 96; 78 Pac. 337; Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178; Pollitz v. Wickersham, 150 Cal. 238; 88 Pac. 911; Witter v. Redwine, 14 Cal. App. 393; 112 Pac. 311; Walker v. Beaumont Land etc. Co., 15 Cal. App. 726; 115 Pac. 766; McCarthy v. Morris, 17 Cal. App. 723; 121 Pac. 696; Briggs v. Hall, 20 Cal. App. 372; 129 Pac. 288. The jurisdiction of the court to grant a new trial, notwithstanding a conflict in the evidence, where it is fully convinced that the verdict is wrong, is not destroyed by the fact that the jury were allowed to visit the premises to enable them to understand the evidence. McQueen v. Mechanics' Institute, 107 Cal. 163; 40 Pac. 114.

Weight and preponderance of evidence. It is the duty of the court to grant a new trial if, in its opinion, the weight or preponderance of the evidence is opposed to the findings. Conwell v. Varain, 20 Cal. App. 521; 130 Pac. 23. The trial court may grant a new trial when the verdict is against the preponderance of the evidence. Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178.

Decision against law. The phrase, "or that it is against law," in the sixth subdivision of this section, is not clear or unambiguous; but, read in connection with § 656, ante, it constitutes a reason for the re-examination of an issue of fact. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828. That phrase has no application to cases falling within any of the other subdivisions. Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24, 35; and see People v. Amer, 151 Cal. 303; 90 Pac. 698. The terms "verdict" and "decision," also in the sixth subdivision, are appositional: what is predicated of one is predicated also of the other; and an erroneous conclusion of law, drawn from a finding of fact, is a decision against law, for which a new trial should be granted. Simmons v. Hamilton, 56 Cal. 493. A motion for a new trial on the ground that the decision is against law, is or is not permissible, according as a new trial is or is not an effective means of correcting error in the decision. Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204. A verdict or other decision of fact against law is ground for granting a new trial. Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42. A failure to find upon all the material issues warrants a new trial, on the ground that the "decision is against law." Butler v. Agnew, 9 Cal. App. 327; 99 Pac. 395; Elizalde v. Murphy, 11 Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904; Cargnani v. Cargnani, 16 Cal. App. 96; 116 Pac. 306; Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 146; 124 Pac. 998. Where there is a failure to find on a material issue, the decision is against law, and it may be reviewed on appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial. Adams v. Helbing, 107 Cal. 298; 40 Pac. 422; and see Knight v. Roche, 56 Cal. 15; Brown v. Burbank, 59 Cal. 535; Soto v. Irvine, 60 Cal. 436; Cummings v. Conlon, 66 Cal. 403; 5 Pac. 796, 903; Millard v. Supreme Council, 3 Cal. Unrep. 96; 21 Pac. 825; Langan v. Langan, 89 Cal. 186; 26 Pac. 761; Nuttall v. Lovejoy, 90 Cal. 163; 27 Pac. 69; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Haight v. Tryon, 112 Cal. 4; 44 Pac. 318; Polk v. Boggs, 122 Cal. 114; 54 Pac. 536; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac.

828; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 146; 124 Pac. 998. In such case there has been a mistrial, and the decision is to be considered as against law; but this rule applies only where the issue upon which there is no finding is material. Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; and see McCourtney v. Fortune, 57 Cal. 617. The failure to find on an immaterial issue, or on an issue not made, is not ground for a new trial. Pinheiro v. Bettencourt, 17 Cal. App. 111; 118 Pac. 941. Where the complaint sets forth two or more grounds for relief, either of which is sufficient to support a judgment, a finding on one of such issues is sufficient, and a failure to find on the other does not constitute a mistrial, nor render the decision against law. Adams v. Helbing, 107 Cal. 298; 40 Pac. 422. That the court erroneously applied the law to the facts, or drew the wrong conclusion of law from the facts found, is not ground for granting a new trial (Estate of Doyle, 73 Cal. 564; 15 Pac. 125; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; Pierce v. Willis, 103 Cal. 91; 36 Pac. 1080; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204); nor can a new trial be granted where the conclusion of law is logically drawn from the facts found; and the decision is not contrary to law. Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548; 3 Pac. 557. A decision is not against law, merely because the findings do not support the legal conclusions drawn from them and the judgment based thereon. Estate of Keating, 162 Cal. 406; 122 Pac. 1079. That the judgment is against law is not a statutory cause for a motion for a new trial: the motion should be directed at the decision. Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872. An objection that the finding does not sustain the decision, that the complaint does not state a cause of action, and that the law is unconstitutional, cannot be considered on a motion for a new trial on the ground that the decision is against law. Petaluma Paving Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616; 69 Pac. 426. A verdict in disobedience to the instructions of the court, on a point of law, is a verdict against law, and should be set aside, even though the instruction itself is erroneous in point of law. Emerson v. Santa Clara County, 40 Cal. 543. The grounds for a new trial all refer to the errors in determining any issue of fact, or affecting the determination of any question of fact: if there has been no such error, there is no ground for a new trial. Estate of Keating, 162 Cal. 406; 122 Pac. 1079.

Errors of law. The remedy to correct an error of law made at the trial is by motion for a new trial. Forrester v. Lawler, 14 Cal. App. 171; 111 Pac. 284. A party against whom judgment is rendered is not entitled to a new trial because of an error in the admission of testimony offered by himself (Laver v. Hotaling, 115 Cal. 613; 47 Pac. 593); neither is an error in admitting immaterial evidence of enough importance to warrant a new trial. Brownlee v. Reiner, 147 Cal. 641; 82 Pac. 324. An error in a ruling on defendant's motion for a nonsuit, with the exception thereto, may be set forth in a bill of exceptions or in a statement on motion for a new trial, and he is entitled to have it reviewed on motion for a new trial as an error of law occurring at the trial; and whether the court grants or refuses a new trial, its action may be reviewed on appeal. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846; and see Spanagel v. Dellinger, 38 Cal. 278; People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370; Mason v. Austin, 46 Cal. 385; Jacks v. Buell, 47 Cal. 162; Onderdonk v. San Francisco, 75 Cal. 534; 17 Pac. 678; Wheeler v. Kassabaum, 76 Cal. 90; 18 Pac. 119. In these cases it was held that the sufficiency of the complaint could not be considered on appeal from an order granting a new trial; the distinction being, that, by moving for a nonsuit, an exception to the sufficiency of the complaint could be reviewed on a motion for a new trial. Where the object of the action is to determine a permanent right, and, through error, the plaintiff is deprived of the proper judgment, the fact that he can recover only nominal damages is no reason for denying a new trial. Arkley v. Union Sugar Co., 147 Cal. 195; 81 Pac. 509; and see Hancock v. Hubbell, 71 Cal. 537; 12 Pac. 618; Kenyon v. Western Union Tel. Co., 100 Cal. 454; 35 Pac. 75.

Reasons for denying new trial. When a motion for a new trial is improper, an order denying it is properly made. Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204. A new trial will not be granted where it would necessarily result in the same decision and judgment. Bates v. Bates, 71 Cal. 307; 12 Pac. 223; People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171. A motion for a new trial is not a proper procedure, if there has been no trial by reason of the non-appearance of the plaintiffs at the trial. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13.

Statements in newspapers. Statements in public journals, which do not appear to have been read by the jury before rendition of verdict, though severe on the defendant, are not ground for new trial. Sheehan v. Hammond, 2 Cal. App. 371; 84 Pac. 340.

Agreed facts. There is no room for demanding a new trial where the facts have been expressly agreed upon, as there is no issue of fact; and the motion will not lie on the ground that the decision is against law, as the ground is reviewable only upon appeal from the judgment (Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204); but the trial court has jurisdiction to entertain a motion for the new trial of a case that was tried on an agreed statement of facts and a stipulation waiving findings; and the supreme court has likewise jurisdiction of an appeal from an order denying such motion; should it appear that the appeal is frivolous, it will be determined on the hearing thereof. Quist v. Michael, 153 Cal. 365; 95 Pac. 658.

Discretion of court. The discretion of the court in granting or denying a new trial will not be interfered with on appeal, except for manifest abuse. Pico v. Cohn, 67 Cal. 258; 7 Pac. 680; Warner v. F. Thomas Parisian Dyeing etc. Works, 105 Cal. 409; 38 Pac. 960; Estate of Martin, 113 Cal. 479; 45 Pac. 813; Anglo-Nevada Assurance Corp. v. Ross, 123 Cal. 520; 56 Pac. 335; Cutten v. Pearsall, 146 Cal. 690; 81 Pac. 25; Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 1 Cal. App. 215; 81 Pac. 1037; Houghton v. Market Street R. R. Co., 1 Cal. App. 576; 82 Pac. 972; Weisser v. Southern Pacific Co., 148 Cal. 426; 7 Ann. Cas. 636; 83 Pac. 439. Where every material fact is contradicted by counter-affidavits, the discretion of the court in refusing a new trial will not be interfered with on appeal. Shafer v. Willis, 124 Cal. 36; 56 Pac. 635; Doyle v. Sturla, 38 Cal. 456; Merk v. Gelzhaeuser, 50 Cal. 631; People v. Mesa, 93 Cal. 580; 29 Pac. 116. A succeeding judge stands in the place of his predecessor, and has all his rights and powers, and his discretion in granting a new trial in a case tried by his predecessor will not be interfered with, except when abused. Hausmann v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 139 Cal. 174; 72 Pac. 905.

Restoration of records. Although a judgment roll is destroyed by fire while a motion for a new trial is pending, yet a proceeding for the restoration of the record may be maintained, notwithstanding the pendency of such motion. Foerst v. Kelso, 163 Cal. 436; 125 Pac. 1054.

New trial on one of several issues. Where there is more than one issue of fact in a case, and such issues are distinct and separable in their nature, the court may order a new trial of one issue and refuse it as to the others. Estate of Everts, 163 Cal. 449; 125 Pac. 1058. Where the court has erred in its judgment upon a special issue, but the error is not of sufficient importance to warrant a new trial of the whole case, a new trial will be limited to a supplemental finding and judgment upon that issue alone. Mayberry v. Whittier, 144 Cal. 322; 78 Pac. 16.

New trial as to one joint defendant. A new trial may be granted as to one joint defendant and denied as to the other. Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151; 86 Pac. 178.

Presumption in favor of order granting new trial. It is conclusively presumed in favor of an order granting a new trial, that it was, in part, based upon some ground upon which affidavits could be used, and that such were used, and were sufficient to justify the order. Thompson v. Wheeler, 5 Cal. App. 195; 89 Pac. 1065.

Appeal. It is only in rare instances, and upon very strong grounds, that the appellate court will set aside an order granting a new trial. Briggs v. Hall, 29 Cal. App. 372; 129 Pac. 288. Upon appeal from an order denying a new trial, the appellate court is limited, in its review, to the grounds upon which the motion for a new trial may be based; the sufficiency of the complaint, rulings upon demurrers, and the sufficiency of the findings to support the judgment cannot be considered on such an appeal. Great Western Gold Co. v. Chambers, 153 Cal. 307; 95 Pac. 151; Fagan v. Lentz, 156 Cal. 681; 20 Ann. Cas. 221; 105 Pac. 951. The overruling of a demurrer is not open to review upon an appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial. Aston v. Aston, 14 Cal. App. 223; 111 Pac. 1035.

Parrott, 32 Cal. 102; Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231; Cochran v. O'Keefe, 34 Cal. 554; Richardson v. Kier, 37 Cal. 263.

8. Cases in which new trials have been refused because the error was immaterial. Gaven v. Dopman, 5 Cal. 342; McKinney v. Smith, 21 Cal. 374; Janson v. Brooks, 29 Cal. 214; Kiler v. Kimbal, 10 Cal. 267; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 507; 85 Am. Dec. 145; Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 220; Mills v. Barney, 22 Cal. 240; Hicks v. Whiteside, 23 Cal. 404; De Merle v. Mathews, 26 Cal. 467; Jones v. Block, 30 Cal. 227; Zeigler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 28 Cal. 263; Kile v. Tubbs, 32 Cal. 332; Carpenter v. Norris, 20 Cal. 437; James v. Williams, 31 Cal. 211; Rice v. Dec. 130; People v. Moore, 8 Cal. 94; Wilkinson v. Parrott, 32 Cal. 102; Tompkins v. Mahoney, 32 Cal. 231.

9. Equity cases. Same rules apply. Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 375; Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 295; Green v. Butler, 26 Cal. 599; Phelan v. Ruiz, 15 Cal. 90.

10. When equity will not interfere. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 441; Mastick v. Thorp, 29 Cal. 444; Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 226.

11. New trial properly granted, but wrong reason given by the judge. If the court makes an order granting a new trial, and order was correct, the appellate court will not set it aside because the reason assigned for it was wrong. Coghill & Co. v. Marka, 29 Cal. 673; Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644; Bolton v. Stewart, 29 Cal. 615.

12. Discretion of the court. The motion is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. Peters v. Foss, 16 Cal. 357; Drake v. Palmer, 2 Cal. 181; Watson v. McClay, 4 Cal. 288; Haatings v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 10 Cal. 341; Burnett v. Whitesides, 15 Cal. 36; Quinn v. Kenyon, 22 Cal. 82; O'Brien v. Brady, 23 Cal. 243; Weddle v. Stark, 10 Cal. 301; Lestrade v. Barth, 17 Cal. 285. The court may deny the motion for a new trial, even though both parties consent. Phelan v. Ruiz, 15 Cal. 90.

13. Terms may be imposed. Battelle v. Conner, 6 Cal. 140; Rice v. Gashirie, 13 Cal. 54; Benedict v. Cozzens, 4 Cal. 382; Tyson v. Wells, 1 Cal. 378; Chapin v. Bourne, 8 Cal. 296; Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160.

14. Motion may be abandoned. Stoyell v. Cole, 19 Cal. 602.

15. Stipulation that motion may be denied. If the parties stipulate that the motion shall be denied, the stipulation concludes them. Brotherton v. Hart, 11 Cal. 405.

16. Appearance of attorney without authority. If an attorney not authorized to do so appears and conducts a trial, the remedy is by motion for a new trial. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235.

17. County court may grant new trials. Dorsey v. Barry, 24 Cal. 455; Dickinson v. Van Horn, 9 Cal. 211.

18. Law of the case. If the appellate court consider and decide a point of law on a case on appeal, and reverse the judgment, and remand the cause for a new trial, the point so passed upon becomes the law of the case in all its future stages. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 21 Cal. 548; Lucas v. San Francisco, 28 Cal. 591; Estate of Pacheco, 29 Cal. 224; Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131; Kile v. Tubbs, 32 Cal. 332; Argenti v. Sawyer, 32 Cal. 414; Hubbard v. Sullivan, 18 Cal. 508; Soule v. Ritter, 20 Cal. 522; Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387; Heirs of Nieto v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 455; Mitchell v. Davis, 23 Cal. 381; Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 524.

19. Generally. If several defenses are pleaded, either of which would be good, and the verdict is for the defendants, and the court errs in its instructions to the jury as to one of the defenses, the judgment will be reversed, unless it appears that the verdict was rendered on one of the defenses in relation to which no error was committed. Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 234. If a defense is of a nature requiring it to be specially pleaded, the omission to plead it is not cured by the introduction, without objection, of evidence in support of it, and the finding of fact in relation to it by the court. McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281; 87 Am. Dec. 115; Smith v. Owens, 21 Cal. 11. If the jury, without instruction from the court, return a verdict for gold coin, though there was no evidence that either on or after striking a balance between the parties the defendant promised in writing to pay in gold coin, a new trial will be granted. Howard v. Roeben, 33 Cal. 399. If the merits of the case were not investigated in the lower courts, by reason of an uncertainty as to the proper mode of proceeding under the provisions of the Practice Act relating to interventions, the appellate court awarded a new trial, although the decision of the court below upon the main question involved was approved, and the only error disclosed might have been cured by direction to modify the judgment. Speyer v. Ihmels, 21 Cal. 280; 81 Am. Dec. 157. When the complaint, evidence admitted, the verdict, and judgment are in harmony, but the judgment is erroneous by reason of a wrong construction given to the description of land in a deed in evidence, the appellate court cannot modify the judgment, but must reverse it, and remand the cause for a new trial. Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 145; 85 Am. Dec. 103. Injury is presumed from illegal evidence admitted, and the prevailing party must rebut this presumption, or a new trial will be granted. Grimes v. Fall, 15 Cal. 63. New trials should be granted whenever justice requires it. Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183; Reed v. Jourdin, 1 Cal. 102. On motion for a new trial, the court cannot reverse its first judgment and render another. Mitchell v. Hackett, 14 Cal. 661.

§ 658. Motion for new trial. Papers. When the application is made for a cause mentioned in the first, second, third and fourth subdivisions of the last section, it must be made upon affidavits; otherwise it must be made on the minutes of the court.

Mode of application for new trial.

1. Affidavits, on. Post, § 659, subd. 1.
2. Minutes of court, on. Post, § 659, subd. 4.
3. Bill of exceptions, on. Post, § 659, subd. 2.
4. Statement of case, on. Post, § 659, subd. 3.

Legislation § 658. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "When the application is made for a cause mentioned in the fifth, sixth, and seventh subdivisions of the last section, it is made upon bills of exception on file; for any other cause it is made upon affidavit. If the application is made upon affidavits, the affidavits of the moving party must be filed with the clerk and served upon the adverse party, within twenty-five days after the verdict or decision is made. The adverse party may file counter affidavits within five days thereafter, and, upon leave of the court or judge, the moving party may within five days file affidavits in rebuttal."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873-74, p. 314 (compare changes therefrom in 1915).

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 149; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 201, substituting "otherwise it must be made on the minutes of the court" for "for any other cause it may be made, at the option of the moving party, either upon the minutes of the court, or a bill of exceptions, or a statement of the case, prepared as hereinafter provided."

Amendments, in 1915, of sections relating to new trials and appeals. The Commonwealth Club of California, after the close of the session of the legislature in 1915, issued a pamphlet prepared by the bar associations of the state, making specific reference to some of the matters affected in making the changes to eliminate the delays in appeals and motions for a new trial. It is said: "§ 658 is amended to require motions for a new trial to be made on the minutes of the court, excepting in the cases mentioned in the first four subdivisions of § 657; . . . § 659 is amended to compel the giving of notice of intention to move for a new trial within ten days; to prohibit the extension of this time; and to limit the time within which affidavits may be prepared under the first four subdivisions of § 657. . . . § 660 is amended to require the motion for a new trial to be made orally, while the matters are fresh in the minds of court and counsel, and to allow the widest latitude in referring to all proceedings on the trial without any bill of exceptions, statement, or specifications; . . . also makes it mandatory on the court to dispose of the motion within three months. § 963 is amended by striking out the provisions relating to appeals from orders granting or refusing a new trial. The amendment does, however, allow an appeal from an order granting a new trial in an action or proceeding tried by a jury when such trial by jury is a matter of right, . . . [and] from an interlocutory decree of divorce: this provision is taken from the Civil Code. . . . The time for taking such appeal is, however, fixed at sixty days. . . . § 939 is amended to reduce to uniformity the time to appeal in all cases from judgments or orders of the superior court. . . . It is, however, provided that the time to appeal shall not expire, if proceedings on motion for new trial are pending, until thirty days after the determination in the trial court of such motion for a new trial. . . . § 641b, providing for appeals under the alternative method, is amended to limit the time for appeals to sixty days, thus making it conform to the provisions of § 939 as amended. While, with the exception of the single case of the appeal from the order granting a new trial in jury cases, separate appeals from orders granting or denying new trials will no longer be permitted, a litigant is not, . . . denied the right to review any order on motion for a new trial. By an amendment to § 956 it is provided that on appeal from a judgment any order on motion for new trial may be reviewed. For the purpose of allowing an appellant to present all matters on a single record, § 650, relating to bills of exceptions, is amended, extending the time within which to prepare and serve a copy of the bill to ten days after notice of decision denying the motion for a new trial or other determination thereof. It is expressly provided . . . that such bills may contain all matters reviewable on the same appeal, whether . . . at the trial or on the motion for a new trial. § 953a is also amended to allow an appellant ten days after the entry of the order denying the motion for a new trial or other determination thereof within which to prepare his record under the alternative system; . . . to make it clear that all appeals may be presented by this method, and that all matters reviewable on appeal from a judgment may be presented on the same record. This, under the terms of § 956, includes orders on motion for a new trial. . . . The amendment above referred to, § 659, has the effect of abolishing the statement of the case."

Affidavit proper when. An affidavit, alleging facts showing irregularity in the proceedings of the court, made solely on information and belief, is unavailing for any purpose. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144; 78 Pac. 540. A motion for a new trial, on the grounds of irregularity in the proceedings of the jury, and misconduct, must be supported by affidavits setting forth the facts constituting the irregularity or the misconduct (Benjamin v. Stewart, 61 Cal. 605); and a motion for a new trial on the ground of accident or surprise must be made upon affidavits. Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234; 52 Pac. 491. Newly discovered evidence, relied on to obtain a new trial, has no place in a statement: it should be presented in affidavits. Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117. The moving party is entitled to have such competent affidavits as are material to a motion, and are seasonably served and filed, considered on the hearing of the motion, and also reply affidavits to counter-affidavits; but an affidavit, made on information and belief, on the ground of irregularity, is properly stricken from the files. Gay v. Torrance, 145 Cal. 144; 78 Pac. 540. Affidavits used on the hearing of a motion for a new trial cannot be considered on appeal, unless they are incorporated into a bill of exceptions. Manuel v. Flynn, 5 Cal. App. 319; 90 Pac. 463.

Necessity for bill of exceptions. Where the notice of intention to move for a new trial stated that the motion would be made on a bill of exceptions, but none was presented to the trial court or to the court on appeal, neither court can review the case as to alleged errors of law or as to the insufficiency of the evidence. Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524. A motion for a new trial, so far as it is based on a bill of exceptions, is based and must be determined on the bill as certified and filed, or as previously corrected under § 473, ante. Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866.

Bill of exceptions proper when. The refusal to allow a supplemental answer, though an abuse of discretion, may be incorporated in a bill of exceptions, it being deemed excepted to under § 647, ante, and need not be presented by affidavit. Seehorn v. Big Meadows etc. Road Co., 60 Cal. 240. A motion for a new trial, on the ground of error of law or insufficiency of evidence, must be made upon bills of exceptions on file. Kelly v. Larkin, 47 Cal. 58. An order directing a conveyance of real estate by an executor is properly brought up on appeal by bill of exceptions. Estate of Corwin, 61 Cal. 160.

Statement proper when. A notice of motion for a new trial, stating that the motion would be made on a statement and affidavits, is improper, when made upon the ground of the misconduct of the jury: a statement, in such case, is unauthorized. Saltzman v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 125 Cal. 501; 58 Pac. 169.

Specification of error required. A specification in the notice of intention to move for a new trial, that such motion will be made on account of errors of law occurring at the trial, and excepted to by the plaintiffs, is all the specification of error that is necessary. Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 150 Cal. 124; 88 Pac. 701. A motion for a new trial, made upon a statement that contains no specifications of the particular errors relied on, must be disregarded. Johnston v. Blanchard, 16 Cal. App. 321; 116 Pac. 973.

Deposition regarded as affidavit when. The deposition of a deputy sheriff, in charge of a jury, must be regarded as an affidavit, on the motion for a new trial, where the deputy refuses to make an affidavit. Saltzman v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 125 Cal. 501; 58 Pac. 169.

Motion denied when. Where the statement on motion for a new trial is stricken from the files, the motion is properly denied. Sutton v. Symons, 100 Cal. 576; 35 Pac. 158; Symons v. Bunnell, 101 Cal. 223; 35 Pac. 770.

Admissibility on application for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence of affidavit of others than witnesses themselves to show such evidence. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 423.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The court may exclude affidavits filed on a motion for a new trial, which are written in a foreign language. Spencer v. Doane, 23 Cal. 419.

§ 659. Notice of motion. Upon whom served, and what to contain. The party intending to move for a new trial must, within ten days after receiving notice of the entry of the judgment, or within ten days after verdict, if the trial was by jury, file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention to move for a new trial, designating the grounds upon which the motion will be made and whether the same will be made upon affidavits or the minutes of the court or both. The time above specified shall not be extended by order or stipulation. If the motion is to be made upon affidavits, the moving party must, within ten days after serving the notice, or such further time as the court in which the action is pending, or a judge thereof, may allow (but not to exceed twenty days' additional time) file such affidavits with the clerk and serve a copy thereof upon the adverse party, who shall have ten days thereafter, or such further time as the court may allow (not exceeding twenty days' additional time) to file counter-affidavits and serve a copy thereof upon the moving party.

Bill of exceptions.
1. Settling. Ante, § 650.
2. Extension of time. Post, § 1054.

Time to except to court commissioner's report on matters other than issues of fact raised by pleadings. Ante, § 259.

Legislation § 659. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 623, which read: "The application shall be made upon affidavit and notice. The affidavit shall be filed with the justice, with a statement of the grounds upon which the party intends to rely. The adverse party may use counter-affidavits on the motion, provided they be filed one day previous to the hearing of the motion." When enacted in 1872, § 659 read: "The party intending to move for a new trial must, within thirty days after the decision or verdict, file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention, designating therein generally the grounds upon which the motion will be made, and the time and place at which it will be brought on for hearing. The time designated must be not less than ten nor more than twenty days after service of the notice."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 315, to read: "§ 659. The party intending to move for a new trial must, within ten days after the verdict of the jury, if the action were tried by a jury, or after notice of the decision of the court or referee, if the action were tried without a jury, file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention, designating the grounds upon which the motion will be made, and whether the same will be made upon affidavits or the minutes of the court, or a bill of exceptions, or a statement of the case: One. If the motion is to be made upon affidavits, the moving party must, within ten days after serving the notice, or such further time as the court in which the action is pending, or a judge thereof, may allow, file such affidavits with the clerk, and serve a copy upon the adverse party, who shall have ten days to file counter-affidavits, a copy of which must be served upon the moving party. Two. If the motion is to be made upon a bill of exceptions, and no bill has already been settled as hereinbefore provided, the moving party shall have the same time after service of the notice to prepare and obtain a settlement of a bill of exceptions as is provided after the entry of judgment, or after receiving notice of such entry by section six hundred and fifty, and the bill shall be prepared and settled in a similar manner. If a bill of exceptions has been already settled and filed, when the notice of motion is given, such bill shall be used on the motion. Three. If the motion is to be made upon a statement of the case, the moving party must, within ten days after service of the notice, or such further time as the court in which the action is pending, or the judge thereof, may allow, prepare a draft of the statement, and serve the same, or a copy thereof, upon the adverse party. If such proposed statement be not agreed to by the adverse party, he must, within ten days thereafter, prepare amendments thereto, and serve the same, or a copy thereof, upon the moving party. If the amendments be adopted, the statement shall be amended accordingly, and then presented to the judge who tried or heard the cause, for settlement, or be delivered to the clerk of the court for the judge. If not adopted, the proposed statement and amendments shall, within ten days thereafter, be presented by the moving party to the judge, upon five days' notice to the adverse party, or delivered to the clerk of the court for the judge; and thereupon the same proceedings for the settlement of the statement shall be taken by the parties, and clerk, and judge, as are required for the settlement of bills of exception by section six hundred and fifty. If the action was heard by a referee, the same proceedings shall be had for the settlement of the statement by him as are required by that section for the settlement of bills of exception by a referee. If no amendments are served within the time designated, or, if served, are allowed, the proposed statement and amendments, if any, may be presented to the judge or referee, for settlement, without notice to the adverse party. When the notice of the motion designates, as the ground of the motion, the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or other decision, the statement shall specify the particulars in which such evidence is alleged to be insufficient. When the notice designates, as the ground of the motion, errors in law occurring at the trial, and excepted to by the moving party, the statement shall specify the particular errors upon which the party will rely. If no such specifications be made, the statement shall be disregarded on the hearing of the motion. It is the duty of the judge or referee, in settling the statement, to strike out of it all redundant and useless matter, and to make the statement truly represent the case, notwithstanding the assent of the parties to such redundant or useless matter, or to any inaccurate statement. When settled, the statement shall be signed by the judge or referee, with his certificate to the effect that the same is allowed, and shall then be filed with the clerk. Four. When the motion is to be made upon the minutes of the court, and the ground of the motion is the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or other decision, the notice of motion must specify the particulars in which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient; and, if the ground of the motion be errors in law occurring at the trial, and excepted to by the moving party, the notice must specify the particular errors upon which the party will rely. If the notice do not contain the specifications here indicated, when the motion is made on the minutes of the court, the motion must be denied."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 149; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 717, (1) in introductory paragraph, substituting "receiving notice of the entry of the judgment" for "the verdict of the jury, if the action were tried by a jury, or after notice of the decision of the court or referee, if the action were tried without a jury"; (2) throughout the section, making rhetorical and grammatical changes, not substantially affecting the meaning; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment fixes the notice of the entry of a judgment as the period from which to compute the time for moving for a new trial."

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 201, (1) recasting the introductory paragraph and subds. 1 and 2; (2) striking out subds. 3 and 4.

Construction of section. The three steps, under the Practice Act, to obtain a new trial were: 1. A notice of intention; 2. Filing and serving a statement or affidavits; 3. Motion for a new trial. Jenkins v. Frink, 27 Cal. 337. The right to move for a new trial is statutory, and must be pursued in the manner pointed out by the statute. California Improvement Co. v. Baroteau, 116 Cal. 136; 47 Pac. 1018. A party who fails to comply with the statute waives his right to move for a new trial. Caney v. Silverthorne, 9 Cal. 67; Wing v. Owen, 9 Cal. 247; Easterby v. Larco, 24 Cal. 179; Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354; Ellsassar v. Hunter, 26 Cal. 279; Jenkins v. Frink, 27 Cal. 337. A motion for a new trial, not made as prescribed in this section, is properly denied. Hill v. Beatty, 61 Cal. 292. Statements on motion for a new trial will be disregarded, unless the statutory requirements have been complied with. Linn v. Twist, 3 Cal. 89; Ellsassar v. Hunter, 26 Cal. 279; Vilhac v. Biven, 28 Cal. 410; Le Roy v. Rassette, 32 Cal. 171; Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90; Green v. Killey, 38 Cal. 201; Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012. The "notice of motion," in the fourth subdivision of this section, is the same as the "notice of intention to move for a new trial," in the first subdivision; and a party moving for a new trial, on the minutes of the court, who has failed to make the required specifications in his notice of intention, cannot cure the defect, after the expiration of the time for giving notice of intention, by giving an additional notice, that he will "bring on for hearing his motion for a new trial," and by annexing thereto a formal motion for a new trial, together with specifications of particulars in which the evidence was insufficient and of the errors of law relied upon. Neale v. Depot Railway Co., 94 Cal. 425; 29 Pac. 954.

Notice of decision. To set the time running in which the losing party to a suit must serve and file his notice of intention to move for a new trial, the successful party must serve upon him a written notice of the decision. Estate of Richards, 154 Cal. 478; 98 Pac. 528. No particular form of notice is required, nor a notice of what the decision was: a simple notice, in writing, that a decision has been rendered is sufficient (Waddingham v. Tubbs, 95 Cal. 249; 30 Pac. 527); and this written notice of the filing of the decision is required in all cases, unless waived by facts appearing in the records, files, or minutes of the court (Mallory v. See, 129 Cal. 356; 61 Pac. 1123); and the party intending to move for a new trial is entitled to such written notice, before he is called upon to act, although he was present in court when the decision was rendered, and waived the findings and asked for a stay of proceedings on the judgment (Biagi v. Howes, 66 Cal. 469; 6 Pac. 100; Kelleher v. Creciat, 89 Cal. 38; 26 Pac. 619; and see Carpentier v. Thurston, 30 Cal. 123; Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208; Sawyer v. San Francisco, 50 Cal. 370); but these decisions are overruled, and now the application of the appellant for a stay of execution of the judgment is a waiver, as of that date, of the giving of written notice, which cannot be impaired by the subsequent action of another defendant in serving written notice on him. Gardner v. Stare, 135 Cal. 118; 67 Pac. 5; Gray v. Winder, 77 Cal. 525; 20 Pac. 47. A notice of intention, in writing, that "a motion will be made to set aside and vacate the judgment heretofore rendered and entered herein," constitutes a sufficient notice that a decision of the court had theretofore been rendered, to require the adverse party to serve and file his notice of intention within ten days thereafter (Waddingham v. Tubbs, 95 Cal. 249; 30 Pac. 527); as is also a notice, that you will please take notice "that a decree, a copy of which is herewith served upon you, has this day been entered in this action, in accordance with the decision rendered" by the court upon a previous date, giving the substance of the decree. Gumpel v. Castagnetto, 97 Cal. 15; 31 Pac. 898. Notice of the decision may be served by mail (Estate of Richards, 154 Cal. 478; 98 Pac. 528); and a notice of the decision, addressed to the plaintiff, and to his attorneys of record, which was accepted by one of the attorneys named, must be treated as a notice to and as accepted by all of the losing parties. Scott v. Glenn, 97 Cal. 513; 32 Pac. 573.

Notice of judgment. Notice of rendition of judgment is not required. Fatjo v. Swasey, 111 Cal. 628; 44 Pac. 225.

Waiver of notice of decision. Notice of the decision may be waived (Estate of Richards, 154 Cal. 478; 98 Pac. 528); and where the record shows that the party entitled to notice acted in court as if he had formal notice of the decision, such action constitutes a waiver of formal notice (Gray v. Winder, 77 Cal. 525; 20 Pac. 47; and see Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320; Thorne v. Finn, 69 Cal. 251; 10 Pac. 414); and where the moving party recites that the court has filed its findings, he will not be heard to say that he had no notice of such findings. California Improvement Co. v. Baroteau, 116 Cal. 136; 47 Pac. 1018. A notice of motion for a new trial, made one year after judgment, but technically within the time allowed by law, there having been no formal notice of the rendition of judgment, is properly denied, where the appellant's counsel knew of its rendition from the date thereof. Preston v. Eureka etc. Stone Co., 54 Cal. 198. Actual notice or knowledge, other than written, is insufficient, in any case, unless it appears from the facts that written notice was waived (Mallory v. See, 129 Cal. 356; 61 Pac. 1123); and the evidence of waiver must be clear and uncontradicted, and not dependent upon oral testimony or ex parte affidavits. Gardner v. Stare, 135 Cal. 118; 67 Pac. 5. Consent to entry of judgment, given by guardians, which was authorized, renders written notice unnecessary. San Fernando Farm etc. Ass'n v. Porter, 58 Cal. 81. Written notice is waived by moving to dismiss the action, on the grounds that the findings had been made more than one year prior thereto, and that no judgment had been entered in favor of the plaintiff (Forni v. Yoell, 99 Cal. 173; 33 Pac. 887); and also by moving to modify and set aside the findings (Wall v. Heald, 95 Cal. 364; 30 Pac. 551; California Improvement Co. v. Baroteau, 116 Cal. 136; 47 Pac. 1018); and by service of notice of intention to move for a new trial (Girdner v. Beswick, 2 Cal. Unrep. 535; 8 Pac. 11; and see Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320); and where, after findings of fact are filed, a notice of motion for a new trial is given, before the service of notice of filing such findings, notice of such filing is rendered unnecessary (Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320); but acceptance of the service of the notice of intention, with a reservation of the objection that the notice was not served within the time allowed by law, is not a waiver (Gumpel v. Castagnetto, 97 Cal. 15; 31 Pac. 898); nor is proceeding to act under the decision, proven merely by the affidavit of the opposite party, a waiver. Mallory v. See, 129 Cal. 356; 61 Pac. 1123. The fact that the moving parties were minors at the time of judgment is immaterial, where they commenced and prosecuted the action to final judgment. Gray v. Winder, 77 Cal. 525; 20 Pac. 47.

Motion for new trial proper when. An application to set aside a judgment, where the moving party was represented by an attorney at the trial, which resulted in the rendition of such judgment, should be by a motion for a new trial. McKinley v. Tuttle, 34 Cal. 235.

When proceedings may be commenced. No proceedings for a new trial can be had until after the trial and decision by a jury or court; in suits in equity, the findings of the jury are merely advisory; a case has not been tried until all the issues have been disposed of, and there has been no decision until the court has passed on the facts and drawn its conclusions therefrom. Bell v. Marsh, 80 Cal. 411; 22 Pac. 170. Proceedings on motion for a new trial are premature, where they were based on a minute-entry of the decision, unsigned by the judge, and not entered in the judgment-book, and after the verdict was filed the case was reserved and submitted for further consideration and decision. Fountain Water Co. v. Dougherty, 134 Cal. 376; 66 Pac. 316. The filing of additional findings, inadvertently omitted, by the court, of its own motion, does not render a notice of intention premature, where made after the findings and conclusions of law. Bell v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 186; 74 Pac. 774. The time within which the notice of intention must be served does not begin to run, in suits in equity, until the court has adopted or rejected the special verdict of the jury (Bell v. Marsh, 80 Cal. 411; 22 Pac. 170); and a notice of motion is premature, where it was given after the verdict of the jury upon special issues, and before the conclusion of the trial and the determination of the remaining issues by the court (Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918; and see Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126); and a notice of intention to move for a new trial and the presentation of the statement for settlement are premature, where the jury had found upon certain issues, but the court had not rendered its decision. James v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 107; 20 Pac. 241. The proceedings for a new trial are entirely independent of the entry of the judgment, and may be instituted before or after its entry, and even while the appeal from the judgment is pending. Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323; 27 Pac. 186; and see Spanagel v. Dellinger, 43 Cal. 476. The motion for a new trial attacks the verdict, rather than the judgment, and may be made prior to the entry of judgment. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182. Where all the issues necessary to final judgment had been tried and determined, and all that remained was to carry the judgment into effect, a motion, although made before the coming in of the referee's report as to community property, is not premature. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131. Guardians of minors, authorized to consent to a judgment as entered, are not required to be notified of the judgment, in order to impose on them the obligation to move for a new trial within ten days after the entry of judgment. San Fernando Farm etc. Ass'n v. Porter, 58 Cal. 81.

Necessity for notice of intention. Failure to serve the adverse party with notice of intention is equivalent to a failure to serve an adverse party with notice of appeal from the judgment; and the court has no jurisdiction to re-examine an issue of fact that it has tried, and change its decision thereon, unless all the parties to the issue and the former decision are properly before it. Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16; 56 Am. St. Rep. 82; 35 L. R. A. 318; 44 Pac. 460; 46 Pac. 730; United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43; 47 Pac. 870; Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080; Ford etc. Co. v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946. A motion for a new trial is a special proceeding within the case; and the court has no jurisdiction to entertain the motion, unless the notice of intention is given substantially as prescribed. Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 151; Wright v. Snowball, 45 Cal. 654; Kelly v. Larkin, 47 Cal. 58; Dominguez v. Mascotti, 74 Cal. 269; 15 Pac. 773; O'Connell v. Main etc. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515; 27 Pac. 373. A failure to serve the notice of motion for a new trial on an adverse party necessitates the denial of the motion. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182; National Bank v. Mulford, 17 Cal. App. 551; 120 Pac. 446. The making and filing of a statement on motion for a new trial does not give the court jurisdiction of the subject-matter of a new trial, where no notice of intention was given or waived. Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354. Service of the notice of intention to move for a new trial, and of the other steps in the preparation of a bill of exceptions, were not dispensed with by the newly added sections, 941a, 941b, 941c, post. Ford etc. Co. v. Braslan Seed etc. Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Form and contents of notice of intention. A notice of motion for a new trial should be in writing. Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354. The notice of intention need not, in terms, contain a notice of intention to move that the decision be vacated. Bauder v. Tyrrel, 59 Cal. 99; and see Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278; Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 57 Cal. 12; Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673. A notice designating the grounds of the motion, and stating that the defendant will make and submit a motion for a new trial, is sufficient. Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; and see Kimple v. Conway, 69 Cal. 71; 10 Pac. 389. The notice of intention must designate the grounds upon which the motion will be made: a matter not stated cannot be considered by the trial court upon the hearing of the motion. Sebring v. Harris, 20 Cal. App. 56; 128 Pac. 7. A notice of motion which does not state whether it will be made on affidavits, minutes of the court, bill of exceptions, or statement, is insufficient. Hughes v. Alsip, 112 Cal. 587; 44 Pac. 1027; and see Hill v. Beatty, 61 Cal. 292. A notice of intention reciting that it will be made upon a statement or bill of exceptions, and upon the record of the court and the minutes, is not defective, merely because the motion is based on the bill of exceptions alone. Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 120 Cal. 402; 52 Pac. 652. A notice that the defendant will move to set aside the decision and judgment, setting out, as the grounds relied on, the fourth, sixth, and seventh subdivisions of § 657, ante, is sufficient. O'Connell v. Main etc. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515; 27 Pac. 373. While the notice of intention need state only, in general terms, that the evidence is insufficient to justify the decision, yet the specification must point out the particulars wherein the evidence fails to sustain the findings. Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825. A notice of motion specifying the insufficiency of the evidence to support or justify the findings, is sufficient (Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485; 8 Pac. 22); as is also a notice of motion so made, specifying merely that the evidence is insufficient to justify the decision. McLennan v. Wilcox, 126 Cal. 51; 58 Pac. 305. A notice of intention stating that the motion is made on the minutes of the court, and failing to specify the errors of law which will be relied upon, is insufficient. Packer v. Doray, 4 Cal. Unrep. 297; 34 Pac. 628; Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364; Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202; 10 Pac. 510; Neale v. Depot Railway Co., 94 Cal. 425; 29 Pac. 954; Salisbury v. Burr, 5 Cal. Unrep. 314; 44 Pac. 461; and see Jue Fook Sam v. Lord, 83 Cal. 159; 23 Pac. 225; Buckley v. Althorf, 86 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 134; McLennan v. Wilcox, 126 Cal. 51; 58 Pac. 305. Where the motion for a new trial is made upon the minutes of the court, the statement of the grounds for the motion is necessary: this may be done by reference to the notice of intention on file, which reference may be incorporated in the bill of exceptions, if the notice is made part of it. Williams v. Hawley, 114 Cal. 97; 77 Pac. 762. The signing of the notice of motion by an attorney, not of record, is of no avail; and a waiver of the objection that he did not appear as the attorney of record, is not shown by his recognition as attorney of record by the attorney for the opposing party. McMahon v. Thomas, 114 Cal. 588; 46 Pac. 732.

Amendment of notice of intention. The amendment of a notice of intention to move for a new trial, made after the expiration of the statutory time for giving notice, cannot be allowed. Cooney v. Furlong, 66 Cal. 520; 6 Pac. 388; People v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113; Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354; Ellsassar v. Hunter, 26 Cal. 279; Le Roy v. Rassette, 32 Cal. 171. The trial court has no jurisdiction to allow the original notice to be amended so as to designate that the motion will be made for the same causes, upon the minutes of the court, after the statutory time for giving the notice has passed (Cooney v. Furlong, 66 Cal. 520; 6 Pac. 388; and see Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354; Thompson v. Lynch, 43 Cal. 482); and a notice of intention, which fails to specify the errors of law on which the motion will be based, cannot be amended after the statutory time, by inserting such specification of errors. Packer v. Doray, 98 Cal. 315; 33 Pac. 118; Little v. Jacks, 67 Cal. 165; 7 Pac. 449.

Waiver of defects in notice. A defect in the notice of motion, in not stating upon what it will be based, is not waived by proposing amendments to the bill, nor by participation in the settlement of such bill, as the appellant is entitled to use the bill of exceptions upon appeal from the judgment (Hughes v. Alsip, 112 Cal. 587; 44 Pac. 1027); but an irregularity in the notice of motion is waived by the failure to make any objection on the ground of such irregularity, either at the settlement of the statement or on the hearing of the motion (Christy v. Spring Valley Water Works, 68 Cal. 73; 8 Pac. 849); and there is a waiver of the form of the notice of motion, where the respondent's attorneys stipulated to give further time to the defendant to prepare and serve his statement. O'Connell v. Main etc. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515; 27 Pac. 373.

Who must be served. The notice of intention to move for a new trial must be served on the same parties on whom the notice of appeal itself would be served, that is, on every party in interest to whom the subject-matter of the motion is adverse, or who will be affected by the granting of the motion or by the changing of the former decision of the court. Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16; 56 Am. St. Rep. 82; 35 L. R. A. 318; 44 Pac. 660; 46 Pac. 730. The new method of appeal does not dispense with the necessity of serving the notice of intention to move for a new trial, and of serving the bill of exceptions to be used thereon, upon all adverse parties. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946. Co-defendants, whose interests may be adversely affected, must be served with notice: service on the plaintiff alone is not sufficient. United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43; 47 Pac. 870.

Adverse parties, who are. Every party whose interest in the subject-matter of the motion is adverse, or whose interests will be affected by the granting of the motion or the changing of the former decision of the court, is an "adverse party." Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182; Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080; Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946. The verdict or findings, rather than the judgment, must be looked to to determine whether or not a party to whom notice has not been given is an adverse party. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182. The "adverse party" upon whom a notice of intention to move for a new trial shall be served is determined by the same rules as is the "adverse party" upon whom a notice of appeal is to be served. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182; Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080. If an adverse party is properly served with notice of intention to move for a new trial, he does not, by reason of his death after such service, but before the motion is heard, cease to be a party to the proceeding for a new trial. Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225. The burden is upon a respondent moving to dismiss an appeal for want of service upon an adverse party, to show from the record that the party not served was adverse in interest. Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080. Where a judgment is one which, under the pleadings, properly follows from the verdict found, the question as to who are adverse parties is the same, whether determined from the verdict or the judgment. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182. The executor of a partner, in whose favor judgment was rendered in an action for an accounting, is an adverse party (Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16; 56 Am. St. Rep. 82; 35 L. R. A. 318; 44 Pac. 660; 46 Pac. 730); but a party who would not be adversely affected by the new trial, and who was made defendant only because he refused to join as plaintiff, and whose interest is not mentioned in the judgment, is not an adverse party. Sprague v. Walton, 145 Cal. 228; 78 Pac. 645.

Time for serving notice. Under this section, prior to the amendment of 1907, a party intending to move for a new trial was required, within ten days after the verdict, to file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of such intention (Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316; San Francisco Farm etc. Ass'n v. Porter, 58 Cal. 81); and if he did not give such notice within the prescribed time, his right to move was gone. Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629. Under the earlier decisions of the court, the time to serve notice of intention did not commence to run until written notice of the rendering of the decision was served, where the action was tried by the court (Roussin v. Stewart, 33 Cal. 208; Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468), but written notice may now be waived. Gardner v. Stare, 135 Cal. 118; 67 Pac. 5. The decision of a referee is not binding upon the court until adopted by it: it is not a trial; hence, a notice of motion for a new trial need not be given until the statutory period after the confirmation of the referee's report. Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393. A party giving notice of motion for a new trial is bound by that notice: he cannot afterwards give a second notice, and file his statement within the statutory period, but more than that period after the first notice. Le Roy v. Rassette, 32 Cal. 171.

Extension of time for serving notice. The court may extend the time within which to give notice of motion for a new trial (Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107); under § 1054, post, when asked for before the expiration of the statutory ten days required by this section (Burton v. Todd, 68 Cal. 485, 9 Pac. 663, overruling Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316; and see Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629; Hook v. Hall, 2 Cal. Unrep. 459; 6 Pac. 422); and the court does not exceed its power in extending the time to thirty days, in addition to the time allowed by this section, under § 1054, post. Moffat v. Cook, 65 Cal. 236; 3 Pac. 805. Where an order is made extending the time, and the party gives notice before the statutory time expires, he derives no benefit from the order. Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320. An order extending the time to prepare and file the motion, extends the time to prepare and file the notice of motion. Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320. The time named in an order extending the time to give notice of intention commences to run at the expiration of the ten days allowed by statute for the notice (Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418); and the time may be extended by stipulation of counsel, without an order of court ratifying the same (Simpson v. Budd, 91 Cal. 488; 27 Pac. 758); but a motion to modify and set aside the findings will not extend the time, nor will an order staying the entry of judgment until after the determination of such motion to modify. California Improvement Co. v. Baroteau, 116 Cal. 136; 47 Pac. 1018.

Objection to delay in serving notice. The objection that the notice was not served in time must be taken in the lower court, or it will be deemed to have been waived, and the time extended by consent of parties: such objection cannot be taken for the first time on appeal (Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316; and see Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Hodgdon v. Griffin, 56 Cal. 610; Gray v. Nunan, 63 Cal. 220; Patrick v. Morse, 64 Cal. 462; 2 Pac. 49; Schieffery v. Tapia, 68 Cal. 184; 8 Pac. 878; Girdner v. Beswick, 69 Cal. 112; 10 Pac. 278; Simpson v. Budd, 91 Cal. 488; 27 Pac. 758; Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122); and such objection should be overruled, where the facts alleged do not appear in the record, and the statement was settled by the judge (Nippert v. Warneke, 128 Cal. 501; 61 Pac. 96, 270); and it is not available, in the absence of a proper showing that the notice was not served in time. Hook v. Hall, 68 Cal. 22; 8 Pac. 596.

Waiver of notice. Notice of intention to move for a new trial may be waived. Gibson v. Berryman, 14 Cal. App. 330; 111 Pac. 926.

Effect of service of notice. In a proceeding for a new trial, the parties are determined by the notice of motion; and jurisdiction of the parties, other than the party moving, is obtained by service upon them of such notice. Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225.

Presumption as to notice. Where the notice is not inserted in the record, it will be presumed that notice was properly given; but where it is inserted, and there are defects therein, it devolves upon the moving party to show that the defects were overcome or were waived. Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918; and see Patrick v. Morse, 64 Cal. 462; 2 Pac. 49. A recital in the bill of exceptions, that the notice was seasonably served and filed, will prevail over the notice of intention in the record, stating that it was filed one day too late. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122; Nye v. Marysville etc. Street Ry. Co., 97 Cal. 461; 32 Pac. 530; Downing v. Le Du, 82 Cal. 471; 23 Pac. 202, Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; 23 Pac. 700.

Filing the notice. The filing and service of the notice of intention to move for a new trial is the initiation of a proceeding for a new trial. Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225. Failure to file the notice of intention within ten days after notice of the decision, is fatal to the motion, although timely service is made on the adverse party (Sutton v. Symons, 100 Cal. 576; 35 Pac. 158); and failure to file the notice within ten days after the verdict renders such notice ineffective (Hook v. Hall, 2 Cal. Unrep. 459; 6 Pac. 422; and see Coveny v. Hale, 49 Cal. 552; Brady v. Feisil, 54 Cal. 180; Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629; Jue Fook Sam v. Lord, 83 Cal. 159; 23 Pac. 225); and renders the refusal to settle the statement proper (Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629; Jue Fook Sam v. Lord, 83 Cal. 159; 23 Pac. 225); and prevents the appellant from impeaching the findings. Brady v. Feisil, 54 Cal. 180. Leaving the notice of intention with the clerk on the last day allowed by law, without paying the fees therefor, does not constitute a legal filing; and a filing made three days thereafter, as of the day of receipt, on payment of the fees, is too late. Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48; 57 Pac. 684. A recital in the statement on the motion, that the plaintiff reserved the right to object to the motion, on the ground that the notice of intention was not filed with the clerk within the statutory time, cannot be treated as in the nature of bill of exceptions. Hook v. Hall, 68 Cal. 22; 8 Pac. 596.

Affidavits, time of filing. Affidavits on which the motion for a new trial was based, showing the disqualification of the judge, cannot be considered, when not filed within ten days after the notice of intention. Estate of Kasson, 141 Cal. 33; 74 Pac. 436. The time for filing such affidavits may be extended to more than thirty days beyond the statutory time, under this section. Oberlander v. Fixen, 129 Cal. 690; 62 Pac. 254.

Affidavits must be identified. The affidavits used on the hearing of the motion for a new trial must be identified. Johnson v. Muir, 43 Cal. 542.

Contents of bill of exceptions. A specification of particular errors relied upon, though required in the statement, is not required in the bill of exceptions. Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 150 Cal. 124; 88 Pac. 701.

Objections to bill of exceptions. An objection to a bill of exceptions, on motion for a new trial, in which no facts are stated or presented in support of such objection, cannot be considered. Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Cal. App. 269; 87 Pac. 558.

Time for serving bill of exceptions. The time for service of a proposed bill of exceptions expires at the termination of the stipulation extending such time, and is not extended by the pendency of another motion. Hole v. Takekawa, 165 Cal. 372; 132 Pac. 445.

Waiver of delay in presenting bill of exceptions. An objection that a bill of exceptions on motion for a new trial was not presented in time may be waived. Bollinger v. Bollinger, 153 Cal. 190; 94 Pac. 770.

Object of bill of exceptions or statement. The office of the statement on motion for a new trial is to bring into the record certain matters which constitute the basis of the motion, and which the party desires to have reviewed on appeal from the order granting or refusing a new trial. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107. The object of the statement or bill of exceptions is to make that of record which before was not recorded, but rested only in the recollection of the court or counsel, or in the minutes of the clerk (Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Cal. Unrep. 613; 9 Pac. 152; Johnson v. Sepulbeda, 5 Cal. 149); and to bring into the record those matters which have arisen in the progress of the trial, and matters which constitute the basis of the motion or grounds for a new trial, out of which arise whatever questions the appellant desires to have reviewed on appeal from the order granting or refusing a new trial. Graham v. Stewart, 68 Cal. 374; 9 Pac. 555.

Contents of statement. The statement on motion for a new trial should contain so much of the evidence, rulings of the court, instructions, etc., as may be necessary to explain the points relied on, but no more. Hutton v. Reed, 25 Cal. 475; Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300; Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 302. Neither the notice of motion for a new trial, nor the affidavits filed in support thereof, have properly any place in the statement. Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416. On application for a new trial, and on review, a statement which does not specify the particular errors relied on, or the particulars in which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient, should be disregarded (Burnett v. Pacheco, 27 Cal. 408; Vilhac v. Biven, 28 Cal. 410; Reamer v. Nesmith, 34 Cal. 624; Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117; Green v. Killey, 38 Cal. 201; Spanagel v. Dellinger, 38 Cal. 278; Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24; Mack v. Wetzlar, 39 Cal. 247; Kusel v. Sharkey, 46 Cal. 3; Coleman v. Gilmore, 49 Cal. 340; Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012); and the failure to insert in the statement the particular points on which the party will rely, is not cured by inserting such points in the notice of motion. Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416.

Amendments should be incorporated. Amendments to the statements should be incorporated in the engrossed statement, and not merely attached thereto (Marlow v. Marsh, 9 Cal. 259; Skillman v. Riley, 10 Cal. 300; Baldwin v. Ferre, 23 Cal. 461; Kimball v. Semple, 31 Cal. 657); but failure to re-engross the statement, and place the allowed amendments therein, is not error, where they were treated by the court and the parties as part of the statement. Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439.

Amendments as waiver of objections. Proposing amendments to a statement is a waiver of a failure to serve a notice of the motion, unless the party proposing the amendments makes the objection, or reserves his right to make it when he proposes his amendments; but no particular form of reserving the objection is required. Brundage v. Adams, 41 Cal. 619. A defendant in a motion for a new trial may file amendments to the statement, without waiving his right to object that the notice or statement was not filed or served in time, by a preface that he does so without prejudice to his right to object, at the hearing, to the notice or statement on these grounds. Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304.

Waiver of right to propose amendments. The right to propose amendments to the statement is waived by an agreement that the statement was correct, and authorizing the defendant to present it to the judge for settlement without notice. Perry v. Noonan Loan Co., 1 Cal. App. 609; 82 Pac. 623. Failure to serve the plaintiff with notice of motion to amend the statement is not prejudicial to him, where the proposed amendments were served, and he was present at the hearing, and offered no amendments, and did not object. Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439.

Adoption of amendments. The presumption is, that the amendments were adopted, where the moving party does not indicate to the contrary by serving notice that the statement and amendments would be presented to the judge for settlement as prescribed by this section. Pendergrass v. Cross, 73 Cal. 475; 15 Pac. 63. Failure to give any notice in reference to the adoption or rejection of the proposed amendments is an admission that they were to be allowed (Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481); but failure to notify the opposing party of refusal to adopt the amendments does not amount to their adoption, where the moving party has delivered the statement and amendments to the clerk or judge. Mellor v. Crouch, 76 Cal. 594; 18 Pac. 685.

Extension of time to preserve and serve statement. An extension of time for thirty days, in which to prepare and serve a proposed statement, is authorized; and an order extending the time within which to "file," as well as to prepare and serve, the proposed statement, cannot mislead the opposite party, where the notice of intention has been served, and the stipulation extending the time refers to the statement. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074. An extension of time in which to prepare and serve the statement, though within the limit of thirty days, is void, if the time previously allowed had fully elapsed while the mover was in default. Freese v. Freese, 134 Cal. 48; 66 Pac. 43. Where the time in which to prepare and serve the statement was extended for thirty days by the judge, his power is exhausted: the fact that the time is further extended by consent of the adverse party does not confer on the judge any additional authority (Bunnel v. Stockton, 83 Cal. 319; 23 Pac. 301); but a stipulation of the parties, extending the time for less than thirty days, does not affect the power of the court to extend the time for thirty days from the expiration of the stipulated time. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074. Where the order extending the time in which to serve the notice of intention is void, the order extending the time to prepare and file the statement is also void. Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629. The order extending the time to prepare the statement carries with it the same extension of time to serve the statement. Bryant v. Sternfeld, 89 Cal. 611; 26 Pac. 1091; Curtis v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 390; 11 Pac. 652; Burton v. Todd, 68 Cal. 485; 9 Pac. 663. The judge who tried the case has the power to extend the time to prepare the statement, although he is sitting in a county other than that in which the case was tried. Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128.

Excuse for delay in preparing and serving statement. Ignorance of the time within which a bill of exceptions or statement must be prepared and served cannot be held to be the result of mistake, surprise, or inadvertence, so as to justify relief therefrom. Ingrim v. Epperson, 137 Cal. 370; 70 Pac. 165.

Result of delay in serving statement. A statement on motion, served six days after the expiration of the time allowed by law and by all extensions given, will not be considered on appeal. Buckley v. Althorf, 86 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 134.

Service of statement. The service of the proposed statement is not invalid or void because made on a Sunday or on a legal holiday. Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074.

Extension of time for presentation of statement and for notice thereof. Under § 1054, post, the court has power to extend the time within which the proposed statement and amendments shall be presented for settlement, and also to extend the time for giving actual notice of the presentation, provided always that the adverse party has five days' notice of the presentation. Douglas v. Southern Pacific Co., 151 Cal. 242; 90 Pac. 538.

Notice of settlement. The third subdivision of this section fixes a time when the statement shall be presented, and provides different methods whereby the adverse party may have notice of the fact;

thus, the statement must, unless the time is extended, be presented within ten days, but the method of its presentation is optional with the moving party, who may present it on five days' notice to his adversary, or may deliver it to the clerk for the judge. Douglas v. Southern Pacific Co., 151 Cal. 242; 90 Pac. 538. When the statement with the proposed amendments is delivered to the clerk for the judge, no previous notice of settlement is required to be given by the moving party. Mellor v. Crouch, 76 Cal. 594; 18 Pac. 685. One purpose of the statute is to place a limitation on the time for presenting the proposed statement and amendments, and another purpose is to provide an optional mode of presentation; but the main purpose is to give notice of the presentation of the statement. Douglas v. Southern Pacific Co., 151 Cal. 242; 90 Pac. 538. Where the record fails to show that the proposed amendments were not all adopted, an objection that no notice of the time and place of settlement was given to the parties making the proposed amendments is without merit. Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113. The provision requiring five days' notice to be given to the adverse party, of the hearing of the settlement of the bill of exceptions, where the amendments have been served but not adopted, and the statement and amendments have been delivered to the judge, requires such notice to be given by the party, and not by the clerk. Mellor v. Crouch, 76 Cal. 594; 18 Pac. 685. The objection that the moving party failed to serve notice of the presentation of the proposed statement and amendments for settlement, is waived by a subsequent stipulation, that the statement might be settled by the judge who tried the cause, at his convenience, and that, after settlement, the motion might be heard and determined at the residence of the judge in another county. Cooper v. Burch, 140 Cal. 548; 74 Pac. 37.

Objection to delay in presentation. The objection that the proposed statement was not presented in time must be urged when the statement is presented for settlement, and if the objection is overruled, the party must have his objection, and the matter in support of it, incorporated in the statement, so as to avail himself of it as a reason for denial of a motion for a new trial, or in order to present objections on appeal from an order granting or refusing the motion; but this applies only to objections urged at the time the proposed statement comes up for settlement, and has no application to objections or motions made subsequently to the order settling the statement, and when the statement as settled is presented for certification; but such matter must be supported by a bill of exceptions. Ryder v. Rio Land etc. Co., 147 Cal. 462; 82 Pac. 62. Where no showing is made that the amendments were ever served on the plaintiff's attorney, the objection that the statement and amendments were not presented for settlement within ten days after the service of the amendments on the plaintiff's attorney, and upon five days' notice, will not be considered. Abbott v. Jack, 136 Cal. 510; 69 Pac. 257. Where the statement is not filed or presented in time, an objection interposed to the settlement on that ground is not available after settlement, when the motion for a new trial comes on for hearing, if the court, at the time of settling the statement, granted relief for the delay under § 473, ante. Grubb v. Chase, 158 Cal. 352; 111 Pac. 90. Where the respondent stipulates "that the foregoing is a true and correct statement and bill of exceptions," he will not be permitted, for the first time, on appeal, to object that the bill of exceptions was not presented, signed, or settled in time. Estate of Dougherty, 139 Cal. 14; 72 Pac. 357.

Result of delay in presenting statement. Failure of the plaintiff to present the statement to the judge within ten days after the receipt of the proposed amendments does not deprive the judge of the power to settle the statement as amended, where no notice was given that the amendments were either adopted or rejected: this procedure is authorized by the third subdivision of this section, which fixes no time for the statement to be presented, where the amendments are adopted; and the failure to give notice of the rejection of the amendments is, in itself, an admission of their adoption (Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481); but where the proposed amendments have been rejected, and the statement, with the amendments, is not presented by the moving party within ten days after such amendments were served, the court is not authorized to consider the statement, nor can it be considered on appeal. Henry v. Merguire, 106 Cal. 142; 39 Pac. 599. Failure of the moving party to present the statement and amendments for settlement for a period of ten or twelve years after the amendments have been served, without any satisfactory explanation, is gross and inexcusable neglect (Lee Doon v. Tesh, 131 Cal. 406; 63 Pac. 764); and an unexplained delay of seven months in presenting the statement and amendments for settlement, demands that the statement be disregarded on appeal. Connor v. Southern California Motor Road Co., 101 Cal. 429; 35 Pac. 990; Willis v. Rhen Kong, 70 Cal. 548; 11 Pac. 780. Where the proposed statement is not presented in time, and no excuse appears therefor in the record, such delay is fatal to a consideration of the statement. Henry v. Merguire, 106 Cal. 142; 39 Pac. 599. Failure to incorporate and certify in the statement a valid excuse for delay in its presentation is inexcusable negligence (Estate of Kruger, 130 Cal. 621; 63 Pac. 31; Higgins v. Mahoney, 50 Cal. 444; Tregambo v. Comanche etc. Mining Co., 57 Cal. 501; Connor v. Southern California Motor Road Co., 101 Cal. 429; 35 Pac. 990); and the court has jurisdiction to dismiss the proceedings for inexcusable neglect in failing to present the statement for settlement. Kokole v. Superior Court, 17 Cal. App. 454; 120 Pac. 67. Where the hearing of the settlement of the statement is postponed from time to time, and the statement is lost, and no explanation is given of the delay of the moving party to obtain the settlement of a substituted statement, the dismissal of the motion is justified. Moore v. Kendall, 121 Cal. 145; 53 Pac. 647. Where the notice of intention states that the motion will be made upon a bill of exceptions, but no proper bill or statement is presented upon the hearing of the motion, there can be no review of the action of the trial court, either in that court or on appeal. Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524.

Time for presentation when amendments adopted. When the amendments are adopted by the moving party, the time within which the statement as amended shall be presented to the judge or delivered to the clerk is not limited by this section, and it may be presented within a reasonable time. Pendergrass v. Cross, 73 Cal. 475; 15 Pac. 63.

Statement or bill of exceptions must contain what evidence. A bill of exceptions should contain only so much of the evidence, or a reference thereto, as may be necessary to explain the grounds specifically set forth as causes for new trial. McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300. The statement need not contain all the evidence, where the question is solely as to the sufficiency of conflicting evidence to sustain a particular finding: it is sufficient if there is enough evidence, on each side of the question, to show a substantial conflict, since the decision of the court will not be interfered with; and where the proposed statement or bill of exceptions fails to present sufficient evidence, it is the duty of the opposing party to propose amendments, and not throw that labor on the trial judge. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. Where the statement does not purport to contain all the evidence, it will not be presumed that the evidence admitted was adverse to the finding by the court. Harris v. Duarte, 141 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 298; 75 Pac. 58. The requirement that the moving party shall prepare and serve a proper statement or bill of exceptions, so as to sustain his contention of the insufficiency of the evidence, does not mean that the statement or bill of exceptions shall embody all the notes of the reporter. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. The practice of embodying in the statement or bill of exceptions the reporter's notes, in bulk, is not justified by the law or good practice: the code requires only so much of the evidence or other matter as is necessary to explain the objections or points sought to be presented. Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133. Where the statement contains the reporter's notes, in bulk, the court should permit the statement to be amended so as to set out its substance, and cause redundant and useless matter to be stricken out; mandamus lies to compel the judge to do so, should he refuse to allow the amendment. Santa Ana v. Ballard, 126 Cal. 677; 59 Pac. 133; Kruse v. Chester, 66 Cal. 353; 5 Pac. 613; Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614; 29 Pac. 235; Tibbets v. Riverside Banking Co., 97 Cal. 258; 32 Pac. 174; Winters v. Buck, 121 Cal. 279; 53 Pac. 799. Where the proposed statement contains questions and answers claimed to have been erroneously excluded, it is the right of the opposite party to propose amendments showing that the exclusion of the testimony sought to be stricken out could not change the result; hence, the cost of printing the transcript will not be taxed against him, though such amendment requires the insertion of the greater portion of the evidence. Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602; 38 Pac. 443. Where the total amount involved in the case is only some six hundred dollars, and a transcript of the reporter's notes would cost almost a quarter of the amount involved, an order requiring the moving party to procure such transcript as a condition of settlement of the proposed statement, to which no amendments are proposed, is unreasonable. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536; 78 Pac. 14. The engrossed statement will be disregarded on appeal, where the certificate thereto states that it is but a skeleton, and does not contain all the evidence (Brind v. Gregory, 122 Cal. 480; 55 Pac. 250); but where an exhibit is omitted from the statement, and no objection is made, and the attorneys for the respondent indorse on the statement, "The foregoing statement agreed to by us," and the same is thereupon signed by the judge, an objection that such exhibit has been omitted is waived, and presents no cause for striking out the statement, or any part of it. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131.

Evidence set out in statement how. The evidence, as written out by the reporter, is not the statement contemplated by statute: it is the duty of attorneys to see that evidence is correctly stated, and that exceptions are correctly noted. Quinn v. Wetherbee, 41 Cal. 247. Where exhibits, claimed to have been used in evidence, are referred to by number in the body of the statement, and are set out in the appendix thereto, properly numbered, and preceded by a proper title, they are sufficiently identified, and incorporated in and made a part of the statement. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131. Reference, in the proposed statement, to a document or record by means of the direction, "Here insert." is a sufficient notification to the opposite party that such document or record is to become a part of the statement; but such reference would not be sufficient in the engrossed statement (Reclamation District v. Hamilton, 112 Cal. 603; 44 Pac. 1074); and depositions on file may be made part of the statement, by calling for them by the direction, "Here insert," at the proper place; and when the transcript is made up, they should be copied in full where called for. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131.

Stipulation as to evidence in statement. Where it is stipulated that the statement "does not contain all the evidence," but that "the statement is correct," it will be inferred that only so much of the evidence has been inserted as is necessary to explain the grounds specified in the notice. Cahill v. Baird, 7 Cal. Unrep. 61; 70 Pac. 1061.

Specification of errors. Specification of grounds of error is the essence of the statement, without which it has no legal existence. Hutton v. Reed, 25 Cal. 478; Coleman v. Gilmore, 49 Cal. 340; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542; Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376; Burnett v. Pacheco, 27 Cal. 408; Partridge v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 415; Beans v. Emanuelli, 36 Cal. 117; Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416; Hill v. Beatty, 61 Cal. 292; Alameda Macadamizing Co. v. Williams, 70 Cal. 534; 12 Pac. 530. A statement that contains no specifications of the particular errors relied upon must be disregarded. Johnston v. Blanchard, 16 Cal. App. 321; 116 Pac. 973. A general specification, that "the court erred in giving each and every instruction requested by plaintiff," while not to be commended, sufficiently notifies the plaintiff of the errors relied on. Light v. Stevens, 159 Cal. 288; 113 Pac. 659. Where the statement contains no specification of error, the motion is properly denied (Nye v. Marysville etc. R. R. Co., 97 Cal. 461; 32 Pac. 530); and the decision is conclusive of the facts of the case. Graham v. Stewart, 68 Cal. 374; 9 Pac. 555. Errors not specified in the statement will not be considered on appeal. Budd v. Drais, 50 Cal. 120; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542; Heilen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; Hershey v. Kness, 75 Cal. 115; 16 Pac. 548; Bohnert v. Bohnert, 95 Cal. 441; 30 Pac. 590; Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012; Lambert v. Marcuse, 137 Cal. 44; 69 Pac. 620; Ferrer v. Home Mutual Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 416; Fleming v. Albeck, 67 Cal. 227; 7 Pac. 659; Pico v. Cohn, 67 Cal. 258; 7 Pac. 680; Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419; Ackley v. Fishbeck, 124 Cal. 409; 57 Pac. 207. The object of the provision requiring the statement to specify the errors relied on is to enable the adverse party to prepare his amendments, without the necessity of going through the statement proposed by the moving party to ascertain what objections, rulings, and exceptions are incorporated therein; and unless the alleged errors are specifically pointed out, they are waived by the moving party. Bohnert v. Bohnert, 95 Cal. 444; 30 Pac. 590. The specification of errors is essential to the statement, to call attention to the precise ground relied on, and not to fortify the alleged errors by a statement of facts in its support; hence, a statement by the moving party, that he objected to the testimony, and excepted to the decision admitting it in evidence, cannot be considered, where the statement does not show any exception. Alameda Macadamizing Co. v. Williams, 70 Cal. 534; 12 Pac. 530. The question presented on a motion for a nonsuit is a question of law, and, in the statement on motion for a new trial, the decision of the court should be specified as an error of law; but the specification need not embody the evidence. Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573. Where no errors of law are specified in the statement, it will be presumed that they were disregarded on the hearing of the motion. Pico v. Cohn, 67 Cal. 258; 7 Pac. 680. A misleading instruction, not specified as a ground of the motion, cannot support an order granting a new trial. Laver v. Hotaling, 115 Cal. 613; 47 Pac. 593. An objection, that the verdict shows prejudice, is untenable, where no assignment of error on that ground appears in the motion for a new trial. Kirk v. Santa Barbara Ice Co., 157 Cal. 591; 108 Pac. 509. Failure to find on all the issues raised by the pleadings need not be specified in the statement as a ground of the motion. Millard v. Supreme Council, 3 Cal. Unrep. 96; 21 Pac. 825. A specification of errors in the statement, that they are pointed out and designated in the transcript by certain numbered exceptions, and that the court erred in each of its rulings, is insufficient (Hall v. Susskind, 120 Cal. 559; 53 Pac. 46); and the incorporation of an instruction, in the assignment of errors, coupled with the statement that it was given against the objection of the appellant, is also insufficient. Braverman

v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 101 Cal. 644; 36 Pac. 386. Where the notice of motion specified that it would be made upon a "statement of the case," and the trial judge, in his settlement, designated it as a "bill of exceptions," it may be treated either as a statement or a bill of exceptions: in either case, it is sufficient, where it contains a proper specification of errors. Northwestern Redwood Co. v. Dicken, 13 Cal. App. 689; 110 Pac. 591. A paper, appended to the statement, but forming no part of it, designated as an assignment of errors, but not authenticated as part of the record, nor included in the stipulation certifying to the contents of the transcript, and no showing made that it was considered on the motion, cannot be considered on appeal. Ackley v. Fishbeck, 124 Cal. 409; 57 Pac. 207. Failure to specify in the statement that the court did not find on an issue raised by the pleadings prevents its consideration on appeal. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828; Haight v. Tryon, 112 Cal. 4; 44 Pac. 318. The objection that a judgment is in favor of a party on a cause of action which he has not alleged, will be considered on appeal, where the facts are all of record, though it is not specified in the statement. Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; Putman v. Lamphier, 36 Cal. 151. Rulings on the admission of evidence, not specified as error in the statement, cannot be considered on appeal; but no specifications of errors are required when the motion is based on a bill of exceptions. Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183; 48 Pac. 730; 51 Pac. 183. The ruling on a demurrer, not specified or referred to in the statement, will not be considered on appeal. Heilbron v. Centerville etc. Ditch Co., 76 Cal. 8; 17 Pac. 932. The specifications should conform to the notice of intention to move for a new trial; and where they do not, the opposite party should move for such amendments thereto as will remove therefrom all matter foreign to the grounds stated in the notice. Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706. The specifications may be amended after the time has expired for preparing and settling the statement. Alameda Macadamizing Co. v. Williams, 70 Cal. 534; 12 Pac. 530; Low v. McCallam, 64 Cal. 2; 27 Pac. 787.

Specifications of insufficiency of evidence. The specification of the insufficiency of the evidence is not required to be made in any particular form of words, but it should distinguish each particular proposition of fact excepted to from all others found by the court or in the verdict of the jury. Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194; 29 Pac. 31; Smith v. Ellis, 103 Cal. 294; 37 Pac. 400; Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825; Du Brutz v. Jessup, 54 Cal. 118; Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294; 36 Pac. 672. The statement is not a pleading, nor a complaint in error, where all the intendments are against the pleader: it is in the nature of a notice, to be regarded with liberality, the sufficiency of which is to be tested by inquiring whether the opposing party is injured by defects. American Type Founders Co. v. Packer, 130 Cal. 459; 62 Pac. 744. The specification of insufficiency need not be inserted in any particular place in the statement, nor under any particular subheading. Stuart v. Lord, 138 Cal. 672; 72 Pac. 142. The purpose of this section in requiring the particulars of the insufficiency to be specified in the statement, is to direct the attention of the court and counsel to the particulars relied on by the moving party, so that the evidence bearing on the specifications may be inserted in the statement and considered by the court (Eddelbuttel v. Durrell, 55 Cal. 277; Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738; Cummings v. Ross, 90 Cal. 68; 27 Pac. 62; Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294; 36 Pac. 672; Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 25 Pac. 825; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113); and so that the adverse party may intelligently prepare such amendments as will support the decision, and the court determine whether any portion of the statement is useless and redundant (Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825); and to direct the attention of counsel and the court to the particular point on which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient (Estate of Yoakam, 103 Cal. 503; 37 Pac. 485; McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294; 36 Pac. 672); and to provide a statement restricted to such evidence as is relevant and material to prove or disprove the specified facts. Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194; 29 Pac. 31. It is clearly prescribed in this section that the moving party shall state the grounds of the insufficiency upon which the motion should be granted, differently from and at greater length than that required in the notice of intention to move for a new trial: the mere repetition, in the statement, of the grounds of the motion designated in the notice, without specifying the particulars wherein the evidence is insufficient, does not satisfy the statute. Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825. The specification need not be more specific than the issues made by the pleadings, if the motion is directed against a general verdict, or an omnibus finding that all or certain designated allegations of the complaint or answer are true, or a judgment without findings. Harris v. Duarte, 141 Cal. 497; 70 Pac. 298; 75 Pac. 58. Where the evidence is all presented in the transcript, a specification of its insufficiency to sustain the findings is sufficient, where there is a reasonably successful effort made to state the particulars, and they are such as might be sufficient to inform the opposing counsel and the court of the grounds. Porter v. Counts, 6 Cal. App. 550; 92 Pac. 655. Where the specifications fully inform counsel and the court as to the points on which the plaintiff relies in contending that the decision is contrary to the evidence, and all the evidence is contained in the record, they are sufficient (Gwin v. Calegaris, 139 Cal. 384; 73 Pac. 851; Estate of Motz, 136 Cal. 558; 69 Pac. 295; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113; Osborn v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 501; 117 Pac. 519); and specifications, full enough to enable the court to understand the question presented, are sufficient (Newell v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 242); as are also specifications which enable the opposing counsel to determine what evidence should be put in the statement, and the judge to strike out useless and redundant matter. American Type Founders Co. v. Packer, 130 Cal. 459; 62 Pac. 744. Where the statement fails to specify any particular in which the evidence is insufficient, it must be disregarded, so far as the notice of motion specifies the insufficiency of the evidence as one of its grounds (Hill v. Beatty, 61 Cal. 292; Benjamin v. Stewart, 61 Cal. 605; Bate v. Miller, 63 Cal. 233; Donohoe v. Mariposa etc. Mining Co., 66 Cal. 317; 5 Pac. 495; Hartman v. Rogers, 69 Cal. 643; 11 Pac. 581; Heinlen v. Heilbron, 71 Cal. 557; 12 Pac. 673; Silva v. Holland, 74 Cal. 530; 16 Pac. 385; Lowrie v. Salz, 75 Cal. 349; 17 Pac. 232; Heilbron v. Kings River etc. Canal Co., 76 Cal. 11; 17 Pac. 933; Millan v. Hood, 3 Cal. Unrep. 548; 30 Pac. 1107; Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364; Green v. Green, 103 Cal. 108; 37 Pac. 188; Citizens' Bank v. Jones, 121 Cal. 30; 53 Pac. 354; Thompson v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 270; 57 Pac. 1015; Rauer v. Fay, 128 Cal. 523; 61 Pac. 90; O'Leary v. Castle, 133 Cal. 508; 65 Pac. 950; Liurette v. Hiller, 139 Cal. 729; 73 Pac. 836; Graybill v. De Young, 140 Cal. 323; 73 Pac. 1067; Ben Lomond Wine Co. v. Sladky, 141 Cal. 619; 75 Pac. 332; Estate of Antoldi, 7 Cal. Unrep. 211; 81 Pac. 278); and, since the decision includes the facts found, the findings must be taken as absolutely true (Donohoe v. Mariposa etc. Mining Co., 66 Cal. 317; 5 Pac. 495); hence, the question whether excessive damages appear to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice cannot be considered, it being but another form of saying that the evidence does not justify the verdict. Graybill v. De Young, 140 Cal. 323; 73 Pac. 1067. A specification in a statement, in a case tried by the court, where findings of fact have been filed, that a particular finding, naming it, was not justified by the evidence, is sufficient to enable the court to review the evidence so far as it relates to each finding thus pointed out. Strang v. Ryan, 46 Cal. 33; Bell v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 186; 74 Pac. 774. A finding as to the amount of damages, which is not attacked in the specification of the insufficiency of the evidence, will not be considered on appeal (Fitzhugh v. Mason, 2 Cal. App. 220; 83 Pac. 282); nor, where the statement fails to specify the particulars of the insufficiency of the evidence, will the decision of the court be considered on appeal. Preston v. Hearst, 54 Cal. 595; Phillips v. Lowery, 54 Cal. 584. Where the specification of the insufficiency of the evidence is directed to a portion of the findings, that a certain amount was due, and not that the principal had never been paid, except a certain sum on account of interest, which was also a part of the finding, no contention can be made on appeal that there is no evidence in support of the finding that the note had not been paid. First Nat. Bank v. Kelso, 5 Cal. Unrep. 40; 40 Pac. 427. Where the statement contains no specifications of the insufficiency of the evidence, or of errors of law occurring at the trial, a specification that the decision is against law will be limited to errors appearing in the judgment roll. Thompson v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 270; 57 Pac. 1015. Where there are no findings of fact, and no motion for a new trial, but the appeal is from an order denying an application for distribution, a specification of insufficiency is not necessary. Estate of Fath, 132 Cal. 609; 64 Pac. 995. The statement that "the court should have found" is only another way of stating what "the evidence shows," which is a form of specification repeatedly held to be insufficient (Taylor v. Bell, 128 Cal. 306; 60 Pac. 853); the statement that "the evidence shows" is, in effect, only a statement that, upon all the evidence, the court should have come to a different conclusion, and a mere repetition of what was previously stated in the notice of intention. Taylor v. Bell, 128 Cal. 306; 60 Pac. 853; Adams v. Helbing, 107 Cal. 298; 40 Pac. 422; Haight v. Tryon, 112 Cal. 4; 44 Pac. 318; Love v. Anchor Raisin etc. Co., 5 Cal. Unrep. 425; 45 Pac. 1044. An allegation as to what the evidence shows is unnecessary, and out of place, in the specifications required by this section. Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194; 29 Pac. 31; Adams v. Helbing, 107 Cal. 298; 40 Pac. 422. A specification, that "the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict, in this, that the evidence shows certain specific facts," is sufficient (Estate of Yoakam, 103 Cal. 503; 37 Pac. 485; Harnett v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 78 Cal. 31; 20 Pac. 154); but a specification, not directed at any particular one of numerous findings of fact, but at all of them, and at the verdict adopted, and at the finding made thereon, and at the judgment, is insufficient (Cummings v. Ross, 90 Cal. 68; 27 Pac. 62); as is also a specification that the court erred in finding and deciding in favor of the defendant when the finding and decision should have been in favor of the plaintiff, and in rendering judgment in favor of the defendant when the judgment should have been in favor of the plaintiff (Lower Kings River Rec. District v. Phillips, 5 Cal. Unrep. 776; 39 Pac. 634); and also a specification that "the evidence is wholly insufficient to justify or sustain the verdict, and, on the contrary, shows that said verdict should have been in favor of the petitioners" (In re Strock, 128 Cal. 658; 61 Pac. 282); and also a specification that the first finding of the court is not sustained by the evidence, and is contrary thereto, with a repetition in regard to the second and third findings (Eddelbuttel v. Durrell, 35 Cal. 277; Parker v. Reay, 76 Cal. 103; 18 Pac. 124); and also a specification that the court erred in finding as it did, and in not finding contrary thereto. Heilbron v. Centerville etc. Ditch Co., 76 Cal. 8; 17 Pac. 932; Smith v. Christian, 47 Cal. 18; Shepherd v. Jones, 71 Cal. 223; 16 Pac. 711. A general specification, that the evidence is insufficient to justify the decision, is not aided by proper and particular specifications contained in the plaintiff's brief. Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825. A specification as to the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain one point cannot be considered upon an objection to the verdict upon a ground inconsistent therewith; thus, an objection to a verdict against a sheriff for conversion, that it includes the value of certain property released by him, cannot be considered under the specification that the property had never been taken by him. Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127. Specifications may be either in the positive or negative form, although the latter is preferable, and criticism in this regard goes to form rather than to substance; thus, the positive form, "It clearly appears from the evidence," etc., is sufficient, although the negative form, "The evidence is insufficient," etc., is preferable. Drathman v. Cohen, 139 Cal. 310; 73 Pac. 181. A specification, that "the evidence was insufficient for the jury to find that the plaintiffs were only entitled to judgment for" a certain sum, without setting out what additional items of credit were claimed to be established by the evidence, is insufficient (Wise v. Wakefield, 118 Cal. 107; 50 Pac. 310); as is also a specification which stands alone as a mere statement of what the evidence shows (Spotts v. Hanley, 83 Cal. 155; 24 Pac. 738); and a specification that "there is no evidence to support the verdict," where several facts are involved in and affirmed by the verdict (Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194; 29 Pac. 31); and a specification that there was no evidence to sustain or justify certain findings (Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155; 24 Pac 738; Parker v. Reay, 76 Cal. 103; 18 Pac. 124); and a specification that the findings were unsupported by the evidence. Knott v. Peden, 84 Cal. 299; 24 Pac. 160. A specification, that there was no evidence introduced, tending to show that the plaintiff was injured by any act of the defendant, or that the plaintiff sustained any loss by reason of any act of the defendant, is sufficient (Clark v. Rauer, 2 Cal. App. 259; 83 Pac. 291); as is also a specification that there was no evidence to justify or to prove, or tending to prove, such particular finding, even where there is slight, but insufficient, evidence to support it (Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 530; 63 Pac. 850; 64 Pac. 253); and a specification pointing out particular findings objected to, and calling attention to the fact that none of them are supported by the evidence (Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115; 64 Pac. 113); and a specification directing attention, in various ways, to the single issue of fact in the case, and no evidence on this question was omitted (Pendola v. Ramm, 138 Cal. 517; 71 Pac. 624); and a specification that the decision is against law, in this, that the evidence shows that the plaintiff had been paid nothing on account of work done for and services rendered by him (Stuart v. Lord, 138 Cal. 672; 72 Pac. 142); and a specification pointing out the particular findings and parts of findings which it is claimed the evidence does not justify (Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 530; 63 Pac. 850; 64 Pac. 253); and a specification pointing to the particular finding objected to (Harris v. Duarte, 141 Cal. 497; 70 Cal. 298; 75 Pac. 58); and a statement on motion, that the evidence fails to show that the defendant was guilty of certain acts, being directly responsive to the findings of fact (Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294; 36 Pac. 672); and a specification pointing out with considerable detail the particular facts claimed to be not proved (Holmes v. Hoppe, 140 Cal. 212; 73 Pac. 1002); and a specification of the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain any one of a number of probative facts found by the court, or any particular finding contained therein (Bell v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 186; 74 Pac. 774); and a specification of the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain probative facts in regard to waiver or credit given by an agent (Blake v. National Life Ins.

Co., 123 Cal. 470; 56 Pac. 101); and a statement setting forth the views of counsel as to the result of the testimony, and a statement that the verdict of the jury on each special issue was error. Kumle v. Grand Lodge, 110 Cal. 204; 42 Pac. 634; Menk v. Home Ins. Co., 76 Cal. 50; 9 Am. St. Rep. 158; 14 Pac. 837; 18 Pac. 117; Baird v. Peall, 92 Cal. 235; 28 Pac. 285. A specification that the evidence is insufficient to justify the findings, without stating the particulars wherein the insufficiency lies, is insufficient. Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107; 57 Pac. 791; Kumle v. Grand Lodge, 110 Cal. 204; 42 Pac. 634. Where the statement on motion for a new trial states that substantially all the evidence given on the trial is embodied therein, an objection to the sufficiency of the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient to justify the decision will not be sustained. Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106; 101 Am. St. Rep. 84; 65 L. R. A. 419; 76 Pac. 976; American Type Founders Co. v. Packer, 130 Cal. 459; 62 Pac. 744; Estate of Motz, 136 Cal. 558; 69 Pac. 294. Laidlaw v. Pacific Bank, 137 Cal. 392; 70 Pac. 277; Drathman v. Cohen, 139 Cal. 310; 73 Pac. 181; Jones v. Goldtree, 142 Cal. 383; 77 Pac. 939. Where insufficient specifications are treated as sufficient, or are not objected to, the evidence may be reviewed on appeal. Knott v. Peden, 84 Cal. 299; 24 Pac. 160; Jones v. Goldtree, 142 Cal. 383; 77 Pac. 939. The appellate court will confine its examination of the evidence to the points raised by the specifications of the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict. Nishkian v. Chisholm, 2 Cal. App. 496; 84 Pac. 312.

Settlement of statement. Provisions for the settlement of statements must be liberally construed, with a view to promoting the rights of the parties, and in the interests of justice. Douglas v. Southern Pacific Co., 151 Cal. 242; 90 Pac. 538. Where the statement prepared by the defendant's counsel represents as correctly as possible the proceedings had on the trial of the cause, the court should settle the same accordingly. Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 47; 47 Pac. 869; 48 Pac. 121. It is the duty of the court to settle a proposed statement in all cases, where the attorneys are unable to agree to it as filed, no matter what reasons exist which render them unable to agree to it. Lucas v. Marysville, 44 Cal. 210. The settlement of the statement by the judge, by the adoption of the proposed amendments, without any express notice from the moving party that he adopted the amendments, is proper. Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481.

Redundant and useless matter should be stricken out and statement corrected. It is the duty of the judge, in settling a statement, to strike out all redundant and useless matter, notwithstanding the consent of the parties to such matter, or to an inaccurate statement. Arnold v. Producers' Fruit Co., 141 Cal. 738; 75 Pac. 326. Where the statement, as settled, does not truly state the case, the judge is authorized, and it is his duty, to make such corrections therein as will make it conform to the facts. Fountain Water Co. v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 648; 73 Pac. 590.

Court may allow statement to be amended. Where the statement has been settled by the judge and filed with the clerk, the court may, on motion of the moving party, vacate the settlement and allowance of the statement, and allow it to be re-engrossed, so as to include exhibits referred to therein, which had not been engrossed at length. Warner v. F. Thomas etc. Cleaning Works, 105 Cal. 409; 38 Pac. 960; Clark v. Rauer, 2 Cal. App. 259; 83 Pac. 291; Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439; Lucas v. Marysville, 44 Cal. 210.

Who must settle statement. The judge who tried the cause is the proper judge to settle the statement, and he can take all the necessary steps to have it properly settled. Matthews v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 638; 10 Pac. 128.

Refusal to settle statement. Refusal to settle a statement, made after judgment has been ordered, is not justified by the settlement of a premature statement, though such judgment was entered after the denial of the premature statement. Fountain Water Co. v. Dougherty, 134 Cal. 376; 66 Pac. 316. A party's remedy for error of the trial court in refusing to settle a statement is by proper proceedings to compel the settlement. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 66; 109 Pac. 884.

Delay in engrossing statement. Where the statement was a short one, and could have been engrossed in a few days, and no showing was made, explaining or excusing an unreasonable delay, further than a few orders extending the time to engross, but not stating on what ground they were required, an order dismissing the motion is not an abuse of discretion. Descalso v. Duane, 3 Cal. Unrep. 893; 33 Pac. 328.

Objection to statement as settled. A party who has notice of the time and place of the settlement of the statement, but who does not attend, cannot complain of the statement as settled. Vilhac v. Biven, 28 Cal. 410.

Signature and certificate of judge. The signature and the certificate of the judge are indispensable to the statement (Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417); and a statement, neither signed nor certified by the judge, will not be considered on appeal. Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872; Schreiber v. Whitney, 60 Cal. 431;

Martin v. Vanderhoff, 2 Cal. Unrep. 485; 7 Pac. 307; Douglass v. McFarland, 92 Cal. 656; 28 Pac. 687. A certificate, signed by the judge, that the "foregoing statement of the case on motion for a new trial is the statement settled and allowed by me therefor," is in accord with the statute (Girdner v. Beswick, 69 Cal. 112; 10 Pac. 278); and a certificate, that "The foregoing statement on motion for a new trial has been settled and allowed by me, and is correct," includes authenticated exhibits as part thereof, although the certificate is attached to the body of the statement and precedes the exhibits. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; 22 Pac. 26, 131; and see Kimball v. Semple, 31 Cal. 657; People v. Bartlett, 40 Cal. 142; Bush v. Taylor, 45 Cal. 112; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542. Where the signature and the certificate of the judge to the statement were made after the motion has been heard and determined, and an appeal taken from the order, the statement is a nullity. Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417.

Signature and authentication by attorneys. The fact that the statement is certified to be correct by the attorneys for both parties does not validate it. Schreiber v. Whitney, 60 Cal. 431. A paper, printed in the record, appearing to be a copy of certain specifications as to alleged insufficiency of the evidence, but no part of the statement, and without authentication, and signed by the appellant's attorney only, cannot be considered as part of the statement or record (O'Leary v. Castle, 133 Cal. 508; 65 Pac. 950); and a statement, signed only by the attorney for the respondent, is not a part of the record, nor has it any place in the transcript. Barclay v. Blackinton, 127 Cal. 189; 59 Pac. 834.

Filing of statement. The statement is not required to be filed until it has been signed by the judge, with his certificate that it is allowed, and it is not a part of the record until it is filed. Biagi v. Howes, 55 Cal. 469; 6 Pac. 100. A statement which has never been filed is no part of the record, and cannot be considered on appeal. Wells v. Kreyenhagen, 117 Cal. 329; 49 Pac. 128; Mills v. Dearborn, 82 Cal. 51; 22 Pac. 1114; Mix v. San Diego etc. R. Co., 86 Cal. 235; 24 Pac. 1027. Any statement agreed to by the parties, or duly settled and certified by the court, becomes a part of the record, when it is filed. Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650. A stipulation that a statement has been served in time, and was correct, and might be presented for settlement without further notice, does not estop opposing counsel from claiming that it was not filed. Mills v. Dearborn, 82 Cal. 51; 22 Pac. 1114. A stipulation that a statement on motion for a new trial shall be filed, which waives informalities respecting filing and service, does not justify the moving party in neglecting to file the statement for five months after the date of the stipulation. Potter v. Froment, 47 Cal. 165. Failure to file a statement of the case after notice of intention to move for a new trial, is a waiver of the right to move for a new trial. Cooney v. Furlong, 66 Cal. 520; 6 Pac. 388; Stoyell v. Cole, 19 Cal. 602; Campbell v. Jones, 41 Cal. 515; Thompson v. Lynch, 43 Cal. 482; O'Neil v. Dougherty, 47 Cal. 164. The motion for a new trial cannot be passed on by the court until the bill of exceptions or statement has been filed. Wells v. Kreyenhagen, 117 Cal. 329; 49 Pac. 128. A statement, not filed within the time allowed by law, will be disregarded on appeal, where the time was not extended either by stipulation or order, and no amendment was proposed. Wheeler v. Karnes, 125 Cal. 51; 57 Pac. 893. To file a paper is to place it in the official custody of the clerk, to be by him permanently kept among the papers in the cause, open to the inspection of those having a right to inspect the same; this, accompanied by payment of the proper fee, constitutes a sufficient filing of papers. McCann v. McCann, 20 Cal. App. 564; 129 Pac. 965.

Extension of time to file statement. The court may extend the time within which to file the statement. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; Jenkins v. Frink, 27 Cal. 337; Carrillo v. Smith, 37 Cal. 337. An order giving twenty days' time in which to file the statement must be construed as giving twenty days from the date of the order (Jenkins v. Frink, 27 Cal. 337); and an order extending the time is good only for the period prescribed by law. Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320. The order should be in writing, and entered in the court minutes, in open session, or signed by the judge and filed. Campbell v. Jones, 41 Cal. 515. An order extending the time, made after the time for filing the statement has expired, is void (Bear River etc. Mining Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354); and the time for filing is not extended, where the judge fails to have the order extending the time entered of record. Campbell v. Jones, 41 Cal. 515.

Motion on minutes of court, notice must specify what. Where the motion for a new trial is made on the minutes of the court, the notice of the motion must specify the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient, if such insufficiency is a ground of the motion, and must specify the particular errors of law upon which the moving party will rely. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 66; 109 Pac. 884. A motion made upon the minutes of the court must be denied, where it does not contain the specification of particulars required by the fourth subdivision of this section. National Bank v. Mulford, 17 Cal. App. 551; 120 Pac. 446. The particulars required by this section must be specified, or there can be no review, on appeal, of the sufficiency of the evidence and errors of law. Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 158 Cal. 71; 109 Pac. 884.

Jurisdiction of superior court. The superior court has no jurisdiction to reexamine an issue of fact tried by it, and change its decision thereon, unless all the parties to the issue and the former decision are properly before it. Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080; Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Nature of motion. The motion for a new trial is in the nature of a distinct proceeding, and is to be heard on an independent record, distinct from the record on which the judgment depends. Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Kaltschmidt v. Weber, 136 Cal. 675; 69 Pac. 497.

Abandonment of motion, effect of. The abandonment of a motion for a new trial, by one of the defendants, does not preclude another defendant from prosecuting his own motion therefor, or from appealing from the judgment therein. Johnson v. Reed, 125 Cal. 74; 57 Pac. 680.

Motion must state grounds. The motion for a new trial must state the particular grounds on which it is based; but this may be done by reference to the notice of intention. Williams v. Hawley, 144 Cal. 97; 77 Pac. 762; and see Holverstot v. Bugby, 13 Cal. 43; People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645; Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472; 22 Pac. 299.

What may be considered on motion. In passing on the motion, the court below cannot go beyond the grounds on which the new trial is asked; and where the new trial is asked upon the ground of the insufficiency of the pleading, the evidence introduced on the trial cannot be considered. Alpers v. Hunt, 86 Cal. 78; 21 Am. St. Rep. 17; 9 L. R. A. 483; 24 Pac. 846.

Refusal of new trial. There is no error in refusing to grant a new trial, where the statute governing new trials has not been complied with. Williams v. Gregory, 9 Cal. 76. Where the appellant, on motion, was granted relief from his failure to serve the statement in time, and the statement was duly settled and certified by the court, there is no presumption that the new trial was refused on the ground of delay in service. Baily v. Kreutzmann, 141 Cal. 519; 75 Pac. 104.

Notice of order denying new trial. Notice of the entry of an order denying a new trial is not required. Bell v. Staacke, 148 Cal. 404; 83 Pac. 245.

Setting aside order for new trial. An order for a new trial will be set aside, where the statutory requirements have not been complied with. Hill v. White, 2 Cal. 306.

Mandamus. On refusal to settle the statement, after a decision against a petition to revoke the probate of a will, the proper remedy is by mandamus to compel the settlement, and not by an appeal from an order denying a new trial. Hartmann v. Smith, 140 Cal. 461; 72 Pac. 7. Mandamus does not lie to compel the settlement of the statement on motion for a new trial, where the notice was given before a decision by the court. James v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 107; 20 Pac. 241.

Appeal. Notice of appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial need be served only on the parties who were adverse to the motion. Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080. The notice of intention constitutes no part of the record on appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial. Hook v. Hall, 68 Cal. 22; 8 Pac. 596. A statement on motion for a new trial, not signed or certified by the trial judge, cannot be considered on appeal. Sawyer v. Sargent, 65 Cal. 259; 3 Pac. 872. An appeal lies from an order refusing an application to settle the statement, where the party seeking the settlement has not fully complied with the statutory requirements, and appeals to the court for relief on the ground that his failure has been caused by surprise, accident, and excusable neglect, when relief rests in the discretion of the court. Murphy v. Stelling, 138 Cal. 641; 72 Pac. 176. Although the appellate court has power to dismiss an appeal for a failure to proceed with proper diligence to procure a settlement of the statement, yet the better practice is to require the respondent to avail himself of that objection in the lower court, when the proceeding for the settlement of the statement is pending. Curtin v. Engle, 155 Cal. 53; 99 Pac. 480. An irregularity complained of, not appearing in the record as one of the grounds of the motion, will not be considered on appeal (Wilcoxson v. Burton, 27 Cal. 228; 87 Am. Dec. 66); nor an objection that the decision is against law. Polk v. Boggs, 122 Cal. 114; 54 Pac. 536. The appellate court will confine its examination of evidence to the points embraced within the specifications. Nishkian v. Chisholm, 2 Cal. App. 496; 84 Pac. 312. Where a motion for a new trial is made upon a bill of exceptions or a statement, it is not necessary that the moving party shall appeal from the order denying him a new trial as a condition to his right to use the bill of exceptions or the statement upon appeal from the judgment; and there seems to be no distinction between these cases and one in which the motion has been made upon the minutes of the court. Vinson v. Los Angeles Pacific R. R. Co., 141 Cal. 151; 74 Pac. 757.

Terms defined and distinguished. The word "grounds," in the phrase in the introductory paragraph of this section, "designating the grounds upon which the motion will be made," are the "causes," in § 657, ante, for which a new trial may be granted. Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544; 52 Pac. 825. The only distinction between a "bill of exceptions" and a "statement of the case" is, that the latter, in addition to setting forth the exceptions, also sets forth the particular errors upon which the moving party relies. Pease v. Fink, 3 Cal. App. 371; 85 Pac. 657.

New trial after satisfaction of judgment. See notes 3 Ann. Cas. 19; 68 L. R. A. 126.

Right to new trial of party who has lost benefit of his exceptions from causes beyond his control. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 1056.

Right of adverse party on motion for new trial to introduce counter-affidavits. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1303.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Notice must be in writing. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 448.

2. Must be filed. Jenkins v. Frink, 27 Cal. 337.

3. Must be served. Bear River etc. Min. Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354. Acknowledgment of service. Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650.

4. Time. Ellsassar v. Hunter, 26 Cal. 279; Garwood v. Simpson, 8 Cal. 108; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 380; People v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113; Mahoney v. Caperton, 15 Cal. 313; Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 385; Casement v. Ringgold, 28 Cal. 337; Genella v. Relyea, 32 Cal. 159; Carpentier v. Thurston, 30 Cal. 123; Peck v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 207; Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416.

5. First notice cannot be abandoned. Le Roy v. Rassette, 32 Cal. 171.

6. Filing and serving notice does not stay proceedings. Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 385, Ortman v. Dixon, 9 Cal. 23; see also Lurvey v. Wells Fargo & Co., 4 Cal. 106.

§ 660. Motion, when to be heard. The motion for a new trial must be heard at the earliest practicable time after the filing of affidavits and counter-affidavits, in case the motion is made on affidavits, in other cases after the filing of the notice. On such hearing reference may be had in all cases to the pleadings and orders of the court on file, and when the motion is made on the minutes, reference may also be had to any depositions and documentary evidence offered at the trial and to the report of the proceedings on the trial taken by the phonographic reporter, or to any certified transcript of such report, or if there be no such report or certified transcript, to such proceedings occurring at the trial as are within the recollection of the judge; when the proceedings at the trial have been phonographically reported, but the reporter's notes have not been transcribed, the reporter must, upon request of the court, or either party, attend the hearing of the motion, and shall read his notes, or such parts thereof as the court, or either party, may require. The hearing and disposition of the motion for a new trial shall have precedence over all other matters except criminal cases, probate matters and cases actually on trial, and it shall be the duty of the court to determine the same at the earliest possible moment. The power of the court to pass on motion for new trial shall expire within three months after the verdict of the jury or service on the moving party of notice of the decision of the court. If such motion is not determined within said three months, the effect shall be a denial of the motion without further order of the court.

Chambers, motions for new trials may be heard at. Ante, § 166.

Legislation § 660. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "At the time specified in the notice, or at such other time as the court or judge may adjourn the hearing to, not exceeding ten days, the motion must be heard. If the moving party fail to appear at either time it must be dismissed, and the case will stand as though no motion had ever been noticed or made. If heard by the court or judge, it must be decided within ten days after the hearing."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 317, to read: "§ 660. The application for a new trial shall be heard at the earliest practicable period after notice of the motion, if the motion is to be heard upon the minutes of the court, and in other cases, after the affidavits, bill of exceptions, or statement, as the case may be, are filed, and may be brought to a hearing upon motion of either party. On such hearing reference may be had in all cases to the pleadings and orders of the court on file, and when the motion is made on the minutes, reference may also be had to any depositions, documentary evidence, and phonographic report of the testimony on file."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 149; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 718, in second sentence, substituting "and documentary evidence offered at the trial, and to the report of the proceedings on the trial taken by the phonographic reporter, or to any certified transcript of such report" for "documentary evidence, and phonographic report of the testimony on file"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment permits reference to be had to any certified transcript of the reporter's notes on the hearing of the motion, whether on file or not."

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 202, (1) recasting the first sentence; (2) in second sentence, adding new provisions at the end thereof, and also adding the three final sentences.

Time of hearing motion. A motion for a new trial may be brought on for hearing after notice, and after a full opportunity to the adverse party to meet the contentions of the moving party. Eades v. Trowbridge, 143 Cal. 25; 76 Pac. 714. Where the objection that a motion for a new trial was not heard within a reasonable time was first made on appeal, it will be presumed that the time was extended by consent of the parties. Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355; 59 Pac. 791; and see Boggs v. Clark, 37 Cal. 236; Patrick v. Morse, 64 Cal. 462; 2 Pac. 49; Horton v. Jack, 115 Cal. 29; 46 Pac. 920.

Bringing motion to hearing. Although a motion for a new trial may be brought to a hearing by either party, yet the opposing party may apply for a dismissal where, through inexcusable neglect, the motion has not been brought into condition for hearing, and an order denying and dismissing the motion for a new trial, though inconsistent, will not be reversed on that ground. Descalso v. Duane, 3 Cal. Unrep. 893; 33 Pac. 328; Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304; Calderwood v. Peyser, 42 Cal. 110; McDonald v. McConkey, 57 Cal. 325. A motion for a new trial may be dismissed on the ground that it has not been prosecuted with due diligence: the question as to whether there has been due diligence is one largely within the discretion of the trial court. Dorcy v. Brodis, 153 Cal. 673; 96 Pac. 278. A defendant, who has served proposed amendments to the plaintiff's statement, is not required to take any further proceedings towards its settlement. Lee Doon v. Tesh, 131 Cal. 406; 63 Pac. 764.

What may be used at hearing. The motion is in the nature of a distinct proceeding, and is to be heard upon an independent record, distinct from the record upon which the judgment depends; and reference may be had to the pleadings to ascertain the issues in the case, and determine the correctness of the rulings of the court as to the relevancy of the evidence; but whether the complaint is sufficient to support the judgment, or whether the court erred in overruling a demurrer to the complaint, can be considered only on an appeal from the judgment. Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 936; Byxbee v. Dewey, 128 Cal. 322; 60 Pac. 847; Lambert v. Marcuse, 137 Cal. 44; 69 Pac. 620; and see Onderdonk v. San Francisco, 75 Cal. 534; 17 Pac. 678; Wheeler v. Kassabaum, 76 Cal. 90; 18 Pac. 119; Evans v. Paige, 102 Cal. 132; 36 Pac. 406. The motion for a new trial, so far as it is based on a bill of exceptions, is based and must be heard and determined on the bill that has become the record of the court (Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 699; 93 Pac. 866); it can be heard only on the record made and settled before the motion was made. Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304. Where the motion is made on the ground of newly discovered evidence, affidavits not tending to prove any of the allegations of the complaint, but which are contradictory thereof, cannot be used. Bates v. Bates, 71 Cal. 307; 12 Pac. 223. The moving party may rely on the recollection of the judge as to the evidence and proceedings, though not reported, and can thereafter secure a statement of the case, including the evidence material to the motion, and mandamus lies to compel the settlement of such statement. Malcolmson v. Harris, 90 Cal. 262; 27 Pac. 206. The right to be heard involves the right to get the facts properly before the court, and the right to aid and assist the court by argument and authority on questions of law. Eades v. Trowbridge, 143 Cal. 25; 76 Pac. 714.

Stay of proceedings. A motion for a new trial does not stay proceedings; but the court, in its discretion, may, upon motion, grant a stay. Pierce v. Los Angeles, 159 Cal. 516; 114 Pac. 818.

Grounds stated at hearing. The grounds upon which a motion for a new trial may be resisted should be raised on the argument. Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304. The reasons for granting or refusing the motion need not be specified in the order. Estate of Martin, 113 Cal. 479; 45 Pac. 813.

Striking out notice or statement. A notice or statement on motion for a new trial should never be stricken out. Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304; Calderwood v. Peyser, 42 Cal. 110. A party is entitled to a ruling on his motion for a new trial (Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304); but the dismissal of the motion is a denial of it. Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48; 57 Pac. 684; Warden v. Mendocino County, 32 Cal. 655.

Power of court to impose terms. The trial court has power to impose terms and conditions in granting or denying the motion (Garoutte v. Haley, 104 Cal. 497; 38 Pac. 194; Brooks v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 173; 42 Pac. 570); and failure to perform the conditions converts the order into a denial of the motion. Garoutte v. Haley, 104 Cal. 497; 38 Pac. 194; Eaton v. Jones, 107 Cal. 487; 40 Pac. 798; Garoutte v. Williamson, 108 Cal. 135; 41 Pac. 35; 413; Brown v. Cline, 109 Cal. 156; 41 Pac. 862; Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521; 78 Pac. 11. A condition that the plaintiff pay a certain amount as costs cannot be complained of by the defendant (Anglo-Nevada Assurance Corp. v. Ross, 123 Cal. 520; 56 Pac. 335; Brooks v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 173; 42 Pac. 570); and the remission of a portion of the verdict may be imposed as a condition, if the verdict is for more than the evidence justifies. Etchas v. Oreña, 121 Cal. 270; 53 Pac. 798; Sherwood v. Kyle, 125 Cal. 652; 58 Pac. 270; Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439; Gregg v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 59 Cal. 312; Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 125 Cal. 141; 57 Pac. 774. Unwarranted conditions do not render the order void, where the motion is granted for any valid reason. Bledsoe v. Decrow, 132 Cal. 312; 64 Pac. 397.

Motion denied when. A motion for a new trial should be denied, where the notice or statement was not served in time. Quivey v. Gambert, 32 Cal. 304. A notice of motion for a new trial, specifying that it will be made upon the minutes of the court, cannot be considered, where it is not embodied in any statement or bill of exceptions, nor authenticated in any way. Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012.

Granting new trial as to some issues or some parties. A new trial may be granted as to part of the issues (San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 63; 3 L. R. A. 83; 20 Pac. 372; Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1; 35 Pac. 437; Flinn v. Mowry, 131 Cal. 481; 63 Pac. 724, 1006), and also as to issues raised by a cross-complaint, without granting one as to those raised by the complaint and answer. Jacob v. Carter, 4 Cal. Unrep. 543; 36 Pac. 381. In granting the motion as to certain particular issues only, the trial court should, by its order, recite with great certainty, and in terms, the issues on which the new trial is to be had. Mountain Tunnel etc. Mining Co. v. Bryan, 111 Cal. 36; 43 Pac. 410. Where the motion was made by all the parties defendant, though a portion of them disclaimed any interest, the granting of the motion being proper as to one, it is immaterial to the plaintiff whether it was granted to all or as to one. Boehmer v. Big Rock Irrigation Dist., 117 Cal. 19; 48 Pac. 908.

Effect of granting or denying. An order granting the motion vacates the judgment. Etchas v. Oreña, 121 Cal. 270; 53 Pac. 798. When the motion is granted as to all the parties, the whole judgment falls, as an incident to the vacation of the verdict or decision; and when the motion is granted as to some of the parties, the findings which determine their rights are set aside, and as to them the case stands as if it had never been tried; but the judgment and findings, so far as they determine the rights of the moving party, and of those as to whom the new trial has been denied, continue to exist, and the judgment is appealable. Wittenbrock v. Bellmer, 62 Cal. 558. After the motion has been denied, the moving party is not at liberty to make a second motion therefor, either on any grounds on which the court has once denied it, or on any grounds which might have been presented in the first instance. Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15; 27 Pac. 22. An order, not appealed from, denying a previous motion to dismiss proceedings for a new trial, on the ground of delay in presenting it, is not res adjudicata upon a renewed motion, made long after the order denying the former motion, unless the order made thereon was made upon the same facts which existed when the previous motion was made; and the burden is then on the plaintiff to show that the facts were the same. Lee Doon v. Tesh, 131 Cal. 406; 63 Pac. 764. The recitals in the order denying the motion, though contradictory to the findings in the case, do not operate to change the findings: they can be set aside only by granting a new trial. Hawxhurst v. Rathgeb, 119 Cal. 531; 63 Am. St. Rep. 142; 51 Pac. 846.

Amendment of order. An order amending the order granting a new trial supersedes the original order, and becomes the only order of the court on the motion. Garoutte v. Haley, 104 Cal. 497; 38 Pac. 194. Where the payment of costs, imposed as a condition for granting the motion, was not made within the time specified in the order, the court has no power to make a further order granting the motion without such payment. Brown v. Cline, 109 Cal. 156; 41 Pac. 862. The court cannot vacate the order after it has been regularly made and entered. Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521; 78 Pac. 11.

Legislation § 661. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 318.
3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 150; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
4. Repealed by Stats. 1915, p. 202.

Construction of sections. Where the party aggrieved desires to rely on the insufficiency of the evidence, or on errors not appearing on the judgment roll, he must either secure a bill of exceptions under § 649 or § 650, ante, or take the proper steps to complete a motion for a new trial under § 659, ante. Jue Fook Sam v. Lord, 83 Cal. 159; 23 Pac. 225. A judgment of dismissal, without findings of fact, and without an opportunity to the appellant to prepare a record, is not "an exception to the decision and verdict," within § 939, post. Rickey Land etc. Co. v. Glader, 153 Cal. 179; 94 Pac. 768. Where it appears on the face of the record that the statute was not followed in making it up, that fact may be urged, both in the lower court and on appeal, as a reason why the motion for a new trial should be denied. Henry v. Merguire, 106 Cal. 142; 39 Pac. 599.

Purpose of section. The obvious purpose of this section was to provide that any statement or bill of exceptions regularly settled in any proceeding in which such statement or bill might be lawfully settled could be used on an appeal from a judgment, although it was not originally intended for that purpose. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122; Vinson v. Los Angeles Pacific R. R. Co., 141 Cal. 151; 74 Pac. 757; 7 Cal. Unrep. 142; 72 Pac. 840.

Necessity for judgment roll. The judgment roll must appear in and constitute a part of the record in all cases on appeal. Thomas v. Anderson, 55 Cal. 43. On appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, the judgment roll must be in the transcript. Kimple v. Conway, 69 Cal. 71; 10 Pac. 189.

What constitutes judgment roll. There is no judgment roll, strictly speaking, in proceedings in probate; but whenever such proceedings are so akin to a civil action as to necessitate the papers declared by § 670, post, to constitute the judgment roll in a civil action, they may be held to constitute the judgment roll referred to by this section. Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082. A motion to strike out parts of an answer, and an order denying the same, not embodied in any statement or bill of exceptions, cannot be considered on appeal: they do not constitute any part of the judgment roll (Sutton v. Stephan, 101 Cal. 545; 36 Pac. 106); nor do the notice, affidavit, and motion on which an order striking out a demurrer was made, in the absence of a bill of exceptions, constitute part of the judgment roll (Orange Growers' Bank v. Duncan, 133 Cal. 254; 65 Pac. 469; Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238; Catanich v. Hayes, 52 Cal. 338); nor do notices, not embraced in the statement or bill of exceptions. Girdner v. Beswick, 69 Cal. 112; 10 Pac. 278.

Affidavits must be authenticated. On appeal from an order heard upon affidavits, the only proper method of authenticating the affidavits is by bill of exceptions. Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472; 22 Pac. 299; Somers v. Somers, 81 Cal. 608; 22 Pac. 967. Affidavits and other documentary matter, used on a motion to set aside a default not embodied in the bill of exceptions, nor identified with or made a part of the record, cannot be considered on appeal. La Fetra v. Gleason, 101 Cal. 246; 35 Pac. 765. An affidavit, not included in the bill of exceptions, and certified merely by the clerk, cannot be considered on appeal. People v. Gay, 141 Cal. 41; 74 Pac. 443. Affidavits and other papers used on the hearing of a motion must be authenticated by including the same in a bill of exceptions, except where another mode of authentication is provided by law. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13. Affidavits or other evidence, taken on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, should be incorporated in a bill of exceptions; otherwise there can be no review on appeal. Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524. An affidavit, certified by the clerk as having been used on a motion to vacate a judgment, forms no part of the record on appeal, where it is not contained in any bill of exceptions (People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11; 76 Pac. 646); nor an affidavit showing surprise, by reason of which certain testimony was not introduced at the trial, which was not contained in any bill of exceptions, nor authenticated as having been used at the hearing of the motion for a new trial, except by the certificate of the clerk (Cohen v. Alameda, 124 Cal. 504; 57 Pac. 377); nor an affidavit of alleged misconduct of the jury, not incorporated in the bill of exceptions (Cahill v. Baird, 138 Cal. 691; 72 Pac. 342); nor an affidavit used on a motion for a new trial, not authenticated by being incorporated in the bill of exceptions, and thus not a part of the record (Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278; 77 Pac. 904; and see Von Glahn v. Brennan, 81 Cal. 261; 22 Pac. 596; Spreckels v. Spreckels, 114 Cal. 60; 45 Pac. 1022; Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234; 52 Pac. 491; Esert v. Glock, 137 Cal. 533; 70 Pac. 479; Cahill v. Baird, 138 Cal. 691; 72 Pac. 342); nor affidavits embodied in the record, and marked as filed by the clerk, but not contained in nor forming part of the bill of exceptions and statement certified by the judge, nor identified by him as having been used on the motion. Fish v. Benson, 71 Cal. 428; 12 Pac. 454; Whipple v. Hopkins, 119 Cal. 349; 51 Pac. 535. Where the appellant did not propose any bill of exceptions, and the respondent, having no occasion or right to propose a bill, the decision on the motion having been in his favor, the appellant cannot be aided by these facts to have such affidavits considered, where they were not incorporated in the bill of exceptions. Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278; 77 Pac. 904. A certificate of the judge, authenticating certain affidavits as having been used upon the hearing of the motion, without showing that these were all the papers used at the hearing, is insufficient. Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234; 52 Pac. 491; Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac.

524; Shain v. Eikerenkotter, 88 Cal. 13; 25 Pac. 966.

Presumption as to affidavits. Where the grounds of the motion, and what was based thereon, do not appear in the record, it will be conclusively presumed, in favor of the order, that the motion was in part based on some ground on which the affidavits could be used, and that such affidavits were in fact used, and were sufficient to justify the order. Wyckoff v. Pajaro Valley etc. R. R. Co., 146 Cal. 681; 81 Pac. 17; Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278; 77 Pac. 904.

Bill of exceptions necessary when. The allowance of costs, being within the discretion of the court in a suit in equity, cannot be reviewed without a statement or bill of exceptions (Faulkner v. Hendy, 103 Cal. 15; 36 Pac. 1021); nor can the question of costs be considered, where there is no bill of exceptions showing any ruling thereon. People v. Marin County, 103 Cal. 223; 26 L. R. A. 659; 37 Pac. 203. An appeal from an order refusing to settle a bill of exceptions, assuming such order to be appealable, must be disregarded, in the absence of a bill of exceptions. Williamson v. Joyce, 137 Cal. 151; 69 Pac. 980. Error in allowing a cross-complaint to be filed cannot be considered, where there is no bill of exceptions saving and presenting that point. Bell v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 144 Cal. 560; 77 Pac. 1124. Error in denying a motion for a new trial, without hearing or considering the grounds presented and urged in support thereof, should be excepted to at the time, and the facts embodied and settled in a bill of exceptions. Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 47; 53 Pac. 405. Error in making a second order for judgment, without setting aside or modifying the first, cannot be considered on appeal from the judgment, on the judgment roll alone, but should be presented on a bill of exceptions. Rooney v. Gray, 145 Cal. 753; 79 Pac. 523; and see Paige v. Roeding, 96 Cal. 388; 31 Pac. 264; Von Schmidt v. Von Schmidt, 104 Cal. 547; 38 Pac. 361. Error in rejecting ballots, because not marked as required by law, cannot be considered on appeal, unless the original ballots, or facsimile copies thereof, authenticated and identified, and properly referred to in the bill of exceptions, accompany the record. Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661; 38 Pac. 447. Errors of law, committed at the trial, will not be considered on appeal, in the absence of a bill of exceptions. Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524; Williams v. Savings and Loan Society, 133 Cal. 360; 65 Pac. 822; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542. Failure to find on an issue is not ground for reversing a judgment otherwise correct, unless it appears by the statement or bill of exceptions that evidence was given on such issue. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828; Himmelman v. Henry, 84 Cal. 104; 23 Pac. 1098. Findings of fact must be taken as absolutely true, where there is no bill of exceptions showing the evidence, and it will be presumed that the evidence necessary to sustain the findings was presented to the court below. Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 326; Williams v. Savings and Loan Society, 133 Cal. 360; 65 Pac. 822; Alexander v. Welcker, 141 Cal. 302; 74 Pac. 845; Estate of Brown, 143 Cal. 450; 77 Pac. 160; Castagnetto v. Coppertown Mining etc. Co., 146 Cal. 329; 80 Pac. 74; Mahoney v. American Land etc. Co., 2 Cal. App. 185; 83 Pac. 267; Estate of Smith, 4 Cal. Unrep. 919; 38 Pac. 950. Further instructions, constituting error at law occurring at the trial, should have been excepted to, and embodied in the bill of exceptions provided for in § 650, ante: they cannot be embodied in an affidavit, or in another bill of exceptions, after the motion for a new trial is denied. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627. An order sustaining a motion to set aside a judgment cannot be considered on appeal, where there is no bill of exceptions; for, whether the party excepted to the decision of the court in person at the time the decision was made, or is deemed in law to have excepted, he must, within the statutory or a reasonable time after his exception, avail himself of the right to reduce the same to writing, and take the steps required by law to have the bill of exceptions settled and signed by the judge. Nash v. Harris, 57 Cal. 242. Where there is no notice of intention to move for a new trial, that fact must be affirmatively shown, and must be included in a proper statement or bill of exceptions. Kahn v. Wilson, 120 Cal. 643; 53 Pac. 24. Papers used and evidence taken at the hearing of a motion to set aside service of summons by publication, must be authenticated by incorporating them in the bill of exceptions. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299.

Contents of bill of exceptions. A bill of exceptions cannot contain an order made after the bill was settled and authenticated. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122. On appeal from an order denying a motion to vacate a judgment, it devolves upon the appellant to have settled a bill of exceptions showing the evidence taken upon the hearing of such motion. Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13. Under § 952, post, the appellant, on an appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial, must furnish the court with a copy of the notice of appeal, of the order appealed from, and of the papers designated in § 661; and these copies, by the provision of § 953, post, must be certified to be correct by the clerk or the attorneys: there is no occasion for incorporating, in a bill of exceptions, the papers constituting the judgment roll or the order denying the motion for a new trial. Estate of Kilborn, 162 Cal. 4; 120 Pac. 762. Where the notice of motion states that it was to be made on the minutes of the court, but it contains no specification of the insufficiency of the evidence, the motion must be denied, and it is not necessary to insert any evidence in the bill of exceptions settled after the order granting the motion. Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 32; 15 Pac. 364.

Amendment of bill of exceptions. The bill of exceptions cannot be amended by way of diminution of the record, since a record authenticated by the trial court cannot be changed on appeal. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 21; 82 Pac. 1122; and see Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 460; Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107; Satterlee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489; Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280; Estate of Lamb, 95 Cal. 397; 30 Pac. 568.

Necessity for statement on appeal. An order granting a motion for a new trial, made on the minutes of the court, cannot be considered on appeal, where no statement was subsequently prepared (Oakland Gaslight Co. v. Dameron, 57 Cal. 292); nor can an order denying and dismissing the motion be considered. Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48; 57 Pac. 684. Where no errors and particulars are specified in the notice of intention to move for a new trial on the minutes of the court, no subsequent statement of the case is required or authorized. Buckley v. Althorf, 86 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 134.

Statement sufficient when. A statement, prepared, settled, authenticated by the judge, and filed in due time, will be presumed to have been used on the hearing of the motion, and hence is sufficient. Williams v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Cal. Unrep. 613; 9 Pac. 152. A statement, which has never been settled, cannot be used on the hearing of a motion for a new trial. Mitchell v. Croake, 20 Cal. App. 643; 129 Pac. 946. The better practice is to incorporate in the settled statement a showing, in terms, that application for relief from default was made, and that the court granted the same; but it is enough if this substantially appears. King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258; 88 Pac. 925.

Contents and settlement of statement on appeal. The statement, whether made on motion for a new trial, or after motion made on the minutes of the court, need not embody the notice of the motion or its contents; and the presumption on appeal in either case is, that the notice was duly given, and that the specifications in the statement conform to those in the notice; and the requirement of this section, that the statement shall contain only the grounds argued before the court for a new trial, refers to specifications of the grounds mentioned in the fourth subdivision of § 659, ante, or such of them as are in fact argued; and when the specifications are set out in the statement, it will be presumed that they were contained in the notice, and were in fact argued. Schneider v. Market Street Ry. Co., 134 Cal. 482; 66 Pac. 734. In stating the specifications of errors and objections in the statement to be made after the hearing of the motion, the better practice is to make a formal statement of the causes relied on and argued at the hearing, and not merely to insert a copy of the notice of the motion containing such statement, as it is only the formal objection stated in the notice and argued at the hearing of the motion that is entitled to be included in the statement. Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012. Where the statement, made after the motion was decided, contains no copy of the notice of the motion or its specifications, and no copy of the motion itself, and no specification of errors, it is insufficient, and the order denying the motion will not be reviewed on appeal. Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419; and see Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3; 79 Pac. 572. A specification of the errors and objections in the statement to be made after the hearing on the motion, is not obviated by the fact that the notice is required to state the particular errors and objections relied upon. Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012. Where the motion is based on the minutes of the court, and the moving party relies on the recollection of the judge as to the evidence and proceedings, he can thereafter secure a statement of the case, including the evidence material to the motion, for the purposes of an appeal from the order made on the motion, and mandamus lies to compel the settlement of such statement. Malcolmson v. Harris, 90 Cal. 262; 27 Pac. 206. Where a document, purporting to be a statement made subsequently to the motion, though signed by the attorneys and filed with the clerk, does not appear to have been settled or authenticated by the judge, and does not contain any specifications of error, or purport to show what grounds were argued before the court on the motion, the order denying the new trial is not a subject of review. Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3; 79 Pac. 527. A statement in the transcript, purporting to be minutes of the court, showing that the motion for a new trial was granted on the ground stated in the notice, authenticated only by the clerk's certificate, cannot be considered on appeal. Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419; Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3; 79 Pac. 527. A bill of exceptions in the record, in which the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings is specified, may be treated as a statement of the case. Dennis v. Gordon, 163 Cal. 427; 125 Pac. 1063.

Time to prepare statement. The service of notice of the making of an order denying a new trial is not necessary; hence, the time in which to prepare the statement begins to run from the making of the order. Vinson v. Los Angeles Pacific R. R. Co., 147 Cal. 479; 82 Pac. 53.

Service of statement. The statute does not, in terms, require an order extending the time within which to propose and serve a statement of the case to be filed, but the better practice is to file it. Dennis v. Crocker-Huffman Land etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 58; 91 Pac. 425. Where a statement, made subsequently to the order denying the motion, is not served until after the expiration of the last extension of time, there is no statement which the court can be called upon to settle, or which can be used on appeal. Buckley v. Althorf, 86 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 134. The court may settle the statement after the statutory period has expired, where the failure to file an order extending time for the proposal and service of the statement was due to the inadvertence of the judge. Dennis v. Crocker-Huffman Land etc. Co., 6 Cal. App. 58; 91 Pac. 425.

Latter of two judgments is final. Where two judgments have been entered in a cause, and the record is silent as to the reason therefor, the latter in point of time must be deemed the true and final judgment. Galvin v. Palmer, 134 Cal. 426; 66 Pac. 572.

Appeal from judgment. An appeal from the judgment, and from an order denying a new trial, where the record shows that the bill of exceptions used on the motion was not prepared and served in time, and shows no relief from the default, the bill cannot be considered on either appeal. Johnson v. German American Ins. Co., 150 Cal. 336; 88 Pac. 985. Where the appeal is from the judgment, on the judgment roll, without any bill of exceptions, the appellant necessarily admits that there are no errors in the admission or rejection of evidence, and that the evidence sustains the findings. Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 326; and see Poledori v. Newman, 116 Cal. 375; 48 Pac. 325. A bill of exceptions, settled to be used on motion for a new trial, is "used" on the motion, within the meaning of the law as to the "use" thereof on appeal from the judgment. Boin v. Spreckels Sugar Co., 155 Cal. 612; 102 Pac. 937.

Order authenticated how. The authentication of an order dissolving an attachment should be by a bill of exceptions. Smith v. Jordan, 122 Cal. 68; 54 Pac. 368. A certificate reciting that a true and correct copy of the order refusing a new trial is contained in the transcript, to which it is attached, is sufficient as an authentication. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122.

Record on appeal. A record on appeal from an order refusing a new trial, containing the judgment roll, the bill of exceptions, and a copy of the order, is sufficient. Mendocino County v. Peters, 2 Cal. App. 24; 82 Pac. 1122. When a motion for a new trial is made upon the ground of newly discovered evidence, the affidavits used on the hearing, with a copy of the order made, constitute the record to be used on appeal from the order granting or refusing a new trial. Schroeder v. Mauzy, 16 Cal. App. 443; 118 Pac. 459. An affidavit, not shown to have been used on the motion, cannot be considered a part of the record on appeal (Broads v. Mead, 159 Cal. 765; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1125; 116 Pac. 46); nor an unauthenticated affidavit (Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487; 87 Pac. 13); nor an affidavit made subsequently to the denial of the motion (Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 47; 53 Pac. 405); nor an affidavit used on the hearing of the motion, merely certified by the clerk (Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234; 52 Pac. 491); nor an unauthenticated paper in the transcript, in which there is no bill of exceptions (Nash v. Harris, 57 Cal. 242); nor the opinion of the trial judge in making an order granting a new trial, though printed in the transcript. Bouchard v. Abrahamsen, 4 Cal. App. 430; 88 Pac. 383. A bill of exceptions, settled after an order granting or refusing a new trial, except where the order was made on the minutes of the court, or was made of the court's own motion, is no part of the record on appeal. Frost v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 165 Cal. 365; 132 Pac. 442. A notice of motion for relief from the effect of failing to serve a proposed statement on motion for a new trial in time, and a minute-order granting said motion, printed in the transcript, but not embodied in the statement or bill of exceptions, is no part of the record on appeal. King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258; 88 Pac. 925.

Record on appeal from motion on minutes. Where an appeal is taken from an order granting or refusing a new trial, on the minutes of the court, a statement, prepared subsequently to such ruling, with the judgment roll and a copy of the order, constitute the papers on which the appeal is to be heard; and a transcript of these papers is furnished to the appellate court, only in case of appeal from such orders. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. Where the record on appeal from an order denying a new trial shows that the statement, which contains no copy of the notice of intention, was settled and filed subsequently to the date on which the order was made, it must be inferred that the motion was made on the minutes of the court. Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 150 Cal. 764; 89 Pac. 1090.

Notice of intention to move for new trial no part of record. A notice of intention to move for a new trial is no part of the record on appeal (Hook v. Hall, 68 Cal. 22; 8 Pac. 596; Dominguez v. Mascotti, 74 Cal. 269; 15 Pac. 773; Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706; Richardson v. Eureka, 92 Cal. 64; 28 Pac. 102; Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 572; 63 Pac. 918; Williams v. Hawley, 144 Cal. 97; 77 Pac. 762; Power v. Fairbanks, 146 Cal. 611; 80 Pac. 1075); and a notice of intention, not embodied in the statement or bill of exceptions, and not certified in any way, cannot be considered on appeal: it is no part of the record on appeal (Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69; 45 Pac. 1012; Williams v. Hawley, 144 Cal. 97; 77 Pac. 762; Hook v. Hall, 68 Cal. 22; 8 Pac. 596; Girdner v. Beswick, 69 Cal. 112; 10 Pac. 278; Dominguez v. Mascotti, 74 Cal. 269; 15 Pac. 773; Dennis v. Gordon, 163 Cal. 427; 125 Pac. 1063; Carver v. San Joaquin Cigar Co., 16 Cal. App. 761; 118 Pac. 92); nor is a notice of intention, improperly inserted in the record after the statement, a part of the record. Nye v. Marysville etc. Street Ry. Co., 97 Cal. 461; 32 Pac. 530. The notice of intention need not be incorporated in the statement or bill of exceptions (Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627; Reclamation District v. Thisby, 131 Cal. 52; 63 Pac. 918), unless the opposite party insists that it is insufficient (Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 84; 38 Pac. 627); but it is essential for the purpose of reviewing the action of the trial court on motion for a new trial, that it should appear by the record that the ground for a new trial presented on appeal was presented by the motion in the lower court. Great Western Gold Co. v. Chambers, 153 Cal. 307; 95 Pac. 151. A notice of intention, not authenticated, and based on the minutes of the court, the record, and the evidence, without any statement or specifications of error in the minutes, cannot be considered on appeal. Sprigg v. Barber, 122 Cal. 573; 55 Pac. 419.

Changing record. While an order denying a new trial is in force, the record upon which it is based cannot be changed. Merced Bank v. Price, 152 Cal. 697; 93 Pac. 866.

Scope of inquiry on appeal. The scope of inquiry, on appeal from an order denying a new trial, is limited to the order appealed from, the judgment roll, and the affidavits or bill of exceptions or statement used on the hearing (Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418); and if a question is presented by specifications of errors of law and of insufficiency of the evidence, and is properly saved in the statement or bill of exceptions, the appellate court will presume that it was properly presented to the court, and passed upon in its ruling. Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706; Richardson v. Eureka, 92 Cal. 64; 28 Pac. 102. An order denying a motion for a nonsuit, findings alleged as not supported by the evidence, and alleged errors of law occurring at the trial, can be reviewed only on a properly authenticated statement or bill of exceptions. Wheeler v. Karnes, 125 Cal. 51; 57 Pac. 893. Where the notice of intention stated that the motion would be made on a bill of exceptions, but none was presented to the trial court or to the court on appeal, neither court can review the case as to alleged errors of law or as to the insufficiency of the evidence. Pereira v. City Savings Bank, 128 Cal. 45; 60 Pac. 524; Larkin v. Larkin, 76 Cal. 323; 18 Pac. 396. The appellate court is not restricted to an examination of the grounds upon which an order granting a new trial is based, but will examine the record to ascertain any other grounds (Thompson v. California Construction Co., 148 Cal. 35; 82 Pac. 367; Houghton v. Market Street Ry. Co., 1 Cal. App. 567; 82 Pac. 972; Weisser v. Southern Pacific Co., 148 Cal. 426; 83 Pac. 439; Martin v. Markarian, 1 Cal. App. 687; 82 Pac. 1072), except as to the insufficiency of the evidence, where it is conflicting (Thompson v. California Construction Co., 148 Cal. 35; 82 Pac. 367); and where the motion is made on several grounds, and the record does not disclose for which one, the order will not be reversed, if it could have been granted on any one of the grounds (Tibbetts v. Bower, 121 Cal. 7; 53 Pac. 359); and the limitation of the order to one ground precludes the defendant from contending that it may have been granted on another ground (McGinty v. Morgan, 122 Cal. 103; 54 Pac. 392); and where the motion was granted on a specified ground, the insufficiency of the evidence, though specified in the motion, will not be considered on appeal (Siemsen v. Oakland etc. Electric Ry., 134 Cal. 494; 66 Pac. 672; Kauffmann v. Maier, 94 Cal. 269; 18 L. R. A. 124; 29 Pac. 481); and only those matters considered by the court on the hearing of the motion can be considered. Marsteller v. Leavitt, 130 Cal. 149; 62 Pac. 384; Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 150 Cal. 764; 89 Pac. 1090. An order, properly granting the motion on any one of the grounds assigned, will not be disturbed on appeal. Mock v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 139 Cal. 616; 73 Pac. 455; Swett v. Gray, 141 Cal. 63; 74 Pac. 439; Baldwin v. Napa etc. Wine Co., 1 Cal. App. 215; 81 Pac. 1037. The reasons given by the court for granting the motion are immaterial, since they may be bad, and yet the decision correct for other reasons. Power v. Fairbanks, 146 Cal. 611; 80 Pac. 1075; Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278; 77 Pac. 904. Where there is no bill of exceptions or statement in the record, and where findings are waived by failure of the defendant to appear at the trial, the appeal must be determined upon the judgment roll alone. Johnston v. Callahan, 146 Cal. 212; 79 Pac. 870. Where the motion was submitted on the minutes of the court, no matters, other than those appearing on the judgment roll, by bill of exceptions or statement of the case subsequently prepared, can be considered on appeal (Buckley v. Althorf, 86 Cal. 643; 25 Pac. 134); and the only specifications of insufficiency of the evidence that can be considered are those embodied in the statement or bill of exceptions, which are presumably the only ones urged. Roberts v. Hall, 147 Cal. 434; 82 Pac. 66.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Articles I and II of this chapter are a substitute for the provisions of our old Practice Act relating to exceptions and motions for new trials. For all the statements and counter-statements and complicated machinery, there is substituted a simple practice by bills of exception. Under the old system, nearly one third of the time of sessions of the supreme court were devoted to hearing arguments addressed, not to the merits of the case, but as to whether the merits were before the court. We now have in our reports more decisions on points of practice, relative to that question, than can be found in the reports of the supreme court of the United States from its organization. By allowing an exception to be taken to the verdict or decision, we avoid, in eight cases out of ten, a resort to a motion for a new trial, and allow the question of sufficiency of the evidence to come directly to the supreme court as a question of law, as in criminal cases, thus leaving the motion for new trial, in most cases, but one office to perform: that of giving the court below an opportunity to review its own decision. If the new trial is moved for, then the papers used at the hearing are, by the judge, turned into a bill of exception, and constitute the only record on appeal from a decision granting or refusing the motion. The judge must decide every cause submitted to him within twenty days after its submission. Notice of filing of findings is dispensed with, but the party knows that they must be filed within twenty days, and the only diligence he is put to is to inquire at the end of that time, for if the findings are filed the next day after the cause was submitted, he will still have left eleven days of his thirty in which to move for a new trial.

Legislation § 662. 1. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 319.

2. Repealed by Stats. 1915, p. 202.

New trial, where jury disregard instructions or evidence. This section is a limitation upon the power of the court to grant a new trial, of its own motion, in cases where there has been: 1. Such a plain disregard, by the jury, of the evidence, as to satisfy the court that the verdict was rendered under a misapprehension, or under the influence of passion or prejudice; or 2. That there was such a plain disregard of the instructions as to satisfy the court that the verdict was so rendered. Townley v. Adams, 118 Cal. 382; 50 Pac. 550. A court may, of its own motion, vacate a verdict, where there has been a plain and palpable disregard of either the instructions or the evidence. Occidental Real Estate Co. v. Gantner, 7 Cal. App. 727; 95 Pac. 1042. A plain disregard of the evidence must be made to appear, in order to justify the court in setting aside a verdict of its own motion; and the rule applies only where the jury plainly, palpably, and grossly disregard the instructions or evidence. Eades v. Trowbridge, 143 Cal. 25; 76 Pac. 714; Townley v. Adams, 118 Cal. 382; 50 Pac. 550; Mizener v. Bradbury, 128 Cal. 340; 60 Pac. 928. A verdict, not supported by the evidence, and contrary to the instructions, is properly set aside. Hynes v. Nelson, 5 Cal. Unrep. 741; 2 Pac. 36. An order setting aside a verdict, on the ground that it is not justified by the evidence, and that it is against the law and the evidence, made by the court, of its own motion, is unauthorized and void. Townley v. Adams, 118 Cal. 382; 50 Pac. 550. In an action of unlawful detainer, the court may, of its own motion, set aside a verdict for the defendant, where ten months' rent was unpaid, and the plaintiff was clearly entitled to a verdict for the possession of the premises and for the whole rent due. Occidental Real Estate Co. v. Gantner, 7 Cal. App. 727; 95 Pac. 1042.

Judgment for costs. A judgment may be vacated, under this section, and judgment entered against the real party in interest for costs. Townsend v. Parker, 21 Cal. App. 317; 131 Pac. 766.

Grounds for action of court. Where the order setting aside a verdict was made on a formal written application, and the opinion of the court shows the grounds on which it acted, it will not be presumed that the court acted on other and different grounds. Estate of Cahill, 74 Cal. 52; 15 Pac. 364.

Res adjudicata. The denial of a motion, made under this section, is not res adjudicata as to a motion for a new trial under § 657, ante. Anglo-Nevada Assurance Corp. v. Ross, 123 Cal. 520; 56 Pac. 335.

Appeal. An order of the court, setting aside a verdict, of its own motion, is the equivalent of an order granting a new trial, and, being a matter within the legal discretion of the court, will not be interfered with on appeal, except for an abuse of discretion. Hynes v. Nelson, 5 Cal. Unrep. 741; 2 Pac. 36. An appeal on the ground that trial courts have no authority to set aside a verdict for prejudice of the jury, is frivolous. Foote v. Hayes, 4 Cal.

Unrep. 976; 39 Pac. 601. The recitals, in a settled statement on appeal, of the rendering of the verdict, and of the vacating of the judgment by the court on its own motion, are conclusive of such facts. Occidental Real Estate Co. v. Gantner, 7 Cal. App. 727; 95 Pac. 1042.

New trial must be by jury. Where the findings are directly contrary to the verdict, there is, in effect, a setting aside and vacating of the verdict; and it is the duty of the court to order a new trial by jury: it has no power to proceed to determine the cause without a jury. Montgomery v. Sayre, 91 Cal. 206; 27 Pac. 648.

Record on appeal from order granting or refusing new trial. See note ante, § 661.

Power of court to grant new trial of its own motion. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 65.

Power of court to open or vacate order determining motion for new trial. See note Ann. Cas. 1913B, 485.

Inadequacy of damages as ground for setting aside verdict. See note 47 L. R. A. 33.

Right of court to grant new trial on its own motion or on grounds other than those urged by the moving party. See note 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 291.

§ 663. Vacation of judgment. A judgment or decree of a superior court, when based upon findings of fact made by the court, or the special verdict of a jury, may, upon motion of the party aggrieved, be set aside and vacated by the same court, and another and different judgment entered, for either of the following causes, materially affecting the substantial rights of such party and entitling him to a different judgment:

1. Incorrect or erroneous conclusions of law not consistent with or not supported by the findings of fact; and in such case when the judgment is set aside, the conclusions of law shall be amended and corrected.

2. A judgment or decree not consistent with or not supported by the special verdict.

Legislation § 663. Added by Stats. 1897, p. 58.

The original § 663, which provided when motions for new trial might be brought to hearing, was added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 319; was amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 100; and was repealed by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 64.

Construction of section. This section authorizes, simply, the substitution of the judgment that should have been given as a matter of law upon the findings of fact in a case where the judgment already given is an incorrect conclusion from such findings. Dahlberg v. Girsch, 157 Cal. 324; 107 Pac. 616.

Procedure. There is nothing in this section, or in § 663a, post, that indicates that service of notice of intention to move for a new trial, and of the other steps in the preparation of a bill of exceptions, have been dispensed with; in this respect, there is no change in the law. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Judgment or conclusions inconsistent with findings. The superior court has jurisdiction, on motion, to vacate a judgment as entered, which is inconsistent with and not supported by the findings of fact, and to enter a proper judgment (Ballerino v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 759; 84 Pac. 225; Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 67 Cal. 1; 6 Pac. 867; Colton Land etc. Co. v. Schwartz, 99 Cal. 278; 33 Pac. 878; Galvin v. Palmer, 134 Cal. 426; 66 Pac. 572); and also to vacate a judgment, where the conclusions of law are incorrect or erroneous, and not consistent with the findings of fact (Shafer v. Lacy, 121 Cal. 574; 54 Pac. 72; Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161; 74 Pac. 700; Sharp v. Bowie, 142 Cal. 462; 76 Pac. 62); and to vacate that part of the judgment disallowing costs, and to enter judgment for costs. Gibson v. Hammang, 145 Cal. 453; 78 Pac. 953. A question of law, as to whether or not the judgment is the correct legal conclusion from the facts found, may be raised and determined by motion in the court below, under this section. Fountain Water Co. v. Dougherty, 134 Cal. 376; 66 Pac. 316. Where the conclusion that the plaintiff is entitled to judgment is in conflict with the findings, the remedy is not by a new trial of an issue which has been correctly decided, but by a motion under this section, or by an appeal from the judgment. Sharp v. Bowie, 142 Cal. 462; 76 Pac. 62.

Findings cannot be changed. A motion to amend or change a finding of fact is not authorized under our practice. Hole v. Takekawa, 165 Cal. 372; 132 Pac. 445. The trial court cannot, on a motion under this section, change any finding of fact. Dahlberg v. Girsch, 157 Cal. 324; 107 Pac. 616.

Result of failure to move. A party does not waive his objection that the findings do not support the judgment, by a failure to proceed by motion under this section and § 663a, post. Worth v. Worth, 155 Cal. 599; 102 Pac. 663.

Substitution of proper judgment. This section authorizes, simply, the substitution of the proper judgment for the one given.

Dahlberg v. Girsch, 157 Cal. 324; 107 Pac. 616. On motion of a party entitled to judgment, the trial court has jurisdiction to vacate an improper judgment, and to enter the proper judgment. Ballerino v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 759; 84 Pac. 225.

Appeal. The remedy provided by this section and § 663a, post, is merely cumulative, and is not designed to supersede the remedy by appeal provided in § 963, post. Patch v. Miller, 125 Cal. 240; 57 Pac. 986; Modoc Co-operative Ass'n v. Porter, 11 Cal. App. 270; 104 Pac. 710. An order denying a motion to vacate a judgment under this section and § 663a, is one made after final judgment, and is appealable under § 963, post. Taylor v. Darling, 19 Cal. App. 232; 125 Pac. 249; Condon v. Donohue, 160 Cal. 749; 118 Pac. 113; Bond v. United Railroads, 159 Cal. 270; Ann. Cas. 1912C, 50; 113 Pac. 366. The question of law, whether or not the judgment is the correct legal conclusion from the facts found, may be raised and determined on motion made under this section and § 663a, or by appeal from the judgment. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167; 73 Pac. 828; Boggs v. Ganeard, 148 Cal. 711; 84 Pac. 195; Wutchumna Water Co. v. Ragle, 148 Cal. 759; 84 Pac. 162; Forsythe v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 149 Cal. 569; 87 Pac. 24; Elizalde v. Murphy, 11 Cal. App. 32; 103 Pac. 904. The pendency of a motion, under this section, to vacate and change the judgment upon the findings does not excuse a failure to file the transcript on appeal within time. Modoc Co-operative Ass'n v. Porter, 11 Cal. App. 270; 104 Pac. 710. Upon appeal from an order vacating a judgment on the findings, the review is restricted to the case made by the findings of fact, taken in the light of the pleadings and the issues made thereon. Dahlberg v. Girsch, 157 Cal. 324; 107 Pac. 616. Upon appeal from an order denying a new trial, specifications in the bill of exceptions, that the conclusions of law embraced in the findings are erroneous, can be reviewed only on appeal from the judgment, or from an order under this and § 663a, post. Mentone Irrigation Co. v. Redlands etc. Power Co., 155 Cal. 323; 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 382; 17 Ann. Cas. 1222; 100 Pac. 1082.

Notice of motion under this section. See note post, § 663a.

Vacating judgment. See note ante, § 662.

§ 663a. Notice of intention, service of. The party intending to make the motion mentioned in the last section must, within ten days after notice of the entry of judgment, serve upon the adverse party and file with the clerk of the court a notice of his intention, designating the grounds upon which, and the time at which the motion will be made, and specifying the particulars in which the conclusions of law are not consistent with the finding of facts, or in which the judgment or decree is not consistent with the special verdict. The time designated for the making of the motion must not be more than sixty days from the time of the service of the notice. An order of the court granting such motion may be reviewed on appeal in the same manner as a special order made after final judgment and a bill of exceptions to be used on such appeal may be prepared as provided in section six hundred and forty-nine.

Legislation § 663a. 1. Added by Stats. 1897, p. 59, as § 663½, (1) the first sentence (a) having the words "rendition of judgment or decree" instead of "entry of judgment" (the substitution being made in 1907), (b) but not having the words "and the time at which," before "the motion will be made" (the insertion thereof being made in 1907); (2) the second (and final) sentence (recast in 1907) reading, "The said party must, within sixty days after giving such notice of intention, make the motion to the court, after giving due notice of the time of making such motion to the adverse party; but the hearing or consideration of such motion may be further continued by the court."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 150; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 719, renumbering the section 663a (compare par. 1, supra, for changes made in first sentence), (1) the second sentence being recast to read as at present (1915), (3) a new (and final) sentence being added (recast in 1915), reading, "An order of the court granting such motion may be reviewed on appeal in the same manner as orders made on motions for a new trial, and a statement to be used on such appeal may be prepared in the same manner as statements after a motion is heard upon the minutes of the court, as provided in section six hundred and sixty-one." The code commissioner, in his note, says: "Renumbered thus instead of 663½. 'Rendition' is changed to entry, to correspond to the change in § 659; the last sentence of the old section is omitted [amended]; and the moving party is required to state the time when his motion will be made. The last sentence is an addition."

4. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 203, recasting the final sentence. Compare par. 3, supra.

Construction of section. This section does not, nor does § 663, ante, supersede, in any way, § 963, post, providing for an appeal from a final judgment. Patch v. Miller, 125 Cal. 240; 57 Pac. 986.

Appeal from order. This section provides for an appeal from an order granting the motion under § 663, but makes no provision for an appeal from an order denying such motion. Modoc Co-operative Ass'n v. Porter, 11 Cal. App. 270; 104 Pac. 710. An order of the court below, refusing to render a new and different judgment, must be affirmed, where a reversal would require the appellate court to make new findings. McLean v. Baldwin, 150 Cal. 615; 89 Pac. 429.

Causes for vacating judgment. See note ante, § 663.

Amendment of findings. See note ante, § 663.

CHAPTER VIII.

§ 667. In replevin, judgment to be in the alternative, and with damages. Gold coin or currency judgment.
§ 668. Judgment-book to be kept by the clerk.
§ 669. If a party die after verdict, judgment may be entered, but not to be a lien.
§ 670. Judgment roll, what constitutes.
§ 671. Judgment lien, when it begins and when it expires.
§ 672. Docket defined. How kept, and what to contain.
§ 673. Docket to be open for inspection without charge.

§ 676. Undertaking in actions to set aside transfer of property.
§ 677. Conditions of undertaking.
§ 677½. Filing and serving undertaking.
§ 678. Objections to sureties.
§ 678½. Justification of sureties. Approval and disapproval of undertaking.
§ 679. Objection because estimated value in undertaking less than market value. New undertaking.
§ 679½. Justification of sureties.
§ 680. When undertaking becomes effective.
§ 680½. Judgment against sureties.

§ 664. Judgment to be entered in twenty-four hours, etc. When trial by jury has been had, judgment must be entered by the clerk, in conformity to the verdict, within twenty-four hours after the rendition of the verdict, unless the court order the case to be reserved for argument or further consideration, or grant a stay of proceedings. If the trial has been had by the court, judgment must be entered by the clerk, in conformity to the decision of the court, immediately upon the filing of such decision. In no case is a judgment effectual for any purpose until so entered.

Reserving, for argument or further consideration. Post, § 665.
Stay of proceedings by appeal. Post, § 949.
Arrest of defendant. Post, § 684.

Legislation § 664. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 197, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in first line.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 150; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 719, by adding the last two sentences; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in the addition of the last two sentences, and requires the clerk to enter judgment immediately upon filing the decision of the court, and declares the judgment non-effectual for any purpose until so entered."

Construction of section. This section is purely directory, and not mandatory. Bundy v. Maginess, 76 Cal. 532; 18 Pac. 668; Churchill v. Louie, 135 Cal. 608; 67 Pac. 1052.

Proceedings in suits in equity. Cases involving questions of purely equitable cognizance, where the issues are submitted to a jury, are not within this section, and the clerk has no power to enter judgment upon such verdicts. Churchill v. Louie, 135 Cal. 608; 67 Pac. 1052. The verdict in an equitable action is merely advisory, but when it is decisive of the action, is regularly returned and entered in the minutes of the court, and the court orally orders judgment to be entered thereon, such order is a verbal adoption of the verdict and a rendition of judgment; and the failure of the clerk to transcribe the verdict into the minute-book, and to enter judgment as ordered, is a failure to perform a ministerial duty, which can afterwards be performed at his own instance, or by the direction of the court, at any time. Holt v. Holt, 107 Cal. 258; 40 Pac. 390.

Rendition and entry of judgment. The terms "entry of judgment" and "rendition of judgment," as used in the code, have distinct meanings: the "rendition" is the pronouncement of the verdict of the jury or the decision of the court; the "entry" is but a ministerial act of the clerk. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416. In entering judgment on a verdict or findings, the clerk performed a ministerial duty: he can neither enlarge nor abridge the scope of the judgment. McMahon v. Hetch-Hetchy etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400; 84 Pac. 350. This section is equivalent to an express direction by the court to the clerk to enter the judgment in accordance with the verdict; and if, through the neglect or misprision of the clerk, the judgment actually rendered is not entered, the court may, even after the expiration of six months, order the judgment entered nunc pro tunc. Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515. Where the action is tried by the court, judgment cannot be entered until after the decision has been rendered, and a writ of mandate will not be granted to compel the entry of judgment until after the court has tried the cause and rendered its decision. Broder v. Superior Court, 103 Cal. 121; 37 Pac. 143. The clerk may be compelled, on motion, to enter a proper judgment: the court will not require the party interested to resort to mandamus. Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385. Neglect of the clerk to enter and docket the judgment, and to prepare and file the judgment roll, where the decree is ordered and signed, does not destroy or impair the effect of the judgment. Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. The provision of this section, that judgment must be entered within twenty-four hours, is directory. Waters v. Dumas, 75 Cal. 563; 17 Pac. 685. The failure of the clerk to enter the judgment within twenty-four hours does not affect the validity of a judgment afterward entered. First Nat. Bank v. Wolff, 79 Cal. 69; 21 Pac. 551, 748; Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218; Churchill v. Louie, 135 Cal. 608; 67 Pac. 1052. A judgment entered on a Monday, upon a verdict rendered on the night of the preceding Saturday, is not invalidated by reason of the delay in its entry. Bundy v. Maginess, 76 Cal. 532; 18 Pac. 668. Jurisdiction is not lost by failure of the clerk to enter judgment within twenty-four hours: the only penalty is that provided by the sixth subdivision of § 581, ante, authorizing a dismissal where the party entitled to judgment neglects for six months to demand and have the same entered (Waters v. Dumas, 75 Cal. 563; 17 Pac. 685); nor can the defendant against whom the judgment is entered invoke such failure for the purpose of annulling a judgment to which he has no other defense: such failure may render the clerk liable to an action by the judgment creditor. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218. The judgment is binding on the parties and privies, when signed by the judge and filed: the clerk cannot, by failure to enter it, abridge the rights of any party interested. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887. The action of the court does not depend upon the entry of its orders by the clerk, but upon the fact that the orders have been made; and when an order has been made by the court, it is as effective as if it had been entered of record by the clerk. Niles v. Edwards, 95 Cal. 41; 30 Pac. 134. The effect of an order setting aside a verdict is to grant a new trial, otherwise no judgment could be entered, there being no verdict; and no further trial can take place, because no such order was made in terms. Eades v. Trowbridge, 143 Cal. 25; 76 Pac. 714. It is immaterial who sets the clerk in motion to discharge his ministerial duty of entering the judgment, or who pays his fees therefor; and he may perform his duty of his own motion, or the court can direct him to do it, or any party interested in having it done may procure him to do it. Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. Where the prevailing party pays the clerk the costs of the action after the verdict, and presents him with a form of the judgment, he has a right to assume that the clerk will perform the duty required of him: such party is not guilty of negligence, where the clerk fails to perform his duty. Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515. The judgment in an action to quiet title becomes a muniment of title to a successor in interest of the prevailing party, and he may procure its entry at any time. Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. Damages arising from personal injuries to a married woman are community property, and a judgment in favor of both her and her husband is properly entered upon a finding of injury to her alone. Paine v. San Bernardino Valley etc. Co., 143 Cal. 654; 77 Pac. 659. The preceding decisions were rendered prior to the amendment of this section in 1907. An entry in the so-called "rough minutes" by the clerk is not official: there is no law providing for "rough minutes." Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703; 109 Pac. 91.

Rendition of judgment, what constitutes. See note ante, § 632.

Entry of default judgment. A judgment by default, entered before the time for answering has expired, is erroneous merely, and can be attacked only upon motion or by appeal, and by the party aggrieved. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887. Judgment may be entered upon failure to answer, after the overruling of a demurrer, against one defendant, without at the same time entering judgment against his co-defendant, who has not been served. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218. Several judgments against defendants may be entered, in an action of ejectment against several defendants occupying different portions of the property; this may be done upon the trial, on separate findings or verdicts, and there is no objection to the same course or findings by the court after default. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219.

Clerical errors in entry of judgment corrected how. A mistake made by the clerk in the entry of a judgment, not authorized by the decision, is apparent upon the face of the record, and may be rectified at any time, by reason of the inherent power of the court over its own proceedings, although more than six months have elapsed from the entry of the judgment. San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928. A mere clerical error in computation, appearing upon the face of the record, may be corrected at any time by the court, of its own motion, without vacating the judgment. Erickson v. Stockton etc. R. R. Co., 148 Cal. 206; 82 Pac. 961.

Findings and conclusions. Conclusions of law, based upon findings of fact, may be changed at any time before judgment; and the judgment is not final until recorded. Condee v. Barton, 62 Cal. 1. The rendition of judgment is the filing of the findings of fact and conclusions of law; prior to the code, findings were not essential to the entry or validity of the judgment, and therefore the entry of the decision in the clerk's minutes constituted a rendition of judgment, but, under the code, whenever findings are required, there can be no rendition of judgment until they are made and filed with the clerk; findings of fact, however, are required only upon the trial of a question of fact, and they may be waived, and whenever they are waived or are not required, the entry of the decision in the minutes constitutes a rendition of judgment, just as it did under the former system; the rendition of a judgment is a judicial act, while its entry upon the record is merely a ministerial one, which can be performed by the clerk after the expiration of the term of office of the judge who renders it, with as much effect as before. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. A party is entitled, as a matter of right, to a decision from the judge or a verdict from the jury hearing the evidence: he cannot be compelled to accept a decision upon the facts from another judge and another jury. Guardianship of Sullivan, 143 Cal. 462; 77 Pac. 153.

Interest, how computed in judgment. Interest should be provided for in the judgment from the day of the rendition of the verdict; the clerk cannot include in the judgment a sum equal to interest from the rendition of the verdict to the entry of the judgment (Alpers v. Schammel, 75 Cal. 590; 17 Pac. 708); and interest may be included in the judgment as entered by the clerk, although the decision is silent upon that point. San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 99 Cal. 345; 33 Pac. 928.

Judgment must follow verdict. The judgment must conform to the verdict; and where the verdict passes upon extraneous facts not embraced within the issues raised by the pleadings, it is void pro tanto, and the surplus matter may be disregarded in entering judgment. Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523. Where the verdict is strictly within the issues, the clerk has no authority to enter a judgment at variance with the verdict as recorded. McMahon v. Hetch-Hetchy etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400; 84 Pac. 350.

Judgment must follow agreement of parties. Where it is stipulated that a decree shall be entered in conformity with an agreement between the parties, the court's power to enter a decree is strictly limited by the terms of the agreement: it cannot embody therein extraneous matters not covered by the agreement. People's Ditch Co. v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 152 Cal. 87; 92 Pac. 77.

Judgment against defendant under fictitious name. A judgment is binding upon a party sued and served under a fictitious name, unless he comes in and sets up the misnomer and whatever defense he may have. Brum v. Ivins, 154 Cal. 17; 129 Am. St. Rep. 137; 96 Pac. 876.

Signature to judgment. The judgment need not be signed by the judge; nor does a judgment produced from the original records need a signature or authentication: the signature is merely to give the clerk a surer means of accurately entering what has been adjudged. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074.

Limitation to action on judgment. The statute of limitations runs from the entry of judgment, and not from its rendition. Trenouth v. Farrington, 54 Cal. 273; Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218; Herrlich v. McDonald, 104 Cal. 551; 38 Pac. 360. The judgment debtor may at any time cause judgment to be entered, and thus stop the running of the statute. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218.

Records of sister state. A substantial compliance with the provisions of this section and § 668, post, must appear in the exemplification of the record of a sister state, where the laws of such state have not been proved. Wilson v. Durkee, 20 Cal. App. 492; 129 Pac. 617.

New trial. Where the verdict is against the evidence, the appellate court cannot correct it: the case will be remanded for a new trial. McMahon v. Hetch-Hetchy etc. Ry. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400; 84 Pac. 350.

Nunc pro tunc entry of judgment. See notes 4 Am. St. Rep. 828; 20 L. R. A. 143.

Right to enter judgment nunc pro tunc as of date of rendition, so as to affect intervening rights of third persons. See note 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 682.

§ 665. Case may be brought before the court for argument. When the case is reserved for argument or further consideration, as mentioned in the last section, it may be brought by either party before the court for argument.

Legislation § 665. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 198, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 62, Kerr ed. p. 88.

§ 666. When counterclaim established exceeds plaintiff's demand. If a counterclaim, established at the trial, exceed the plaintiff's demand, judgment for the defendant must be given for the excess; or if it appear that the defendant is entitled to any other affirmative relief, judgment must be given accordingly.

Counterclaim.
1. Generally. Ante, §§ 438, 439.
2. Dismissal or nonsuit, where none. Ante, § 581, subd. 1.
3. Exceeding plaintiff's demand. Ante, § 626.

Legislation § 666. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 199 (New York Code, § 263), which (1) had the words "so established" after "demand," and (2) the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

Counterclaim sufficient when. A counterclaim must exist in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff, in order that judgment, as provided in this section, may be entered (Duff v. Hobbs, 19 Cal. 646); but the defendant is not compelled, by reason of this section, to set up and litigate new matter constituting a counterclaim. Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620.

Nature of cross-complaint. The filing of a cross-complaint is not the commencement of an "action," but is a proceeding in an action to enable all matters in dispute therein to be determined by a single judgment. Lowe v. Superior Court, 165 Cal. 708; 134 Pac. 190.

§ 667. In replevin, judgment to be in the alternative, and with damages. Gold coin or currency judgment. In an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession or the value thereof, in case a delivery cannot be had, and damages for the detention. If the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, and the defendant claim a return thereof, judgment for the defendant may be for a return of the property or the value thereof, in case a return cannot be had, and damages for taking and withholding the same. In an action on a contract or obligation in writing, for the direct payment of money, made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, judgment for the plaintiff, whether it be by default or after verdict, may follow the contract or obligation, and be made payable in the kind of money or currency specified therein; and in all actions for the recovery of money, if the plaintiff allege in his complaint that the same was understood and agreed by the respective parties to be payable in a specified kind of money or currency, and this fact is admitted by the default of the defendant or established by evidence, the judgment for the plaintiff must be made payable in the kind of money or currency so alleged in the complaint; and in an action against any person for the recovery of money received by such person in a fiduciary capacity, or to the use of another, judgment for the plaintiff must be made payable in the kind of money or currency so received by such person.

Money.
1. How computed and stated. See Pol. Code, § 3274.
2. Specific, or currency. Fiduciary capacity. Post, § 1407.

Replevin.
1. Return to defendant. See ante, §§ 514, 627.
2. Judgment, verdict. Ante, § 627.
3. Value, correcting affidavit of. Ante, § 473.

Execution. Post, § 682, subd. 5.

Legislation § 667. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 200, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 295, which had, (1) in the first sentence, the word "damage" instead of "damages"; (2) in the last sentence, (a) the words "the same" instead of "it," after "whether," (b) the word "shall" before "allege in his," (c) the words "the same shall be" instead of "this fact is," (d) after "by evidence," the words "to the satisfaction of the court, referee or jury by whom the action shall be tried," (e) the word "shall" instead of "must," before "be made," (f) the word "specified" instead of "alleged," after "currency so," and (g) instead of the word "must," before "be made payable," the words "whether the same be by default or after verdict may."

Construction of section. This section confers a special authority to enter a peculiar judgment not known to the common law, or even to courts of equity in certain specified actions; it must be strictly construed, and cannot be extended beyond the case prescribed. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581. It applies to cases where judgment is entered after trial, but not to cases where the action is dismissed without trial (Kneebone v. Kneebone, 83 Cal. 645; 23 Pac. 1031); nor has it any application where the property is not delivered to the plaintiff. Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481.

Pleadings. It is not necessary to allege the particular facts upon which the plaintiff claims title and right of possession: it is sufficient to allege the same generally; but where both are alleged, a denial of either is sufficient. Nudd v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 39.

Value of property. The plaintiff is entitled primarily to the very property sued for, and the value he is to receive, where delivery cannot be had, is the value as of the day of trial: the money value is a substitute for the property, and the amount can be approximately fixed by ascertaining it as of the date nearest to the time when the property would be delivered. Phillips v. Sutherland, 2 Cal. Unrep. 241; 2 Pac. 32. Where the property is of a fluctuating market value, the value to be fixed is the highest price between the time of taking and the trial; the reason for the exception being, that, in the usual course of trade or business, it is likely the owner would have realized the enhanced value if he had not been deprived of his property. Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462. The market value of property unlawfully taken is to be ascertained at the place of conversion. Hamer v. Hathaway, 33 Cal. 117. The value which the plaintiff is entitled to recover in case a delivery cannot be had, is the value of the property, to be ascertained at the place where it is detained when the action is commenced; and evidence of its value in markets near by, the cost of marketing, etc., is admissible as tending to prove its value at the place of detention (Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641); and in fixing the value, evidence of what it would cost to purchase in open market and replace the property in controversy is admissible. Angell v. Hopkins, 79 Cal. 181; 21 Pac. 729; Levy v. Scott, 115 Cal. 39; 46 Pac. 892. The jury are to find the value of any specific portion of the property, only if so instructed; and error can therefore arise only in a case where such instruction would be pertinent and proper, and the instruction was asked and refused. Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851. Where the defendant takes issue only upon the aggregate value of the property, and no evidence of the value of each specific article is offered at the trial, the court need not instruct the jury to find the value of each specific article. Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37. The separate value of each article need not be found, where the plaintiff alleges only the aggregate value of all the articles, and all the property is adjudged returned to the defendant: the finding of its aggregate value is all that is required. Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481.

Title to property. Where the plaintiff or the defendant in the original suit obtains judgment for the delivery of the property, or if it cannot be found, then for its value, the title to the property vests in the party against whom the judgment is given, subject to the right of the successful party to take it in discharge of so much of the judgment as is made up by the assessed value of the property; and where the property is accidentally lost or destroyed after judgment, and before possession by the sheriff, the loss falls upon the unsuccessful party, and he is bound to pay its value. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; and see Hunt v. Robinson, 11 Cal. 262.

Findings. It is not necessary to make a finding as to a separate defense, where the matters therein alleged are all included in the general issue as to ownership. Black v. Black, 74 Cal. 520; 16 Pac. 311. The right of the plaintiff to the possession of the property is a material issue, upon which the court must find, in order that the findings shall sustain the judgment for the plaintiff. Cooke v. Aguirre, 86 Cal. 479; 25 Pac. 5. The finding of the right of possession at the time of the commencement of the action is immaterial, where the judgment is for the defendant for the return of the property, or its value in a stipulated sum. Banning v. Marleau, 133 Cal. 485; 65 Pac. 964. Where the jury finds the right of possession to be in the plaintiff, the conclusion of law follows, as provided in this section, that he is entitled to delivery if it can be had, and if not, to the value of the property as found by the jury, in the alternative: the judgment must contain this, but the verdict need not. Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 87 Cal. 345; 25 Pac. 546. The legal effect of a finding for the defendant, on the question of the plaintiff's right to the property, is to entitle the defendant, from whom it was taken, to its restoration: this right is not dependent upon any finding of the jury to that effect, but is a conclusion of law from the verdict for the defendants; and it is the right of the court to state this legal conclusion as a portion of its judgment. Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378. Contradictory findings, determining that both parties to the suit were in possession of the property at the commencement thereof, cannot support the judgment. Carman v. Ross, 64 Cal. 249; 29 Pac. 510. Where the defendant, besides taking issue as to the alleged gross value of the property claimed, set forth the value of each specific article thereof, aggregating a less sum, the court is not required to find the value of each of the specific articles, if no reason appears therefor beyond the mere fact of such averments of the answer. Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306.

Verdict. The code does not require the verdict to be special, except as to the value of the property; the sole object of this exception is to enable the court to render an alternative judgment, as required by this section; a verdict, special as to the value of the property, but general as to all the other issues, is sufficient to justify a judgment for the return of property, or for the value thereof in case delivery cannot be had: such a judgment would consist entirely of pure conclusions of law from the verdict. Etchepare v. Aguirre, 91 Cal. 288; 25 Am. St. Rep. 180; 27 Pac. 668. A general verdict for the defendant will support a judgment for the return of the property to him: failure to give an alternative judgment for the value thereof is no ground of complaint on the part of the plaintiff. Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378. In an action against a corporation and its manager, where the question at issue was, whether the plaintiff was the owner and entitled to the possession of the property, and no affirmative relief was sought by the defendants, a verdict "for the defendant" is not so uncertain and informal that it cannot form a basis for a judgment that the plaintiff take nothing, and that the defendants (named) recover from the plaintiff their costs. Butler v. Estrella Raisin etc. Co., 124 Cal. 239; 56 Pac. 1040; and see Willard v. Archer, 63 Cal. 33. Where the verdict is too informal to support the judgment, and the judgment is erroneous because omitting to describe specifically the property of which restitution is to be made, these defects are not cured by a stipulation of the defendant, that the verdict is a finding for the plaintiff, as to the title and right of possession of the property described in the complaint. Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507. Where a general averment of damages in the complaint is not challenged, and the evidence of the plaintiff in relation thereto is not objected to, and the mode of his estimation thereof is not inquired into on cross-examination, a verdict awarding damages for detention is sufficiently supported. Hickey v. Coschina, 133 Cal. 81; 65 Pac. 313.

Judgment, in general. A judgment for the recovery of possession of a note, or its value, may be rendered upon a complaint sufficiently stating a cause of action therefor, although a different relief is prayed: the relief to which the plaintiff may be entitled is to be determined by the court, and, after trial, any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint, and embraced within the issues, may be given. More v. Finger, 128 Cal. 313; 60 Pac. 933. A judgment for half of the property described in the complaint, entered on a verdict therefor, where all the material allegations of the complaint are in issue, is not responsive to the issues made, and is a nullity. Muller v. Jewell, 66 Cal. 216; 5 Pac. 84. Where there is nothing in the record to show that a delivery cannot be had, and the verdict implies that the property is not susceptible of delivery by the defendant, and finds for its return, or value in a specified sum, a judgment for the plaintiff, merely for the value of the property, and not for the possession, or the value thereof in case a delivery cannot be had, is not in conformity with the statute. Meads v. Lasar, 92 Cal. 221; 28 Pac. 935. The judgment must, of itself, or by reference to the complaint or other pleadings, contain a definite description of the property. Welch v. Smith, 45 Cal. 230. A judgment not containing a sufficiently definite description of the property, nor referring to any other pleading or paper for such description, is bad for uncertainty. Cooke v. Aguirre, 86 Cal. 479; 25 Pac. 5. A judgment, that the plaintiff recover the possession of the personal property in the complaint herein described, is not void for uncertainty, where the complaint specifically describes the property sued for. Hogue v. Fanning, 73 Cal. 54; 14 Pac. 560. A reference in the judgment to the findings, and in the findings to the complaint, for a description of the property sought to be recovered, is inexcusably circuitous, but not ambiguous or uncertain: the maxim, Certum est quod certum reddi potest, applies. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192. Where the plaintiff's verdict and judgment are limited to a recovery of part, only, of the property, and silent as to the remainder, he has no right to the possession of that remainder; and there being nothing to show but that the defendant is entitled thereto, it cannot be withheld from him; and the plaintiff is precluded from any further litigation as to the remainder. Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 87 Cal. 345; 25 Pac. 546. Where defendants are sued jointly, a joint judgment in their favor is not erroneous, although each of them answered separately. Myers v. Moulton, 71 Cal. 498; 12 Pac. 505. Where, in a suit against a defendant as an individual, he justifies as the assignee of the estate of an insolvent debtor, he cannot complain if judgment runs against him both in his individual and representative capacity, and not against the estate of the insolvent. O'Brien v. Ballou, 116 Cal. 318; 48 Pac. 130.

Judgment in the alternative. The judgment must follow the verdict, and be in the alternative, that the successful party shall have a delivery of the property, or if that cannot be had, shall recover its value as found by the jury, and stated in the judgment, with damages and costs. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; McCue v. Tunstead, 66 Cal. 486; 6 Pac. 316; Brichman v. Ross, 67 Cal. 601; 8 Pac. 316; Cooke v. Aguirre, 86 Cal. 479; 25 Pac. 5; Stewart v. Taylor, 68 Cal. 5; 8 Pac. 605; and see Holmberg v. Hendy, 2 Cal. Unrep. 650; 10 Pac. 394; Campbell v. Jones, 38 Cal. 507; Cummings v. Stewart, 42 Cal. 230. A judgment not in the alternative form, as required by this section, is erroneous. Stewart v. Taylor, 68 Cal. 5; 8 Pac. 605. A statutory rule is laid down as to the judgment which shall be entered in actions to recover the possession of personal property; and a judgment cannot be entered for the alternative value, unless it is found that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the property sued for: if he is not entitled to recover the property, he is not entitled to a judgment; and if he is entitled to judgment, it must be in the form prescribed by this section. Washburn v. Huntington, 78 Cal. 573; 21 Pac. 305. The evident purpose of requiring a judgment in the alternative is, that if the plaintiff, after obtaining judgment for the possession of the property, is unable to obtain a delivery, he may, in the same action, have a judgment for its value: the primary object is to recover the possession; but if the plaintiff has obtained possession before judgment, there is no occasion for any judgment for its value, as the condition is wanting to authorize the clause in the judgment, "if delivery cannot be had"; the plaintiff need not avail himself of the provisional remedy for obtaining possession prior to judgment, or if he does, the defendant may have retaken the property, or, without retaking it, may obtain judgment for its return: in either of these cases, the judgment must be in the alternative, in order that, in case a delivery cannot be had, the prevailing party may recover the value of the property, or in order to determine the amount to be recovered from the sureties on the undertaking. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. A judgment for the value, without the alternative for the delivery of the property, is not void, even though erroneous. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365; Erreca v. Meyer, 142 Cal. 308; 75 Pac. 826. Where the goods were so confused and mixed with other goods belonging to the defendant as not to be distinguishable, it is not necessary that a judgment for the plaintiff shall be in the alternative. Seligman v. Armando, 94 Cal. 314; 29 Pac. 710; and see Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559; 27 Pac. 411. A purchaser from the defendant, with full notice, and after suit is commenced, who procures himself to be substituted as the defendant in the cause, takes the place of the defendant cum onere, and judgment for the recovery of the property, or its value if delivery cannot be had, may be entered against him. Wise v. Collins, 121 Cal. 147; 53 Pac. 640. A defendant, who recovers a judgment, where the property has been delivered to the plaintiff is entitled to a judgment for a return of all the property, and if it cannot be returned, then to a judgment for the value of the whole. Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851. The alternative judgment in favor of the defendant for the return of the property, or the value thereof, is proper, where the answer claims a return, and the court, jury, or referee finds the value of the property, and that the defendant is entitled to a return thereof. Pico v. Pico, 56 Cal. 453. A prayer, in the answer, for the return of the property, is sufficient to justify a judgment for its return, or its value in case a return cannot be had. Myers v. Moulton, 71 Cal. 498; 12 Pac. 505. To enable the defendant to obtain the value of the property on judgment of dismissal against the plaintiff for failure to appear, the answer must contain some allegation or prayer relative to the change of possession from defendant to plaintiff: the judgment of return or value is in the nature of a cross-judgment, and must be based upon proper averments. Gould v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 430. Where there is no prayer, claim, or demand of any kind, in the answer, for a return of the property, or its value, a judgment for its return to the defendant, or its value in case a return cannot be had, cannot stand. Banning v. Marleau, 101 Cal. 238; 35 Pac. 772. Under § 627, ante, the jury are authorized to find the value of the property if their verdict is in favor of the plaintiff, only if the property has not been delivered to him, and, e converso, if the property has been delivered to him, they are not required to find the value; and in the absence of such finding, there is no verdict upon which to base an alternative judgment. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. The defendant is entitled to the return of the property, when the action is dismissed; and it is a matter of no concern to the plaintiff whether the judgment is in the alternative or not, as he has no option as to whether he shall pay for or return the property. Kneebone v. Kneebone, 83 Cal. 645; 23 Pac. 1031. Where the plaintiff gives a bond, and takes possession of the property prior to the commencement of the action, an alternative judgment for value is immaterial, though for too large an amount. California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 713; 75 Pac. 320. The alternative judgment for value cannot be entered, unless it is found that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the property; and, in order that it may be so found, there must be a showing that the defendant had possession of the property at the time the suit was commenced. Ricciotto v. Clement, 94 Cal. 105; 29 Cal. 414. A judgment for the return of the property or the value thereof, but which omits from the judgment for value the dependent clause, "in case a return cannot be had," is not sufficient in form or substance. Etchepare v. Aguirre, 91 Cal. 288; 25 Am. St. Rep. 180; 27 Pac. 668; and see Washburn v. Huntington, 78 Cal. 573; 21 Pac. 305. Where the defendant disposes of a large portion of the property sued for, and appropriates the proceeds thereof, the court is not bound to find the value of the articles which can be returned, or to enter a judgment in the alternative: a judgment may be rendered for the value of the entire property. Burke v. Koch, 75 Cal. 356; 17 Pac. 228. The usual judgment in an action of detinue is in the alternative, that the plaintiff recover possession of the property, or its value in case delivery cannot be had; but where delivery cannot be had, the defendant is not prejudiced by a judgment for the value only, without the alternative. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258; 66 Pac. 463; and see Brown v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 76; Thomas v. Witherby, 61 Cal. 92; 44 Am. Rep. 542; Burke v. Koch, 75 Cal. 356; 17 Pac. 228. A judgment for the value of the property, without the alternative for recovery of possession, may be had, where it is shown that the judgment for its delivery would be unavailing (Erreca v. Meyer, 142 Cal. 308; 75 Pac. 826; Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365); and where the delivery of all but a small portion is impossible, judgment for its value, without the alternative of delivery, is proper. Erreca v. Meyer, 142 Cal. 308; 75 Pac. 826. A lien-holder, in claim and delivery to recover the property upon which he has a lien, is not entitled to judgment for the full value of the property in case delivery cannot be had, but only for the amount of his lien or special property therein. Wilkerson v. Thorp, 128 Cal. 221; 60 Pac. 679. The judgment may be for more than the value of the goods, as alleged in the complaint, provided the damages alleged are larger than the judgment; and a mistake as to the value of goods, which is only one predicate of the recovery, does not estop the plaintiff from recovering a sum commensurate with the loss or injury sustained by him, if the amount so recovered be within the ad damnum of the writ. Coghill v. Boring, 15 Cal. 213. Where the jury, in rendering a verdict for the plaintiff, fails to find the value of the property, and the court does not order it to be corrected in that particular, a judgment entered for the value is erroneous (Stewart v. Taylor, 68 Cal. 5; 8 Pac. 605); and where the property is in the defendant's hands, a verdict for the plaintiff for its value is erroneous: under such verdict, and judgment thereon, the defendant cannot elect to deliver the property. Norcross v. Nunan, 61 Cal. 640.

Judgment for possession. Where the property was delivered to the plaintiff prior to the trial of the cause, judgment for the possession thereof, without the alternative for value, is not erroneous. Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559; 27 Pac. 411.

Damages for the detention. Under this section, when a delivery of the property cannot be had, the value of the property and damages for the detention are separate and independent items, and the damages which may be pleaded, proved, and recovered for the detention may be general or special, or both. Morris v. Allen, 17 Cal. App. 684; 121 Pac. 690. Damages amounting to the value of the property sued for may be had in an action for personal property or its value, although claim and delivery does not lie for the property, where the complaint is sufficiently broad to show such damage, and the same is within the issues framed by the pleadings. Dennison v. Chapman, 105 Cal. 447; 39 Pac. 61. The rule is, that, where the property converted has a fixed value, the measure of damages is that value, with legal interest from the time of the conversion; and when the value is fluctuating, the plaintiff may recover the highest value at the time of the conversion, or at any time afterwards. Douglass v. Kraft, 9 Cal. 562; Hamer v. Hathaway, 33 Cal. 117. The full value of goods at the time of the taking, and not what they cost the plaintiff, is the measure of damages. Pelberg v. Gorham, 23 Cal. 349.

Return of part of property as satisfaction of judgment. The return of part of the property sued for, by the sheriff, under execution, does not satisfy the judgment, and execution may be enforced for the value of the rest of the property. Black v. Black, 74 Cal. 520; 16 Pac. 311. That the plaintiff has the right to retain such articles sued for as he may choose, and pay to the defendant the value thereof, notwithstanding the court finds that the defendant is the owner thereof, is a proposition that cannot be sustained upon any principle of law. Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190; 62 Pac. 481. A wrong-doer may not, through his wrong-doing, acquire the privilege of restoring to its owner a particular article, or, instead, of paying its value as found by a jury: the judgment is primarily for the return of all the property wrongfully taken or withheld, and the judgment for its value comes into operation only in case a return cannot be had. Whetmore v. Rupe, 65 Cal. 237; 3 Pac. 851.

Judgment payable in particular kind of money. At common law, the provision for the payment of the judgment in any specified kind of money was unknown, and was also unknown to our law until the enactment of the "Specific Contract Act," in April, 1863, which ingrafted a new remedy on the relief of a general nature that courts of common-law jurisdiction could afford, one of the remedies peculiar to courts of equity, which in its nature is analogous to a decree for a specific performance, and it restricted the relief to a specified class of cases: it cannot be extended beyond the cases expressly provided for by its terms, and therefore does not apply to an action upon a judgment rendered prior to its passage. Reed v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 346. Where no contract to pay in a specific kind of money exists, the debtor may discharge his obligation by payment in lawful money; but the court cannot, by its judgment, say that the payment shall be made in any one kind of money in preference to another; and a verdict in an action for services, where no agreement in any specific kind of money was shown, may be based upon the value of the services in legal tender. Spencer v. Prindle, 28 Cal. 276. A debt secured by note and mortgage executed before the passage of the legal-tender act of 1862, may be discharged in legal-tender notes, if the instruments contain no stipulation requiring payment to be made in coin. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242. A contract to pay money in gold coin of the United States, or the equivalent of such gold coin if paid in legal currency, is a contract to pay the given number of dollars in any kind of lawful money of the United States, and cannot be enforced in any specific kind of money; and the statute does not authorize the entry of an alternative judgment upon such contract, payable in gold coin, or its equivalent in legal-tender notes. Reese v. Stearns, 29 Cal. 273. A verbal promise to pay a partnership debt in gold coin may be enforced, if, thereafter, one of the partners, in behalf of the firm, in writing, agrees to make payment in such coin. Meyer v. Kohn, 29 Cal. 278. An agreement to pay a note and mortgage in gold coin, made subsequently to the execution thereof, to secure an extension of the time of payment, is based upon a sufficient consideration. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 242. The verdict need not provide for payment in gold coin, in order that a judgment for such may be entered, where it is admitted by the pleadings that the debt was so payable. Winans v. Hassey, 48 Cal. 634. The value of property in gold coin and in greenbacks, or legal-tender notes, must, by legal conclusion, be the same; and one unlawfully converting property is not injured by a judgment entered against him, payable in legal-tender notes. Tarpy v. Shepherd, 30 Cal. 180. A decree made by a probate court, requiring an executor to pay over to creditors or legatees money in his hands, may compel payment in the kind of money received by the executor. Magraw v. McGlynn, 26 Cal. 421. In an action of slander, where the jury assess the damages for the plaintiff in gold coin, the court may disregard so much of the verdict as relates to coin, and enter a judgment which does not specify any particular kind of money. Chamberlin v. Vance, 51 Cal. 75. In ejectment, if the court finds the value of the use and occupation of the premises in both gold coin and currency, a general judgment for an amount equal to the currency valuation is correct. Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

Judgment payable in gold coin proper when. A judgment for wages may be made payable in gold coin, where there was a promise to pay in gold coin (Bradbury v. Cronise, 46 Cal. 287); and a judgment payable in United States gold coin is proper, where the note on which it was rendered was payable in "U. S. gold coin." Sheehy v. Chalmers, 4 Cal. Unrep. 617; 36 Pac. 514. An account stated, signed by the party charged, and containing the clause, "payable in gold coin (United States), according to contract," is sufficient to support a judgment payable in gold coin. Carey v. Philadelphia etc. Petroleum Co., 33 Cal. 694. A verdict for a sum of money generally, will support a judgment payable in gold coin, where the obligation so to pay is admitted by the pleadings. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; 91 Am. Dec. 657. A default judgment on a note payable in gold coin should be made payable in like gold coin. Harding v. Cowing, 28 Cal. 212. Where payments, promised and secured, are to be made in United States gold coin, or in default of that, then in legal-tender notes at their market value in gold coin, a judgment for gold coin is proper. Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468. In an action for money had and received, a judgment payable in gold coin is proper, where such money was received in gold coin. Wendt v. Ross, 33 Cal. 650. A direct and specific contract to pay in gold coin is not vitiated by an independent promise to pay an additional sum if not paid in gold coin. Lane v. Gluckauf, 28 Cal. 288; 87 Am. Dec. 121; Reese v. Stearns, 29 Cal. 273.

Judgment payable in gold coin improper when. The plaintiff is not entitled to a judgment in gold coin, unless the complaint avers that there was a contract in writing, or that it was understood and agreed by the parties, that payment should be made in gold coin. Goldsmith v. Sawyer, 46 Cal. 209. Where there is no allegation in the complaint that there was an agreement to pay in gold coin, the court cannot render a judgment payable in gold coin, even if the verdict of the jury is for gold coin. Watson v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523. A judgment for gold coin only, is erroneous, where the note sued on specified payment to be made in United States gold and silver coin. Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468. Where the note sued on was payable in money generally, the clerk of the court has no authority, after default, to enter a judgment payable in gold coin, although the complaint prays for such judgment. Wallace v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 495. Where a promissory note has the words "in gold coin" after the words "value received," but does not contain the words "in gold coin" immediately after the amount promised to be paid, judgment should not be rendered payable in gold coin, although there is in the instrument a subsequent promise to pay the difference between the value of gold coin and the paper currency of the United States, if not paid in gold coin. Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 99; Reese v. Stearns, 29 Cal. 273. A judgment payable in gold coin cannot be recovered upon an open account or account stated, unless there is a promise in writing to pay the balance in such coin. Howard v. Roeben, 33 Cal. 399. A general finding of value, without a specification that it is in gold coin, will not support a judgment payable in gold coin. North Pacific R. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 50 Cal. 90. A judgment against the sureties on the bond of a guardian should not be made payable in gold coin, where the bond does not so provide, although the principal was bound to pay in gold coin the sum for which the sureties were liable. Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566; Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145. The judgment on a contract made by a board of supervisors for street improvements, against the owner of the property, cannot be made payable in gold coin, it being on a liability founded upon a contract to which he was not a party, and by which he was bound only by force of the statute. Perine Contracting etc. Co. v. Quackenbush, 104 Cal. 684; 38 Pac. 533. Where an executor received legal-tender notes in payment for property of estate sold by him, it is error for the court to order payment to be made to creditors of the estate in gold coin. Estate of Den, 39 Cal. 70.

Costs. Where the plaintiff's complaint states the value of the property at a sum exceeding two hundred dollars, the defendant is entitled to costs if he recovers judgment, although the jury fails to find the value of the property. Edgar v. Gray, 5 Cal. 267. Costs may be allowed the plaintiff, where it is found that he is entitled to part of the property, and the defendant to part, and the part awarded the plaintiff is of a value exceeding three hundred dollars. Rohr v. McCaig, 33 Cal. 309. An act providing that the prevailing party shall be allowed a percentage on the amount recovered in litigated cases in San Francisco, did not include a judgment in the alternative in an action of replevin; the amount recovered not being the primary and absolute result of the judgment. Wheatland Mill Co. v. Pirrie, 89 Cal. 459; 26 Pac. 964. Where the defendant has come rightfully into the possession of the property, and has never manifested any disposition to claim title to it, and has shown a willingness to surrender it, he cannot be made to answer for costs, without proof of demand made upon him. California Cured Fruit Ass'n v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 713; 75 Pac. 320.

Bond staying execution. If a judgment is in the ordinary form of one upon claim and delivery, a bond to stay execution thereon must be as prescribed in § 943, post. United States Fidelity etc. Co. v. More, 155 Cal. 415; 101 Pac. 302.

Liability of surety on replevin bond. In an action upon a replevin bond, the surety is liable to pay a judgment for the value of the property. Donovan v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 10 Cal. App. 723; 103 Pac. 365.

Enjoining enforcement of judgment. The enforcement of an alternative judgment in replevin will be enjoined, where, during the pendency of the suit, and after issue joined therein, the property was all returned to the plaintiff in the replevin suit, and the defendant was prevented by the court from showing that fact under the pleadings, and after the judgment, and within the time allowed to move for a new trial, it was agreed between the parties that upon the payment of a specified sum the judgment should be satisfied, and, relying upon the agreement, no such motion was made, and the tender of the amount agreed upon was rejected after the time for such motion had elapsed. Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 313; 27 Pac. 752. Where the defendant in claim and delivery obtained judgment for the return of the property, or its value, and the plaintiff tendered the property and costs in satisfaction of the judgment, which was refused, and the defendant issued execution for its value, which the court refused to recall on the plaintiff's motion, the plaintiff, who has appealed from the order denying such motion, may maintain an action in equity to enjoin further proceedings under the judgment, pending the appeal. Eppinger v. Scott, 130 Cal. 275; 62 Pac. 460.

Appeal, in general. A judgment in favor of the assignee of an insolvent, in claim and delivery, for possession of the property claimed, without costs, or an alternative judgment for value, may be appealed from by the insolvent, as a "party aggrieved," notwithstanding his disclaimer of all interest in the property sued for, since, if the denials of his answer were sustained, he would be entitled to judgment that the plaintiff take nothing, and that the defendant recover his costs. Martin v. Porter, 84 Cal. 476; 24 Pac. 109. A judgment for the plaintiff is immediately enforceable, unless the defendant gives a stay bond; and the fact that the defendant has given a bond for redelivery does not entitle him to an order of the appellate court staying proceedings on the judgment appealed from. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 203; 26 Pac. 83. Where the value alleged in the complaint is not denied by the answer, an objection to the admission of evidence of the value should be sustained; but error in admitting such evidence is without prejudice to the defendant, where the jury finds a lower value than that alleged. Tully v. Harloe, 35 Cal. 302; 95 Am. Dec. 102. Where the defendant went to trial upon the theory that the title or the right to the possession of the property was in issue, he cannot, upon appeal, be heard, for the first time, to say that there was no such issue. Flinn v. Ferry, 127 Cal. 648; 60 Pac. 434. Objections to the form of the verdict, or that excessive damages were thereby awarded, can only be made available on motion for a new trial, or on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Campbell v. Jones, 41 Cal. 515.

Direction of judgment on appeal. Where no finding is made on the issue of value and damage, the appellate court will not direct final judgment to be entered. Thompson v. Corpstein, 52 Cal. 653.

Presumptions on appeal. On an appeal from a judgment for the plaintiff for the possession of personal property, without the alternative for its value in case possession cannot be had, it will be presumed that possession was obtained by the plaintiff. Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559; 27 Pac. 411.

Modification of judgment on appeal. On appeal, the judgment will be modified to make it conform to the requirements of this section, where, to accomplish this, no other guide than the plain provisions of this section and the findings on file is necessary. Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192. Where the defendant asked for a return of the property, and it does not appear that he gave bond and sureties for its return, it will be presumed, on appeal, that it was delivered to the plaintiff; and where the plaintiff was entitled to only part of the property, and no relief was awarded to the defendant, the judgment will be modified so as to require the return of the residue to the defendant. Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 87 Cal. 345; 25 Pac. 546.

Reversal of judgment on appeal. The mere failure to include in the judgment a clause which cannot have any operative effect, or confer any right or protection upon either the plaintiff or the defendant, such as for the delivery of the property to the plaintiff where he already has possession, does not affect the substantial rights of either party, and is not a sufficient ground for the reversal of the judgment. Claudius v. Aguirre, 89 Cal. 501; 26 Pac. 1077. Where, on the trial of an action of replevin, it appears that the property has been hopelessly lost or has been destroyed, so that a judgment for its delivery would be unavailing, a judgment for damages alone is, at most, a technical error, for which the judgment will not be reversed. Brown v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 76. A finding as to value, made upon conflicting evidence, will not be disturbed upon appeal. Roberts v. Burr, 135 Cal. 156; 67 Pac. 46.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Actions to recover personal property. Damages. Nickerson v. Chatterton, 7 Cal. 568; Douglass v. Kraft, 9 Cal. 562; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. [The code commissioners quote pp. 419–427 of the opinion in the case of Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462.] The plaintiff may recover the value in legal-tender notes. Tarpy v. Shepherd, 30 Cal. 180.

2. Judgments payable in coin. Poett v. Stearns, 31 Cal. 78; Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; 91 Am. Dec. 657; Wendt v. Ross, 33 Cal. 650; Cowing v. Rogers, 34 Cal. 648. Costs follow the judgment. Carpentier v. Atherton, 25 Cal. 569. If the note is payable in gold and silver coin, it is error to enter judgment for gold coin alone. Burnett v. Stearns, 33 Cal. 468. In an action of forcible entry and detainer, judgment cannot be entered payable in coin. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170. In an action against the principal sureties, on an official bond containing no promise to pay in coin, judgment can only be rendered in money generally. Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145; Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566. If the jury, without instruction from the court, return a verdict payable in gold coin, there being no evidence that either on or after striking a balance between the parties the defendant promised in writing to pay in gold coin, the judgment cannot stand. Howard v. Roeben, 33 Cal. 399. In an action based on a general indebtedness without a written contract to pay, or on a written contract to pay money generally, without designating the kind, the court cannot render a judgment payable in coin. Curiac v. Abadie, 25 Cal. 502. If a promissory note has the words "in gold coin," after the words "value received," but does not contain the words "in gold coin" in the promise to pay, judgment cannot be rendered payable in gold coin, although there is in the instrument a subsequent promise to pay the difference between the value of gold coin and the paper currency of the United States, if not paid in gold coin. Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 102; Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111; 91 Am. Dec. 566; Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 149. In an action upon a contract to pay in gold coin of the United States, or the equivalent of such gold coin, if paid in legal currency, judgment in the alternative cannot be entered, nor can a judgment payable in any specific kind of money. Reese v. Stearnes, 29 Cal. 273. Where the value of the premises is found both in coin and in currency, judgment may be general, and for the currency value. Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346; see also Spencer v. Prindle, 28 Cal. 276.

§ 668. Judgment-book to be kept by the clerk. The clerk must keep, with the records of the court, a book to be called the "judgment-book," in which judgments must be entered.

Register of actions. Post, § 1052.

Legislation § 668. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 201 (New York Code, § 280), which read: "The clerk shall keep among the records of the court a book for the entry of judgments, to be called the 'judgment-book,' in which each judgment shall be entered, and shall specify clearly the relief granted, or other determination of the action."

Judgment-book. The direction of this section, to enter the judgment in the judgment-book, is mandatory: it imposes a public duty upon a ministerial officer. Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385. The entry of judgment is purely a ministerial act. Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 153; 116 Pac. 382; Marshall v. Taylor, 97 Cal. 422; 32 Pac. 515. The judgment-book is part of the records of the court, and the final repository of the determination of the court upon every cause which passes to judgment, and the most permanent memorial of those matters ordained by law to be kept; being a judicial record, it is competent evidence of matters considered and passed upon by the court, and in case of the loss or absence of the judgment roll, it is competent evidence of the final adjudication in the suit: so its recitals, showing the acquisition of jurisdiction over the defendant are evidence of the facts recited, the judgment thus carrying on its face the evidence of its own validity. Simmons v. Threshour, 118 Cal. 100; 50 Pac. 312. The register of actions provided for by § 1052, post, is distinct from the judgment-book provided for by this section. Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143.

Matters which should be entered. The final action of the court upon the issue made by the pleadings, and which is the judicial determination of that issue, is to be recorded by the clerk in the judgment-book. Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109. The determination by the court of the amount for which the defendant was liable to the plaintiff in an action to foreclose a lien, providing for the sale of property, is a judgment of the court, and is properly entered by the clerk in the judgment-book. Hines v. Miller, 126 Cal. 683; 59 Pac. 142. An action, directed by the plaintiff to be dismissed, is not dismissed until the judgment of dismissal is entered in the judgment-book. Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 372; 18 Pac. 385. An entry in the clerk's register does not constitute a dismissal: the action is not dismissed, so as to deprive the court of control over the cause, until the judgment has been entered. Page v. Page, 77 Cal. 83; 19 Pac. 183; Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644; 59 Pac. 143.

Entry valid when. To be valid, the clerk's entry of a judgment must conform strictly to the statute. Old Settlers Investment Co. v. White, 158 Cal. 236; 110 Pac. 922. The entry of judgment is sufficient if it contains the substance of the judgment. Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 151; 116 Pac. 382. The entry of a judgment consists in the recording of it in the judgment-book; in a legal sense, there can be no record of a judgment until it is so entered. Wilson v. Durkee, 20 Cal. App. 492; 129 Pac. 617. It is not material whether the judge signs the judgment or not. Hoover v. Lester, 16 Cal. App. 151; 116 Pac. 382; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. A judgment spread in writing on the court-room blotter, on the register of actions, and on the minutes of the court, is not entered in the judgment-book. Wood v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 152 Cal. 344; 92 Pac. 868.

False certificate of clerk. In the whole range of the duties of the clerk, there is none more important than the clerical duty of keeping a true history of the time of the entry of judgment and of the filing of the judgment roll, these matters being the initial point of many rights: willfully to make a false certificate as to these matters is a violation of official duty. Menzies v. Watson, 105 Cal. 109; 38 Pac. 641.

Appeal. A final determination, upon the pleadings, of the relative rights of the parties, must be entered in the judgment-book, and no appeal can be taken therefrom until its entry in such book. Wood v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 152 Cal. 344; 92 Pac. 868. The time of the entry of judgment in the judgment-book, and not the time of its entry in the minutes of the court, is the period from which the time to appeal commences to run. Thomas v. Anderson, 55 Cal. 43; Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 72 Cal. 192; 13 Pac. 475. An appeal taken before the judgment is entered of record is premature, and must be dismissed (Home of Inebriates v. Kaplan, 84 Cal. 486; 24 Pac. 119); but where the notice of appeal from the judgment is filed on the day on which the judgment is entered, the appeal is not premature, and will not be dismissed, although the notice was served on the preceding day. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 72 Cal. 192; 13 Pac. 475. An order of court dismissing an action for failure to return summons, though entered in the minutes of the court, and not in the judgment-book, is a final judgment, and appealable. Marks v. Keenan, 140 Cal. 33; 73 Pac. 751.

§ 669. If a party die after verdict, judgment may be entered, but not to be a lien. If a party die after a verdict or decision upon any issue of fact, and before judgment, the court may nevertheless render judgment thereon. Such judgment is not a lien on the real property of the deceased party, but is payable in the course of administration on his estate.

Payable in course of administration. Post, § 1506; and see § 1504.

Death, suggestion of. Ante, § 385.

Judgment after death, not a lien. See post, §§ 1504, 1506.

Executor, etc., judgment against, form of. Post, § 1504.

Legislation § 669. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 202, which had (1) the words "shall not be" instead of "is not," and (2) the words "shall be" instead of "is," before "payable."

Judgment entered how. If the code were silent regarding the procedure in case of the death of a party pending litigation, the court would be authorized to make its decision as complete as if it had become final prior to his death. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328. Under this section, the court is directed to render a judgment on the verdict, and the judgment is but the formal entry of the result of the litigation, the demand of the successful party having been liquidated and established by the verdict; the statute does not contemplate any substitution of executor or administrator prior to the entry of judgment; the judgment should be entered against the decedent by name, and its effect is the same as if it had been ordered as of a date anterior to his decease, except that it cannot be made to charge the estate with a lien which should have priority, and is payable only in due course of administration. Estate of Page, 50 Cal. 40.

Findings. Findings of fact and conclusions of law stand in the same relation, with regard to this section, as a judgment. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328.

Judgment nunc pro tunc. The effect of this section, in providing for the entry of a judgment payable out of the estate of the decedent, affords a statutory procedure unknown to the common law, and to that extent removes the necessity of directing the judgment to be entered upon the decision as of a date anterior to his death; it does not, however, do away with the rule that authorizes the court to direct that its decision, so far as the same shall be necessary to protect the rights of the parties, shall be entered nunc pro tunc, as of a day anterior to the death of the party. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328. The authority of a court to order its judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc is inherent in the court, and is to be exercised for the purpose of doing justice between the parties; and a court will always exercise this authority when it is apparent that the delay in rendering the judgment, or a failure to enter it after its rendition, is the result of some act or delay of the court, and is not owing to any fault of the party making the application. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328. Where the defendant dies after the court has filed a written opinion announcing its conclusions, and directing counsel to prepare the findings and decree in accordance therewith, the findings may be filed and judgment entered nunc pro tunc, as of a date anterior to the death. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328. The rights of the parties are to be determined as they existed at the time of the submission of the controversy; hence, after such submission, although at the time the defendant is dead or insane, findings may be signed and filed, and judgment be entered against him. San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175; 81 Pac. 972; Fox v. Halo etc. Mining Co., 108 Cal. 478; 41 Pac. 328.

Defendant not served. A verdict and judgment against two defendants cannot stand as against a co-defendant, who died a few days after the commencement of the action, and who, so far as the record shows, was not served. Alpers v. Schammel, 75 Cal. 590; 17 Pac. 708.

Suits for divorce. Death does not impair the power of the court to enter final judgment for the plaintiff in a divorce suit, pending motions, after the lapse of a year without appeal. John v. Superior Court, 5 Cal. App. 262; 90 Pac. 53; Cook's Estate, 77 Cal. 220; 11 Am. St. Rep. 267; 1 L. R. A. 567; 17 Pac. 923.

Validity of judgment against deceased person. See note 52 Am. Dec. 107.

Effect of death of judgment debtor upon subsequent enforcement of judgment. See note 65 Am. Dec. 123.

Lien of judgment after death of defendant. See note 89 Am. Dec. 242.

Judgment where death occurs at certain stages of the action. See note 49 L. R. A. 161.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 443; Black v. Shaw, 20 Cal. 68; Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 466.

§ 670. Judgment roll, what constitutes. Immediately after entering the judgment, the clerk must attach together and file the following papers, which constitute the judgment roll:

1. In case the complaint is not answered by any defendant, the summons, with the affidavit or proof of service; the complaint with a memorandum indorsed thereon that the default of the defendant in not answering was entered, and a copy of the judgment; and in case the service so made is by publication, the affidavit for publication of summons, and the order directing the publication of summons;

2. In all other cases, the pleadings, all orders striking out any pleading in whole or in part, a copy of the verdict of the jury, or finding of the court or referee, and a copy of any order made on demurrer, or relating to a change of parties, and a copy of the judgment; if there are two or more defendants in the action, and any one of them has allowed judgment to pass against him by default, the summons, with proof of its service, on such defendant; and if the service on such defaulting defendant be by publication, then the affidavit for publication, and the order directing the publication of the summons.

Judgment roll in criminal cases. See Pen. Code, § 1207.

Clerk's powers and duties. County clerk. See Pol. Code, §§ 4178, 4179.

Legislation § 670. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 203 (New York Code, § 281), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 846, which (1) in the introductory paragraph, (a) had the word "shall" instead of "must," and (b) the word "shall" before "constitute"; (2) subd. 1 then ending with "copy of the judgment," and (3) subd. 2 reading, "Second. In all other cases, the summons, pleadings, verdict of the jury, or finding of the court, commissioner, or referee, all bills of exceptions taken and filed in said action, copies of orders sustaining or overruling demurrers, a copy of the judgment, and copies of any orders relating to a change of parties." When § 670 was enacted in 1872, (1) in the introductory paragraph, (a) the word "must" was changed from "shall," and (b) the word "shall" was omitted before "constitute"; (2) in subd. 2, (a) the word "summons" was omitted before "pleadings," and (b) the words "in said action" were omitted after "filed."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 319, (1) in subd. 1, substituting "thereon" for "upon the complaint," and (2) changing subd. 2 to read: "2. In all other cases, the pleadings, a copy of the verdict of the jury, or finding of the court, or referee, and a copy of any order made on demurrer, or relating to a change of parties, and a copy of the judgment. If there are two or more defendants in the action, and any one of them has allowed judgment to pass against him by default, the summons, with proof of its service upon such defendant, must also be added to the other papers mentioned in this subdivision."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 93, adding, in subd. 2, after "court or referee," the words "all bills of exception taken and filed."

4. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 45, (1) in subd. 1, (a) omitting the word "and" before "the complaint," and (b) adding, after "copy of the judgment," the clause, "and in case where the service so made be by publication, the affidavit for publication of summons, and the order directing the publication of summons, must also be included"; (2) in subd. 2, (a) changing the word "a" to "the," before "change of parties," (b) changing the word "upon" to "on," and (c) adding, at end of section, after "this subdivision," the clause, "and if the service on such defaulting defendant be by publication, then the affidavit for publication, and the order directing the publication of the summons in such cases must also be included."

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 151; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

6. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 720.

Scope of section. The judgment roll, which is provided for by this section, contains all the essentials of the common-law record, but omits the formal parts, such as the placita, memorandum, continuances, and connecting links, some of which have been rendered unnecessary by changes in our procedure. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742 (Sawyer, J.). Prior to the amendment of this section in 1895, the affidavits of service and the recitals in the judgment were conclusive: the affidavit on application for an order of publication, and the order of publication, were not then part of the judgment roll. Estate of Newman, 75 Cal. 213; 7 Am. St. Rep. 146; 16 Pac. 887. While this section prescribes what constitutes the judgment roll, yet it does not prescribe what shall constitute the record on appeal. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33; 65 Am. St. Rep. 147; 52 Pac. 122. In the United States, paper has universally supplied the place of parchment as the material of the record, and the roll form has, on that account, fallen into disuse; but in other respects the forms of the English records have, with some modifications, been generally adopted; but, whether in parchment or in paper, in the roll form or otherwise, this judgment roll is what is known in law as the record,—the technical record,—and is what is meant by courts and law-writers when they speak of records of superior courts, or courts of record. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742 (Sawyer, J.).

Judgment roll should be made up when. The judgment roll cannot be made up and filed until after the entry of the judgment in the judgment-book. Menzies v. Watson, 105 Cal. 109; 38 Pac. 641; Estate of Pichoir, 139 Cal. 694; 70 Pac. 214; Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950; Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. A judgment by default need not be filed: it is only the judgment roll, in cases when there is an answer, these must be filed. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405; 132 Pac. 454.

Duties of clerk. This section provides for an authentic record of the date of the entry of the judgment; that the clerk shall immediately after entering the judgment, make up and file the judgment roll; that he shall indorse the roll as filed on a particular date, and authenticate the indorsement by his official signature: this, in the absence of other evidence, raises the presumption that official duty has been duly performed, and is authentic evidence that the judgment has been entered immediately before, on the same day. Estate of Pichoir, 139 Cal. 694; 70 Pac. 214; Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. But the existence of the judgment roll does not depend upon the fact that the clerk has fastened the papers constituting the roll together; nor do any other papers which the clerk may have joined with those which the statute declares shall constitute the judgment roll, become part thereof by reason of having been so joined. Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278; 33 Pac. 878. The judgment roll is not to be made up until after the entry of judgment; and the neglect of the clerk to make up the roll does not vitiate the judgment, nor the proceedings under it. Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611. The only authentication of the judgment roll and notice of appeal required is the certificate of the clerk or the stipulation of the attorneys: the only effect of the new method of appeal is to allow the use of typewritten instead of printed copies. Totten v. Barlow, 165 Cal. 378; 132 Pac. 749; Knoch v. Haizlip, 163 Cal. 20; 124 Pac. 997.

Proof of service of papers as part of judgment roll. By proof of service is meant the affidavit of the party making service; or the certificate of the officer, if service was made by an officer, showing his competency to make service, and that he in fact made it; or if service was made by publication, the affidavit of the printer, or his foreman or principal clerk, showing that publication was made; or if by mailing, an affidavit showing a deposit in the post-office. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742. The affidavit or proof of service of summons is a necessary part of the judgment roll, where the defendant has not appeared in the action, and a personal judgment by default is rendered against him. Barney v. Vigourcaux, 75 Cal. 376; 17 Pac. 433. The proof of service of summons issued upon a cross-complaint should be contained in the judgment roll, with a memorandum indorsed thereon of the default of the defendants failing to answer the cross-complaint. Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 256; 22 Am. St. Rep. 243; 25 Pac. 407. The proof of service of amended pleadings is not a part of the judgment roll (Riverside County v. Stockman, 124 Cal. 222; 56 Pac. 1027); nor is the proof of service of notice of appeal. Peck v. Agnew, 126 Cal. 607; 59 Pac. 125.

Affidavit and order for publication of summons as part of judgment roll. Prior to the amendment of this section in 1895, the affidavit and order for publication of the summons formed no part of the judgment roll; but since that amendment they must be included, and the facts necessary to be stated therein are, equally with the original summons itself, evidence of the steps by which jurisdiction of the person of the defendant is obtained. Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698; Lake v. Bonynge, 161 Cal. 120; 118 Pac. 535. If the affidavit and order for the publication of summons are not a part of the judgment roll, they cannot, in a collateral attack upon the judgment, be examined; but, by the amendment of 1895, such affidavit and order were made a part of the judgment roll. Estate of McNeil, 155 Cal. 333; 100 Pac. 1086. This section provides that the affidavit for publication of summons, and the order directing its publication, shall form part of the judgment roll: these documents are therefore to be considered in determining whether the court obtained jurisdiction of the defendant in the action. Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410; 77 Pac. 1007. The affidavit to procure publication of summons and the affidavit showing service must now be made part of the judgment roll. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299; Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698. The affidavit for publication of summons must be on file before trial commences to give the court jurisdiction. Zumbusch v. Superior Court, 21 Cal. App. 76; 130 Pac. 1070.

Pleadings part of judgment roll. An original complaint is a document on file in the action, and is therefore properly incorporated in the bill of exceptions: it can by no possibility be superseded by the amended complaint for all purposes. Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49; 27 Pac. 40. A cross-complaint is part of the judgment roll, which must show proof of the service thereof, or judgment by default cannot be rendered against the cross-defendants. White v. Patton, 87 Cal. 151; 25 Pac. 270.

Appearance not part of judgment roll. An appearance is not required to be made a part of the judgment roll. Lyons v. Roach, 84 Cal. 27; 23 Pac. 1026; Western Lumber etc. Co. v. Merchants' Amusement Co., 13 Cal. App. 4; 108 Pac. 891.

Stipulations as part of judgment roll. A stipulation, entered in the minutes of the court, between the attorneys for the plaintiff and the attorneys for the defendant, that the answer of the latter, "now on file to plaintiff's amended complaint, be his answer to said amended complaint, when amended as hereinbefore specified," is a part of the judgment roll (Kent v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 130 Cal. 401; 62 Pac. 620); but a stipulation of the parties, that the cause be continued, that a certain amount is due, that such amount shall be paid in installments, and that judgment may be entered in case of default, is not a part of the judgment roll (Spinetti v. Brignardello, 53 Cal. 281); neither is a stipulation, entered in the minutes of the court. Spreckels v. Ord, 72 Cal. 86; 13 Pac. 158.

Orders changing parties are part of judgment roll. An order striking names from the complaint becomes a part of the judgment roll, rendering it unnecessary to amend the complaint (Tormey v. Pierce, 49 Cal. 306); and an intermediate order relating to a change of parties is a part of the judgment roll. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107. An order substituting plaintiffs is an order relating to a change of parties, and becomes a part of the judgment roll, and imports the same verity as the other parts of the record. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074.

Notices, motions, and orders forming no part of judgment roll. The notice, affidavit, and motion upon which an order striking out a pleading is made, form no part of the judgment roll. Orange Growers' Bank v. Duncan, 133 Cal. 254; 65 Pac. 469; Ganceart v. Henry, 98 Cal. 281; 33 Pac. 92. Neither a motion to strike out parts of a complaint and to make the complaint more definite and certain, nor an order denying such motions, is a part of the judgment roll (Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 826; Spinetti v. Brignardello, 53 Cal. 283; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220); nor are the motion and the order to strike out portions of a complaint (Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505; Sutter v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 112); nor are intermediate orders, except orders relating to a change of parties (Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107); nor is an order allowing an amended complaint (Carter v. Paige, 3 Cal. Unrep. 64; 20 Pac. 729); nor an order granting leave to file an amended pleading, or the proof of service of an amended pleading (Livermore v. Webb, 56 Cal. 489); nor an order granting leave to amend the answer (Segerstrom v. Scott, 16 Cal. App. 256; 116 Pac. 690); nor an order setting aside a default upon conditions, nor an order striking out an answer for failure to comply with the conditions (De Pedroreña v. Hotchkiss, 95 Cal. 636; 30 Pac. 787; Spence v. Scott, 97 Cal. 181; 31 Pac. 52, 939); nor an order refusing to strike out pleadings (South Yuba Water Co. v. Auburn, 16 Cal. App. 790; 118 Pac. 101); nor an order setting aside a default and judgment, and restoring an answer to the files (Von Schmidt v. Von Schmidt, 104 Cal. 547; 38 Pac. 361); nor are the petition, bond, and order for change of venue (Rough v. Booth, 2 Cal. Unrep. 270; 3 Pac. 91); nor is the notice of the overruling of a demurrer, and proof of service thereof (Jacks v. Baldez, 97 Cal. 91; 31 Pac. 899); nor the notice of intention to move for a new trial (Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384; 20 Pac. 706); nor the petition for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, nor the order of appointment (Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418; Batchelder v. Baker, 79 Cal. 266; 21 Pac. 754); nor a minute-order, the basis for entering a second judgment. Galvin v. Palmer, 134 Cal. 426; 66 Pac. 572. Until the amendment, in 1865, of the section of the Practice Act on which this section is based, an order sustaining or overruling a demurrer was not a part of the judgment roll. Abadie v. Carrillo, 32 Cal. 172.

Minutes are not part of judgment roll. The minutes of the clerk are not a part of the judgment roll. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109; Knowles v. Baldwin, 125 Cal. 224; 57 Pac. 988. The entries in the minutes are evidently intended for the guidance of the court in its further action in the cause, and cease to be of value upon the entry of the judgment: they form no part of the judgment roll, or "record" of the judicial action of the court, and they cannot be used to impeach that record. Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109.

Verdict is part of judgment roll. The verdict is a part of the judgment roll, and when it appears therein, and is sufficiently identified, it will be presumed to have been properly recorded and entered by the clerk in the minutes of the court, as required by § 628, ante. Goldman v. Rogers, 85 Cal. 574; 24 Pac. 782. A special verdict is also a part of the judgment roll. California Wine Ass'n v. Commercial Union Fire Ins. Co., 159 Cal. 49; 112 Pac. 858.

Findings as part of judgment roll. The finding of facts and conclusions of law, as contemplated by this section, is different from the opinion; the finding should consist of a concise, distinct, pointed, and separate statement of each specific, essential fact established by the evidence, in its proper order, without any of the testimony by which the facts are proved, followed by a similar statement of the conclusions of law drawn from the facts thus found: the finding forms a part of the judgment roll; the opinion does not, not being a finding. Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301. A writing filed by the court as its "decision," or findings (a very different thing from the opinion), is a part of the judgment roll (Kimball v. Stormer, 65 Cal. 116; 3 Pac. 408); but a minute-entry, made by the clerk, as to findings, is not (Kritzer v. Tracy Engineering Co., 16 Cal. App. 287; 116 Pac. 700); nor are the findings of fact and conclusions of law, where there is no answer: they are not necessary.

Thomson v. Thomson, 121 Cal. 11; 53 Pac. 403; Mulcahy v. Glazier, 51 Cal. 626; Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37. The findings and report of a referee are part of the judgment roll, where he reports upon the whole case (Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542; and see Faulkner v. Hendy, 103 Cal. 15; 36 Pac. 1021); but the report of a referee, simply the report of testimony upon which the judge based his findings, is not a part of the judgment roll (Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107); so the finding of a referee appointed to determine a particular fact is not a part of the judgment roll. Faulkner v. Hendy, 103 Cal. 15; 36 Pac. 1021.

Bill of particulars no part of the judgment roll. A bill of particulars is no part of the judgment roll. Edelman v. McDonell, 126 Cal. 210; 58 Pac. 528.

Judgment as part of judgment roll. The papers designated in this section as forming the judgment roll are those elsewhere mentioned in this code as a part of the proceedings culminating in the judgment; and the judgment, a copy of which is to be included in the roll, is the judgment defined in § 577, ante, as the final determination of the rights of the parties in an action or proceeding; hence, if, during the proceedings in an action, a judgment is set aside, and another entered in its stead, only the latter judgment can form a part of the judgment roll. Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278; 33 Pac. 878. Whether a judgment is entered by default or after trial, a copy of the judgment is a part of the judgment roll. Thomas v. Anderson, 55 Cal. 43.

Exceptions are part of judgment roll. Exceptions taken during the trial should be written down, settled and signed by the judge, filed in the case, and afterward annexed to the judgment roll. More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170. Exceptions taken and settled at the trial are annexed to and form part of the judgment roll, and therefore constitute a part of the record on appeal from the judgment on the judgment roll alone. Wetherbee v. Carroll, 33 Cal. 549. All bills of exceptions taken and filed are a part of the judgment roll, which the appellant is required to bring to the appellate court upon an appeal from the judgment; and if, upon a second appeal, there are found in the record matters which were not determined upon the first appeal, the appellant has the right to be heard thereon (Klauber v. San Diego Street Car Co., 98 Cal. 105; 32 Pac. 876); but the testimony, unless embodied in the bill of exceptions and filed, is not a part of the judgment roll. Lee Sack Sam v. Gray, 104 Cal. 243; 38 Pac. 85.

Judgment roll in probate proceedings and will contests. In probate proceedings there is no judgment roll, strictly speaking; but whenever such proceedings are so akin to a civil action as to necessitate the "papers" which are declared by this section to constitute the judgment roll in a civil action, they may be held to constitute the judgment roll referred to in § 661, ante. Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082. The settlement of the accounts of an executor, although sometimes called an order, is, in effect, a judgment, and, in a proceeding for the settlement of such an account, the petition and account, and the written objections filed to it, are the pleadings, which the clerk of the court is required to attach to a copy of the judgment, and these constitute the judgment roll. Miller v. Lux, 100 Cal. 609; 35 Pac. 345; Estate of Page, 57 Cal. 238; Estate of Isaacs, 30 Cal. 106. In a will contest, the judgment roll must include at least the petition for the revocation of the probate, the answer thereto, the verdict of the jury, and the judgment. Estate of Kilborn, 162 Cal. 5; 120 Pac. 762.

Admissibility of judgment roll in evidence. The admissibility of the judgment roll in evidence is to be determined by the court upon an inspection thereof. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. Upon an application for a writ of assistance, the judgment roll is admissible in evidence, although an appeal is pending, where execution has not been stayed. California etc. Sav. Bank v. Graves, 129 Cal. 649; 62 Pac. 259. In actions involving adverse possession, judgment rolls in other actions are admissible to show that defendant, at various times, claimed title to the land, and as thus tending to prove adverse possession. Hines v. Good, 128 Cal. 38; 79 Am. St. Rep. 22; 60 Pac. 527. The judgment roll in another suit, brought by the same plaintiff, is not admissible in evidence against the defendant, to which suit he was not a party, and he is in no way bound or estopped by the judgment therein. Cloverdale v. Smith, 128 Cal. 230; 60 Pac. 851. The admissibility of the judgment roll of another county does not in any way depend upon the means by which it was brought to the court where it is sought to be used. People v. Alden, 113 Cal. 264; 45 Pac. 327.

Presumption as to what constitutes judgment roll. In the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the pleadings, order overruling the demurrer, minutes of the court, findings, and judgment, contained in the transcript, and mentioned in the certificate of the clerk attached thereto as being correct, constitute the judgment roll: it is not necessary that the certificate shall also state that they constitute the judgment roll. O'Shea v. Wilkinson, 95 Cal. 454; 30 Pac. 588. The statute provides that the judgment roll shall be filed in the county where the judgment is recovered; hence, it will be presumed that the clerk, whose duty it was to make up and file the judgment roll, did so, where a writ of execution states the county in which the judgment was recovered. Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600; 21 Pac. 954. A judgment of a foreign court of general jurisdiction is admissible in evidence, when duly authenticated, and is presumed to be correct; and where it contains a finding or recital of service by publication, it will be presumed that such service was made upon sufficient affidavit and order. McHatton v. Rhodes, 143 Cal. 275; 101 Am. St. Rep. 125; 76 Pac. 1036.

Presumptions. Upon an appeal from a judgment, upon the judgment roll alone, all intendments will be made in support of the judgment, and all proceedings necessary to its validity will be presumed to have been regularly taken, and any matters which might have been presented to the court below, which would have authorized the judgment, will be presumed to have been thus presented, if the record shows nothing to the contrary. Von Schmidt v. Von Schmidt, 104 Cal. 547; 38 Pac. 361. The presumption which the law implies in support of judgments of courts of general jurisdiction arises only with respect to jurisdictional facts concerning which the record is silent; and where the judgment recites service of process on the defendant, but the judgment roll shows insufficient and void service by publication, the recitals of the judgment do not control, and cannot be held to show jurisdiction. Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 54 Pac. 844. Where nothing appears in the judgment roll to contradict recitals of due service of process found in the decree, they are deemed to be true, and to show that the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties; and the judgment of a court of general jurisdiction is conclusively presumed to be correct, unless the record itself shows that the court did not have jurisdiction; and when it has such jurisdiction, its record speaks absolute verity, because it is the court's record of its own acts, and such jurisdiction will be conclusively presumed, unless the contrary appears upon the face of the record. Butler v. Soule, 124 Cal. 69; 56 Pac. 601; Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074. Where, on appeal, a copy of a paper, instead of the original, appears in the judgment roll, it will be presumed that the original was lost and that the copy was properly substituted. Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220. Findings bearing a date subsequent to the time the judgment roll is presumed to have been completed, and inserted in the judgment roll after the judgment, cannot be considered a part thereof: on appeal, all intendments are in favor of the regularity of the proceedings, and, in the absence of a statement or bill of exceptions, it will be presumed the findings were waived. Gordan v. Donahue, 79 Cal. 501; 21 Pac. 970.

Conclusiveness of finding or recital of service of process. The finding of the court, that the defendant was duly served with process, is sufficient to show jurisdiction; the judgment does not depend upon the performance of the clerical duty of making up the judgment roll or the preservation of the papers; it is enough if the facts exist which give the court jurisdiction, and the finding that they do exist, though the summons and return are lost or mislaid, is sufficient. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219. Recital of service in the judgment itself, where the judgment roll was lost, is conclusive on collateral attack, and parol testimony is not admissible to contradict the same after the lapse of many years. People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311. The finding or recital of due service of process is not conclusive, where the proof of service is a part of the judgment roll, and, as it appears in such roll, is not sufficient evidence of such service, as where it is not sworn to nor does it appear to be certified by any officer as his act. Reinhart v. Lugo, 86 Cal. 395; 21 Am. St. Rep. 52; 24 Pac. 1089. Where the summons is not included in the judgment roll, but it appears that it was issued, with evidence of its contents, showing that it was regular and sufficient in form, and that it was duly served, such a prima facie showing is made as to the jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, even in the absence of the original summons, as will support the judgment upon a direct attack; and such a showing is made by a judgment roll containing the affidavit for publication of summons, showing that it had issued; the order of publication, showing the same thing; the affidavit of the printer, showing publication containing a copy of the summons; the affidavit of mailing; and the decree, reciting due service on and the default of the defendant. Kahn v. Matthai, 115 Cal. 689; 47 Pac. 698. The recital of service in the judgment is only prima facie evidence of service, where the judgment is directly attacked, and is never conclusive, except where the attack is collateral. Whitney v. Daggett, 108 Cal. 232; 41 Pac. 471. To sustain a judgment directly attacked, the record must show that the court had jurisdiction of the person against whom the judgment was rendered, and that the judgment was warranted by the allegations of the pleadings of the party in whose favor it was rendered; and in determining that question, the recitals in the judgment cannot be regarded: the question is, whether the record sustains the judgment, and such recitals, therefore, will not be accepted as a substitute for the summons and the proof of service. McKinlay v Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570. Where service is made by publication, the record must affirmatively show proper service, or, upon direct attack, it will be held that the court did not acquire jurisdiction. Weeks v. Garibaldi etc. Mining Co., 73 Cal. 599; 15 Pac. 302.

Correction of clerical errors in judgment. Clerical errors in a judgment, shown by the record, may be corrected at any time, so as to make the entry correspond with the judgment rendered; and this may be done even after an appeal and affirmance of the judgment. Dreyfuss v. Tompkins, 67 Cal. 339; 7 Pac. 732.

Validity of judgment. A judgment is void upon its face, only when that fact is made apparent upon an inspection of the judgment roll. People v. Thomas, 101 Cal. 571; 36 Pac. 9; and see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Jacks v. Baldez, 97 Cal. 91; 31 Pac. 899; People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 379; 68 Am. St. Rep. 30; 58 Pac. 844. A judgment void upon its face is one that appears to be void upon an inspection of the judgment roll: the mere absence therefrom of a paper showing service of summons cannot invalidate the judgment, where the judgment itself shows that the defendant was duly served; and such recitals or findings are as conclusive upon the parties, in all collateral proceedings, as any adjudication of the court, and it must be presumed that they were supported by sufficient testimony not set forth in the record. People v. Harrison, 84 Cal. 607; 24 Pac. 311; Whitney v. Daggett, 108 Cal. 232; 41 Pac. 471. In determining whether or not the invalidity of a judgment by default is apparent from an inspection thereof, the affidavit for the publication of summons and the order directing publication may be considered. People v. Mulcahy, 159 Cal. 34; 112 Pac. 853. The findings and the judgment may be incorporated in the same document, and the judgment is not rendered ineffective for that reason. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868.

Vacating or setting aside judgment. A judgment, void on its face, which requires only an inspection of the judgment roll to show its invalidity, will be set aside, on motion, by the court rendering it, at any time after its entry; and a judgment void in fact for want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, but the invalidity of which does not appear from the judgment roll, may be set aside, upon motion, within a reasonable time after its entry. People v. Temple, 103 Cal. 447; 37 Pac. 414; and see People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197; People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 651. The court may at any time set aside a judgment, entered on default, by the clerk, when it appears from the judgment roll that the clerk had no authority to enter it. Wharton v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 422; 9 Pac. 727; People v. Greene, 74 Cal. 400; 5 Am. St. Rep. 448; 16 Pac. 197; Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. To obtain an order vacating a judgment on the ground of a defect in the affidavit for publication of summons, the judgment must be void on the face of the record, or in other words, it should appear from the record that the affidavit was so defective as to confer no jurisdiction on the trial judge to make the order of publication. People v. Wrin, 143 Cal. 11; 76 Cal. 646. A judgment cannot be vacated or set aside, except upon application pursuant to § 473, ante, unless its invalidity is apparent from an inspection of the judgment roll; if its invalidity does not appear from such inspection, the sole remedy of the aggrieved party, who may not in fact have been served with process, must be found in a new action on the equity side of the court. People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673; 77 Pac. 671. The record or judgment roll cannot be impeached for want of jurisdiction, by evidence aliunde; hence, the minutes and files of the court are inadmissible for that purpose. Ballerino v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 759; 84 Pac. 225.

Appeal. The record of the judgment is the judgment roll, and the statute has provided of what this shall consist; and, upon an appeal from a final judgment, the only papers that can be considered, where there is no bill of exceptions, are the notice of appeal and the judgment roll. Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220. On an appeal from a judgment, without a statement or bill of exceptions, the court will review the judgment roll only. McAbee v. Randall, 41 Cal. 136. A party is not precluded, on appeal, from using a bill of exceptions made up and settled pursuant to § 650, ante, by the mandate of this section, that the clerk shall make up the judgment roll immediately after the entry of judgment; and such bill may form part of the record on appeal from the judgment. Caldwell v. Parks, 47 Cal. 640; Berry v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 643. Where the only question that can arise upon appeal is a legal one, the appellate court is limited, in its examination, to the papers mentioned in the first subdivision of this section. Crackel v. Crackel, 17 Cal. App. 600; 121 Pac. 295. The amendment to this section in 1907, making orders striking out pleadings a part of the judgment roll, did not enlarge the scope of an appeal taken solely from an order denying a motion for a new trial. Stockton Iron Works v. Walters, 18 Cal. App. 373; 123 Pac. 240. On an appeal from an interlocutory decree in partition, it is the entry of the interlocutory decree, and not the mere ministerial act of the clerk in compiling the judgment roll, which, by the very contemplation of the law, is to be done after such entry, which sets the statute of limitations running for the purpose of an appeal. Dore v. Klumpke, 140 Cal. 356; 73 Pac. 1064.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A judgment does not depend for its validity upon the clerk performing his duty in making up the judgment roll, or in preserving the papers. Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219; Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505. An answer stricken out by order of the court is still entitled to a place in the judgment roll. Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295. An order overruling a demurrer is part of the judgment roll. Abadie v. Carrillo, 32 Cal. 172. Bills of exceptions are part of the judgment roll. Wetherbee v. Carroll, 33 Cal. 549; More v. Del Valle, 28 Cal. 170. For judgment roll in cases of judgment by default, see Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 403, 94 Am. Dec. 742, cited and quoted at length in subd. 1 of note to § 415, ante. The affidavit on which a motion to strike out an answer is based does not form part of the judgment roll. Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 238. The motion and order to strike out portions of the original complaint are not parts of the judgment roll. Sutter v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 114; Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 109; Dimick v. Campbell, 31 Cal. 239; Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 513. The action of the court on demurrer is part of the judgment roll, and no exception need be taken. Smith v. Lawrence, 38 Cal. 28, 99 Am. Dec. 344, overruling, to this extent, Bostwick v. McCorkle, 22 Cal. 669. An order sustaining the demurrer to defendant's cross-complaint constitutes part of the judgment roll. Packard v. Bird, 40 Cal. 378.

§ 671. Judgment lien, when it begins and when it expires. Immediately after filing the judgment roll, the clerk must make the proper entries of the judgment, under appropriate heads, in the docket kept by him; and from the time the judgment is docketed it becomes a lien upon all the real property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution in the county, owned by him at the time, or which he may afterwards acquire, until the lien ceases. The lien continues for five years, unless the enforcement of the judgment be stayed on appeal by the execution of a sufficient undertaking as provided in this code, in which case the lien of the judgment and any lien by virtue of an attachment that has been issued and levied in the action ceases.

Judgment-docket. See post, §§ 672–674.

Recording transcript of docket in another county. Post, § 674.

Judgment after decedent's death, on verdict, etc., before. Post, § 1506.

Undertaking on appeal. Post, §§ 941 et seq.

Legislation § 671. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 204), (1) changing "shall" to "must," in first line, (2) changing the words "shall become" to "becomes," before "a lien," (3) omitting the word "said" before "lien expires," and (4) changing the words "shall continue" to "continues," in the last sentence, which then read: "The lien continues for two years, unless the judgment be previously satisfied."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 320, (1) changing the word "expires" to "ceases," after "until the lien," and (2) changing the last sentence to read: "The lien continues for two years, unless the enforcement of the judgment be stayed on appeal by the execution of a sufficient undertaking, as provided in this code, in which case the lien of the judgment ceases."

3. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 36.

Rendition of judgment. The making and filing of findings of fact and conclusions of law constitute the rendition of judgment, which is a judicial act; its entry is a ministerial act. Baum v. Roper, 1 Cal. App. 435; 82 Pac. 390.

Docketing of judgment. Docketing a judgment consists in the clerk's entering in the docket in the clerk's office a brief abstract of the judgment, as prescribed by § 672, post, and § 4178, subd. 3, Pol. Code, at the time prescribed by § 670, ante; and there is no judgment lien if the requirements of the law are not carried out. Eby v. Foster, 61 Cal. 282; Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. The docketing of a judgment is merely a ministerial act, for the purpose of creating a lien by the judgment upon the real property of the debtor. Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145; and see Otto v. Long, 144 Cal. 144; 77 Pac. 885. The judgment cannot be docketed, nor can the judgment be created, before the entry of the judgment and the making up and filing of the judgment roll. Menzies v. Watson, 105 Cal. 109; 38 Pac. 641. The time of docketing must appear by the record; the commencement of the lien is the day of docketing; and being purely a statutory lien, neither its existence nor its commencement can be proved by parol. Eby v. Foster, 61 Cal. 282. The judgment is a lien from the time it is docketed; and to entitle a judgment creditor, having a lien, to redeem, he must produce a copy of the docket of the judgment: a copy of the judgment itself is not sufficient. Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54.

Nature of judgment lien. The lien of a judgment is statutory: no such lien existed at common law. Boggs v. Dunn, 160 Cal. 285; 116 Pac. 743. The obvious intention is to charge the estate of the judgment debtor, and to give the creditor a certain time to get his money, and by the statute it is intended that this time shall run from the date of the judgment, or period at which the plaintiff is in a situation to take out execution and pursue his remedy to final satisfaction; the lien is but an incident of the judgment, and the statutory limitation of the lien commences to run only from the date of the remittitur from the appellate court. Dewey v. Latson, 6 Cal. 130; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. The judgment becomes a lien, only by force of the statute, and depends for its existence upon conditions of statutory origin. Culver v. Rogers, 28 Cal. 520. The judgment lien amounts merely to a security against subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers; for the judgment creditor gets no estate in the lands, and, though he should release all his right to the land, he might afterwards extend it by execution. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The lien of a judgment is not a conveyance. Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

Creation of judgment lien. A judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage, and providing for any deficiency in the event that the mortgaged property is insufficient to pay the debts, does not create a judgment lien. Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403; cited in Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. A judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage does not become a lien on the real estate, but when the deficiency, if any, is ascertained after the sale of the mortgaged premises and docketed, the same becomes a lien from that time. Culver v. Rogers, 28 Cal. 520; Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511; Carpenter v. Lewis, 119 Cal. 18; 50 Pac. 925. A judgment of a justice of the peace is made a lien, only by filing an abstract thereof in the office of the recorder, as provided by § 900, post. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167. Any interval of time, however small, in which title vests in the judgment debtor, is sufficient for the lien of the judgment to attach. Marriner v. Smith, 27 Cal. 650; Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511; Eby v. Foster, 61 Cal. 282.

Transcript of judgment. The production of a transcript of the judgment, by one seeking to redeem, is not equivalent to the production of a copy of the docket. Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

Interests or estates affected by judgment lien. The judgment lien is purely statutory; and as the statute provides that the judgment shall become a lien from the time it is docketed, only upon the property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution, that is, property not subject to forced sale, it does not attach to property declared a homestead (Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181; 76 Am. Dec. 516; Bowman v. Norton, 16 Cal. 213; Dam v. Zink, 112 Cal. 91; 44 Pac. 331; Yardley v. San Joaquin Valley Bank, 3 Cal. App. 651; 86 Pac. 978; Hohn v. Pauly, 11 Cal. App. 724; 106 Pac. 266); it does not even attach to the excess above the statutory homestead valuation. Boggs v. Dunn, 160 Cal. 285; 116 Pac. 743; Hohn v. Pauly, 11 Cal. App. 724; 106 Pac. 266. Although a judgment for money is docketed against a judgment debtor, yet his subsequent discharge in bankruptcy releases his homestead, as no judgment lien attached thereto. Boggs v. Dunn, 160 Cal. 283; 116 Pac. 743. A judgment is a lien only upon the real property owned by the judgment debtor at the time of the docketing of the judgment, or afterwards, and before the expiration of the lien, acquired. Wolfe v. Langford, 14 Cal. App. 359; 112 Pac. 203. An heir or a devisee is, upon the death of his testator or ancestor, immediately vested with the interest in the real property inherited by or devised to him, subject to the rights of administration; hence, a judgment lien, as against him, immediately attaches to such property. Martinovich v. Marsicano, 137 Cal. 354; 70 Pac. 459; and see Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Cal. 257; 71 Pac. 334; Gutter v. Dallamore, 144 Cal. 665; 79 Pac. 383. The lien of a judgment creates a preference over subsequently acquired rights, but in equity it does not attach to the mere legal title to the land, as existing in the defendant at its rendition, to the exclusion of a prior equitable title in a third person. Zenda Mining etc. Co. v. Tiffin, 11 Cal. App. 62; 104 Pac. 10. The statutory lien of a judgment upon the real estate of a judgment debtor can attach only upon property in which he has a vested legal interest; hence, where title to property has passed to and is vested in another, there is nothing upon which the lien of a judgment subsequently recovered can attach. People v. Irwin, 14 Cal. 428. A judgment duly docketed against a debtor, who makes a fraudulent conveyance prior to its rendition, becomes a lien on the real property so conveyed. First Nat. Bank v. Maxwell, 123 Cal. 360; 69 Am. St. Rep. 64; 55 Pac. 980. An unrecorded mortgage takes priority over a subsequent judgment lien. Bank of Ukiah v. Petaluma Sav. Bank, 100 Cal. 590; 35 Pac. 170. A judgment against a mortgagor, after the sale and foreclosure of the premises, is not a lien thereon, as the mortgagor's title is divested by the sale; the purchaser takes the entire beneficial interest in the property, except actual possession, and is considered in equity the owner, subject only to have his title divested by redemption. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120. The lien established by a judgment of divorce upon the real estate of the husband does not derive its force from this section. Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542; 55 Am. St. Rep. 86; 46 Pac. 609. A leasehold interest is not such an estate in real property as is affected by the lien given by this section. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243. A judgment operates as a lien only on the interest of the judgment debtor: a mere naked trustee has no interest in the land upon which a judgment lien can attach. Riverdale Mining Co. v. Wicks, 14 Cal. App. 526; 112 Pac. 896.

Lien of judgment for costs. A judgment for costs in partition proceedings may or may not be a lien upon the property of the judgment debtor, according as they are or are not specified in the judgment, as provided by § 796, post; and where they are so specified, they constitute a lien on the several shares, and the judgment may be enforced by execution against such shares, and against other property held by the respective parties, and such lien takes effect by relation at the time of the filing of the notice of lis pendens and without docketing the judgment; but in case costs are not allowed by and included in the judgment, but reserved, and, subsequently, a distinct judgment for costs is rendered, such judgment becomes a lien only upon being docketed, and in the same manner as other judgments. Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1046. The attachment lien is merged in the judgment lien, and ceases, except to maintain the priority of the lien upon the property attached, which priority is maintained and enforced under the judgment. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256.

How judgment lien may be affected. The judgment lien is suspended by appeal, only where execution of the judgment is stayed; if execution is not stayed, the life of the lien commences at the docketing of the judgment. Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. The death of the judgment debtor does not destroy the judgment lien; nor do the presentation of the judgment as a claim against the estate, and the recovery of another judgment upon the rejected claim, merge the original judgment nor destroy its lien. Estate of Wiley, 138 Cal. 301; 71 Pac. 441; Morton v. Adams, 124 Cal. 229; 71 Am. St. Rep. 53; 56 Pac. 1038. The effect of the judgment lien cannot be destroyed by an act providing that a laborer doing work for a corporation shall, under certain circumstances, have a lien upon all the property of the corporation. Johnson v. Goodyear Mining Co., 127 Cal. 4; 78 Am. St. Rep. 17; 47 L. R. A. 338; 59 Pac. 304. Where the lien of an attachment has become merged in a subsequent judgment, the lien of the judgment, including that of the attachment so merged, ceases at the expiration of five years from the date of the judgment. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667. The time during which the judgment lien runs commences at the docketing of the judgment, unless execution is stayed by an appeal with a stay bond, and the time during which execution is thus stayed is to be omitted from the computation; but any period of time between the docketing of the judgment and the stay of proceedings is to be included in the computation; a stay of proceedings, either by order of the court pending a motion for a new trial or by an appeal with a stay bond, merely suspends the running of the statutory time, but it does not postpone the commencement of the statutory limitation until after the stay has ceased. Barroilhet v. Hathaway, 31 Cal. 395; 89 Am. Dec. 193.

Execution under judgment lien. The judgment lien binds the lands, and the execution comes as a power to sell; the general lien is created by the judgment, and the execution is merely to give that lien effect, not by vesting a possessory right in the plaintiff to the land affected by it, but by designating it for a conversion into money by the operation of the fieri facias, and the act of the sheriff by virtue of it; and although a levy of the execution is unnecessary to give effect to the judgment lien, yet that course is usually pursued. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The levy of an execution, during the period of the lien, neither creates a new lien nor extends the judgment lien; and the judgment creditor must, in order to preserve his priority, sell the real property within the period of the statutory lien of the judgment. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; Rogers v. Druffel, 46 Cal. 654. A sale under execution relates to the time of the levy only; and where execution is levied during the life of the lien, but is returned without sale, a second execution, levied after the expiration of the lien, relates back only to the time of the levy. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. Execution may be issued and levied before the docketing of the judgment, and the sale and conveyance thereunder will pass all the interest held by the judgment debtor at the time of the levy. Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 137; Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145; Baum v. Roper, 1 Cal. App. 435; 82 Pac. 390. The relation of the judgment lienor to the property may be different, in some respects, after levy of execution, and new relations may arise thereby to the debtor and other creditors; but the issuance of levy and execution are not necessary to the lien. Estate of Wiley, 138 Cal. 301; 71 Pac. 441. The levy of the execution has not the effect of constituting a judgment, not otherwise such, a lien upon the premises: the lien of the execution is not that of the judgment, and the execution neither creates a judgment lien nor extends a judgment lien once created. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167.

Sale of property under judgment lien. The sale must be made during the statutory period of the judgment lien, in order to preserve the priority thereby acquired (Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256); and where the lien is subordinate to another, the interest of the debtor in the land should be sold subject to the superior lien. Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 488; 44 Pac. 177. The judgment creditor may petition the probate court for a sale of the property upon which he holds a judgment lien against the deceased; and the statute of limitations is suspended on the judgment lien by the filing of such petition. Estate of Wiley, 138 Cal. 301; 71 Pac. 441. An order enjoining a sale under execution does not stop the running of the statute. Rogers v. Druffel, 46 Cal. 654.

Attachment lien in its relation to judgment lien. Land subject to attachment cannot be conveyed by a debtor so as to exempt it from a judgment lien. Riley v. Nance, 97 Cal. 206; 32 Pac. 315 (Beatty, C. J.); and see People v. Irwin, 14 Cal. 434. Where, before judgment, an attachment debtor conveys land, there is no judgment lien upon the property into which the attachment lien can merge, nor is the attachment lien released by the execution of a bond on appeal from the judgment. Riley v. Nance, 97 Cal. 203; 31 Pac. 1126; and see Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The effect of a stay bond on appeal is to extinguish only the liens resulting from the judgment, and from process thereunder. The attachment lien is not extinguished by such undertaking, and, although merged in the judgment lien, it may be revived, where the judgment lien, instead of expiring by lapse of time, is extinguished by acts of the defendant. Riley v. Nance, 97 Cal. 206; 32 Pac. 315 (Beatty, C. J.).

Finding as to exemption. A docketed judgment is not necessarily a lien; and where the land is a homestead, and therefore exempt from execution, it is not necessary that the court shall state that fact as a reason for finding that the defendant had no lien; the only purpose of findings being to answer the questions put by the pleadings, if the facts are stated in the findings in the same way in which they are stated in the pleadings, they are sufficient. Dam v. Zink, 112 Cal. 91; 44 Pac. 331.

Fraudulent conveyance. The fact that claims allowed by an administrator were upon a judgment which was a lien upon property prior to the fraudulent conveyance thereof, does not affect the right of the administrator to have such fraudulent conveyance declared void by judicial decree. Ackerman v. Merle, 137 Cal. 157; 69 Pac. 982.

Equitable relief. The enforcement of a judgment lien may be sought as affirmative relief in an action to foreclose another lien, to which the lien-holder is made a party defendant. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Cal. 257; 71 Pac. 334; and see Holmes v. Richet, 56 Cal. 307; 38 Am. Rep. 54. Equity will enforce a judgment lien, where there is no other adequate remedy, or where the holder of the judgment lien is made a party defendant in an action to foreclose a prior mortgage. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Cal. 257; 71 Pac. 334.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The lien of a judgment is the creature of statute; the statute provides that a judgment shall become a lien from the time it is docketed upon the property of the judgment debtor, "not exempt from execution," which means upon property not subject to forced sale. The homestead is not subject to such sale, either on execution, or on any other final process of the court. Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181; 76 Am. Dec. 516. A conveyance made without authority does not affect the lien. Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524. The lien attaches only upon property in which such debtor has a vested legal interest. People v. Irwin, 14 Cal. 428. A judgment recovered against the husband is a lien on the homestead, and a sale of the homestead, upon an execution issued on such judgment, is void. Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181; 76 Am. Dec. 516; Bowman v. Norton, 16 Cal. 213. In a foreclosure suit, the judgment, in the usual form, ascertained the amount due, directed a sale of the mortgaged premises, the application of the proceeds to the payment of the debts, provided for the recovery of any deficiency, and authorized execution for the same. It was held that such a judgment did not become a lien on the real estate of the debtor from the time it was docketed. Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403. A person who has acquired a lien by virtue of judicial process occupies no better position than a purchaser without notice in a similar case. O'Rourke v. O'Connor, 39 Cal. 446. A judgment debtor cannot avail himself of errors in docketing the judgment, when the property has been sold under the judgment; if the property sold is his, the levy operated as a lien; if not, he has no right to complain. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

2. Lien cannot be extended. Levying an execution before the lien of the judgment upon which the execution issued expires, does not operate to prolong the lien of the judgment beyond the time limited in § 204 of the code. The levy and sale must both be made within the period of two years limited by statute. Isaac v. Swift, 10 Cal. 71; 70 Am. Dec. 698. If an undertaking on appeal is insufficient in amount to stay proceedings, the lien of the judgment is not extended by the appeal beyond two years from the time of its docketing; and this, where the undertaking was excepted to, there being no effort to enforce the judgment, pending the appeal. Guy v. Du Uprey, 16 Cal. 195; 76 Am. Dec. 518; see Dewey v. Latson, 6 Cal. 130; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 350; Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 404.

3. Judgment directing the sale of property not a lien. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 349; Culver v. Rogers, 28 Cal. 520.

4. What will or will not discharge the lien. Creating new counties, effect of. See People v. Hovious, 17 Cal. 471. The payment by a judgment debtor, after a sheriff's sale, extinguishes the lien; and the fact that he takes a transfer of the certificate and the sheriff's deed, instead of a certificate of redemption, cannot divest the lien of a subsequent judgment. McCarty v. Christie, 13 Cal. 79. The perfecting of an appeal does not discharge the lien. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

5. Time. In foreclosure cases, if there is a personal judgment directing a sale of the property, and the undertaking on appeal only stays the sale, and provides for costs, the lien of the personal judgment on the judgment debtor's property, in the county where it is docketed, attaches at the time it is docketed, and expires at the end of two years from the time the personal judgment is docketed. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 350; but see Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 404; Dewey v. Latson, 6 Cal. 130. The two years during which a judgment remains a lien on real estate commence to run from the docketing of the judgment, unless the judgment is stayed by an order of the court, pending a motion for new trial, or by an undertaking on appeal. Barroilhet v. Hathaway, 31 Cal. 395; 89 Am. Dec. 193. Said Justice Rhodes, in Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 131, 99 Am. Dec. 256:

"The purpose of an attachment is to hold the property of the defendant as security for such judgment as may be rendered (Prac. Act, § 120), and when the judgment is rendered and becomes a lien upon the property attached, the lien of the attachment becomes merged in that of the judgment, and the only effect thereafter of the attachment lien upon the property is to preserve the priority thereby acquired, and this priority is maintained and enforced under the judgment. If it does not cease at that time, except as giving priority to the judgment lien, when does it cease? Does it continue after the judgment lien has expired by limitation? The attachment lien, as to its amount, depends upon the ex parte statement of the plaintiff, while that of the judgment is certain. The lien of the latter is of a higher order, if it is possible that there can be different ranks among the liens. We will hazard the assertion that the law does not contemplate the existence, at the same time, of two distinct liens, arising by operation of law in one action, for the security of one demand. If the position is correct that the attachment lien ceases, except as maintaining priority for the judgment lien upon the property attached, it does not revive on the expiration of the judgment lien. Our remarks are confined to real property, as the judgment does not constitute a lien upon personal property.

"The judgment being a lien for two years from the time it is docketed upon the real estate of the defendant within the county in which the judgment is docketed, and a lien for the same time upon the real estate in any county in which a transcript of the docket is filed with the recorder, such liens are enforced by executions. That is the only purpose of the execution in respect to real estate while the judgment lien subsists. Section 210, prescribing the form of the execution, provides that it shall require the sheriff to satisfy the judgment out of the personal property of the debtor, etc., 'or if the judgment be a lien upon real property, then out of the real property belonging to him on the day when the judgment was docketed, or if the execution be issued to a county other than the one in which the judgment was recovered, on the day when the transcript was filed in the office of the recorder of such county, stating such day, or at any time thereafter.' This section manifests the purpose of the execution, so far as respects the lands that are covered by the lien of the judgment. Under the execution, doubtless, lands not subject to the judgment lien may be levied upon. It is provided in § 217 that all property, both real and personal, of the judgment debtor, 'may be attached on execution in like manner as upon writs of attachment.' We are not required, in this case, to reconcile the apparent conflict between this section and § 210, which prescribes what the execution shall contain, but we shall hereafter recur to the subject of a levy of the execution upon real property not subject to the lien of the judgment.

"The doctrine of Wood v. Colvin, 5 Hill, 228, that the judgment being a lien upon the lands, a levy is unnecessary, that the judgment binds the lands, and the execution comes as a power to sell, is often cited with approbation, and is, we think, the correct rule. The same principle is stated in Catlin v. Jackson, 8 Johns. 548. The chancellor, in delivering the unanimous opinion of the court of errors, says: 'In several essentials the effect of the execution must be different from a fi. fa. levied on personal estate only. The delivery of the fi. fa. gives no new rights to the plaintiff, and vests no new interests. The general lien is created by the judgment, and the execution is merely to give that lien effect—not by vesting a possessory right to the land affected by it in the plaintiff, but by designating it for a conversion into money by the operation of the fi. fa., and the act of the sheriff by virtue of it.' Although a levy of the execution is unnecessary to give effect to the judgment lien, yet that course is usually pursued, and the question arises whether the levy creates a new lien distinct from that of the judgment.

"The statute has not declared that the levy shall constitute a lien. At common law, the levy did not constitute a lien upon lands, nor could the title to lands be affected by an execution in satisfaction of a money judgment. Under a levari facias, not even the possession of lands, but only the present profits, were transferred; and when the writ of elegit was given by statute, the possession of a moiety of the defendant's lands was given to the plaintiff. 3 Bla. Com., p. 417. Mr. Chancellor Kent, in discussing the subject of the lien of judgments, executions, etc., says: 'The lien, after all, amounts only to a security against subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers; for, as the master of rolls said, in Brace v. Duchess of Marlborough, it was neither jus in re nor jus in rem—the judgment creditor gets no estate in the land; and though he should release all his right to the land, he might afterwards extend it by execution': 4 Kent's Com., p. 437. A lien being a mere priority over subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers, it is a contradiction of terms to say that by the levy a new priority is acquired, which, instead of antedating, must, of necessity, post-date the priority already held.

"The doctrine in New York and in this state is, that, in order to preserve the priority acquired by the judgment lien, the sale must be made during the statutory period of the lien. Isaac v. Swift, 10 Cal. 81; 70 Am. Dec. 698; Roe v. Swart, 5 Cow. 294; Little v. Harvey, 9 Wend. 158: Tufts v. Tufts, 18 Wend. 621; Graff v. Kip, 1 Ed. Ch. 619; Pettit v. Shepherd, 5 Paige, 493; 28 Am. Dec. 437. This was so held, on the ground that the opposite rule would extend the lien beyond the time mentioned in the statute. It would seem unaccountable that the legislature should have been so particular in fixing the period of the existence of the judgment lien, and that the courts should have been so careful in maintaining it, if, at the same time, the plaintiff might have acquired a lien through the execution that would last for the lifetime of the judgment.

"In the cases cited, when the executions were issued, but the lands were not sold during the lien of the judgments, there was abundant room for the question now presented. The vice-chancellor said, in Graff v. Kip: 'A plaintiff must take care to sell the lands of the defendant before the expiration of ten years, in order to avoid the danger of other encumbrances intervening; or if he wishes to continue the lien without a sale, then he must have a fresh judgment docketed before the other creditors come in and obtain judgments.' His familiarity with the effect of the levy of executions would readily have suggested to him the lien of the execution, instead of that of a 'fresh judgment,' if, in his opinion, the former constituted a lien, pending the lien of the latter. Mr. Justice Harris says: 'The doctrine on the subject (dormant executions) does not apply to real estate, the lien upon which depends upon the docketing of the judgment, and not upon the execution or levy.' Muir v. Leitch, 7 Barb. 341.

"There are several provisions of the statute that throw light upon, and in some degree test, this question. Suppose a judgment is docketed and execution issued and levied upon the do-fendant's lands, but no sale made within the two years of judgment lien, and that, one year subsequently to the docketing of the first, another creditor obtains and dockets his judgment and issues and levies his execution on the same lands. The senior judgment, after the two years of its lien, loses its priority; and we have seen that a sale upon execution, after that time, does not extend the lien of the judgment, and, during the third year after the docketing of the judgment, the levy, if it constituted a lien, became a dormant lien, for, during that year, the junior judgment has priority, and a sale under it would pass the title; and if, after the expiration of the third year, without sale under the junior judgment, the priority shifts back to the first levy, it must be worked out by a process of revivor, for which we find no warrant in the statute. Or, suppose the judgment defendant sells and conveys the lands during the existence of the judgment lien, and after the levy of the execution, but there is no sale under the execution until after the judgment lien expires, do the lands remain chargeable with the judgment? No one will so affirm, unless he is prepared to say that a judgment remains a lien as against subsequent purchasers for five years. Subsequent encumbrancers stand on the same footing with subsequent purchasers as to the operation of prior liens.

"The Practice Act (§ 230) provides for a redemption, and those entitled to redeem are the judgment debtor, his successors in interest, and a creditor having a lien by judgment or mortgage subsequent to that on which the property was sold. It is unaccountable that the legislature should have omitted those having liens by executions, if it was intended that the levy should create a lien. It is provided by § 231 that the redemptioner shall pay not only the purchase-money, with the percentage, etc., but also the amount of any lien prior to that of the redemptioner. Had the second creditor, in the case first supposed, sold the lands during the second year of his lien, the first creditor could not have redeemed, because he did not hold a subsequent judgment lien; but if the first creditor had purchased at that sale, and a third judgment creditor had come to redeem, he would not have been required to pay the amount of the first judgment, because it did not then constitute a lien; but he would have to satisfy the execution issued upon it, if the levy did, in truth, amount to a lien.

"Under our statutes, the period of the docket lien is less than that during which an execution may issue, and the same is the case in New York, as well as in many other states. According to the provisions of § 214 of the Practice Act in force up to 1861, an execution might issue, as of course, within five years from the entry of the judgment; and after that time, upon leave of the court, upon showing that the judgment, or some portion of it, remained unsatisfied and due. The shorter period of the judgment lien was adopted for the purpose of leaving real estate unencumbered, as far as possible, consistently with the just demands of creditors for adequate security. The brief time of the lien of a mortgage—four years—also indicates the same policy of the law. Not only would this purpose be defeated, if the creditor could, during the judgment lien, acquire a new lien, not merely coextensive with that of the judgment, but even extending to a time after a recovery upon the judgment itself was barred by the statute of limitations; and it would seem that the courts were trifling, in holding that the levy and proceedings for the sale did not extend the docket lien,—an operation that would be useless in the presence of a lien that might continue longer than was possible for the docket lien. If the defendant conveys his real estate, subject to the judgment lien, and an execution is thereafter issued during the period of that lien, such real estate may be levied on and sold under the execution, and if the levy produces a lien, it results that, by operation of law, a lien may be acquired to secure the satisfaction of the judgment upon property which the judgment debtor does not then own. No one would contend for such a principle. If there was no lien when the defendant sold the property, none could be produced by a levy; but if there was a judgment lien, and the property conveyed to the third person is levied upon and sold under execution, evidently the sale must be the enforcement of the judgment lien, as that was the only existing lien.

"Where there are several executions in the hands of the officer at the same time, under which the lands are sold, it is held that the money must be applied first to the satisfaction of the oldest existing judgment lien. Roe v. Swart, 5 Cow. 294; Barker v. Gates, 1 How. Pr. 77; Jackson v. Robert, 11 Wend. 422. It was held in Roe v. Swart, supra, that, although the execution upon the first judgment was issued within ten years from the docketing, yet, as the sale was not made within the ten years, the money must be applied to the satisfaction of the second judgment. And where an execution was sent to another county, and was received by the sheriff before the judgment was docketed in that county, the execution took priority from the date of the docketing. Stoutenberg v. Vandenburg, 7 How. Pr. 229."

The docketing creates and preserves a lien for two years; but, without docketing, execution may issue. Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 137.

§ 672. Docket defined. How kept, and what to contain. The docket mentioned in the last section is a book which the clerk keeps in his office, with each page divided into nine columns, and headed as follows: Date of entry in docket; judgment debtors; judgment creditors; judgment; time of entry; where entered in judgment-book; appeals, when taken; judgment of appellate court; satisfaction of judgment, when entered. If the judgment is for the recovery of money, the amount must be stated in the docket under the head of judgment; if the judgment is for any other relief, a memorandum of the general character of the relief granted must be stated. The names of the defendants must be entered in alphabetical order.

Docketing judgment. Ante, § 671.

Duty of clerk to keep docket. Pol. Code, § 4178.

Legislation § 672. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 205, which had (1) the words "shall keep" instead of "keeps," after "clerk," (2) the word "shall" instead of "must," in all instances, and (3) the words "in the docket," before "in alphabetical order."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 151; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 720, (1) substituting "nine" for "eight," (2) inserting "Date of entry in docket," (3) inserting the word "the" after "If," (4) changing the word "be" to "is," in both instances, and (5) omitting the words "or damages" before "the amount"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment requires the date of the docketing of the judgment to appear in the docket, in order that some means shall exist for determining when the judgment lien commences. The necessity for such an amendment is made apparent by the decision in Menzies v. Watson, 105 Cal. 109."

Docketing of judgment. Docketing a judgment consists in entering in the docket in the clerk's office a brief abstract of the judgment; and it is the duty of the clerk to enter in this docket the title of the cause, with the date of its commencement, and a memorandum of every subsequent proceeding therein, with the date thereof; and the docket, to create a prior statutory judgment lien, must, of itself, show the date of the docketing of the judgment. Eby v. Foster, 61 Cal. 282. Upon the filing of the findings and decree, it is the ministerial duty of the clerk to enter and docket the judgment, and to prepare and file the judgment roll; but he cannot, by neglecting to perform that duty, destroy or impair the effect of the judgment. Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. The "docket" mentioned in this section is not the book in which judgments are to be entered. Old Settlers Investment Co. v. White, 158 Cal. 236; 110 Pac. 922. The date of the entry of the judgment is as important a part of the record as the entry itself. Estate of Scott, 124 Cal. 671; 57 Pac. 654; and see Estate of Pichoir, 139 Cal. 694; 70 Pac. 214; 73 Pac. 604. Surnames should precede christian names, and the omission of the christian name of the judgment debtor does not deprive the docket of its useful function of directing the attention of those interested to the existence of the judgment and to all its incidents. Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511. To create a judgment lien, the judgment must be properly docketed: among other things, it must be docketed against the judgment debtor in his correct name. Huff v. Sweetser, 8 Cal. App. 689; 97 Pac. 705. A statement of the amounts of a judgment, entered in the judgment docket by placing the Arabic numerals indicating the amounts under the heading, "Amount of Judgment," one of such amounts being preceded by the word "Costs," the dollar-column being separated from the cent-column by a vertical red line, without any dollar or cent mark or any other designation of money, as is common where sums of money are written in columns, is a sufficient statement of the amount of the judgment to create a lien under this section. Dyke v. Bank of Orange, 90 Cal. 397; 27 Pac. 304. A complaint on a judgment need not allege that it was docketed. High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386; 29 Am. St. Rep. 121; 30 Pac. 556.

Docketing judgments. See note 87 Am. St. Rep. 665.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The docket is constructive notice of the lien to strangers to the judgment. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293; Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 140.

§ 673. Docket to be open for inspection without charge. The docket kept by the clerk is open at all times, during office hours, for the inspection of the public, without charge. The clerk must arrange the several dockets kept by him in such a manner as to facilitate their inspection.

Public writings, open to inspection. Post, §§ 1892, 1893.

Legislation § 673. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 206, which had (1) the words "shall be" instead of "is," before "open," and (2) the words "and it shall be the duty of the clerk to" instead of "The clerk must."

§ 674. Transcript to be filed in any county, and judgment to become a lien there. The transcript of the original docket of any judgment, the enforcement of which has not been stayed on appeal, certified by the clerk, may be filed with the recorder of any other county, and from such filing the judgment becomes a lien upon all the real property of the judgment debtor not exempt from execution in such county, owned by him at the time, or which he may afterward, and before the lien expires, acquire. The lien continues for two years unless the judgment is previously satisfied or the lien otherwise discharged.

Judgment.

1. May be recorded without acknowledgment. Civ. Code, § 1159.

2. Recording, in county where land situated. Ante, § 400; but see § 78.

3. Of justice's court. Abstract creates lien. Post, § 900.

Recording, generally. Civ. Code, §§ 1158 et seq.

Legislation § 674. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 207 (New York Code, § 282), which had (1) the words "shall become" instead of "becomes," before "a lien upon," (2) the words "acquire, until the said lien expires" instead of "and before the lien expires, acquire," and (3) the words "shall continue" instead of "continues." When enacted in 1872, § 674 read the same as now except for the amendments of 1907.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 151; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 720, (1) changing, in first line, "A" to "The," (2) adding, after "original docket," the words "of any judgment, the enforcement of which has not been stayed on appeal," (3) changing "the time of the" to "such," before "filing the judgment," and

(4) in last sentence, (a) changing "be" to "is," and (b) adding the words "or the lien otherwise discharged."

Duration of lien. Where there is a judgment in personam, in addition to a decree of foreclosure and order of sale, the lien of the personal judgment on the property of the judgment debtor, in the county where the judgment is docketed, attaches at the time such judgment is docketed, and expires at the end of two years from the date of such docketing. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. The levying of an execution is not essential to the existence or continuance of a judgment lien, under this section, which continues for two years, whether or not the execution has been taken out; and no execution can issue after the death of the judgment debtor. Estate of Wiley, 138 Cal. 301; 71 Pac. 441.

What property affected by filing transcript. This section and § 671, ante, make the judgment a lien only on real property not exempt from execution: homestead property is not subject to a judgment lien. Boggs v. Dunn, 160 Cal. 283; 116 Pac. 743.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Upon filing the transcript with a county recorder of another county, the judgment becomes a lien upon the debtor's real property in that county for two years from the date of the filing, notwithstanding a lien by virtue of the same judgment has previously existed, and expired by lapse of time, in another county. Donner v. Palmer, 23 Cal. 40. Filing the transcript with the recorder of any other county makes it a lien upon the real estate in that county, but it does not make it a judgment of the district court for that county. People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220. But the mere contingent provision in a decree of foreclosure, for execution in case of deficiency, etc., does not amount to a personal judgment, and to such provision no effect can be given as a lien until the amount of the deficiency has been ascertained and fixed. The lien does not commence to run until the deficiency is ascertained, and an execution be issued therefor. Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 420; see also notes to §§ 670, 671, ante.

§ 675. Satisfaction of a judgment, how made. Satisfaction of a judgment may be entered in the clerk's docket upon an execution returned satisfied, or upon an acknowledgment of satisfaction filed with the clerk, made in the manner of an acknowledgment of a conveyance of real property, by the judgment creditor, or by his indorsement on the face, or on the margin of the record of the judgment, or by the attorney, unless a revocation of his authority is filed. Whenever a judgment is satisfied in fact, otherwise than upon an execution, the party or attorney must give such acknowledgment, or make such indorsement, and, upon motion, the court may compel it, or may order the entry of satisfaction to be made without it.

Acknowledgments, powers of judicial officers to take. Ante, § 179.

Attorney, power of, to bind client. Ante, §§ 283–285.

Legislation § 675. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 208), (1) changing, at end of first sentence, the words "be previously" to "is," before "filed," (2) in second sentence, (a) changing the words "shall be" to "is," before "satisfied," (b) omitting the words "it shall be the duty of," after "execution," and (c) changing the word "to" to "must," after "attorney."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 320, (1) in first sentence, adding the words "or by his indorsement on the face, or on the margin of the record of the judgment," and (2) in second sentence, adding the words "or make such indorsement."

Who may enter or acknowledge satisfaction. Only on payment of the whole amount due is one co-judgment creditor authorized to enter satisfaction without the consent of the other. Haggin v. Clark, 61 Cal. 1. The use of the name of a nominal plaintiff, by his assignee, or the agent of his assignee, in satisfying the judgment, is not improper. Cobb v. Doggett, 142 Cal. 142; 75 Pac. 785. The beneficial owners of a judgment on claims assigned for collection may enter satisfaction; and enforcement of the judgment by their assignee, after such satisfaction, will be enjoined. Meyer v. Tully, 46 Cal. 70. The assignment of a judgment to an attorney, with defeasance by him that he held half thereof in trust for his grantor, does not confer upon him authority to satisfy the judgment for less than the full amount. Cobb v. Doggett, 142 Cal. 142; 75 Pac. 785.

Effect of payment of judgment. The payment of a judgment does not always amount to a satisfaction: the rule is, that the mere payment of a judgment by one joint debtor does not operate as an accord and satisfaction of the judgment as to other joint judgment debtors, unless it plainly appears that the payment was intended to have such effect. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762. Where one of two defendants pays a joint judgment, but not with the intention of discharging it, he is entitled to use the judgment for his protection and indemnity, and may enforce it against his co-defendant for his legal proportion of the debt. Coffee v. Tevis, 17 Cal. 239; Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762. A judgment debtor, pending an appeal by him from the judgment, may waive his right to prosecute the appeal, and may satisfy the judgment by paying the amount thereof on an execution levied thereon against the judgment creditor; such a payment operates as a satisfaction of the judgment, as against a prior assignee of a part interest therein, if the judgment debtor, at the time of the payment, had no notice of the assignment, and the filing of the assignment is not constructive notice thereof. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536. The payment of a judgment, unless by way of compromise, or with an agreement not to take or pursue an appeal, cannot prevent a party against whom a judgment was rendered from seeking a reversal on appeal. Warner v. Freud, 131 Cal. 639; 82 Am. St. Rep. 400; 63 Pac. 1017. A forced payment by execution sale, against a nonconsenting judgment debtor, cannot be held to abridge any of his rights upon or under appeal. Vermont Marble Co. v. Black, 123 Cal. 21; 55 Pac. 599; Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. The payment of a judgment by an administratrix, for the purpose of protecting the rights of the estate in real property, which would otherwise be forfeited, should be deemed a compulsory payment: it does not affect the right of appeal. Warner v. Freud, 131 Cal. 639; 82 Am. St. Rep. 400; 63 Pac. 1017.

When court will compel entry of satisfaction. Where a judgment has been paid, but not satisfied of record, a remedy is provided by this section for entry of satisfaction, and, for that purpose, for the recall of any execution issued upon such judgment. Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617; Mowry v. Heney, 3 Cal. Unrep. 277; 24 Pac. 301. Where, exclusive of keeper's fees under a writ of attachment forming no part of the judgment, the amount realized from the sale of the property under execution is sufficient to satisfy the judgment, including the amount of costs claimed in the cost-bill and accruing costs, the defendant is entitled to have the judgment satisfied. Hotchkiss v. Smith, 108 Cal. 285; 41 Pac. 304. The sureties on an appeal bond are not entitled to notice before the entry of judgment against them; but if the judgment is in fact satisfied, they may apply, under the provisions of this section, to have it satisfied of record. Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617. Where the judgment determines the rights of the parties plaintiff as between themselves, the defendant, who has acquired the right of one plaintiff, may, upon tender of the amount due the other plaintiff, and the refusal thereof, compel the entry of satisfaction by proceeding under this section. Haggin v. Clark, 71 Cal. 444; 9 Pac. 736; 12 Pac. 478.

Use of motion to have judgment satisfied. A motion to have a judgment satisfied cannot be used as a means to reopen the case; that is, where the judgment has determined the respective rights of the parties plaintiff as between themselves, it cannot be shown by affidavits, on such motion, that their rights are in fact different. Haggin v. Clark, 71 Cal. 444; 9 Pac. 736.

Satisfaction of record, but not in fact. Where the judgment has been satisfied of record, but not in fact, it is the proper and regular practice to order the defendant to show cause why execution should not issue upon the judgment, thus giving him an opportunity to be heard upon the matter. McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268; 38 Pac. 730.

Satisfaction as to one defendant, effect of, as to others. The conditional release of one of two joint judgment debtors, "so far as the same can be done without releasing or discharging" the other from the payment of the balance, does not release or discharge the other. Barnum v. Cochrane, 139 Cal. 494; 73 Pac. 242. The satisfaction and release of judgment as to one of several joint tort-feasors, where the judgment was for joint damages, operates in law as a satisfaction and release of all. Chetwood v. California Nat. Bank, 113 Cal. 414; 45 Pac. 704. There can be but one satisfaction accorded for the same wrong; and while the plaintiff may sue individually or together persons guilty in common of a tort, yet he cannot, by suing each wrong-doer alone, secure more than one compensation for the same injury. Butler v. Ashworth, 110 Cal. 614; 43 Pac. 386.

Offset of judgment as satisfaction. Satisfaction may be made by the set-off of another judgment; and the court may decree this by virtue of its general jurisdiction over its judgments and suitors. Coonan v. Loewenthal, 147 Cal. 218; 109 Am. St. Rep. 128; 81 Pac. 527. A person may receive money due on a judgment rendered in favor of himself and several others, co-plaintiffs; but he cannot, without authority from his co-plaintiffs, set off a judgment due to him and then jointly against another judgment, held by the defendant in such joint judgment, against himself alone. Corwin v. Ward, 35 Cal. 195; 95 Am. Dec. 93.

Equitable relief. The equitable remedy of enjoining the execution of a judgment is not barred by this section, and especially not where the party seeking the relief has applied to the court rendering the judgment to declare satisfaction and recall the execution, but has been denied such relief. Eppinger v. Scott, 130 Cal. 275; 62 Pac. 460.

Appeal. The voluntary satisfaction of the judgment renders the question on appeal a moot question, and therefore the appeal will be dismissed. Moore v. Morrison, 130 Cal. 80; 62 Pac. 268. Where the attorney for a party enters satisfaction of a judgment for less than the amount thereof, and the testimony is conflicting.

as to whether such attorney had authority from his client to enter such satisfaction, and the motion of the client to have the satisfaction vacated is denied, the decision will not be set aside on appeal. Fuller v. Baker, 48 Cal. 632. Enforced satisfaction by execution cannot deprive the judgment debtor of his right to appeal, and he may require restitution in case of reversal. Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. A judgment against a deceased person is not satisfied, so as to prevent or cause a dismissal of the appeal, by a sale of the property of the estate under execution, and the payment of the proceeds into court to await the result of the appeal. Vermont Marble Co. v. Black, 123 Cal. 21; 55 Pac. 599. The affirmance of the judgment will not affect the fact that the judgment has been in part satisfied. Ryland v. Heney, 130 Cal. 426; 62 Pac. 616.

Review. When a judgment is satisfied, it is beyond review: the satisfaction thereof is the last act and end of the proceeding; the payment produces a permanent and irrevocable discharge, after which the judgment cannot be restored by any subsequent agreement, nor kept on foot to cover new and distinct engagements. Estate of Baby, 87 Cal. 200; 22 Am. St. Rep. 239; 25 Pac. 405. A party cannot accept the benefit or advantage given him by a judgment or order, and then seek to have it reviewed; but there is a limitation of this rule, where a reversal could not affect the right of the party to the benefit he has secured, as where the only controversy relates to his right to a greater amount. San Bernardino County v. Riverside County, 135 Cal. 618; 67 Pac. 1047. A judgment, fully paid and satisfied, will not be reviewed upon certiorari; and a judgment of contempt for violation of an injunction will not be reviewed, where the injunction has been obeyed and the fine imposed voluntarily paid by the defendant. Morton v. Superior Court, 65 Cal. 496; 4 Pac. 489; and see Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the execution is levied on sufficient property to satisfy it, the levy is a satisfaction of the judgment. People v. Chisholm, 8 Cal. 30; Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 94. Tender, or offer to perform, does not satisfy judgment. Redington v. Chase, 34 Cal. 666. In Deland v. Hiett, 27 Cal. 611, 87 Am. Dec. 102, it was held that payment of part of a money judgment, under an agreement that it should operate as satisfaction in full, will not discharge the judgment; but the rule of this case was changed by legislative action. See Stats. 1867–68, p. 31. See also Civ. Code, § 1524. Before action commenced, plaintiffs agreed with their attorneys, that if the latter brought the action and recovered they should have one third of the judgment and costs as compensation. After judgment, and execution issued, the plaintiffs compromised with the defendant for less than the amount of the judgment, and entered satisfaction upon the record. It was held, that the attorneys had no lien on the judgment, and could not disturb the satisfaction entered by the plaintiffs. Mansfield v. Dorland, 2 Cal. 507. The plaintiff in an execution may accept of promissory notes by a special agreement, as an absolute payment of the judgment, but the agreement must be proved by testimony other than the sheriff's return. Mitchell v. Hockett, 25 Cal. 538, 542; 85 Am. Dec. 151.

§ 675a. Satisfaction of mortgage recorded. Form of satisfaction. Whenever a mortgage on real property is foreclosed in this state and the property covered by such mortgage is sold under and pursuant to the decree of foreclosure entered in the action in which such foreclosure is had, it shall be the duty of the sheriff, or commissioner making the sale, as the case may be, within five days after the purchaser at the sale becomes entitled to a deed from such sheriff, or commissioner thereunder, to enter upon the margin of the county records where such mortgage is recorded, if the same be recorded, a satisfaction of the same.

Such satisfaction shall be substantially in the following form:

Full satisfaction and discharge of the within mortgage by foreclosure is hereby entered this —— day of ——, 19—. Decree of foreclosure entered the —— day of ——, 19—, in cause No. ——, entitled, —— vs. ——. Sale under such decree had the —— day of ——, 19—.

——, Sheriff (commissioner).

Legislation § 675a. Added by Stats. 1905, p. 243.

§ 676. Undertaking in actions to set aside transfer of property. Where an action is commenced to set aside a transfer or conveyance of property on the grounds that such transfer or conveyance was made to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor or creditors, the transferee or grantee to whom it is alleged the property was transferred or conveyed to hinder, delay or defraud creditors or the successors or assigns of such transferee or grantee, may give an undertaking as herein provided, and when such undertaking is given as herein provided, the transferee or grantee to whom it is alleged the property was transferred or conveyed to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, or the successors and assigns of such transferee or grantee, may sell, encumber, transfer, convey, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of the property, or any part thereof, which is alleged to have been transferred or conveyed to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, so that the purchaser, encumbrancer, transferee, mortgagee, grantee or pledgee of such property, will take, own, hold and possess such property unaffected by such action and suit, or the judgment which may be rendered therein.

Legislation § 676. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 98. fraudulent transfer. See note 75 Am. Dec. 359.
Form of judgment granting relief against

§ 677. Conditions of undertaking. Such undertaking with two sureties shall be executed by the transferee or grantee to whom it is alleged the property was transferred or conveyed to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, or the successor or assign of such transferee or grantee, in double the estimated value of the property so alleged to have been transferred or conveyed; provided, in no case need such undertaking be for a greater sum than double the amount of the debt or liability alleged to be due and owing to the plaintiff in such action, commenced to set aside said transfer and conveyance; and where such estimated value of the property alleged so to have been conveyed is less than the sum alleged to be due and owing to the plaintiff in the action, such estimated value shall be stated in the undertaking, and said undertaking shall be conditioned that, if it be adjudged in said action that the transfer or conveyance was made to hinder, delay or defraud a creditor or creditors, then that the transferee or grantee or the said successor or assigns of such transferee or grantee giving such undertaking, will pay to the plaintiff in said action a sum equal to the value, as the same is estimated in said undertaking, of said property alleged to have been transferred or conveyed to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, not exceeding the sum alleged to be due and owing to the plaintiff in the action.

Legislation § 677. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 99.

§ 677½. Filing and serving undertaking. Said undertaking shall be filed in the action in which said execution issued and a copy thereof served upon the plaintiff or his attorney in said action.

Legislation § 677½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 99.

§ 678. Objections to sureties. Within ten days after service of the copy of undertaking the plaintiff may object to such undertaking on the ground of inability of the sureties, or either of them, to pay the sum for which they become bound in said undertaking, and upon the ground that the estimated value of the property therein is less than the market value of such property. Such objection to the undertaking shall be made in writing, specifying the ground or grounds of objection, and if the objection is made to the undertaking that the estimated value therein is less than the market value of the property, such objection shall specify the plaintiff's estimate of the market value of the property. Such written objection shall be served upon the said transferee or grantee, or the successor or assigns of such transferee or grantee giving such undertaking.

Legislation § 678. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 99.

§ 678½. Justification of sureties. Approval and disapproval of undertaking. When the sureties or either of them, are objected to, the surety or sureties so objected to shall justify before the court in which the action is commenced, upon ten days' notice of the time when they will so justify being given to the plaintiff, or plaintiff's attorney. Upon the hearing and examination into the sufficiency of a surety, witness may be required to attend and evidence may be procured and introduced in the same manner as in trial of civil cases. Upon such hearing and examination the court shall make its order, in writing, approving or disapproving the sufficiency of the sureties or surety on such undertaking. In case the court disapproves of the surety or sureties on any undertaking, a new undertaking may be filed and served, and to any undertaking given under the provisions of this act the same objection to the sureties may be made and the same proceedings had as in case of the first undertaking filed and served.

Legislation § 678½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 99.

§ 679. Objection because estimated value in undertaking less than market value. New undertaking. When objection is made to the undertaking upon the ground that the estimated value of the property, as stated in the undertaking, is less than the market value of the property, the transferee or grantee, or the successor or assigns of such transferee or grantee giving the undertaking may accept the estimated value stated by the plaintiff in said objection, and a new undertaking may at once be filed, with the plaintiff's estimate stated therein as the estimated value, and no objection shall thereafter be made upon that ground; if the plaintiff's estimate of the market value is not accepted, the transferee or grantee, or the successor or assigns of the grantee or transferee giving such undertaking, upon ten days' notice to the plaintiff, shall move the court in which the action is pending to estimate the market value of the property, and upon the hearing of such motion, witnesses may be required to attend and testify, and evidence may be produced in the same manner as in the trial of civil actions. Upon the hearing of the motion the court shall estimate the market value of the property, and if the estimated value of the property as made by the court exceeds the estimated value as stated in the undertaking, a new undertaking shall be filed and served with the market value determined by the stated value therein as the estimated value of the property.

Legislation § 679. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 100.

§ 679½. Justification of sureties. The sureties shall justify upon the undertaking as required by section one thousand and fifty-seven of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Legislation § 679½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 100.

§ 680. When undertaking becomes effective. The undertaking shall become effective for the purpose stated in section one [section six hundred and seventy-six] of this act, ten days after service of copy thereof on the plaintiff, unless objection to such undertaking is made as in this act provided, and in case objection is so made to the undertaking filed and served, the same shall become effective for such purpose when an order is made by such court approving the sureties, when the surety or sureties are objected to, or affirming the estimate of the value of property when objection is made thereto, or in case any objection to the undertaking is sustained by the court when a new undertaking is filed and served as required by this act, to which no objection is made, or if made is not sustained by the court.

Legislation § 680. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 100.

§ 680½. Judgment against sureties. If judgment be rendered in said action that the alleged transfer or conveyance was made to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, then judgment shall be rendered in such action without further proceeding in favor of plaintiff and against the principal and sureties on said undertaking for the sum for which said undertaking was executed according to the conditions thereof.

Legislation § 680½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 101.

Effect of judgment against principal as evidence against surety. See note 83 Am. Dec. 380.

§ 681. Within what time execution may issue. The party in whose favor judgment is given may, at any time within five years after the entry thereof, have a writ of execution issued for its enforcement. If, after the entry of the judgment, the issuing of execution thereon is stayed or enjoined by any judgment or order of court, or by operation of law, the time during which it is so stayed or enjoined must be excluded from the computation of the five years within which execution may issue.

Time for execution, when extended. Post, § 685.

Appeal, stay of execution. Post, §§ 942–946.

Where money deposited by defendant, judgment to be satisfied thereon by clerk. Ante, § 500.

Attachment. If plaintiff obtains judgment, how satisfied. Ante, § 550.

Executor or administrator, no execution upon judgment against, when. Post, § 1504.

Receiver, in proceedings in aid of execution. Ante, § 564, subd. 4.

Death, no execution to issue after. See post, §§ 1504, 1505.

New execution, plaintiff may take out, where defendant discharged from prison. See post, § 1152.

Legislation § 681. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 209 (New York Code, § 283), which after "entry thereof," had, as the end of the section, the words "issue a writ of execution for its enforcement, as prescribed in this chapter." When enacted in 1872, these words were changed to read as at present, and then ended the section.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 152; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 682; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in adding all after the word 'enforcement' [the second sentence]. The justice of the amendment is self-evident."

Scope of section. This section applies as well to a decree enforcing a lien by order of sale for an amount due, as to personal judgments for the recovery of money. Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552; Jacks v. Johnston, 86 Cal. 384; 21 Am. St. Rep. 50; 24 Pac. 1057.

When party may have writ issued. A party in whose favor judgment is entered is entitled to execution immediately: he cannot be deprived of this right nor delayed in its exercise by any act of the opposite party. People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68. The right to execution for monthly allowances for the support of a wife during her lifetime does not accrue until such allowances respectively fall due. Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542; 55 Am. St. Rep. 86; 46 Pac. 609; and see De Uprey v. De Uprey, 23 Cal. 352. The rule that execution cannot be issued in vacation has no existence in this state. Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 212; McMillan v. Richards, 12 Cal. 467. The enforcement of a judgment by execution does not depend upon the entry or the docketing of the judgment: these are merely ministerial acts, the first of which is to put in motion the right of appeal from the judgment itself, and to limit the time within which the right may be exercised, or in which the judgment may be enforced, and the other to create a lien by the judgment upon the real property of the debtor. Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145. Execution may be issued upon a judgment before the entry of such judgment in the judgment-book, and the sale of the property under such execution is effective to pass title. Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145; Janes v. Bullard, 107 Cal. 130; 40 Pac. 108; Baun v. Roper, 1 Cal. App. 435; 82 Pac. 390. An execution on a judgment in an attachment suit is enforceable as soon as the judgment is entered, unless an appeal is taken at once and a stay bond given. Bailey v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 5 Cal. App. 740; 91 Pac. 416. This section restricts the absolute right to an execution to the five years after entry of judgment. Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330. The five years of limitation within which an execution for an unsatisfied balance on a foreclosure sale may be taken out commences to run from the date of the judgment of foreclosure, and not from the date when the balance was docketed. Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621. A writ of execution, issued after the lapse of five years from the entry of judgment, is void, and subject to be recalled by any proper proceeding instituted for that purpose; and a writ of injunction restraining the judgment creditor from issuing the execution does not operate to suspend the running of the statute. Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393; 28 Pac. 443; and see Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227; Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552; Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011.

Who may have writ issued. A commissioner in partition, who is allowed a fee for his services, is a "party in whose favor judgment is given," within the meaning of this section. Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011; Thomas v. San Diego College Co., 111 Cal. 358; 43 Pac. 965.

How party may compel issuance of writ. Where a recorder erroneously directs an execution, issued under a valid judgment, to be returned unsatisfied, and his order is complied with, he may be compelled by mandamus to issue another execution: his duty to do so is purely ministerial. Hayward v. Pimental, 107 Cal. 386; 40 Pac. 545. Upon motion for an order that execution issue, it is proper and regular practice for the court, of its own motion, to order the defendant to show cause why the plaintiff's motion should not be granted, thus giving the defendant an opportunity to be heard in answer: the order to show cause is simply a notice of the motion, and a citation of the defendant to appear at a stated time and place and show cause why the plaintiff's motion should not be granted. McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268; 38 Pac. 730.

Effect of levy. The levy of an execution on land, where the judgment itself was not a lien, creates a lien upon the land from the date of the levy. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. A garnishment on execution fixes the rights of the judgment creditor so as to make his right to recover the debt from the garnishee superior to any claim or demand accruing subsequently. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242.

Validity of execution. A variance from the judgment, as to the amount to be collected under an execution, simply renders the execution irregular: it does not make it void. Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330.

Stay of execution. The court is not authorized to stay the execution of a judgment, where there is any infirmity in the judgment by reason of a defective complaint. Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204; 37 Pac. 218.

Vacating execution. Jurisdiction. An order may be properly made by one department of a superior court vacating an execution wrongfully allowed by another department of the same court, after the lapse of five years: it is the same court acting in each instance. Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552.

Action on judgment. An action can be maintained in this state upon a domestic judgment, although the time within which execution might issue has expired. Ames

v. Hoy, 12 Cal. 11; Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538; Rowe v. Blake, 99 Cal. 167; 37 Am. St. Rep. 45; 33 Pac. 864. The provision of this section, limiting the issue of execution for the enforcement of judgment to a term of five years, is but a limitation upon a certain mode for its enforcement, and does not purport to limit or qualify the right to its enforcement in any other mode; therefore an action may be maintained to enforce a judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage, declaring the indebtedness therein ascertained to be a lien upon the mortgaged land and directing a sale thereof to satisfy the indebtedness. Rowe v. Blake, 99 Cal. 167; 37 Am. St. Rep. 45; 33 Pac. 864; and see Ames v. Hoy, 12 Cal. 11; Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538.

Action for damages. Levy under satisfied judgment. The procuring of the levy of an execution issued upon a satisfied judgment is a tort, and constitutes a liability not founded upon an instrument in writing, and the statute begins to run, in such case, at the time of the levy, and subsequently accruing damages do not constitute separate causes of action, and do not postpone the operation of the statute. Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208; McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208; 19 Pac. 382.

Whether lien of judgment continued by levy of execution. See note 99 Am. Dec. 267.

Effect of lapse of time on right to issue execution. See note 133 Am. St. Rep. 70.

Issuance of execution for part only of judgment debt. See note 19 Ann. Cas. 464.

Issuance of execution to enforce interlocutory order for payment of money. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 178.

Right to issue execution after death of judgment debtor. See note Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1047.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Generally. When execution may issue, etc. Effect of execution. Execution must be issued within five years from entry of judgment. White v. Clark, 5 Cal. 513; Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621. This applies to judgments in suits to foreclose mortgages. Stout v. Macy, 22 Cal. 647. And execution for an unsatisfied balance on judgment of foreclosure must be taken out within five years from date of judgment of foreclosure, and not from date of docketing balance remaining due after sale. Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621. The time during which execution was stayed by an order of the court is included in the five years, after the lapse of which an order of the court was necessary to take out execution. Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227. Execution may be issued and enforced, whether the judgment roll has been entered up or not. Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 614. See, generally, Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 417.

§ 681a. Stay of execution. The court or the judge thereof shall not have the power, without the consent of the adverse party, to stay, for a longer period than thirty days, the execution of any judgment or order the execution whereof would be stayed on appeal only by the execution of a stay bond.

Legislation § 681a. Added by Stats. 1911, p. 400.

Constitutionality of stay laws. See note 6 Am. Dec. 540.

Stay of execution otherwise than by statutory proceedings. See note 127 Am. St. Rep. 707.

§ 682. Who may issue the execution, its form, to whom directed, and what it shall require. The writ of execution must be issued in the name of the people, sealed with the seal of the court, and subscribed by the clerk, and be directed to the sheriff, and it must intelligibly refer to the judgment, stating the court, the county where the judgment roll is filed, and if it be for money, the amount thereof, and the amount actually due thereon, and if made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, as provided in section six hundred and sixty-seven, the execution must also state the kind of money or currency in which the judgment is payable, and must require the sheriff substantially as follows:

1. If it be against the property of the judgment debtor, it must require the sheriff to satisfy the judgment, with interest, out of the personal property of such debtor, and if sufficient personal property cannot be found, then out of his real property; or if the judgment be a lien upon real property, then out of the real property belonging to him on the day when the judgment was docketed, or at any time thereafter; or if the execution be issued to a county other than the one in which the judgment was recovered, on the day when the transcript of the docket was filed in the office of the recorder of such county, stating such day, or any time thereafter;

2. If it be against real or personal property in the hands of the personal representatives, heirs, devisees, legatees, tenants, or trustees, it must require the sheriff to satisfy the judgment, with interest, out of such property;

3. If it be against the person of the judgment debtor, it must require the sheriff to arrest such debtor and commit him to the jail of the county until he pay the judgment, with interest, or be discharged according to law;

4. If it be issued on a judgment made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, as provided in section six hundred and sixty-seven, it must also require the sheriff to satisfy the same in the kind of money or currency in which the judgment is made payable, and the sheriff must refuse payment in any other kind of money or currency; and in case of levy and sale of the property of the judgment debtor, he must refuse payment from any purchaser at such sale in any other kind of money or currency than that specified in the execution. The sheriff collecting money or currency in the manner required by this chapter, must pay to the plaintiff or party entitled to recover the same, the same kind of money or currency received by him, and in case of neglect or refusal so to do, he shall be liable on his official bond to the judgment creditor in three times the amount of the money so collected;

5. If it be for the delivery of the possession of real or personal property, it must require the sheriff to deliver the possession of the same, describing it, to the party entitled thereto, and may at the same time require the sheriff to satisfy any costs, damages, rents, or profits recovered by the same judgment, out of the personal property of the person against whom it was rendered, and the value of the property for which the judgment was rendered to be specified therein if a delivery thereof cannot be had; and if sufficient personal property cannot be found, then out of the real property, as provided in the first subdivision of this section.

Contempt in interfering with. Post, §§ 1209, 1210.

Judgments.

1. A lien. Ante, §§ 671, 674.

2. Interest on. See Civ. Code, §§ 1917, 1918, 1920.

Property leviable. Ante, § 542; post, § 688.

Levy without process, a misdemeanor. See Pen. Code, § 146.

Mandamus, execution may issue for costs and damages in. See post, § 1095.

Subd. 4. Judgment payable in specified kind of money. See ante, § 667.

Legislation § 682. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 210 (New York Code, § 289), as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 688. When § 682 was enacted in 1872, (1) in the introductory paragraph, (a) in the first line, "shall" was changed to "must," (b) "shall" was omitted before "be directed," (c) "shall" was changed to "it must," before "intelligibly," (d) "section 200 of this act" was changed to "section 667," and (e) "shall" was changed to "must" after "execution" and before "require"; (2) in subd. 1, (a) "shall" was changed to "must" before "require," and (b) the words "or at any time thereafter" were added after "docketed"; (3) in subd. 2, (a) the words "of real property" were omitted after "tenants," and (b) "shall" was changed to "must" before "require"; (4) in subd. 3, "shall" was changed to "must"; (5) in subd. 4, (a) the words "section 200 of this act, it shall" were changed to "section 667, it must," (b) "said" was changed to "the" before "judgment is made," (c) "shall" was changed to "must" after "sheriff," (d) "shall" was changed to "must" before "refuse payment," and (e) "act shall" was changed to "chapter, must"; (6) in subd. 5, (a) "shall" was changed to "must" before "require," and (b) "particularly" was omitted before "describing."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 152; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Writ must be subscribed by clerk. Every execution, to be valid, must be subscribed by the clerk; if his term has expired, the execution, if signed by a deputy clerk, is void. O'Donnell v. Merguire, 6 Cal. Unrep. 423; 60 Pac. 981.

Statement of amount due in the writ. The provision in this section, that an execution for money shall state the amount actually due thereon, does not apply to an order of sale upon a judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage. Hibernia Sav. etc. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812.

What may be levied upon. The only purpose of an execution, in respect to real estate upon which a judgment lien subsists, and while it subsists, is to enforce the lien by a sale of the property; and, doubtless, lands not subject to the judgment lien may be levied upon by virtue of the execution. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256.

Order in which property may be sold. The court may direct the order in which property may be sold, regardless of the order in which the parcels were enumerated by the pleader or set forth in the complaint; and the court may follow, by analogy, in a foreclosure sale, the requirements of this section for the terms of an ordinary writ of execution, and direct that the personal property be sold before resorting to the real estate. Bank of Ukiah v. Reed, 131 Cal. 597; 63 Pac. 921.

How writ may be attacked. A void writ of execution may be attacked by motion to vacate and set it aside, and also the sale made under it. Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552; Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393; 28 Pac. 443. Although the complaint was demurrable, and the judgment founded upon it erroneous for that reason, yet it does not follow that such judgment can be reviewed or the error corrected on motion to quash the execution, unless the judgment is utterly void. Hayward v. Pimental, 107 Cal. 386; 40 Pac. 545. A motion to recall an execution is a new and original proceeding; and the fact that the notice of the motion is signed by attorneys other than those who appeared in the original action, and that no substitution is shown, does not render the notice illegal. Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393; 28 Pac. 443; and see McDonald v. McConkey, 54 Cal. 143.

Amendment of writ. The power to amend an execution is limited to the amendment of the writs of the court, which can only be authenticated, under a statute such as ours, by the signature of the clerk, which signature is an essential part of the writ, without which there is no execution to be amended. O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527; 82 Am. St. Rep. 389; 63 Pac. 847. Where an irregular or imperfect execution is amendable, it is not void, but only voidable, and it should be served and returned by the sheriff. Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600; 21 Pac. 954; and see Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511. A copy of a judgment of foreclosure of a mortgage, issued and attested by the clerk, but not issued in the name of the people, neither directed to the sheriff nor directing him to execute the judgment, is not void, but is amendable, and will be regarded as sufficient authority to the sheriff to sell and convey the mortgaged premises. Newmark v. Chapman, 53 Cal. 557; and see Granger v. Sheriff, 140 Cal. 190; 73 Pac. 816; Hager v. Astorg, 145 Cal. 548; 104 Am. St. Rep. 68; 79 Pac. 68.

Validity of execution. Whether an execution is void or only voidable, depends upon the question whether or not it is amendable. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404. A sale to a bona fide purchaser under a voidable execution is valid, though the execution is afterwards set aside; but a sale under a void execution is invalid, and passes no title, even to a bona fide purchaser. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404; and see Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667; 76 Am. Dec. 459; Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 293. An execution directing the levy of more money than the judgment calls for is not void, but only voidable, and the sale thereunder is not invalid. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404. A sale made on a void execution is void, in consequence of irregularity in the proceedings concerning the sale. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337. A collateral attack can no more be made upon an erroneous execution, than upon an erroneous judgment; like an erroneous judgment, an erroneous execution is valid until set aside upon a direct proceeding proper for that purpose; and, until set aside, all the acts which have been done under it are also valid. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404.

Amendment of writs of execution. See note 101 Am. St. Rep. 550.

Effect of variance of execution from judgment as regards collection of interest. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 169.

Arrest under civil process for breach of warranty. See note 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 844.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404. Where a remittitur has been issued to a district court, the clerk may issue an execution for the costs accrued thereon, without the order of the district court; nor can the district court prevent the immediate execution of the judgment. Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 213. Where the clerk of the district court improperly refuses to issue execution on a judgment rendered in the court of which he is clerk, on the ground that the judgment has been attached at the suit of another person, a bill of equity cannot be sustained to release the attachment and compel the clerk to issue the execution by an action on the official bond of the clerk. Miller v. Sanderson, 10 Cal. 489. A writ of mandate will not lie to compel clerk to issue execution. Id.; Goodwin v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 333. An execution cannot exceed the judgment. Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411. If the execution authorize the levy of more money than the judgment calls for, it is voidable, but not void, and will not be set aside, but amended so as to correspond with the judgment. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 373; 99 Am. Dec. 404. The clerk can issue execution for damages and costs. McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232. Thus, if a judgment is against two, only one of whom appeals, and the appeal is dismissed with twenty per cent damages, the damages with the costs do not become part of the original judgment, and the redemptioner is not bound to pay them when he redeems from a sale under the judgment. Execution may issue for these damages and costs. McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 241. No execution can issue upon a judgment rendered against a county. When a judgment is rendered against a county, it is the duty of the supervisors to apply such funds in the treasury of the county as are not otherwise appropriated to its payment, or if there are no funds, and they possess the requisite power to levy a tax for that purpose, and if they fail or refuse to apply the funds or to execute the power, resort may be had to a mandamus. If there are no funds, and the power to levy the tax has not been delegated to them, the legislature must be invoked for additional authority. Emeric v. Gilman, 10 Cal. 404; 70 Am. Dec. 742. Issuing a second execution improperly is not a ground for equitable interference. The irregular proceeding must be corrected by the court issuing the writ. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 143; 73 Am. Dec. 639. If judgment by default be valid because of irregularities in the proceedings, the district court can quash the execution issued on such judgment, and injunction to restrain the enforcement thereof does not lie. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200.

Where a referee reported the existence and validity of a judgment more than five years old, and also reported a judgment that execution issue on the same, but stated that he had not passed on the question whether the judgment had been paid by an alleged accord and satisfaction, the order of the court confirming the report of the referee does not authorize the issuance of an execution on the judgment. Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227.

§ 683. When made returnable. The execution may be made returnable, at any time not less than ten nor more than sixty days after its receipt by the sheriff, to the clerk with whom the judgment roll is filed. When the execution is returned, the clerk must attach it to the judgment roll. If any real estate be levied upon, the clerk must record the execution and the return thereto at large, and certify the same under his hand as true copies, in a book to be called the "execution-book," which book must be indexed, with the names of the plaintiffs and defendants in execution alphabetically arranged, and kept open at all times during office hours for the inspection of the public, without charge. It is evidence of the contents of the originals whenever they, or any part thereof, may be destroyed or mutilated.

Return, failure to make, without delay, liability of sheriff. See Pol. Code, § 4160.

Legislation § 683. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 212 (New York Code, § 290), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 703, which had (1) in lieu of the present second sentence, the clause "when the execution shall have been returned, it shall be the duty of the clerk to attach the same to the judgment roll"; (2) the word "shall" instead of "must" before "record" and before "be indexed"; (3) instead of the words "It is," in last sentence, had the words "and shall be"; and (4) the word "lost" before "or mutilated."

Levy and seizure. The levy is the essential act by which the property is taken into the custody of the law and set apart for the satisfaction of the judgment; and after it has been taken from the defendant, his interest is limited to its application to the judgment, irrespective of the time when it may be sold. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627.

Application of proceeds of sale. The sheriff must show that the seizure of particular property is within the scope of his writ; and if, by the terms of the writ, such seizure is authorized only within a limited period of time, a seizure, after that time has expired, is unauthorized, and he is liable for trespass; but where he has taken the property within the lifetime of the writ, it has then become lawfully subject to be applied in satisfaction of the judgment, and a sale thereof may be made at any time thereafter. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627.

Amendment of officer's return in regard to signature. See note 17 Ann. Cas. 459.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Where an execution on a judgment for money is not stayed by the statutory undertaking on appeal, a sale may be had under the execution, and the rights of purchasers are not affected by the subsequent reversal of the judgment. Farmer v. Rogers, 10 Cal. 335. A confession of judgment to a creditor, in good faith, and the issuance of execution, and making a levy under the same by the judgment debtor, without the knowledge of the judgment creditor, done with the knowledge that another creditor is about to attach, and for the purpose of defeating his attachment, is void as to the attaching creditor. Ryan v. Daly, 6 Cal. 238. A judge at chambers has authority to suspend proceedings under an execution until a motion before the court to recall or quash it can be heard. If a judgment upon which an execution issues, and the execution itself, are void upon their face, the court has power, on motion, to afford relief, and can arrest the process. Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170. When a judgment is reversed, and the case remanded, and the clerk of the court below issues an execution for all the costs, as well those of appeal as those accruing before notice of appeal is filed, an order may be made staying the execution in the hands of the sheriff until an application can be made to the court to retax and adjust the costs. Ex parte Burrill, 24 Cal. 350. If, after a judgment recovered by an attaching creditor has been satisfied, he is proceeding to sell attached property under execution, the defendant in the execution may move to quash the writ. Domec v. Stearns, 30 Cal. 114. The writ of scire facias cannot issue for the revival or enforcement of a judgment. Humiston v. Smith, 21 Cal. 129; see also § 685, post. A sheriff's return is not traversable, and cannot be attacked collaterally, even if the officer is shown to have been guilty of fraud and collusion. Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 56. Nor can it be amended so as to postpone the rights of creditors attaching subsequently, but before the correction. Newhall v. Provost, 6 Cal. 87; Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 25; 68 Am. Dec. 287. The term "appurtenances," used in the return of a levy by a sheriff, is too general, vague, and indefinite to embrace within its meaning any personal property as the subject of levy. Munroe v. Thomas, 5 Cal. 470.

Writ of assistance and restitution. A writ of assistance can only be issued against the defendants in the suit, and parties holding under them, who are bound by the decree. Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87. A writ of assistance against the owner or parties holding under him will be refused, if the court, in an action of foreclosure of mortgage, had not acquired jurisdiction of the party owning the land at the time of foreclosure. Steinbach v. Leese, 27 Cal. 295. The sheriff, who has the writ of habere facias possessionem, must remove all persons who came upon the property after the suit was begun, except a person, other than the defendant, who is in possession under a title adverse to defendant. Long v. Neville, 29 Cal. 135; see also Leese v. Clark, 29 Cal. 665; Le Roy v. Rogers, 30 Cal. 230; 89 Am. Dec. 88.

§ 684. Money judgments and others, how enforced. When the judgment is for money, or the possession of real or personal property, the same may be enforced by a writ of execution; and if the judgment direct that the defendant be arrested, the execution may issue against the person of the judgment debtor, after the return of an execution against his property unsatisfied in whole or part; when the judgment requires the sale of property, the same may be enforced by a writ reciting such judgment, or the material parts thereof, and directing the proper officer to execute the judgment, by making the sale and applying the proceeds in conformity therewith; when the judgment requires the performance of any other act than as above designated, a certified copy of the judgment may be served upon the party against whom the same is rendered, or upon the person or officer required thereby or by law to obey the same, and obedience thereto may be enforced by the court.

Money, how computed and stated in judgment. See Pol. Code, § 3274.

Writ of possession or restitution. Ante, § 380; post, § 1174.

Re-entry after dispossession. Post, § 1210.

Execution against the person, discharge of prisoner. Post, §§ 1143–1154.

Sale of property. See post, §§ 694 et seq.

Performance of any other act. Enforcing obedience. Post, §§ 1209 et seq.

Legislation § 684. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 213, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 703, which read: "Where the judgment requires the payment of money or the delivery of real or personal property, the same may be enforced by a writ of execution; when it requires the performance of any other act, a certified copy of the judgment may be served upon the party against whom the same is rendered, or upon the person or officer required thereby or by law to obey the same; obedience thereto may be enforced by the court; and after a final judgment of partition the court shall have power to enforce a severance of the possession." When § 684 was enacted in 1872, the words "shall have," in last line, were changed to "has."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 321.

Scope of section. The only process provided in this state for the enforcement of a judgment foreclosing a lien upon specific property is that prescribed by this section. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627. A writ of execution on a money judgment must require the sheriff to "satisfy" the judgment out of the property of the judgment debtor; but it is different with the execution of an order for the sale of property in satisfaction of a lien. Hooper v. McDade, 1 Cal. App. 733; 82 Pac. 1116.

Sale by sheriff. A writ of venditioni exponas is not necessary to justify a sale, as the writ itself is only a direction to perform a duty which already exists, and the sheriff acquires no additional authority from its issuance. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627.

Sale of property in foreclosure suits. The process under which the judgment in foreclosure suits is enforced is provided for in this section and § 694, post. Ontario Land etc. Co. v. Bedford, 90 Cal. 181; 27 Pac. 39. The writ reciting the judgment, or the material parts thereof, and directing the officer to execute the judgment by making the sale, etc., is the proper course in foreclosure proceedings; and by analogy to the former equity practice, this writ is usually termed an order of sale. Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 9 Am. St. Rep. 245; 18 Pac. 658. A judgment which directs the sale of specific property to satisfy a mortgage or other lien upon it falls within that class of judgments requiring the performance of any other act than the payment of money or the delivery of real or personal property, and is to be enforced by the proper officer, under a certified copy of the judgment. Heyman v. Babcock, 30 Cal. 367. In an action to foreclose a mortgage covering several adjoining tracts of land, the court has power to render judgment directing the property to be sold as one tract. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. The sale must be in conformity with the judgment, in a foreclosure suit, under a writ reciting the judgment, or the material parts thereof. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. Property which has been specifically impressed with the burden of satisfying the judgment may be sold after the return-day of the writ, under the order of the court, and the judgment debtor is not affected by the time within which such sale shall be made. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627. An officer has no more authority to enforce a judgment of foreclosure without a certified copy of the judgment, than he has to enforce a simple money judgment without an execution. Heyman v. Babcock, 30 Cal. 367. The time within which a sale is directed to be made to satisfy a judgment ordering a sale upon foreclosure of a lien is but directory, and under the control of the court; and the sale should not be set aside, merely because it was not made before the return-day of the writ. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627.

Property and interests affected by execution sale. A judgment lien or a levy, or a subsequent sale, can in no event operate on any interest in land not in fact owned by a defendant. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56. An after-acquired title does not pass by execution sale, nor is it affected by such sale. Rupert v. Jones, 119 Cal. 111; 51 Pac. 26. A sale of community property, made in pursuance of a decree granting a divorce, is effective and valid without being confirmed by the court, where the order for the sale does not expressly require a confirmation. Kimple v. Conway, 75 Cal. 413; 17 Pac. 546.

Relation between judgment and execution sale. Surplusage in a final judgment for money does not affect the right to execution thereunder. Hentig v. Johnson, 8 Cal. App. 221; 96 Pac. 390. The judgment remains unchanged, though the court sets aside the sale thereunder. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687.

Enforcement of judgment for alimony. A final decree of divorce granted to a wife, containing a judgment in her favor for permanent alimony in a single sum of money, can only be regarded as an ordinary money judgment, to be enforced by writ of execution against the property of the husband. White v. White, 130 Cal. 597; 80 Am. St. Rep. 150; 62 Pac. 1062.

Notice. The process issued to enforce a judgment under this section is always executed without notice, other than that given to the general public by ordinary posting and advertisement. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56.

How court may enforce obedience to judgment. Under this section, the court may resort to proceedings in contempt for the purpose of enforcing obedience to a judgment which requires the execution of a conveyance by a party thereto. Seventy-six Land etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 93 Cal. 139; 28 Pac. 813.

Rights of execution debtor. An execution debtor has the right of designating the property to be levied upon, but he cannot defeat a levy by neglecting or refusing to exercise the right. Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296; 11 Pac. 820.

Presumption on appeal. The presumption on appeal is, that the execution in a foreclosure suit conformed with that portion of this section which provides that "when the judgment requires the sale of property the same may be enforced by a writ reciting such judgment, or the material parts thereof, and directing the proper officer to execute the judgment, by making the sale and applying the proceeds in conformity therewith." Northern etc. Trust v. Cadman, 101 Cal. 200; and see Newmark v. Chapman, 53 Cal. 557.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Where an execution, commanding the sheriff to deliver possession of a chattel, has been finally and completely executed, the power of the sheriff under it, and the authority of the court to enforce it, cease; and a wrong-doer, afterwards trespassing upon the person thus put in possession, is not guilty of contempt for disobedience to the process of the court. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24.

§ 685. Execution after five years. In all cases, the judgment may be enforced or carried into execution after the lapse of five years from the date of its entry, by leave of the court, upon motion, or by judgment for that purpose, founded upon supplemental pleadings; but nothing in this section shall be construed to revive a judgment for the recovery of money which shall have been barred by limitation at the time of the passage of this act.

Legislation § 685. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 214, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 704, which had the words "other than for the recovery of money," after "In all cases," in first line, the section then ending with the words "supplemental pleadings."

2. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 38, (1) omitting the words noted supra, and (2) adding the limitation after the words "supplemental pleadings."

Construction of section. This section applies only to judgments of courts of record. White v. Clark, 8 Cal. 512. It provides a different period of limitation from that of § 336, ante, and, with § 925, post, does not authorize an independent action on a judgment rendered in a justice's court after the lapse of five years. John Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Cal. App. 80; 84 Pac. 443. It applies to, and was evidently intended to apply to, judgments requiring the party against whom rendered to do some specific act, such as to deliver specific real or personal property; therefore the court can properly set aside and vacate a former order authorizing a writ of execution to issue upon a decree foreclosing a street assessment after the lapse of five years, and vacate the sale made thereunder. Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552; and see Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011; Jacks v. Johnston, 86 Cal. 384; 21 Am. St.

Rep. 50; 24 Pac. 1057; Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393; 28 Pac. 443. The authority given by this section, conceding it to apply to judgments of justices of the peace, of extending the time for the issuance of an execution, is restricted to the court and to the original action in which the judgment was rendered. John Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Cal. App. 80; 84 Pac. 443.

Nature of proceeding. The procedure contemplated by this section is neither an "action" nor a "special proceeding of a civil nature": it is a mere subsequent step in an action or special proceeding already commenced, and there is no limitation as to time. Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330; Bredfield v. Hannon, 151 Cal. 497; 91 Pac. 334.

Constitutionality. This section, so far as it may be construed to permit an order to be made for the issuance of an execution upon motion without notice to the defendants, is constitutional; the legislature, undoubtedly, has power to provide that an execution may issue on a judgment at any time after its entry or rendition. Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529; 78 Pac. 1038; Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330; Bredfield v. Hannon, 151 Cal. 497; 91 Pac. 334.

Necessity for notice of application for execution. No notice to the opposite party is required on an application for execution on a judgment more than five years old. Bryan v. Stidger, 17 Cal. 270; Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330; Bredfield v. Hannon, 151 Cal. 497; 91 Pac. 334. Notice of application for leave to issue an execution need be given, only where there is some statute expressly prescribing it; nor is service of notice of the time and place of making the motion for leave to issue the execution required. Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529; 78 Pac. 1038. Previous notice of application under this section is unnecessary (Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330; Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667), though the contrary was held in National Bank v. Los Angeles Iron etc. Co., 2 Cal. App. 659; 84 Pac. 466.

Motion to set aside execution. On a motion by a judgment debtor to set aside an order for execution made under this section, it is not error to permit the judgment creditor to file a counter-affidavit without previous notice or service upon the judgment debtor. Bredfield v. Hannon, 151 Cal. 497; 91 Pac. 334.

Showing necessary on application for execution. The loss of a judgment lien, because of the lapse of five years from the date of the judgment, does not preclude the issuance of execution after the lapse of five years upon a showing by affidavits. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667. Before the order allowing an execution to issue can be regularly entered, it is necessary to make it appear to the satisfaction of the court that some portion of the judgment remains unsatisfied. Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227.

Alias execution. The issuance and levy of a second execution does not waive rights acquired by the first levy, if that was complete and regular. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667; Weldon v. Rogers, 157 Cal. 410; 108 Pac. 266.

Discretion of court. It is within the discretion of the court to grant or deny a motion for leave to issue an execution upon a judgment after the lapse of five years from the date of its entry; and its order denying the motion will not be disturbed upon appeal, where no abuse of discretion appears. Wheeler v. Eldred, 137 Cal. 37; 69 Pac. 619; 121 Cal. 28; 66 Am. St. Rep. 20; 53 Pac. 431. The court does not abuse its discretion in ordering execution to be issued on a money judgment, fourteen years after its entry, where nothing appears why, in equity and good conscience, the judgment debtor should not be compelled to pay it. Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330. The court's discretion, under this section, must be guided by the circumstances arising after the entry of judgment. Weldon v. Rogers, 159 Cal. 700; 115 Pac. 464.

Jurisdiction of court. Under this section, the power of the court is limited to giving leave that the former judgment be carried into execution: there is no power to direct the payment of money, and a direction that the execution be for a named amount is useless and void. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070. The time within which the court may act in authorizing the issuance of an execution upon a judgment, after the lapse of five years from its entry, is without limitation. Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330. Where a valid order, made after final judgment, requires a husband, in an action of divorce, to pay a sum of money for the support of children, the court has power, at any time after the entry of the order, to direct execution to issue for the amount unpaid. Harlan v. Harlan, 154 Cal. 341; 98 Pac. 32. Execution may issue on a judgment duly rendered, although it has not been entered. Baum v. Roper, 1 Cal. App. 435; 82 Pac. 390. The fact that the court has made an order for the issuance of an execution, under which the judgment has been partially satisfied, does not deprive it of jurisdiction to make a subsequent order for execution for the deficiency (Weldon v. Rogers, 159 Cal. 700; 115 Pac. 464); nor does the fact that an attachment had once issued, the lien of which has ceased, preclude the court from ordering execution, upon a proper showing made by affidavits. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 6 Cal. App. 586; 92 Pac. 667.

Effect of order for execution. An order for an execution on a judgment amounts to an order for its enforcement. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 1 Cal. App. 479; 82 Pac. 689.

Execution in foreclosure suits. A judgment of foreclosure is not barred by limitation until the period of five years and six months has elapsed after its entry: five years being the time provided in the statute of limitations, and six months the time in which an appeal may be taken; hence, an execution issued within this period is valid. Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529; 78 Pac. 1038. An execution for the sale of mortgaged premises cannot issue after five years from the date of the rendition of judgment of foreclosure, even though a judgment for deficiency was expressly waived by stipulation of the parties. Jacks v. Johnston, 86 Cal. 384; 21 Am. St. Rep. 50; 24 Pac. 1057 (decision before the amendment of this section in 1895); and see Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552.

Revival of money judgments. A judgment for the recovery of money, previous to the amendment of this section in 1895, could not be enforced by execution after the lapse of five years from the entry thereof. Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011; and see Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202; 15 Am. St. Rep. 44; 22 Pac. 552. The amendment to this section in 1895, which, in effect, allowed a judgment for the recovery of money to be enforced after five years from the date of its entry, applied to all such judgments which had not been barred. Weldon v. Rogers, 151 Cal. 432; 90 Pac. 1062; Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330; Bredfield v. Hannon, 151 Cal. 497; 91 Pac. 334. The limiting clause of this section, to the effect that it is not to be construed to revive a judgment for the recovery of money, is not applicable to a case in which the judgment was rendered after the enactment of the section as amended, and where it could not have been barred by limitation at the time of the passage of the amendment. Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529; 78 Pac. 1038. Old judgments, long since defunct, cannot be revived by an amendment to the section, the remedy on which had already been barred by the lapse of time. Mann v. McAtee, 37 Cal. 11.

Suspension of statute of limitations. An order staying proceedings does not operate to suspend the running of the statute, under this section. Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 274; 21 Am. St. Rep. 37; 24 Pac. 1011.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Before April 8, 1861, execution could be taken out on judgment at any time within five years after the rendition of the judgment, and also after that time, upon leave of the court. Between April 8, 1861, and April 2, 1866, it could only be taken out within the five years after judgment rendered. Since April, 1866, however, an execution, in all cases, except for the recovery of money, may issue after five years, upon order of the court. Mann v. McAtee, 37 Cal. 11. The time during which plaintiff is stayed from issuing execution constitutes a part of the five years within which execution must issue, and after that time has elapsed, it must then be upon order of the court. Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 237.

§ 686. When execution may issue against the property of a party after his death. Notwithstanding the death of a party after the judgment, execution thereon may be issued, or it may be enforced, as follows:

1. In case of the death of the judgment creditor, upon the application of his executor or administrator, or successor in interest;

2. In case of the death of the judgment debtor, if the judgment be for the recovery of real or personal property, or the enforcement of a lien thereon.

Death of party.
1. Effect of, on action. Ante, § 385.
2. Judgment after. Ante, § 669.
3. Execution after. Post, § 1505.

Legislation § 686. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 215, as amended by Stats. 1863–64, p. 452, which read: "Notwithstanding the death of a party after the judgment, execution thereon may be issued, in case of the death of the plaintiff, the same as if he were living, upon the application of his executor, or administrator, or successor in interest, by the court in which the judgment was rendered or exists. And in case of the decease of the defendant, if the judgment be for the recovery of real or personal property, execution may be issued and executed against the property recovered in the same manner and with the same effect as if he were still living."

Execution after death of debtor. Execution against the property of the judgment debtor, who died after judgment, might be issued, under the Practice Act, upon the permission of the probate court; but in a case where the judgment was in force when the amendment of 1864 went into effect, authority was given to issue such execution only in case of judgment for the recovery of real or personal property. Myers v. Mott, 29 Cal. 359; 87 Am. Dec. 49; and see Bank of Stockton v. Howland, 42 Cal. 129; Holladay v. Hare, 69 Cal. 517; 11 Pac. 28; Briggs v. Breen, 123 Cal. 657; 56 Pac. 633.

"Application" and "motion" compared. This section affords a simple and summary mode of enforcing a judgment by execution, without resorting to a civil action thereon; and the word "motion," in § 685, ante, is really the same as the word "application," in this section. Weldon v. Rogers, 151 Cal. 432; 90 Pac. 1062.

§ 687. Execution, how and to whom issued. Where the execution is against the property of the judgment debtor, it may be issued to the sheriff of any county in the state. Where it requires the delivery of real or personal property, it must be issued to the sheriff of the county where the property, or some part thereof, is situated. If the judgment directs or authorizes the issuing of any process requiring the sale, or the delivery of possession of, or otherwise affecting specific real property, which is then, or subsequently becomes, a part of a county other than that in which such judgment was entered, such process may be issued to, and executed by, the sheriff of such other county, as to the property situate therein. Executions may be issued at the same time to different counties.

Any county in state, process extends to. Ante, § 78.

Execution requiring delivery of real and personal property. Ante, § 682, subd. 5.

Legislation § 687. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 216, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in second sentence; otherwise the section read the same as at present, except for the addition of 1907.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 153; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 683, adding the sentence beginning "If the judgment" and ending "situate therein"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment is directed to those cases in which a judgment is entered in one county affecting property then situated in, or which may subsequently become a part of, another county. The section as amended supersedes the provisions of the statute of 1873–74, p. 365, respecting execution of final process."

Execution directed to whom. The fact that the execution under which the sale was made was directed to a constable of the township, and that the return thereof shows that it was received and executed by the sheriff of the county, is, at most, an irregularity, and does not render the service void, nor make the execution and return inadmissible in evidence: the execution may be directed to the sheriff or any constable in the county, and each officer is vested with full power to serve the writ, and it is an indifferent matter to whom it is issued. Ross v. Wellman, 102 Cal. 1; 36 Pac. 402.

§ 688. What liable to be seized on execution. Property not affected until levy made. All goods, chattels, moneys, and other property, both real and personal, or any interest therein, of the judgment debtor, not exempt by law, and all property and rights of property seized and held under attachment in the action, are liable to execution. Shares and interests in any corporation or company, and debts and credits, and all other property, both real and personal, or any interest in either real or personal property, and all other property not capable of manual delivery, may be levied upon or released from levy in like manner as like property may be attached or released from attachment. Gold-dust must be returned by the officer as so [much] money collected at its current value, without exposing the same to sale. Until a levy, property is not affected by the execution.

Co-operative business association, property of, subject to execution. See Civ. Code, § 653f.

Building material, not subject to execution when. See post, § 1196.

Good-will. Civ. Code, §§ 992, 993.

Franchise. Civ. Code, §§ 992, 993.

Homestead. See Civ. Code, §§ 1241–1261.

Sole traders. See post, §§ 1811–1821.

Levy. Ante, § 542.

Estates at will not subject to execution. See Civ. Code, § 765.

Exemptions, generally. Post, § 690.

Legislation § 688. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 217, as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 568. When § 688 was enacted in 1872, (1) in first sentence, the words "shall be," before "liable," were changed to "are," (2) in the sentence beginning "Shares," the word "the" was omitted before "like," in the following clause (which was amended in 1907), "may be attached on execution in like manner as upon writs of attachments," (3) "shall" was changed to "must" after "Gold-dust," and (4) "shall not be" was changed to "is not," before "affected."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 153; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 683, in sentence beginning "Shares," changing, after the words "may be," that part of the sentence to read as at present, the original being printed supra; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in substituting the words 'levied upon or released' for the word 'attached,' thus providing a mode of releasing a levy of execution. It adopts the method proposed for the release of attachments by § 560." The bracketed word "[much]," in the present section, was correctly used in the original code section

Property liable to seizure, in general. The principle as well as the policy of the law is to subject every species of property of a judgment debtor to the payment of his debts, and no species of property is exempt, except such as is especially exempted by law. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120. A levy of execution on a homestead is ineffective. Hohn v. Pauly, 11 Cal. App. 724; 106 Pac. 266.

Real property. Where the judgment does not specify the property to be taken, none of the property of the defendant is affected thereby, nor charged with the lien of the judgment, until it is taken by the sheriff under the writ. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217; 28 Am. St. Rep. 115; 29 Pac. 627. Where the judgment is not a lien, the property is not taken on execution until there is a levy, and the lien does not begin until then. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128; and see Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243. When valid, the judgment becomes a lien on the property when it is docketed, and it is immaterial whether it is called a vendor's lien or a judgment lien. Tilley v. Bonney, 123 Cal. 118; 55 Pac. 798. Where the judgment is a lien on the land, there is no real necessity for a formal levy: it adds nothing to the effect of the sale on execution. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128; Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; and see Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195. The levy of an execution is made in the same manner as upon an attachment, that is, by filing with the county recorder a copy of the writ, with a notice that the land described therein is attached, and serving a similar notice on the occupant. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. Although a levy of execution is unnecessary to give effect to a judgment lien, yet that course is usually pursued; but this does not extend the lien of the judgment, nor does it create a new lien upon the property. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256. The rule at common law is in force in this state, except as modified by statute or the constitution; and it has been so far modified by the code, that the only means of enforcing a judgment for money is by a writ of execution, and that land may be taken on the execution, as well as personal property. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128.

Interests in real property. Land liable to execution embraces all titles, legal or equitable, perfect or imperfect, including such rights as lie in contract, those executory as well as those executed; therefore any interest in land, legal or equitable, is subject to attachment or execution, levy, and sale. Fish v. Fowlie, 58 Cal. 373; and see Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387; Kennedy v. Nunan, 52 Cal. 326; Le Roy v. Dunkerly, 54 Cal. 452; Godfrey v. Monroe, 101 Cal. 224; 35 Pac. 761. The purchase, under an execution sale, of the interest of the city of San Francisco in beach and water lots, and the sheriff's deed made thereunder, operated as an assignment of the equitable estate remaining in the city after the legal title vested in the commissioners of the funded debt under the act of May 1, 1851, subject to certain trusts in favor of the city and its creditors. Le Roy v. Dunkerly, 54 Cal. 452; Kennedy v. Nunan, 52 Cal. 326; and see Holladay v. Frisbie, 15 Cal. 631; Wheeler v. Miller, 16 Cal. 124. The title acquired by a pre-emption settler on public land, after a sale thereof under execution, does not pass by such sale, nor is it affected thereby. Rupert v. Jones, 119 Cal. 111; 51 Pac. 26.

Personal property. A promissory note and mortgage, of which the sheriff can obtain peaceable possession, is personal property capable of manual delivery, and is subject to seizure and sale under execution. Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153; and see Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81; Donohoe v. Gamble, 38 Cal. 352; 99 Am. Dec. 399. The exemption from execution of the franchise of a street-railway corporation does not extend to or include its personal property, such as cars, trucks, electrical goods and supplies, fireproof safes, etc., used in the business of operating its line: such property is subject to attachment or execution in like manner as other property not exempt by statute. Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94; 68 Am. St. Rep. 25; 54 Pac. 529; and see Lathrop v. Middleton, 23 Cal. 257; 83 Am. Dec. 112; Humphreys v. Hopkins, 81 Cal. 551; 15 Am. St. Rep. 76; 6 L. R. A. 792; 22 Pac. 892; Gregory v. Blanchard, 98 Cal. 311; 33 Pac. 199.

Interests in personal property. A pledgor's interest may be reached under execution, but it can only be done by serving a garnishment on the pledgee, and not by a seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770.

Shares in corporations. This section expressly provides that shares in any corporation may be attached on execution, in like manner as upon writs of attachment; and it is not necessary to the sale of the interest of the judgment debtor in the shares that they shall be in the hands of the sheriff to be personally delivered to the purchaser. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. The sale of the interest of a debtor in shares of corporate stock passes title without manual possession of the certificate by the sheriff when the execution is served; the certificate might at the time be in the hands of the owner, but the levy and sale would entitle the purchaser to have a certificate issued to him, and for that purpose the court would, upon appropriate proceedings, compel the surrender of the original certificate, in order that it might be reissued to the purchaser. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v.

Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. The purchaser at an execution sale of shares of stock of a corporation, standing on the books of the corporation in the name of the judgment debtor, is entitled to have the certificate of such shares reissued to him as such purchaser, if, at the time of such purchase, he acts in good faith, and without notice that the outstanding certificate has been assigned or pledged to some person other than the judgment debtor. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. The shares of stock constitute the property which belongs to the shareholder in a corporation; otherwise the property would be in the certificate; but the certificate is only evidence of the property, and it is not the only evidence, for a transfer on the books of the corporation, without the issuance of a certificate, vests title in the shareholder. Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80.

Credits. A promissory note is a credit, within the meaning of the statute, and is subject to sale under execution. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81. The delivery of an ordinary check upon a bank for part of the fund standing therein to the credit of the drawer, does not, prior to its presentation, operate as an assignment of the fund pro tanto, and a garnishment of the fund under execution as belonging to the drawer will prevail over all unpresented and unaccepted checks previously drawn thereupon. Donohoe-Kelly Banking Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 138 Cal. 183; 94 Am. St. Rep. 28; 71 Pac. 93.

Judgments. A judgment is but the evidence of a debt, and, as such, is not subject to levy or sale under execution (Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 13 Pac. 621; McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17; Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85; 63 Pac. 153); and where the judgment, as such, is sought to be reached by execution, it can only be reached by the mode provided for reaching debts and credits and other property not capable of manual delivery. Latham v. Blake, 77 Cal. 646; 18 Pac. 150. The holder of the larger judgment, in cross-actions, cannot prevent the holder of the smaller judgment from having such smaller judgment set off pro tanto against the larger, and the holder of the smaller judgment cannot prevent the holder of the larger from having the smaller so set off and then have execution issue for the balance due on the larger; the rights of the parties, in this respect, are reciprocal; and neither of the parties, by assigning his judgment to a third party, can defeat the right of the other to have his judgment so set off: the assignee would take the demand cum onere, and with the right of set off still clinging to it. McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301; 4 Pac. 17.

Personal property not capable of manual delivery. The interest of a debtor in the shares of a corporation is regarded, under this section, as personal property not capable of manual delivery. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622. A chose in action, whether or not the subject of levy, must, when the paper evidencing the debt is not present to be assigned to the purchaser and exhibited to the bystanders, at least be accompanied by a full and accurate description of the particular interest and chose of action, with all of its conditions and covenants, and a full explanation of the facts which determine the value of such instrument or contract, sufficient to apprise the bystanders, with reasonable accuracy, of what is sold or offered. Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15.

Patent rights. A patent right is not tangible property, but is an incorporeal right, being a personal favor or monopoly granted to a particular person by the Federal government, and is created and regulated by Federal legislation, and is not subject to levy or sale upon execution; and if a creditor of the patentee can have the patent right subjected to the satisfaction of his judgment at all, it can be done only by a court of equity acting in personam, and compelling the patentee to make an assignment. Peterson v. Sheriff, 115 Cal. 211; 46 Pac. 1060.

Broker's seat in stock exchange. A broker's seat in a stock and exchange board is not property subject to execution and sale. Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, 99 Cal. 162; 37 Am. St. Rep. 42; 21 L. R. A. 399; 33 Pac. 794.

Effect of execution sale. A sale and conveyance under execution will pass all the interest held by the judgment debtor at the time of the levy; and the judgment need not have been docketed at the time of the issuance of the execution. Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 137.

Liability of sheriff. The sheriff is a trespasser, and liable for the value of goods seized under execution, where such goods are in the hands of the pledgee, and where he fails to levy thereon by garnishment instead of by seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770. An officer, who would justify the taking of property from a stranger to the writ, or who would assail the transfer as fraudulent and void as to creditors, must prove not only the execution, the levy, and that he was a creditor, but also the rendition of a judgment upon his debt, and that the execution was issued upon the judgment. Darville v. Mayhall, 128 Cal. 617; 61 Pac. 276; and see Thornburgh v. Hand, 7 Cal. 554; Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483; Bickerstaff v. Doub, 19 Cal. 109; 79 Am. Dec. 204; Leszinsky v. White, 45

Cal. 279; Kane v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 464. Justification is not made out by the officer, where the bill of exceptions shows that it was admitted that the property was seized by virtue of an execution issued out of a justice's court, where no indebtedness or judgment is shown. Darville v. Mayhall, 128 Cal. 617; 61 Pac. 276.

Nature, purpose, and effect of execution lien. The common-law rule was, that an execution was a lien on personal property from the time of its issuance, although there was no levy; but neither a judgment nor an execution was a lien on land, and the method of applying the land of the judgment debtor to satisfy a judgment was by means of a writ of elegit, whereby the officer, after exhausting the personal property, could seize the land and apply the rents and profits of half thereof upon the writ. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. The purpose of a lien is to cut off the rights of third persons, which might otherwise accrue between the time of levy and the time of sale; and the filing of the notice in the office of the recorder is for no other purpose than to give notice to third persons of the prior charge. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. The purpose of attaching under the writ of execution, as permitted by this section, is to obtain security for the satisfaction of a judgment previously recovered; but when such judgment is already a lien, the main object of an attachment has been accomplished. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195. The levy of an execution, pending a judgment lien, neither extends the existing lien nor creates a new lien; and the sales under the execution take effect, by relation, at the time they are respectively levied, and not at the date of the levying of previous executions. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The lien of the execution is not that of the judgment: the execution neither creates a judgment lien nor extends a judgment lien once created. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167; and see Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; Rogers v. Druffel, 46 Cal. 654; Eby v. Foster, 61 Cal. 282. The service of a copy of the execution and notice of garnishment upon a third party, constitutes no lien on the property of the debtor in his hands, capable of manual delivery. Johnson v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 195; 65 Am. Dec. 501. The execution affects property, only from the time of the levy. Johnson v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 196; 65 Am. Dec. 501; Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242.

Relation between attachment lien and execution lien. The lien of the attachment and the lien of the execution subserve a like purpose; the former to hold the property until judgment, and the latter until sale. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167. A judgment does not operate so as to release or obliterate an attachment lien: the property attached is still, in contemplation of law, in the hands of the officer, subject to the judgment, and the attachment lien still exists so as to confer a priority in the lien of the judgment. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; and see Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. Where a judgment creditor, after a garnishment upon execution, proceeds by supplementary proceedings or creditor's bill to collect the debt, any judgment recovered by him relates back to the levy of the garnishment, and intervening rights are cut off. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242. The lien of the attachment is merged in that of the judgment, when the judgment is rendered in the attachment suit and becomes a lien upon the property attached. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; and see Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73. The garnishee is entitled to plead a set-off, but it must be one which existed at the time of the garnishment. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242. An order of sale by the court is not necessary to authorize the sheriff to sell the attached property, and the lien of the attachment is not lost by taking a simple money judgment, without embodying therein directions for the sale of the attached property. Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 65; 1 Am. St. Rep. 34; 13 Pac. 73; and see Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 538.

Ejectment by purchaser at execution sale. In an action of ejectment to recover lands purchased at a sale under an execution issued upon a judgment against the defendant, and of which he was in possession at the time of the sale or at the date of the lien of the judgment or attachment, the defendant cannot, by showing that he had no title to the land, or that the true title is outstanding, defeat the plaintiff's right to recover. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120; and see McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; 83 Am. Dec. 123; Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441. As against the judgment debtor, the production of the judgment, execution, and sheriff's deed is prima facie evidence of the plaintiff's right to recover in ejectment; but if the action is against a stranger to the judgment, the plaintiff must also show that the judgment debtor had title to or possession of the land at the date of the lien or of the sale; the mere possession of the defendant, in such case, will then be deemed to have been taken subsequently to the sale. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac.

120. The same rule applies to the vendee of a judgment debtor, or any other person coming in under him, subsequently to the creation of the lien, and who has no other title or claim to the land than that which he derived from the judgment debtor, or whose title is in effect the same as that which was sold under execution. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120.

Equitable assignment of debt. An order upon a debtor by his creditor, to pay money to a third party, operates as an equitable assignment of the debt. Curtner v. Lyndon, 128 Cal. 35; 60 Pac. 462.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. "Property," defined. See § 17, ante, subds. 3, 4, 5. The term "property" includes a judgment. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 203; Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15; Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 88. "Property" is the exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing; it is the right and interest which a man has in lands and chattels, to the exclusion of others; and the word is sufficiently comprehensive to include every species of estate, real and personal. McKeon v. Bisbee, 9 Cal. 142; 70 Am. Dec. 642. The term "property in lands" is not confined to title in fee, but is sufficiently comprehensive to include any unsatisfactory interest, whether it be a leasehold or mere right of possession. State v. Moore, 12 Cal. 56. The term "property," as applied to lands, embraces all titles, legal and equitable, perfect or imperfect. Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 388; State v. Moore, 12 Cal. 56.

2. What is subject of execution. Where A has merchandise stored in the warehouse of B, and sold a portion of it to C, and gave an order for the merchandise sold on B, who accepted the same, and gave C, in exchange, a receipt for the same, and transferred it on his warehouse-books to the account of C, but did not separate any specific portion from the merchandise of A as belonging to B, and the whole was subsequently seized in an action against A, it was decided that the sheriff was not liable to C, in the absence of segregation of the merchandise, but that B was estopped by his receipt from denying his liability. Adams v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 68. Plaintiff was walking along the street with a bag of gold coin in his hand. Two of defendants, a deputy sheriff and constable, seized him, and by force took the bag of coin from him. Plaintiff sues for the seizure and conversion of the coin. Defendants produced three judgments and executions in their favor against G., brother of plaintiff, and proved that the bag of coin was the property of the brother, and was seized under these executions. On appeal, it was decided that plaintiff could claim no exemption from the seizure of coin held, as this was in his hand, though he might perhaps, in reference to money upon his person. The coin in the hand was, like a horse held by the bridle, subject to seizure on execution against its owner. Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411; 76 Am. Dec. 492. Funds in the hands of a receiver, in an action for dissolution, are liable to attachment at any time before a final decree of dissolution and distribution. Adams v. Woods, 9 Cal. 24. Where the judgment debtor has property jointly with another, a sheriff, who has such execution, has the right to levy on such property and take it into possession, for the purpose of subjecting it to sale. Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378. F. purchased some yokes of oxen of H., the appellant, for a certain sum, paid part down, and gave his note, with C. as surety, for the balance; C. signed with the express condition that title to the oxen was to remain in H. till they were fully paid for. F. was to have the absolute use of them. The oxen were placed in the hands of a brother of H., who was in the employ of F., as a driver, with the intention of securing the title in H. The defendant, a constable, levied upon and sold the oxen, thus situated, as the property of F. And it was decided upon appeal that F. had such a right of property in them as was subject to execution, the sale by H. to F. being absolute. Helm v. Dumars, 3 Cal. 454. The interest of a partner in partnership goods, etc., subject to levy on execution against him. Jones v. Thompson, 12 Cal. 191. But is subject to prior rights and liens of other partners and joint creditors of firm. Id.; Eldridge v. See Yup Co., 17 Cal. 44. If a partnership, in embarrassed circumstances, converts its means (upon the strength of which it has obtained credit) into real estate to be held by one of the partners as a homestead for the purpose of defrauding creditors, the property, notwithstanding the declaration of homestead, is liable to levy on execution by partnership creditors. Bishop v. Hubbard, 23 Cal. 514; 83 Am. Dec. 132. Interest of mortgagor liable to sale on execution. Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645. A promissory note is liable to seizure and sale on execution against holder and payee. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 88, and cases there cited. A purchaser on execution sale of real estate has an estate in the property purchased, both before and after the time when right of redemption expires, which is subject of attachment on execution against his property. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293. A ferry-boat, the property of private individuals, is not exempt from execution because it is used to carry the United States mails. Lathrop v. Middleton, 23 Cal. 257; 83 Am. Dec. 112.

3. Property not liable to execution. A delivered merchandise as security for payment of a debt from A to B, with the understanding that B should sell the merchandise and pay his debt out of the proceeds. The merchandise was afterwards levied upon by the defendants, under an execution in their favor against A, as his property. Held, that the merchandise was not subject to execution against A, without payment, in the first place, of his indebtedness to B. Swanston v. Sublette, 1 Cal. 123. A franchise is not the subject of levy and sale under execution. Thomas v. Armstrong, 7 Cal. 286; Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474. Things in action may be levied upon on execution. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. Even where there is personal property sufficient to satisfy the execution, yet the sheriff may, on the request of the defendant in execution, properly levy on real estate. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475. Property in the custody of the law is not liable to execution, without an order from the court. Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35; Clymer v. Willis, 3 Cal. 363; 58 Am. Dec. 414. Where money has been placed on general deposit in a bank, and negotiable certificates of deposit have been issued to the depositor for the amount, there is nothing left in the possession of the bankers, belonging to the depositor, which is liable to attachment. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. An execution cannot be levied upon a county's revenues in the hands of the treasurer. Gilman v. Contra Costa County, 8 Cal. 52; 68 Am. Dec. 290. Contingent and complicated contracts cannot be levied upon and sold, unless they are in the possession of the officer, exhibited to the bystanders, and assigned to the purchaser. A full and accurate description of the particular interest and chose in action, with all its conditions and covenants, and a full explanation of the facts determining the value of the chose, must be given by the levy and announced at the sale. Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15; see also Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 88. A conveyed land to B, and allowed part of the purchase-money to remain unpaid. B afterwards sold part of the land to C, who had no notice of A's lien as a vendor, and gave a mortgage to B for part of the purchase-money. A obtained judgment against B for the unpaid purchase-money, and levied upon and sold B's interest in the land. The title to the mortgage debt due from C to B did not pass by the sale. Bryan v. Sharp, 4 Cal. 351. Simply because a judgment debtor was found upon the mining-ground of plaintiff, the sheriff, who had execution against such debtor, was not justified in going on the ground and digging up the soil, and taking the gold it contained. Rowe v. Bradley, 12 Cal. 226. If A sold property to B before C commenced a suit against A for the recovery of such property, the property cannot, on an execution on a judgment in favor of C, be taken from B. Peterie v. Bugbey, 24 Cal. 423.

4. What constitutes a levy. On personal property capable of manual delivery, a levy is made by taking possession of the property. A levy will not defeat subsequent execution on goods allowed to remain in the hands of the debtor. Dutertre v. Driard, 7 Cal. 549; Tafts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47; 73 Am. Dec. 610. Service of copy of execution and notice of garnishment on third party, constitutes no lien on property of debtor capable of manual delivery. Johnson v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 195; 65 Am. Dec. 501. Any act on the part of the officer, showing the intent to sell the specific land, and to subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment, constitutes a "levying" of the execution, as against the defendant in the execution, and the performance of the act described in the statute as a levying of execution is material only in reference to the rights of third parties, or persons who are not parties to the writ. The levy fixed the date of the commencement of the sheriff's title. Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441.

§ 689. When property claimed by third party. Indemnity. If the property levied on is claimed by a third person as his property by a written claim verified by his oath or that of his agent, setting out his right to the possession thereof, and served upon the sheriff, the sheriff is not bound to keep the property unless the plaintiff, or the person in whose favor the writ of execution runs, on demand, indemnifies the sheriff against such claim by an undertaking by at least two good and sufficient sureties in a sum equal to double the value of the property levied on; and the sheriff is not liable for damages for the taking or keeping of such property to any such third person, unless such a claim is made.

Sureties liable on judgment, if sheriff give notice to them of action brought against him. Post, § 1055.

Legislation § 689. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 218, which read: "If the property levied on be claimed by a third person as his property, the sheriff shall summon from his county six persons qualified as jurors between the parties, to try the validity of the claim. He shall also give notice of the claim and of the time of trial to the plaintiff, who may appear and contest the claim before the jury. The jury and the witnesses shall be sworn by the sheriff, and if their verdict be in favor of the claimant, the sheriff may relinquish the levy, unless the judgment creditor give him a sufficient indemnity for proceeding thereon. The fees of the jury, the sheriff, and the witnesses, shall be paid by the claimant, if the verdict be against him; otherwise by the plaintiff. On the trial the defendant and the claimant may be examined by the plaintiff as witnesses." When § 689 was enacted in 1872, (1) "shall" was changed to "may," before "summon"; (2) "shall" was changed to "must," before "also give," before "be sworn," and before "be paid"; (3) the last sentence was stricken out, and a new one added, reading, "Each party must deposit with the sheriff, before the trial, the amount of his fees, and the fees of the jury, and the sheriff must pay the same to the prevailing party."

2. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 20, to read: "If the property levied on be claimed by a third person as his property by a written claim verified by the oath of said claimant, setting out his title thereto, his right to the possession thereof, and stating the grounds of such title, and served upon the sheriff, the sheriff is not bound to keep the property, unless the plaintiff, or the person in whose favor the writ of execution runs, on demand, indemnify the sheriff against such claim by an undertaking by at least two good and sufficient sureties; and no claim to such property is valid against the sheriff, or shall be received, or be notice of any rights, unless made as above provided."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 153; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 683; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment strikes out the words 'setting out his title thereto,' which subserve no useful purpose, and also inserts the amount of the undertaking near the end of the section 'in a sum equal to double the value of the property levied on,' which is the usual custom of sheriffs any way, and recasts the last sentence so as to make it more intelligible."

Construction of section. This section, both before and after its amendment in 1891, was intended for the protection of the officer, and is therefore matter of defense. Paden v. Goldbaum, 4 Cal. Unrep. 767; 37 Pac. 759. The provisions of this section prescribe only the manner in which the claimant is to make the demand. Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37. The making or omitting to make a verified claim does not affect the ownership of the plaintiff; but if not made, the officer is exempted from liability in certain actions, and is matter of defense. Paden v. Goldbaum, 4 Cal. Unrep. 767; 37 Pac. 759. This section is intended primarily for the protection of the sheriff; and if claim is made, the sheriff is not bound to retain the property, unless he is indemnified, and may release it, without incurring a liability therefor to the plaintiff in attachment or execution: the sufficiency of the notice is therefore a question between the sheriff and the plaintiff in attachment. Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306; Paden v. Goldbaum, 4 Cal. Unrep. 767; 37 Pac. 759; Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37; Dubois v. Spinks, 114 Cal. 289; 46 Pac. 95. The phrase, "grounds of such title," in this section as amended in 1891, had reference to the reasons why the claimant averred his own title superior to that of the execution debtor; and an explanation of the manner in which such debtor acquired possession of the property from the claimant, coupled with a statement of the claimant's ownership, seemed to be all that should be required in such a case. Vermont Marble Co. v. Brow, 109 Cal. 236; 50 Am. St. Rep. 37; 41 Pac. 1031.

Sufficiency of claim. A claim or demand for a crop, served upon the officer, is not sufficient, where it does not claim ownership or title, but merely states that the claimant is entitled to the possession of the whole crop for the satisfaction of a certain sum secured by him for rent. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Purvis, 5 Cal. Unrep. 164; 42 Pac. 441. A notice of claim, that the claimant is entitled to the possession under a bill of sale, is sufficiently explicit, although the possession under the bill of sale was given by way of security. Dubois v. Spinks, 114 Cal. 289; 46 Pac. 95. A verified written claim, stating that the affiant acquired title to the property from two persons named, served upon the officer, is sufficient to apprise him of the source of title, whether the property was acquired from such persons jointly or severally. Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332; 54 Pac. 1110; and see Vermont Marble Co. v. Brow, 109 Cal. 241; 50 Am. St. Rep. 37; 41 Pac. 1031; Dubois v. Spinks, 114 Cal. 289; 46 Pac. 95. Where the plaintiff in attachment, as well as the sheriff, treated and regarded the notice as sufficient, and the sheriff, having acted upon the claim served upon him, procured the protection of an indemnity bond, the defendant could not have been misled or prejudiced by an alleged defect in the claim served upon him, and the judgment will not be reversed for such alleged defect. Kellogg v. Burr, 126 Cal. 38; 58 Pac. 306. An exception of certain property, in the notice of claim, does not vitiate the claim, where there is no question as to the ownership of the property excepted. Susskind v. Hall, 5 Cal. Unrep. 304; 44 Pac. 328.

Action by third person against sheriff. The right of action for the conversion of property seized by an officer is complete on the day of the seizure; and such right is not lost or impaired by an amendment to the section, that did not go into effect until after the seizure. Black v. Clashy, 97 Cal. 482; 32 Pac. 564. The complaint in an action against the sheriff, and the sureties on his official bond, for the conversion of property levied upon, is not defective in failing to allege a demand for the property in the manner and form prescribed by this section. Fuller Desk Co. v. McDade, 113 Cal. 360; 45 Pac. 694; and see Bell v. Peck, 104 Cal. 35; 37 Pac. 766; Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37. An allegation, that, before the commencement of the action, the plaintiff made a demand upon the officer for the property, is, as a matter of pleading, a statement of the fact of demand; and if the form of the demand did not comply with the statute, the defendant could have traversed the allegation in his answer, and could also have objected to the proof when offered at the trial. Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 143; 41 Pac. 37. Where the form of the demand does not comply with the provisions of this section, the defendant should traverse the allegation in his answer, or object to the proof when offered. Richey v. Haley, 138 Cal. 441; 71 Pac. 499; and see Brenot v. Robinson, 108 Cal. 145; 41 Pac. 37. Where no issue was taken by the answer as to the demand and affidavit alleged in the complaint to have been served upon the constable, and no objection was made when they were offered in evidence, all objection thereto is waived, and it cannot thereafter be urged that the evidence shows that a copy of the affidavit, and not the original, was served. Hickey v. Cosehina, 133 Cal. 81; 65 Pac. 313. An omission in the findings, upon an averment of a demand by the plaintiff upon the sheriff, is not material, where there is no attempted denial of the allegation; and where it appears affirmatively by the defendant's answer that any kind of a demand would have been unavailing, an immaterial variance in proof relative to the demand introduced in evidence will not affect the case. Hunt v. Hammel, 142 Cal. 456; 76 Pac. 378; and see Richey v. Haley, 138 Cal. 441; 71 Pac. 499. It cannot be urged upon appeal, for the first time, that there was no proof of the service of the verified claim required by this section, where the allegation of demand in the complaint is not denied in the answer, and it appears affirmatively from the answer that any kind of a demand would have been unavailing. Richey v. Haley, 138 Cal. 441; 71 Pac. 499.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. When property is claimed by third party. Trial of right of property. P., in possession of a vessel, appointed H. as master. The plaintiff, who sets up a claim to the vessel, entered into a charter-party with P., and by it acknowledges him to be the owner, and his appointee, H., to be the master. After the charter-party, the declared owner of the vessel became the debtor of the master, who attached the vessel. The plaintiff brought the action against the sheriff to recover the vessel under the attachment. It was decided, that where one allows another to deal with his property as if it belonged to the latter, and, by declarations, allows others to be misled, the party making such declarations is concluded by them. Hostler v. Hays, 3 Cal. 302. If the sheriff prove a trial by jury and verdict for claimant, the plaintiff must show that he rendered the bond of indemnity to the sheriff, required by law, in order to hold a sheriff liable for not levying the execution. Strong v. Patterson, 6 Cal. 156. Where several creditors levy, and those prior fail to indemnify the sheriff, he shall proceed only for the benefit of those who indemnify and incur responsibility, and relinquish the levy of those failing to indemnify. Davidson v. Dallas, 8 Cal. 227. A sheriff, in the sale of personal property, is not protected by the verdict of a jury on the trial of the right of property, under the provisions of this section of the code. The proceedings before a sheriff, in such a trial, are not judicial. Perkins v. Thornburgh, 10 Cal. 189. To estop a party from claiming goods as against the creditor of a third party, he must have stated to the creditor himself that he had sold the article to the third party, and the creditor must have parted with some right or advantage on the faith of the information. Goodale v. Scannell, 8 Cal. 27. An agreement to indemnify a sheriff for seizing property under execution is valid. Stark v. Raney, 18 Cal. 622. Where property is levied on by a sheriff, by virtue of execution as defendant's property, and is claimed by third party, and a jury trying the right of property decides against the claimant, the verdict does not protect the officer in a suit against him by defendant, nor can it be allowed as evidence in defense. Sheldon v. Loomis, 28 Cal. 122. The interest which a pledgor has in the thing pledged is liable to execution, and may be reached in the hands of a pledgee when a third party, but this can only be done by serving and enforcing a garnishment on the pledgee, and not by a seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 607; 94 Am. Dec. 770; Pomeroy v. Smith, 17 Pick. 95. Liability of joint trespassers under legal process; property illegally seized under attachment. Lewis v. Johns, 34 Cal. 633. Sheriff is liable for value of property which he sells, if it was claimed as exempt from execution prior to the sale. Spencer v. Long, 39 Cal. 700. So, also, he is liable for sale of property when he is notified of issuance of writ commanding stay of proceedings. Id.

2. Notice and demand. In an action against a sheriff for seizure and conversion of the plaintiff's property, taken under process against a third person, a demand upon the defendant prior to the bringing of the suit is not necessary to a recovery. The sheriff having misapplied his process, and whether by mistake or by design will make no difference, stands in the position of every other trespasser, and is liable to an action the instant the trespass is committed. The circumstance that the property was in possession of the execution debtor at the date of the seizure amounts to nothing, except upon proof of fraud or commixture. The rule of the common law is correctly stated in Ledley v. Hays, 1 Cal. 160, and the correctness of that decision is impliedly recognized in Daumiel v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 44. The statement of facts in Taylor v. Seymour, 6 Cal. 512, is imperfect; but if that case is to be understood as laying down a different rule, then we prefer to follow Ledley v. Hays, 1 Cal. 160. Boulware v. Craddock, 30 Cal. 190; see also Codman v. Freeman, 3 Cush. 314, and Acker v. Campbell, 23 Wend. 372; see also Wellman v. English, 38 Cal. 583; Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 514; Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118. A sheriff attaching goods under execution must have notice of the claim of a third party to the goods, and a demand for them, or he is not liable for damages for such seizure and detention. Taylor v. Seymour, 6 Cal. 512; Daumiel v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 43; Killey v. Scannell, 12 Cal. 73. The owner of property levied upon as belonging to another, is not estopped from showing title in himself because he has given an accountable receipt for its delivery to the officer, although the receipt admits that the property is levied upon as belonging to the debtor, if he notifies the officer of his claim at or before the time the receipt is given. But if he fails to make his claim known, and thus influences the conduct of the officer, he is estopped from afterwards asserting it, provided the facts and circumstances relating to his claim were then known to him. Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172.

Legislation § 690. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 219, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 384, which read: "The following property shall be exempt from execution, except as herein otherwise specially provided: First. Chairs, tables, desks and books, to the value of one hundred dollars, belonging to the judgment debtor. Second. Necessary household, table and kitchen furniture, belonging to the judgment debtor, including stoves, stovepipe and stove furniture, wearing-apparel, beds, bedding and bedsteads, and provisions actually provided for individual or family use, sufficient for one month. Third. Fifth. The cabin or dwelling of a miner, not exceeding in value the sum of five hundred dollars; also, his sluices, pipes, hose, windlass, derrick, cars, pumps, tools, implements and appliances necessary for carrying on any kind of mining operations, not exceeding in value the aggregate sum of five hundred dollars; and two horses, mules or oxen, with their harness, and food for such horses, mules or oxen for one month, when necessary to be used for any whim, windlass, derrick, car, pump or hoisting gear. Tenth. The earnings of the judgment debtor for his personal services rendered at any time within thirty days next preceding the levy of execution or levy of attachment, when it shall be made to appear by the debtor's affidavit or otherwise that such earnings are necessary for the use of his family residing in this state, supported wholly or part by his labor." Subsequently to the enactment of the Code of Civil Procedure on March 11, 1872, Practice Act, § 219, was amended at the same session of the legislature, by an act approved April 1, 1872 (Stats. 1871–72, p. 864), (1) in the introductory paragraph, omitting the word "specially"; (2) in subd. 1, changing "one" to "two," before "hundred"; (3) in subd. 2, (a) adding "one sewing-machine" after "including," (b) changing "stoves, stovepipe" to "stove, pipes," (c) changing "one month" to "three months," and (d) adding, at end of subdivision, the words "and two cows and their sucking calves and food for such cows for one month"; (4) in subd. 3, (a) adding, after "calves," the words "five head of hogs, two dozen domestic fowls," (b) changing "cows or mules" to "mules, cows, hogs, or fowls," and (c) omitting the comma after "seed" (seed grain); (5) in subd. 4, (a) adding "The" as first word of subdivision, (b) adding, after "his trade," the words "the notarial seal and records of a notary public," (c) changing "chest" to "chests" before "of a surgeon," (d) changing "and" to "or" before "dentist," (e) adding, at end, after "gospel," the words "editors, school teachers, and professors of music, also the musical instruments of a professor of music"; (6) in subd. 5, (a) changing "for" to "in" before "any whim," and (b) adding, at end, after "gear," the words "and, also, his mining claim actually worked by him, not exceeding in value the sum of one thousand dollars"; (7) in subd. 8, adding, at end, after "person," the words "and one shot or rifle gun"; (8) in subd. 9, (a) omitting "parks" after "squares" and "the" before "fire," and (b) changing "shall be" to "is" before "exempt"; (9) in subd. 10, (a) omitting "of" before "execution," (b) changing "shall be made to appear" to "appears," and (c) adding "in" before "part"; (10) adding subd. 11, "Eleventh. The shares held by a member of a homestead association, duly incorporated, not exceeding in value one thousand dollars, if the person holding the shares is not the owner of a homestead under the laws of this state; all the nautical instruments and wearing-apparel of any master, officer, or seaman on any steamer or other vessel." When enacted in 1872, § 690 read: "The following property is exempt from execution, except as herein otherwise specially provided: 1. The earnings of the judgment debtor for his personal services, rendered at any time within thirty days next preceding the levy of execution, or levy of attachment, when it appears, by the debtor's affidavit or otherwise, that such earnings are necessary for the use of his family, residing in this state, supported wholly or in part by his labor; 10. 6. Amended by Stats. 1899, p. 19, (1) adding as a flush paragraph italic heading, the words "What exempt from execution"; (2) in subd. 2, omitting, in first line, the comma after "table" (table and kitchen furniture); (3) in subd. 14 (original subd. 13), changing "All arms, uniforms, and accouterments" to "All uniforms, arms, accouterments"; (4) adding subd. 17, reading the same as at present, down to the words "engines, etc.," but having, after these words, "to the value of one thousand dollars."

7. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 21, becoming a law, under constitutional provision, without governor's approval, the amendments being those of Stats. 1903 (q.v., infra), except that (1) in subd. 4, it had the pronoun "his" instead of "their" before "profession" and before "professional," and "library" instead of "libraries"; (2) in subd. 13, it had the word "any" instead of "the" before "laws."

Construction of statute. Statutes exempting property from execution are enacted on the ground of public policy, for the benevolent purpose of saving debtors and their families from want by reason of misfortune or improvidence; and the general rule now is, to construe such statutes liberally, so as to carry out the intention of the legislature, and the humane purposes designed by the law-makers. Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534; Van Lue v. Wahrlich-Cornett Co., 12 Cal. App. 749; 108 Pac. 717; and see Estate of McManus, 87 Cal. 292; 22 Am. St. Rep. 250; 25 Pac. 413; Spence v. Smith, 121 Cal. 536; 66 Am. St. Rep. 62; 53 Pac. 653. The first, second, and tenth subdivisions of this section probably apply to all vocations mentioned in the section. Van Lue v. Wahrlich-Cornett Co., 12 Cal. App. 749; 108 Pac. 717. The same person cannot claim both the farmer's and the teamster's exemption; and if he is entitled to an exemption either as a farmer or as a teamster, but is in doubt, he may plead both claims, and have the benefit of the one best established by proof. Van Lue v. Wahrlich-Cornett Co., 12 Cal. App. 749; 108 Pac. 717.

Nature of exemption. Exemption of property from execution is a personal privilege, which may be claimed or waived at the option of the debtor. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838.

Provisions for family. Money with which to purchase provisions sufficient for family use is not exempt, under this section; but where the money has been used in good faith for that purpose, before the parties are called upon to account for it, and the amount is no more than would reasonably be required to support the family for three months, the claim to exemption will be sustained. Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615; 74 Pac. 303.

Farming utensils, etc. The Practice Act did not, in express terms, make the exemption under this section applicable only to such judgment debtors as were engaged in the business of farming at the date of the levy; but it is obvious that such was its intention. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal.

383; 99 Am. Dec. 413; and see Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 302; 91 Am. Dec. 695. The third subdivision of this section relates exclusively to persons engaged in farming (Murphy v. Harris, 77 Cal. 194; 19 Pac. 377; Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 302; 91 Am. Dec. 695; Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 383; 99 Am. Dec. 413; Murphy v. Harris, 77 Cal. 194; 19 Pac. 377); and property used in farming cannot be claimed as exempt, unless the judgment debtor was, at the date of the levy, engaged in the business of farming. Howell v. Boyd, 2 Cal. App. 486; 84 Pac. 315. The exemptions of the third subdivision are to enable the judgment debtor to earn a support by farming, and secure to him the means appropriate to that end, and the exemption of oxen, horses, or mules applies to such only as are suitable and intended for the ordinary work conducted on a farm. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 383; 99 Am. Dec. 413; Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 302; 91 Am. Dec. 695. The legislature, by the phrase, "farming utensils or implements of husbandry of the judgment debtor," meant such utensils or implements as are needed and used by the farmer in conducting his own farming operations: it was not intended that all farming machinery which a farmer may own should be exempt, because, while he uses it chiefly by renting it out, or in doing work on others' farms for hire, he still uses it to a small extent on his own land. Estate of Baldwin, 71 Cal. 74; 12 Pac. 44. A combined harvester is a farming utensil and an implement of husbandry, irrespective of its value, and if used chiefly for the farming purposes of the debtor, although occasionally used for others, is exempt from execution (Estate of Klemp, 119 Cal. 41; 63 Am. St. Rep. 69; 39 L. R. A. 340; 50 Pac. 1062; and see Spence v. Smith, 121 Cal. 536; 66 Am. St. Rep. 62; 53 Pac. 653); but an expensive thrashing outfit, consisting of a thrashing-engine, water-tanks, a thrasher, a derrick and forks, a seed-cleaner, a feeding-machine, a feeding-rack, and a cook-house, owned in common by several farmers, and used by them to a limited extent on their own lands, but principally in doing work for others for hire, is not exempt from execution. Estate of Baldwin, 71 Cal. 74; 12 Pac. 44. The debtor is not required to use the exempt farming implements or property exclusively in his vocation. Spence v. Smith, 121 Cal. 536; 66 Am. St. Rep. 62; 53 Pac. 653. Where the debtor has more horses than the number exempt by law, he has the right to elect which he shall claim as exempt, and it devolves upon him to do so within a reasonable time after notice of the levy. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838. This section is restrictive only as to the number and use of the horses used in husbandry; and the exemption of two horses is allowed, where they are engaged in husbandry, and their value and sex is immaterial. McCue v. Tunstead, 65 Cal. 506; 4 Pac. 510. A stallion, not used as a work-horse on a farm, is not exempt from execution. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 383; 99 Am. Dec. 413. It is not necessary, in order to make horses exempt, that the owner shall devote himself exclusively to husbandry: they are exempt because owned by a judgment debtor engaged in husbandry. McCue v. Tunstead, 65 Cal. 506; 3 Pac. 863. There is no ground for excluding an implement from the operation of the statute, merely because it is an improvement, and supplants a former implement used with less effectiveness for the same purpose. Estate of Klemp, 119 Cal. 41; 63 Am. St. Rep. 69; 39 L. R. A. 340; 50 Pac. 1062. The character and amount of exempt property is purely a matter of legislative policy; and where the legislature has determined that the farming utensils and implements of husbandry of a judgment debtor shall be exempt, the court is not authorized to refuse exemption because, in its opinion, they are not necessary for the judgment debtor, or because the farming operations are carried on on a greater scale than the court deems necessary. Spence v. Smith, 121 Cal. 536; 66 Am. St. Rep. 62; 53 Pac. 653; Estate of Klemp, 119 Cal. 41; 63 Am. St. Rep. 69; 39 L. R. A. 340; 50 Pac. 1062. The statute has fixed no limit to the amount of land which a judgment debtor may cultivate by farming; and if the farming utensils which he has are necessary for the proper cultivation of his land, they are exempt from execution, irrespective of whether he would need them for cultivating a smaller tract of land. Spence v. Smith, 121 Cal. 536; 66 Am. St. Rep. 62; 53 Pac. 653. Husbandry is the business of a farmer, comprehending the various branches of agriculture. McCue v. Tunstead, 65 Cal. 506; 4 Pac. 510. The law does not recognize classes of husbandry, nor limit its exemption of farming utensils and implements of husbandry to one particular class of several that may be followed by the farmer, and will not inquire whether they were used in agriculture, horticulture, or viticulture. Estate of Slade, 122 Cal. 434; 55 Pac. 158.

Tools or implements of mechanic or artisan. The law does not require that a mechanic shall be employed as a journeyman, in order to be entitled to the exemption; nor is the phrase, "necessary to carry on his trade," used in such a strict sense, that, because a journeyman machinist can secure employment with a manufacturer who will supply the instrument, it is not necessary to the trade; and a lathe and appliances, costing about $250, and used for shaping wood or metal, which are necessary to carry on the business of a mechanic and machinist, is a tool, and may be properly set apart to him in insolvency proceedings as exempt from execution. In re Robb, 99 Cal. 202; 37 Am. St. Rep. 48; 33 Pac. 890. Whether a whole printing plant is exempt or not, or is necessary to the carrying on of the trade of a printer, conceding such printer to be a mechanic or artisan within the meaning of this section, is a question of fact to be submitted to the jury, under proper instructions: printing-presses operated by steam, a paper-cutting machine, etc., may be regarded as the tools or implements of a printer; but they are exempt only so far as they are necessary to carry on his trade and not all are exempt that he may have acquired and used in his business. In re Mitchell, 102 Cal. 534; 36 Pac. 840. A jeweler's safe, owned and used in the business of a jeweler and watch-repairer, is exempt from execution, and should be set apart as such to him in insolvency proceedings. Estate of McManus, 87 Cal. 292; 22 Am. St. Rep. 250; 10 L. R. A. 567; 25 Pac. 413.

Cabin and claim of miner. There is no inconsistency between the right to the exemption of the cabin or dwelling of a miner under the provisions of the fifth subdivision of this section, and the claim of a homestead provided elsewhere in the statute: the homestead is for the benefit and protection of the family, and the law providing for its selection should be liberally construed so as to effect this end; the exemption of the mining claim, under this subdivision, does not depend upon the residence thereon, but its selection as a homestead does; nor does the homestead right depend upon the character of the title held by the party claiming it: it is impressed upon the land to the extent of the interest of the claimant in it, not on the title merely. Gaylord v. Place, 98 Cal. 472; 33 Pac. 484; and see Heathman v. Holmes, 94 Cal. 291; 29 Pac. 404.

Horses, etc., of draymen and other laborers. To entitle a party to claim, as exempt from execution, two horses, he must show that he is a cartman, drayman, truckman, huckster, peddler, teamster, or other laborer, and that he habitually earns his living by the use of such horses, etc. Dove v. Nunan, 62 Cal. 399; and see Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 302; 91 Am. Dec. 695. The requirement of the sixth subdivision, that the party must "habitually" earn his living by the use of the articles claimed to be exempt, is imperative (Murphy v. Harris, 77 Cal. 194; 19 Pac. 377); but it is not necessary that a party claiming the exemption of two horses and a hack shall be actually using the same at the time of seizure: it is sufficient if he is engaged in the business as a means of livelihood, even though the horses are, at the time of seizure, temporarily at pasture, and the hack is undergoing repairs. Forsyth v. Bower, 54 Cal. 639. The fact that a person, with his wife, conducted a bakery upon a limited scale, and sold bread at the shop, while he daily peddled bread throughout the town and at the railroad depot upon the arrival of trains, etc., does not deprive him of his right as a peddler, under the sixth subdivision; but the debtor's right to exemption is limited by the express provisions of the statute; hence, a bread-box used by the debtor in his business as a peddler of bread, not being named in the statute as one of the articles exempt from execution, is not exempt therefrom. Stanton v. French, 91 Cal. 274; 25 Am. St. Rep. 174; 27 Pac. 657. Where the debtor gave notice to the officer, six days after the levy, that he claimed two horses and their harness as exempt from execution, this notice, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, was within a reasonable time. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838. In claim and delivery against an officer for two horses, or their value, alleged to be exempt, and wrongfully taken by the sheriff under writs of attachment, where the great preponderance of the evidence was to the effect that the horses were not used habitually by the claimant as a huckster or peddler in earning his living, the judgment or order of the court refusing to allow the exemption will not be reversed on appeal. Paulson v. Nunan, 72 Cal. 243; 13 Pac. 626.

Earnings of judgment debtor. It is the relation, and dependence of the relation, and not the aggregation of the individuals, that constitutes a family: a man's wife and minor children, though residing in a different place, constitute "his family"; but the mother of an adult judgment debtor, who permanently resides apart from him, and to whose support he is under no legal obligation to contribute, is not a member of his "family," as that word is used in the tenth subdivision of this section. Lawson v. Lawson, 158 Cal. 446; 111 Pac. 354. The provisions of the tenth subdivision are not applicable in setting aside moneys exempt from execution, where there is no family. Winterhalter v. Workmen's etc. Ass'n, 75 Cal. 245; 17 Pac. 1.

Life insurance. Prior to the amendment of this section in 1903, where the statute provided that moneys accruing upon an insurance policy issued upon the life of a judgment debtor were exempt if the annual premiums paid thereon did not exceed five hundred dollars, it as plainly provided that if the annual premiums paid did exceed five hundred dollars, no part of the same was exempt, as though this had been added in words (Estate of Brown, 123 Cal. 399; 69 Am. St. Rep. 74; 55 Pac. 1055); and a life-insurance policy, by its terms payable to the administrator of the insured, the annual premiums of which did not exceed five hundred dollars, although set apart under the statute, was administered upon, and until so set apart was a part of the estate; and the order setting it apart was a species of distribution to the widow, of part of the estate of the decedent. Estate of Miller, 121 Cal. 353; 53 Pac. 906. The words "exempt from execution," mean exempt from any execution; and the exemption from execution of life-insurance money extends not only against the debts of the person whose life was insured, and who paid the premiums, but also to the debts of the beneficiary to whom it is payable after the death of the insured. Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534. Where a life-insurance policy is made payable to the administrator generally, the heirs are not vested with any interest in or right in reference to the policy: such policy belongs to the estate. Estate of Miller, 121 Cal. 353; 53 Pac. 906. Insurance-money, coming to the surviving wife directly as beneficiary, is exempt from execution, as well as that coming to her indirectly through the estate and the order setting it apart: the statute provides that all property exempt from execution shall be set apart for the use of the surviving husband or wife. Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534.

Pension-money. Pension-money, being exempt from execution, no rights of creditors are to be considered in its distribution; and it is not subject to the fees and commissions of the public administrator and his attorney. Treadway v. Board of Directors, 14 Cal. App. 75; 111 Pac. 111.

Grain from homestead. Grain harvested from a homestead is not exempt from execution. Horgan v. Amick, 62 Cal. 401.

Patent rights. A patent right is not exempt from seizure and sale. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120.

Partnership property. Partnership property is not exempt; and where a person forms a partnership with one or more than one person, and fails to retain exclusive ownership of his tools and implements, and allows the use of them to his partners, he loses entirely the benefit of the statutory exemptions as to such property. Cowan v. Creditors, 77 Cal. 403; 11 Am. St. Rep. 294; 19 Pac. 755.

Insurance-money on exempt property. Where household goods and wearing-apparel, exempt from execution, are lost by fire, money due therefor upon a fire-insurance policy is also exempt. Langley v. Finnall, 2 Cal. App. 231; 83 Pac. 291.

Burden of proof on party claiming exemption. Where a party sues to recover property on the ground that it is exempt from execution, the burden is upon him to show affirmatively that he is entitled to the exemption. Murphy v. Harris, 77 Cal. 194; 19 Pac. 377.

Power and duty of courts. Courts have power over their own process, and to set aside the levy of a writ of attachment or execution upon exempt property. Holmes v. Marshall, 145 Cal. 777; 104 Am. St. Rep. 86; 2 Ann. Cas. 88; 69 L. R. A. 67; 79 Pac. 534. It is the duty of the superior court, in insolvency proceedings, to exempt and set aside for the use of the insolvent such personal property as is exempt from execution. Noble v. Superior Court, 109 Cal. 523; 42 Pac. 155.

Homestead exemption. The homestead exemption is purely a statutory right, limited by statutory conditions; and the court cannot impose restrictions upon the right of the creditor to enforce a sale, in addition to those imposed by statute. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. The value of a homestead is finally determined by exposing the property for sale; and if a bid is not made in excess of the amount of the exemption, the proceedings are ended; but if a larger amount is offered, it conclusively proves that the value exceeds the exemption, and in that event the excess is, of right, applicable on the debt, and the claimant has no just cause to complain. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. A homestead right acquired subsequently to the attachment lien defeats such lien; and the levy of an execution, in like manner, does not have the effect to prevent the premises from being impressed with the homestead character at any time before sale. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167; and see McCracken v. Harris, 54 Cal. 81; Sullivan v. Hendrickson, 54 Cal. 258; Wilson v. Madison, 58 Cal. 1. The title acquired by patent from the United States government by a homestead claimant is exempt from execution for any debt contracted prior to the issuance of the patent; but where the patentee conveys all his interest in such property, and subsequently acquires title by deed of grant from the grantee, he takes it, as he would in the case of a state homestead, divested of its homestead character and exemption, which do not revive upon his repurchase. De Lany v. Knapp, 111 Cal. 165; 52 Am. St. Rep. 160; 43 Pac. 598. The levy of an execution upon land, where the judgment is not a lien, creates a lien upon the land from that date, which will charge whatever interest in the land is, or may be made, subject to the execution, including the excess in value of the homestead property over the homestead exemption. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128; and see Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 657; 99 Am. Dec. 441; Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 486; 44 Pac. 167; Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 195; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195; Summerville v.

Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243. But in Lubbock v. McMann, 82 Cal. 230, 16 Am. St. Rep. 108, 22 Pac. 1145, it appears to have been held that a judgment is not a lien on any part, either in extent or value, of the homestead premises, even in cases where there is an excess in value above the homestead exemption. The levy on property covered by the homestead exemption is imposed on the property conditionally, to become absolute in the event that it is determined in the proceeding that an excess exists, and a purchaser after the levy takes subject to the lien. Lean v. Givens, 146 Cal. 739; 106 Am. St. Rep. 79; 81 Pac. 128. A judgment obtained after the declaration and recording of a homestead is not a lien on the homestead; neither are shares of stock, purchased with money borrowed on a mortgage upon such homestead, subject to execution. Yardley v. San Joaquin Valley Bank, 3 Cal. App. 651; 86 Pac. 978.

Sheriff is liable for sale of property exempt from execution. Sheriff is liable for sale of property which is exempt from execution, if such exemption is claimed before sale. Spencer v. Long, 39 Cal. 700. If judgment debtor was absent and sick at time property was sold, it is a sufficient excuse for not claiming exemption before sale. Haswell v. Parsons, 15 Cal. 266; 76 Am. Dec. 480.

Subd. 1. This and the next subdivision are for the benefit of all classes of judgment debtors, whatsoever may be their vocation, because these articles are essential to all families. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 283; 99 Am. Dec. 413.

Subd. 2. See note to subd. 1. Certain household furniture being claimed as exempt from execution, the fact that the number of beds claimed —six in all—was greater than was required for the immediate and continued use of the family, is no objection. Although it is possible that a less number of beds might have answered, yet it would be a very narrow construction of the statute to limit the exemption to just the number required for immediate and constant use. Haswell v. Parsons, 15 Cal. 266; 76 Am. Dec. 480.

Subd. 3. In Borland v. O'Neal, 22 Cal. 506, the court rendered the following opinion: "The plaintiff was entitled to hold two horses, exempt from execution, under the third clause of § 219 of the Practice Act. When the debtor has more horses than the number exempt by law, he has the right to elect which he claims as exempt, and such election must be made at the time of the levy, or within a reasonable time after notice of the levy, by giving the officer notice of such election. The officer is under no obligation to hunt up the debtor in advance of the levy, in order to procure a selection by him. Seaman v. Luce, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 240; Lockwood v. Younglove, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 506. The debtor waives his right by failing to claim it; and a claim under one execution, when no sale was made under it, is not sufficient, when the property was levied upon and sold under a subsequent execution. Dodson's Appeal, 25 Pa. St. 232. The exemption of property from sale on execution is a personal right, which the debtor may waive or claim, at his election. State v. Meloque, 9 Ind. 196. Where the debtor has several horses, and one is exempt from execution, he may elect which shall be exempt; but if he has some not in the jurisdiction of the officer, and so beyond the reach of the execution, and there is only one within the reach of the execution, he cannot defeat the creditor's levy on that one by electing to keep it. Such a course would be using the statute, which was intended for beneficent purposes, as a means of evasion and fraud. Robinson v. Myers, 3 Dana (Ky.), 441. And where the officer levied on one horse, leaving another in the possession of the debtor as exempt, and the latter, on the day of sale, claimed the horse levied on as exempt, held, that his proceeding to sell under the execution was not wrongful, unless the debtor should tender him for sale, in lieu of the article levied on, such other articles as he might, in the first instance, have seized for the satisfaction of the debt, or so much as was certainly and palpably sufficient to discharge the debt, or was at least equal in vendible value to the article claimed to be exempt. McGee v. Anderson, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 187; 36 Am. Dec. 570." Borland v. O'Neal, 22 Cal. 506; affirmed in Gavitt v. Doub, 23 Cal. 82.

Subd. 3. Oxen, horses, and mules. This subdivision was intended to apply only to oxen, horses, or mules suitable and intended for the ordinary work conducted on a farm. Hence, it does not apply to a stallion not used as a workhorse on a farm, but kept for service of mares. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 383; 99 Am. Dec. 413.

Subd. 4. See Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 306, 91 Am. Dec. 695, commented on in note to subd. 6. This subdivision (4), and also subds. 5, 6, are intended to exempt such articles as are used by the judgment debtor in earning a support for himself and family in his particular vocation. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 384; 99 Am. Dec. 413; see note to subd. 3.

Subd. 5. See note to subd. 4. Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 384; 99 Am. Dec. 413.

Subd. 6. Where two mules are claimed as exempt, it must be shown that the party claiming the mules habitually earned his living by the use of the animals in question, or that he is one of the persons mentioned in the statute. Calhoun v. Knight, 10 Cal. 393. It was held, that the term "wagon" is intended to mean a common vehicle for the transportation of goods, wares, and merchandise; and that a hackney-coach, for the conveyance of passengers, was a different article, and did not come within the equity or literal meaning of the act. Quigley v. Gorham, 5 Cal. 418; 63 Am. Dec. 139. But the introduction of the words "coupé," "hack," "carriage," etc., obviates this distinction. In order to entitle a person to claim, as exempt from execution, two horses, etc., under this subdivision he must show that he is a cartman, drayman, truckman, huckster, peddler, hackman, teamster, or other laborer, and that he habitually earns his living by the use of such horses, wagon, etc. By "other laborer" is meant one who labors by and with the aid of his team, and not by the aid of a pick and shovel, or an anvil, or a lapstone, or a jackplane, or a yardstick. In the sense of the statute, one is a "teamster," who is engaged with his own team, or teams, in the business of teaming; that is to say, hauling freight for a consideration. While he need not, perhaps, drive his team in person, yet he must be personally engaged in the business of teaming habitually for the purpose of making a living by that business. If a carpenter or other mechanic purchases a team or teams, and also carries on the business of teaming by the employment of others, he does not thereby become a "teamster," in the sense of the statute. Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 306; 91 Am. Dec. 695; see also Robert v. Adams, 38 Cal. 384; 99 Am. Dec. 413.

Subd. 10. See Spencer v. Geissman, 37 Cal. 97; 99 Am. Dec. 248.

Subd. 11. Insurance and endowment policies exempt from execution. See Briggs v. McCullough, 36 Cal. 543; see further McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

Homestead exempt from forced sale. See Civ. Code, §§ 1240, 1241.

§ 691. Writ, how executed. The sheriff must execute the writ against the property of the judgment debtor, by levying on a sufficient amount of property, if there be sufficient; collecting or selling the things in action, and selling the other property, and paying to the plaintiff or his attorney so much of the proceeds as will satisfy the judgment. Any excess in the proceeds over the judgment and accruing costs must be returned to the judgment debtor, unless otherwise directed by the judgment or order of the court. When there is more property of the judgment debtor than is sufficient to satisfy the judgment and accruing costs within the view of the sheriff, he must levy only on such part of the property as the judgment debtor may indicate, if the property indicated be amply sufficient to satisfy the judgment and costs.

Legislation § 691. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 220, which, down to the words "satisfy the judgment," read the same as at present, except that, in the first line, it had the word "shall" instead of "must"; after "satisfy the judgment," the section read: "or depositing the amount with the clerk of the court; any excess in the proceeds over the judgment and the sheriff's fees shall be returned to the judgment debtor. When there is more property of the judgment debtor than is sufficient to satisfy the judgment and the sheriff's fees, within the view of the sheriff, he shall levy only on such part of the property as the judgment debtor may indicate: Provided, That the judgment debtor be present at, and indicate at the time of the levy, such part; and provided, that the property indicated be amply sufficient to satisfy such judgment and fees." When § 691 was enacted in 1872, (1) in first line, "shall" was changed to "must"; (2) the words "or depositing the amount with the clerk of the court" were omitted; (3) the word "shall" was changed to "must," before "be returned" and before "levy"; and (4) the proviso was omitted.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 321.

Levy and sale. The levy of an execution is not necessary, where the judgment itself constitutes a lien upon the real property which is the subject of the execution sale; but where the judgment does not constitute a lien upon the property sold, and there is no levy, the sale takes effect upon the day of its date, and not before, or, at all events, not before the notices of the sale were posted. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243; and see Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441; Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195.

Purchaser's title. The title of a purchaser at a sheriff's sale does not depend upon the return to the writ of execution. Weldon v. Rogers, 157 Cal. 410; 108 Pac. 266.

Note may be sold. A promissory note is a credit, and is liable to seizure and sale under execution against the holder and payee. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81.

Sheriff's accruing costs. The keeper's fees and expenses are not a part of the sheriff's "accruing costs," under this section, and are not chargeable against the defendant without being included in the judgment; "accruing costs" are such fees and expenses, only, as are incurred in executing the judgment. Hotchkiss v. Smith, 108 Cal. 285; 41 Pac. 304.

Liability of sheriff. The default of the sheriff to execute a writ of execution renders him liable upon his bond. Sheehy v. Graves, 58 Cal. 449. If money in the hands of a county treasurer is sold without being delivered, the purchaser must look to the sheriff for its delivery. Magee v. Superior Court, 10 Cal. App. 154; 101 Pac. 532.

Check given on execution sale. The assignee of an insolvent corporation is entitled to be treated as the equitable assignee of a check given the officer upon the execution sale of property belonging to such insolvent corporation, where such officer fails and neglects to sue; and such equitable assignee may maintain his right of action to recover the amount represented by the check. Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681; 54 L. R. A. 272; 63 Pac. 1084.

Levy, defined. This section contemplates that levying is something different from selling, and makes the levying of the writ a part of the process of executing it; the term "levy," when employed to connote the acts by which an officer manifests his intent to appropriate land to the satisfaction of an execution, and when not defined by statute, has considerable elasticity of meaning; so, probably for the reason that as the common law permitted no levy of the writ on lands, it did not devise any procedure for that purpose. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. See Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 652; 99 Am. Dec. 441, and cases there cited; Wilson v. Broder, 10 Cal. 486; Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475.

2. Execution when satisfaction of judgment. The law is well settled, that, as a general rule, a levy under an execution upon sufficient personal property to satisfy the same, is a satisfaction of the judgment, sufficient, at least, to discharge third persons who were liable collaterally, or as sureties thereon. People v. Chisholm, 8 Cal. 29; Mickles v. Haskin, 11 Wend. 125; Morley v. Dickinson, 12 Cal. 561. The law does not deem such a levy a payment, but it is termed a satisfaction or discharge, and the facts thus set forth in the answer were properly new matter, and were to be taken as true, no replication denying the same having been filed. The defendants agreed to indemnify the plaintiff against the payment of costs in Boyreau v. Campbell, and they were in a manner collaterally liable therefor, in the nature of sureties. The levy upon sufficient personal property to satisfy the judgment and execution, in that case, operated as a satisfaction thereof, sufficient, at least, to discharge the collateral liability of these defendants. Neither the plaintiff in that action, nor Bray, one of the parties to the agreement, could do any act by which such discharge could be rendered ineffectual or nugatory without the consent of these defendants. Morley v. Dickinson, 12 Cal. 561. It follows, that neither the release of the property from the levy by the plaintiff in that action, nor the subsequent voluntary payment of the judgment by Bray, could revive the liability of these defendants which had been thus discharged, unless done with their consent, no evidence of which appears in this case. The rule, that a levy upon sufficient personal property is satisfaction of the judgment, is subject, however, to many qualifications as between the parties. Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 100; 32 Cal. 135; see further, Clark v. Sawyer, 1 Cal. Unrep. 573; Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325; Howe v. Union Ins. Co., 42 Cal. 528.

3. Debtor may indicate real instead of personal property for the levy. This section was enacted rather for the benefit of the debtor than the creditor. The sheriff may, on the request of the debtor, levy on real estate instead of the personal property, although there may be sufficient of the latter to amply satisfy the execution. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475.

4. Remedy against sheriff to compel payment over of money collected on execution. See Wilson v. Broder, 10 Cal. 486.

5. Execution against personal property. Under our statute, an execution affects property, only from the time of the levy; and service of a copy of an execution does not constitute a lien on property capable of manual delivery. Johnson v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 196; 65 Am. Dec. 501; Dutertre v. Driard, 7 Cal. 549; Taffts v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 47; 73 Am. Dec. 610; Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 563. The mere fact that the judgment debtor (against whom execution had issued) was found upon the mining-ground of plaintiff, cannot be said to authorize the sheriff, who had the execution, in going on the ground and digging up the gold contained in the earth. Rowe v. Bradley, 12 Cal. 226. While the interest of the pledgor may be reached under an execution, it can only be done by serving a garnishment on the pledgee, and not by a seizure of the pledge. Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601; 94 Am. Dec. 770. See case of Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 100, 32 Cal. 135, commented on in note 2 to this section. Section 220, among other things, provides that the sheriff shall execute an execution "by collecting or selling the things in action." Section 228 provides that the sheriff shall execute and deliver to the purchaser of personal property, not capable of manual delivery, a certificate of sale and payment; and that such certificate shall convey to the purchaser all right, title, and interest which the debtor had in and to such property on the day the execution was levied. Under the foregoing provisions, there can be no doubt but that the note in suit was liable to seizure and sale under execution against the holder and payee, David Thomas. It was a "credit," within the meaning of the statute. Webster's Dict., word "Credit." By § 642 of the Code of Practice of Louisiana, the sheriff, under an execution, is required "to seize the property, real and personal, rights, and credits of the debtor, and to sell them to satisfy the judgment obtained against him." Under this provision it has been held, in that state, that the right of a defendant in a promissory note may be sold under an execution (Brown v. Anderson, 4 Mart. (N. S.) 416), and that an actual seizure by the sheriff is not required. Wilson v. Munday, 5 La. 483. In subsequent cases, however, this latter point seems to have been decided the other way. Goubeau v. New Orleans etc. R. R. Co., 6 Rob. (La.) 345; Simpson v. Allain, 7 Rob. (La.) 500; Fluker v. Bullard, 2 La. Ann. 338; Offut v. Mouquit, 2 La. Ann. 785; Taylor v. Stone, 2 La. Ann. 910; Stockton v. Stanbrough, 3 La. Ann. 390. In Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187, this doctrine was announced as a judgment. In Johnson v. Reynolds, which was decided about the same time as Adams v. Hackett, but does not seem to have been reported, it was applied to promissory notes. Johnson sued Reynolds upon two promissory notes, made by him in favor of Adams & Co., which he had purchased at a sheriff's sale, under an execution against Adams & Co., by virtue of which the sheriff had seized and taken the notes into his possession. These facts were set out at length in the complaint. The defendant demurred, on the ground that the plaintiff did not become the lawful owner and holder of the notes by reason of the sale and delivery to him by the sheriff. The court below sustained the demurrer, and the plaintiff appealed. This court reversed the judgment, holding that the notes were liable to seizure and sale under execution, and that by virtue of the sheriff's sale the plaintiff had become the lawful owner and holder of the notes, and therefore entitled to sue. Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 87.

6. Execution against real estate. See the elaborate opinion of Justice Rhodes in Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 128, 99 Am. Dec. 256, and cases cited; also Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 652; 99 Am. Dec. 441.

§ 692. Notice of sale under execution, how given. Before the sale of property on execution, notice thereof must be given as follows:

1. In case of perishable property: by posting written notice of the time and place of sale in three public places of the township or city where the sale is to take place, for such time as may be reasonable, considering the character and condition of the property.

2. In case of other personal property: by posting a similar notice in three public places in the township or city where the sale is to take place, for not less than five days nor more than ten days.

3. In case of real property: by posting a similar notice, particularly describing the property, for twenty days, in three public places of the township or city where the property is situated, and also where the property is to be sold, and publishing a copy thereof, once a week for the same period, in some newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the city or township, in which the property is situated, if there be one, or, in case no newspaper of general circulation be printed and published in the city or township, in some newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the county.

4. When the judgment under which the property is to be sold is made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, the several notices required by this section must state the kind of money or currency in which bids may be made at such sale, which must be the same as that specified in the judgment.

2. Of vessels, notice of. Post, §§ 824, 827.

3. Without notice. Post, § 693.

Legislation § 692. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 221, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 689. When § 692 was enacted in 1872, (1) in the introductory paragraph, the word "shall" was changed to "must"; (2) in subd. 1, the word "a" was omitted after "for such"; (3) in subd. 4, the word "shall" was changed to "must," in both instances.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 322, (1) in subd. 2, (a) inserting the word "for" before "not less," and (b) omitting the word "successively" after "ten days"; (2) in subd. 3, (a) omitting the word "successively" after "twenty days," and (b) changing the word "when" to "where," subd. 3 then ending with the words "same period, in some newspaper published in the county, if there be one."

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 980, (1) adding, in subd. 2, the word "days" after "five," and (2) in subd. 3, changing the subdivision to read as at present, after the words "same period, in some newspaper."

Notice of sale. The requirement of notice of sales on execution is as much for the defendant's benefit and protection as for the plaintiff's. Northern Counties Investment Trust v. Cadman, 101 Cal. 200; 35 Pac. 557. Questions appertaining to notice, as well as all others which merely relate to irregularities, are between the officer selling and the parties to the execution. Kelley v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 517. A description in the notice is sufficient, where it is the same as that in the judgment, and identifies the land sold. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902. Notice given by the officer, as required by this section, is an act manifesting the intent of the officer to appropriate the described property to sale for the satisfaction of the writ, and is a sufficient levy, in any case, where the judgment is a lien on the property to be sold. Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 192; 48 Pac. 56; 51 Pac. 195.

Computation of time. Where the law fixes the time within which an act is to be done, all of the last day of that period is within the time, and a default for not doing the act can only be taken on the next day. Bellmer v. Blessington, 136 Cal. 3; 68 Pac. 111; and see Misch v. Mayhew, 51 Cal. 514; Hagenmeyer v. Board of Equalization, 82 Cal. 214; 23 Pac. 14; Landregan v. Peppin, 86 Cal. 122; 24 Pac. 859; Derby v. Modesto, 104 Cal. 515; 38 Pac. 900; Bates v. Howard, 105 Cal. 173; 38 Pac. 715.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 691, ante, and cases there cited.

§ 693. Selling without notice, what penalty attached. An officer selling without the notice prescribed by the last section forfeits five hundred dollars to the aggrieved party, in addition to his actual damages; and a person willfully taking down or defacing the notice posted, if done before the sale or the satisfaction of the judgment (if the judgment be satisfied before sale), forfeits five hundred dollars.

Legislation § 693. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 222, which had the words "shall forfeit" instead of "forfeits," in both instances.

Sheriff to determine place of publication of notice. Under this section and § 692, ante, it is the duty and right of the sheriff to publish the notice of sale under execution foreclosure decree, and he alone has the power to determine and select the places and newspapers in which to publish the required notice. Northern Counties Investment Trust v. Cadman, 101 Cal. 200; 35 Pac. 557. The penalty imposed upon the sheriff, and his responsibility for damages, are inconsistent with any alleged authority of the plaintiff in foreclosure to dictate the places or papers in which the notices are to be published, and are consistent only with his duty and power to select such places and newspapers. Northwestern Counties Investment Trust v. Cadman, 101 Cal. 200; 25 Pac. 557; and see Richardson v. Tobin, 45 Cal. 30; San Mateo County v. Maloney, 71 Cal. 205; 12 Pac. 53; Journal Pub. Co. v. Whitney, 97 Cal. 283; 32 Pac. 237; Estate of O'Sullivan, 84 Cal. 444; 24 Pac. 281.

Effect of sale without notice. The neglect of the officer making the sale to give the notice required by law does not affect the validity of the sale; but the party aggrieved has his remedy against the officer for any injury sustained by reason of such neglect. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475; Harvey v. Fisk, 9 Cal. 93.

Sheriff's false return. The sheriff's return upon a writ of execution, certifying that he sold the property after due notice, is only prima facie evidence in his favor in an action against him for selling the property without notice, and the returns may be overcome by only slight evidence aliunde; and when it is not disputed that the sheriff has himself admitted the falsity of the return, a finding that the recitals are true, based upon no other evidence than the return itself, cannot be sustained. Raker v. Bucher, 100 Cal. 214; 34 Pac. 654.

False return, defined. The term "false return" was simply the specific name, probably derived from the forms of the original writ, for one of the numerous classes of actions on the case: it was not an action in rem for the purpose of canceling or setting aside the return, in order to pave the way for another action for damages, but was itself an action for damages founded upon the official misconduct of the sheriff. Raker v. Bucher, 100 Cal. 214; 34 Pac. 654.

Actions for damages or forfeiture. An action under this section being to enforce a penalty or forfeiture, the claim must be strictly construed, and the plaintiff must show clearly that his case comes within the statute. Askew v. Ebberts, 22 Cal. 263. A cause of action for damages for sale without notice is complete, under the statute, as soon as the officer delivers a certificate of sale to the purchaser at the execution sale. Raker v. Bucher, 100 Cal. 214; 34 Pac. 654. Under this section, the aggrieved party can only recover the forfeiture when the sale has been perfected and completed by at least the payment of the purchase-money by the purchaser; he cannot recover, where there was an attempted sale under a defective notice, by which nothing passed and no right to property vested in the purchaser, and where the purchaser did not pay the purchase-money, and where the officer afterwards rightfully sold the property after giving the proper notice. Askew v. Ebberts, 22 Cal. 263. An action to recover the penalty and damages for selling personal property under writ of execution, without giving the notice required, implies, and requires for its maintenance, a valid execution; and an objection by the plaintiff, that the execution was void because not dated, is felo de se as to the plaintiff's case. Bellmer v. Blessington, 136 Cal. 3; 68 Pac. 111.

Aggrieved party, who is. The party is not injured or aggrieved, unless by means of the sale, without notice, he has been deprived of his property. Askew v. Ebberts, 22 Cal. 263. The purchaser at an execution sale, without notice, is not an aggrieved party, within the meaning of this section; such a sale is either valid or invalid; it passes title, or it does not; if it is a nullity and passes no title, the purchaser sustains no injury, and no right of action for the forfeiture accrues; if authorized, the purchaser is entitled, after the time for redemption expires, to his deed, and may compel its execution and delivery. Kelley v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 517.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the sheriff fails to give the required notice, this section prescribes the remedy against him therefor; but the failure to give the notice, it seems, is not sufficient cause for avoiding the sale. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475. But if the attempted sale was a nullity, and no title passed by the sheriff's sale, then no injury has been sustained by the judgment debtor, and the sheriff is not liable for damages, under this section, notwithstanding he did not give the required notice. Askew v. Ebberts, 22 Cal. 263.

§ 694. Sales, how conducted. Neither the officer conducting it nor his deputy to be a purchaser. Real and personal property, how sold. Judgment debtor, if present, may direct order of sale, and the officer shall follow his directions. All sales of property under execution must be made at auction, to the highest bidder, between the hours of nine in the morning and five in the afternoon. After sufficient property has been sold to satisfy the execution, no more can be sold. Neither the officer holding the execution nor his deputy can become a purchaser, or be interested in any purchase, at such sale. When the sale is of personal property, capable of manual delivery, it must be within view of those who attend the sale, and be sold in such parcels as are likely to bring the highest price; and when the sale is of real property, consisting of several known lots or parcels, they must be sold separately; or when a portion of such real property is claimed by a third person, and he requires it to be sold separately, such portion must be thus sold. The judgment debtor, if present at the sale, may also direct the order in which property, real or personal, shall be sold, when such property consists of several known lots or parcels, or of articles which can be sold to advantage separately, and the sheriff must follow such directions.

Auctioneer, sheriff as. Pol. Code, § 3291.

Legislation § 694. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 223), (1) in first sentence, (a) changing "shall" to "must," before "be made," and (b) omitting the words "and shall be made," before "between"; (2) changing "shall" to "can," before "be sold" and before "become"; (3) in sentence beginning "When the sale," (a) changing "shall" to "must" before "be within," before "be sold,' and before "be thus," and (b) omitting the word "and" before "consisting"; (4) in last line, changing "shall be bound to" to "must."

Sale en masse. A sale en masse is not necessarily void, nor even irregular. Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75. The rule, that sales en masse, of land consisting of separate tracts, will not be countenanced in courts of justice, does not go to the extent of allowing the debtor, by misleading the officer by means of a false description, or by withholding information, to invalidate a sale under execution, made in good faith in the entire absence of fraud. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475. The sale of separate parcels en masse, in disregard of the requirements of the statute, is not void, but only voidable, and subject to be set aside on timely application, and such sale en masse is not forbidden, where the parcels cannot be separately sold; but while this rule is controlling and should be strictly followed, yet it cannot be held to apply where each distinct parcel is first offered for sale separately and no bids are received; in such case, the property may then be offered and sold as a whole, and the sale will be upheld, unless other reasons appear for setting it aside. Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902; and see San Francisco v. Pixley, 21 Cal. 56; Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441; Browne v. Ferrea, 51 Cal. 552; Vigoureux v. Murphy, 54 Cal. 346; Marston v. White, 91 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 588; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812; Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832. Where the sheriff, on execution, sells separate tracts of land en masse, the creditor has his remedy by motion to set aside the sale, even if a stranger becomes the purchaser and pays the money for the property. Browne v. Ferrea, 51 Cal. 552. Where parcels of land are offered for sale separately at a foreclosure sale, and no bid is made, a sale of them en masse is void. Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75.

Sale of parcels separately. The judgment debtor has the right to require that separate lots or parcels shall be sold separately, and may also direct the order in which they shall be sold. Ontario Land etc. Co. v. Bedford, 90 Cal. 181; 27 Pac. 39; and see Leviston v. Swan, 33 Cal. 480. A judgment debtor desiring property sold in separate parcels should proceed to that end in accordance with this section; and where one has any interest in any lands described in a complaint in foreclosure, that is not covered by a mortgage, or if he has any equity that he desires to have protected, he may present the matter to the trial court in a proper manner, and where he fails to present any such matter in any manner, he cannot, on appeal, be heard to complain. County Bank v. Goldtree, 129 Cal. 160; 61 Pac. 785. The object of the statute in requiring the sale to be by parcels is to afford the judgment debtor an opportunity to redeem any of the parcels. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812. Where several water-ditches, and water rights appertaining thereto, constitute a single connected system of water-supply, so that some of the ditches would be useless if owned and held by different parties, they may be sold under execution as a single parcel; and the question whether such ditches constitute one parcel or several parcels is one of fact. Gleason v. Hill, 65 Cal. 17; 2 Pac. 413. Where separate known parcels of land are offered for sale separately in foreclosure proceedings, and no offer or bid is made for any one parcel, the property may be offered and sold in one parcel. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832; and see Marston v. White, 91 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 588. The court, in a foreclosure suit, has jurisdiction to provide in the decree in what parcel or parcels the mortgaged premises shall be sold. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687; Bank of Sonoma County v. Charles, 86 Cal. 322; 24 Pac. 1019.

Sale under decree of foreclosure. This section relates to sales under executions, in cases where there have been no contracts between the parties as to the manner of the sale; hence, where there is an express provision in the mortgage, that, in case a foreclosure shall be necessary, the land shall be sold in a certain manner, and the court, in its decree, followed that provision, there is no error. Bank of Sonoma County v. Charles, 86 Cal. 322; 24 Pac. 1019. The last sentence of this section is applicable to sales under a decree of foreclosure, only where the decree is silent as to the manner or order in which the separate parcels shall be sold. Marston v. White, 91 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 588; Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 149 Cal. 556; 87 Pac. 19; and see Ontario Land etc. Co. v. Bedford, 90 Cal. 181; 27 Pac. 39. The parties to a mortgage or a deed of trust may contract that the premises shall be sold as a whole; and such agreement is enforceable. Humboldt Sav. Bank v. McCleverty, 161 Cal. 285; 119 Pac. 82; Bank of Sonoma County v. Charles, 86 Cal. 322; 24 Pac. 1019. Where a mortgage contains an express stipulation for the sale of the premises in one large parcel, and in several other smaller parcels, the decree of foreclosure may direct the sale to be made accordingly. Bank of Sonoma County v. Charles, 86 Cal. 322; 24 Pac. 1019. Where the trustees in a deed of trust have a discretion to sell as a whole or in parcels, they are bound to exercise it in good faith for the best interests of their beneficiaries, who include not only the creditor, but the debtor and his successors in interest. Humboldt Sav. Bank v. McCleverty, 161 Cal. 285; 119 Pac. 82.

Postponement of sale. A commissioner, appointed by the court to sell property in a foreclosure proceeding, is not guilty of an abuse of discretion in refusing to postpone the sale, where no reason appears why the sale should have been postponed. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832.

Injunction against sale. The owner in possession of land is entitled to enjoin a threatened sale thereof under the defendant's execution, where such sale would be sufficient to cast a doubt as to the validity of the plaintiff's title and to cast a cloud upon it, although the sale would be ineffectual to pass title to a purchaser. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165; and see Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Fulton v. Hanlow, 20 Cal. 450; Marriner v. Swift, 27 Cal. 649; Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37; 87 Am. Dec. 103; Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189. An injunction will issue to restrain the sale of property levied on execution, on the ground that the sale, and the sheriff's deed in pursuance of it, will cast a cloud on the plaintiff's title, where the sale was threatened on a judgment for a deficiency. Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644.

Duty and liability of sheriff. The sheriff has no right to sell at private sale, or to authorize any one else to do so. Sheehy v. Graves, 58 Cal. 449. He is bound to follow the directions of the judgment debtor as to the order in which the property shall be sold. Vigoureux v. Murphy, 54 Cal. 346. Where there are several executions in the hands of the officer at the same time, under which the lands are sold, the proceeds must be applied first to the satisfaction of the oldest existing judgment lien. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. Where the sale was set aside, the sheriff can be liable only for his failure to retake the property after the sale was so set aside; and whether he was liable for such failure involves questions of fact, the verdict of the jury upon which will not be disturbed, where there is a conflict in the evidence. Orton v. Brown, 113 Cal. 561; 45 Pac. 835. Where the plaintiff's property, exempt from execution, is seized and sold by the sheriff, and is repurchased by the plaintiff from the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, the measure of damages is the amount paid to repurchase the property. Blewett v. Miller, 131 Cal. 149; 63 Pac. 157. The legal presumption is, that the officer discharged the duty required of him according to law, and that the levy was made in compliance with the directions of the writ. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165.

Sheriff's deed. The execution upon the judgment is a sufficient authority to the sheriff to sell the real property in his possession, and the deed which he makes relates back to the date of the lien perpetuated by the judgment. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165.

Validity of execution sales. The rule is, to consider every sale as final, where made by an officer of the court, under the mandate thereof. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832; and see Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. The rule of caveat emptor applies to sales under execution (Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681; 54 L. R. A. 272; 63 Pac. 1084); but the rule has never been carried to the extent that such sales could not be impeached on the ground of fraud or misrepresentation. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287. An execution sale on foreclosure is not void, unless conducted in a manner prohibited by statute, or by the terms of the decree: a sale en masse is not necessarily void, nor even irregular. Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75. The purchaser at a sale on execution under a void judgment finds himself without title. Sullivan v. Mier, 67 Cal. 264; 7 Pac. 691; and see Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. Inadequacy of price is not a ground for setting aside a sale, particularly under our practice, where the judgment debtor is allowed to redeem (Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 58 Pac. 832; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902); but it is a fact which, in connection with other circumstances, may establish fraud in the officer making the sale. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475. Where the plaintiff in the execution is the purchaser, the court will set aside the sale, upon motion, before he conveys to another; but after he conveys to a third person, and when the third person becomes a purchaser, the court will not determine, in this summary way, questions which may affect the rights of others, not before the court, and without the opportunity of explaining away those circumstances which might destroy his title. Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 130; and see San Francisco v. Pixley, 21 Cal. 56. The burden is upon the party seeking to set aside the sale, to show such an irregularity or material departure from the statute as will justify such course. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902. The sale certainly cannot be disturbed, where the court found, upon conflicting evidence, that the full value of the property sold was less than the total purchase price. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832.

Redemption. The sale of personal property upon execution is not subject to confirmation by the court, nor has the execution defendant any right of redemption; such sale is completed by the payment of the sum bid, and the purchaser is then entitled to the immediate possession of the property. Orton v. Brown, 113 Cal. 561; 45 Pac. 835. Any redemption from the sale must be of the land sold, and according to parcels in which it was sold. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812.

Appeal. Where the sale is directed for the purpose of satisfying any lien other than a mortgage lien, the undertaking on appeal need not provide for the payment of any deficiency which the judgment may direct; to this extent, the statute discriminates in favor of the mortgage lien, and against all other liens. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. This section is merely directory, so far as it deals with the manner in which the officer is required to execute the writ. Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 654; 99 Am. Dec. 441, and cases cited.

2. Neither the officer nor his deputy can become a purchaser. Jenkins v. Frink, 30 Cal. 591; 89 Am. Dec. 134.

3. Right of pledgee to buy at sheriff's sale. Wright v. Ross, 36 Cal. 415.

4. Title of purchaser does not depend upon the return of the sheriff. Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 653; 99 Am. Dec. 441; Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 281; Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 56.

5. Execution sale, when set aside. If property was sold to the judgment creditor, on execution, for the full amount of the judgment, and afterwards judgment was reduced in amount, on an appeal to the supreme court it was held, that, though the sale was valid when made, yet, upon modification of the judgment, the sale was liable to be set aside, on application of the owners, either by the supreme court, or the court below on return of the case, or by action against the purchasers by owners. But, unless some of these steps are pursued, the sale remains unaffected by the modification of judgment. Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 293.

6. Execution sales. When valid, when void. Sales to persons buying in good faith, under voidable executions, are valid, though the execution be afterwards set aside; but sales under void executions are invalid. See Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 373; 99 Am. Dec. 404.

7. Sale where judgment is void. Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 437. A sale under a void judgment does not pass title; but otherwise, if the judgment was only voidable. Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 563.

8. Land sold in gross. Where the land consisted of separate but adjoining tracts, and debtor did not direct sale by separate parcels, and the purchaser and the sheriff were ignorant of the subdivisions, the sale in gross was held valid. Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475. Land should be sold in separate parcels. See Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 15. A sale in gross, under a writ of execution, of real estate, consisting of several known and distinct parcels, at a price greatly below the actual value of the property, cannot be sustained against the objection of the judgment debtor. Although not absolutely void, it is voidable, and will be set aside, upon reasonable and proper application, when there is reasonable ground for belief that it is less beneficial to the creditor or debtor than it would have been had a different mode been pursued. San Francisco v. Pixley, 21 Cal. 57.

9. Generally. McKenzie v. Dickinson, 43 Cal. 119.

§ 695. If purchaser refuses to pay purchase-money, what proceedings. If a purchaser refuse to pay the amount bid by him for property struck off to him at a sale under execution, the officer may again sell the property at any time to the highest bidder, and if any loss be occasioned thereby, the officer may recover the amount of such loss, with costs, from the bidder so refusing, in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Legislation § 695. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 224, which, after the words "with costs," read: "by motion, upon previous notice of five days before any court, or before any justice of the peace, if the same shall not exceed his jurisdiction." When enacted in 1872, in last line, the word "shall" was changed to "does."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 323.

Misrepresentations excuse payment. Where a party purchases real estate at an execution sale, upon the faith of the representations of the judgment creditor that his judgment is the first upon the property, when in fact there are prior encumbrances on it for more than its value, he is entitled to relief, and the judgment creditor should be estopped from claiming an advantage resulting from his own misrepresentations, whether made ignorantly or willfully. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287.

Actions against bidders. The tender of a certificate of sale is not required as the basis of an action to recover the purchase-money. Harvey v. Fisk, 9 Cal. 93; People v. Hays, 5 Cal. 66; Williams v. Smith, 6 Cal. 91. In an action against a defaulting bidder, the complaint need not necessarily use the precise language of the statute: an averment of the amount of the bid and a resale at a specified smaller amount is sufficient. Johns v. Trick, 22 Cal. 511. A purchaser at an execution sale, who pays part in cash and part by check, and who afterwards procures the check from the officer and destroys it, is subject to a suit by the judgment debtor for the amount thereof, although the latter did not know of the check being received by the officer, since the judgment debtor may be treated as the equitable assignee of the rights of the officer. Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681; 54 L. R. A. 272; 63 Pac. 1084. The question whether the purchaser at an execution sale paid his bid is to be decided upon the evidence, apart from the return of sale, where he is not a party to the action in which the execution issued, and is neither bound by the return nor protected by it. Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681; 54 L. R. A. 272; 63 Pac. 1084.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The buyer at the sale must pay the whole amount down in cash, or he acquires no right whatever against the sheriff for property sold. People v. Hays, 5 Cal. 66; Williams v. Smith, 6 Cal. 91. If a party purchased real estate at a sheriff's sale, on the representation of a judgment creditor that his judgment was the first on the property, when, in fact, there were prior judgments, the purchaser should be relieved, and the judgment creditor estopped from claiming an advantage resulting from his own misrepresentations. Caveat emptor applies to judicial sales, but it has many limitations and exceptions. Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21; 68 Am. Dec. 287. In an action against a purchaser at sheriff's sale for not paying the amount of his bid, it is no defense that a sufficient notice of the sale was not given. If such be the fact, the purchaser has a remedy against the sheriff. Harvey v. Fisk, 9 Cal. 93. In an action to compel payment by delinquent purchaser at judicial sale, the statement of the sheriff, upon which the motion is based, need not state, in terms, "that loss was occasioned" by failure to pay the amount bid. An averment of the amount bid, and a resale at a specified smaller sum, is sufficient. Johns v. Trick, 22 Cal. 511. Caveat emptor—its application. See Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 560; 76 Am. Dec. 561.

§ 696. Officer may refuse such purchaser's subsequent bid. When a purchaser refuses to pay, the officer may, in his discretion, thereafter reject any subsequent bid of such person.

Legislation § 696. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 225, which read: "Such court or justice shall proceed in a summary manner and give judgment, and issue execution therefor forthwith, but the defendant may claim a jury. And the same proceedings may be had against any subsequent purchaser who shall refuse to pay, and the officer may, in his discretion, thereafter reject the bid of any person so refusing." When § 696 was enacted in 1872, (1) the words "or justice shall" were changed to "of justice must," and (2) the words "shall refuse" were changed to "refuses."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 323.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Askew v. Ebberts, 22 Cal. 264; Johns v. Trick, 22 Cal. 511.

§ 697. These two sections not to make officer liable beyond a certain amount. The two preceding sections must not be construed to make the officer liable for any more than the amount bid by the second or subsequent purchaser, and the amount collected from the purchaser refusing to pay.

Legislation § 697. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 226, which had the word "shall" instead of "must."

§ 698. Personal property not capable of manual delivery, how delivered to purchaser. When a purchaser of any personal property capable of manual delivery pays the purchase-money, the officer making the sale must deliver to the purchaser the property, and, if desired, execute and deliver to him a certificate of the sale. Such certificate conveys to the purchaser all the right which the debtor had in such property on the day the execution or attachment was levied.

Certificate of sale. See post, § 699.

Legislation § 698. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 227), (1) changing "shall pay" to "pays"; (2) changing "shall" to "must," before "deliver"; (3) omitting "shall" before "execute"; (4) omitting "and payment" after "sale," at end of first sentence; (5) changing "shall convey" to "conveys"; (6) omitting "title, and interest," after "right"; (7) omitting "and to" before "such property"; and (8) adding "or attachment," in last line.

Sale by court commissioner. The commissioner appointed to sell personal property upon the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage is simply a substitute for the sheriff, and he must make the sale in like manner as the sheriff would be required to do; and property capable of manual delivery must be taken into possession and delivered to the purchaser upon the sale. Pacific Investment Co. v. Ross, 131 Cal. 8; 63 Pac. 67.

Rights of purchaser who is execution creditor. Where the purchaser at an execution sale is the execution creditor, the rule that the sale under execution conveys to the purchaser all the right which the debtor has in the property on the day the execution is levied does not apply. Matteucci v. Whelan, 123 Cal. 312; 69 Am. St. Rep. 60; 55 Pac. 990.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469.

§ 699. Personal property not capable of manual delivery, how sold and delivered. When the purchaser of any personal property not capable of manual delivery pays the purchase-money, the officer making the sale must execute and deliver to the purchaser a certificate of sale. Such certificate conveys to the purchaser all the right which the debtor had in such property on the day the execution or attachment was levied.

Attachment. Personalty not capable of manual delivery. Ante, § 542.

Legislation § 699. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 228), (1) changing "shall pay" to "pays"; (2) changing "shall" to "must" before "execute"; (3) omitting "and payment" after "certificate of sale"; (4) changing "shall convey" to "conveys"; (5) omitting "title and interest" after "right"; (6) omitting "and to" after "had in"; (7) adding "or attachment" in last line.

Buyer takes as innocent purchaser for value. An execution sale is simply a transfer of the debtor's title to the purchaser; and if the buyer, by reason of his ignorance of a prior assignment, takes a superior title, this favorable situation comes from the fact that he is an innocent purchaser for value, and not from the fact that he buys at execution sale. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

Contracts. Contingent and complicated contracts cannot be levied upon and sold under execution without being in the possession of the officer at the sale, to be exhibited to the bystanders and assigned to the purchaser, unless a full and accurate description of the particular interest and chose in action, with all of its conditions and covenants, and a full explanation of the facts determining the value of the thing, be given by the levy and announced at the sale. Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15.

Unregistered stock. A transfer of unregistered stock is valid as against a mere levy of attachment or execution, by a creditor, against the person in whose name it stands upon the books. National Bank v. Western Pacific Ry. Co., 157 Cal. 573; 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 987; 21 Ann. Cas. 1391; 108 Pac. 676.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The purchaser of a judgment on sale under execution and levy takes as assignee only. The judicial sale of a judgment passes no title, other than would pass by an assignment by the owner. Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436. The word "officer," in the two preceding sections, means the incumbent at the time of the act of sale; and if he be dead, his successor cannot perform the duty. People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406; 68 Am. Dec. 331. A sheriff's bill of sale of personal property sold on execution need not contain all the formalities of a regular certificate. When a sheriff, without authority, sells personal property on an execution, if the judgment debtor was present, and assented to the sale, the purchaser will acquire a good title against the judgment debtor. Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 551; Woods v. Bugbey, 29 Cal. 469; generally, see Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 87, commented on in note to § 691, ante; see also Sargent v. Sturm, 23 Cal. 359; 83 Am. Dec. 118.

§ 700. Sale of real property. What purchaser is substituted to and acquires. Upon a sale of real property, the purchaser is substituted to and acquires all the right, title, interest, and claim of the judgment debtor thereto on the date of the levy of the execution thereon, where such judgment is not a lien upon such property; if the judgment is a lien upon the real property the purchaser is substituted to and acquires all the right, title, interest, and claim of the judgment debtor on or at any time after the day such judgment became a lien on such property; and in case property, real or personal, has been attached in the action, the purchaser is substituted to and acquires all the right, title, interest and claim of the judgment debtor on or at any time after the day the attachment was levied upon such property.

Specified kind of money. Ante, § 682, subd. 4, § 692.

Certificate, recording. Pol. Code, § 4133.

Sheriff's deed, and what passes by it. Post, § 703.

Injunction to restrain person in possession from waste. Post, § 745.

Recovery of damages for waste. Post, § 746.

Writ of assistance. Post, § 1210.

Legislation § 700. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 229, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 689, which read: "Upon a sale of real property, the purchaser shall be substituted to and acquire all the right, title, interest, and claim, of the judgment debtor thereto; and when the estate is less than a leasehold of two years[']] unexpired term, the sale shall be absolute. In all other cases, the property shall be subject to redemption, as provided in this chapter. The officer shall give to the purchaser a certificate of sale containing: First. A particular description of the real property sold. Second. The price bid for each distinct lot or parcel. Third. The whole price paid. Fourth. When subject to redemption, it shall be so stated. And when the judgment, under which the sale has been made, is made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, the certificate shall also state the kind of money or currency in which such redemption may be made, which shall be the same as that specified in the judgment. A duplicate of such certificate shall be filed by the officer in the office of the recorder of the county." When § 700 was enacted in 1872, (1) in first line, "shall be" was changed to "is"; (2) "acquire" was changed to "acquires"; (3) the words "shall be" were changed to "is" before "absolute" and before "subject"; (4) in the rest of the section "shall" was changed to "must," in all instances; (5) a new paragraph was made, beginning with the words "And when"; and (6) in the new paragraph the word "state" was changed to "show."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 156; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 684; the code commissioner saying, "The present § 700 of the Code of Civil Procedure is split into two sections, § 700 and § 700a. All of § 700 after the word 'thereto' is an addition thereto, and declares the effect of a sale of real property under execution, and that, when supported by a judgment lien or the levy of a writ, the title of the holder relates back to the date of such lien or levy. This simply codifies the present law on the subject under the decision of the supreme court. The part of the section omitted is made a new section to be numbered § 700a."

Construction of section. The corresponding section of the Practice Act was held sufficiently comprehensive to include within its design sales of real estate under decrees of foreclosure of mortgages. Kent v. Laffan, 2 Cal. 595. This section was intended to state the effect of a sale of any and all interests in real property, and to declare in what cases it should be subject to redemption; it applies alike to sales made to enforce the lien of the judgment, and to sales of chattels real to enforce liens created by the levy of an execution; and its language cannot be considered as a legislative construction of the words "real property," so as to fix the meaning of these words as used in § 671, ante, providing for judgment liens. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243.

Effect of sheriff's deed. A sheriff's deed, in pursuance of an execution sale under a decree of foreclosure, conveys to the purchaser all the right, title, and interest of the judgment debtor in the property sold, and such title relates to the date of the mortgage. Freelon v. Adrian, 161 Cal. 13; 118 Pac. 220. The sheriff's deed does not transfer any after-acquired interest in the land; and the judgment debtor is not estopped from showing, in an ejectment suit against him, that, subsequently to the execution sale, he acquired a different title from that which was sold under the judgment. Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552; Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120. The transfer is not perfect until the execution and delivery of the sheriff's deed; but, by the doctrine of relation, the deed, when thus executed, is to be deemed and taken as though executed at the date when the lien originated. Foorman v. Wallace, 75 Cal. 552; 17 Pac. 680. The execution of the deed gives to the purchaser at the sheriff's sale no new title to the land purchased by him, but is merely evidence that his title has become absolute; upon the sale he acquires all the right, title, interest, and claim of the judgment debtor thereto, subject to be defeated by a redemption within the statutory period, and to the right of the judgment debtor to remain in the possession of the land until the execution of the sheriff's deed, and all that remains in the judgment debtor is the right to redemption, and to retain possession of the land until the expiration of the time therefor.

Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120; Duff v. Randall, 116 Cal. 226; 58 Am. St. Rep. 158; 48 Pac. 66; Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454.

Redemption. The right to redeem exists only by virtue of the statute. Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. A prior redemptioner, who has effected a valid redemption, succeeds to the rights of the purchaser at the execution sale, as the owner of an equitable estate in the lands, which, though conditional, may become absolute by mere lapse of time, to which rights are added those of a redemptioner; and he has such an estate in the land as entitles him to protection against an assumed junior redemption under a void judgment. Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509; 68 Am. St. Rep. 61; 55 Pac. 390.

Vacating sale. An execution sale cannot be set aside on motion made fifteen months after the sale, and after the moving party had lost his right of redemption from the sale under a lien adjudged to be prior to his own; nor can a motion be entertained, where the moving party has himself, by execution sales, satisfied the judgments under which he claims the right to make the motion. Bonney v. Tilley, 123 Cal. 126; 55 Pac. 801.

Evidence in ejectment. In an action of ejectment to recover lands purchased at a sale under an execution issued upon a judgment against the defendant, the production of the judgment, execution, and sheriff's deed is, as against the judgment debtor, prima facie evidence of the plaintiff's right to recover; but if the action is against a stranger to the judgment, the plaintiff must also show that the judgment debtor had the title to or the possession of the land at the time of a judgment or attachment lien thereon, or of the sale; and this prior possession will then be prima facie evidence of a right to recover in ejectment, as against the mere possession of the defendant, which will be deemed to have been taken subsequently to the sale. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120.

Title acquired by execution purchaser. A purchaser of real property at an execution sale acquires the legal title thereto, which can only be divested by a valid redemption. Youd v. German Sav. & L. Soc., 3 Cal. App. 706; 86 Pac. 991. The language of this section, that, "Upon a sale of real property, the purchaser is substituted to and acquires all the right, title, interest, and claim of the judgment debtor thereto," saying unequivocally that he acquires the legal as well as the equitable title, was subject, as the section read prior to its amendment in 1907, to only three qualifications: 1. That, when not a leasehold of less than two years' unexpired term, the property should be subject to redemption; 2. That a deed should be subsequently given (post, § 703); and 3. That, pending the time for redemption, the possession should remain with the defendant (post, § 706); but no one of these qualifications is inconsistent with vesting title in the owner. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454; and see Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 680; 34 Pac. 120. The purchaser of real property at execution sale, whether his title is legal or equitable, is a "successor in interest" of the judgment debtor. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454. The sale of real property upon execution is conditional, and may be defeated by the payment of a certain sum by certain designated parties within a certain limited time; and if not paid within the time, the right to a conveyance becomes absolute, without any further sale, or other act to be performed by anybody. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293; Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120; Duff v. Randall, 116 Cal. 226; 58 Am. St. Rep. 158; 48 Pac. 66; Breedlove v. Norwich etc. Fire Ins. Co., 124 Cal. 164; 56 Pac. 770; Reynolds v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 128 Cal. 16; 79 Am. St. Rep. 17; 60 Pac. 467. The purchaser at a sale under the judgment rendered in the foreclosure suit acquires the same interest in the property sold as does the purchaser of property sold under an ordinary money judgment; and only the right to redeem from this sale is left in the mortgagor. Duff v. Randall, 116 Cal. 226; 58 Am. St. Rep. 158; 48 Pac. 66; and see Reynolds v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 128 Cal. 16; 79 Am. St. Rep. 17; 60 Pac. 467; Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120; Breedlove v. Norwich etc. Fire Ins. Co., 124 Cal. 164; 56 Pac. 770; Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454. The interest of the purchaser at an execution sale may be seized and sold before the expiration of the time for redemption; he has the same quality of estate before the time for redemption expires as he has afterwards; only, in the former case, the title has not become consummate, and is subject to be defeated by a redemption; he has an equitable estate in the land in both cases, and not merely a lien before the period for redemption expires. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293. The title acquired by a plaintiff at a sale upon his own judgment is affected by any defect in the proceedings by virtue of which the judgment is reversed. Purser v. Cady, 120 Cal. 214; 52 Pac. 489. The purchase of mortgaged premises by a mortgagee, under foreclosure proceedings, for the full amount of the judgment, extinguishes the debt, and he is no longer a creditor or mortgagee; hence, he has no further interest in an insurance policy taken by the mortgagor, in which his interest was only as security for his debt; and an insurance company paying the insurance loss to the mortgagor, during the period of redemption, is not liable to the mortgagee. Reynolds v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 128 Cal. 16; 79 Am. St. Rep. 17; 60 Pac. 467.

Effect of order of sale. The function of the order of sale to enforce a judgment is equally efficacious to accomplish that object, whether the judgment gives a vendor's lien or a general lien prior to another. Tilley v. Bonney, 123 Cal. 118; 55 Pac. 798.

Statute of limitations. The rule that the statute of limitations does not begin to run against the judgment debtor, or one claiming under him, until the execution of the sheriff's deed, has no application to a stranger to the judgment, or to any title which is not received from the judgment debtor. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. The decisions as to the estate of the judgment debtor after sale become authorities for determining the estate of the mortgagor after sale under the decree; and from them it will be found that the estate must remain in the mortgagor until a consummation of the sale by conveyance, as it does in the judgment debtor; and that the conveyance, when executed, will take effect, in the one case, from the date of the mortgage, as it does in the other from the time the lien of the judgment attached. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. This section comprehends sales of real estate under decrees of foreclosure of mortgage. A subsequent judgment creditor having lien has right to redeem real estate sold by foreclosure of previous mortgage. Kent v. Laffan, 2 Cal. 595. See, as to other general matters, People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127; Duprey v. Moran, 4 Cal. 196.

2. Sheriff's certificate of sale. Purchaser receiving certificate has not a title to property, but a lien on the same. Assignment of certificate as security. See Baber v. McLellan, 30 Cal. 137; People v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 655. When officer making sale dies, who makes out certificate, etc. See People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406; 68 Am. Dec. 331.

3. Particular description of real property sold. Description of city lots by numbers, referring to official city map, held sufficient. Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

4. What property may be redeemed. See, for general matters, Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401; McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307; Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515; Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 554; 70 Am. Dec. 748; McDermott v. Burke, 16 Cal. 580; Frink v. Murphy, 21 Cal. 108; 81 Am. Dec. 149; Dutton v. Warschaner, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Stout v. Macy, 22 Cal. 649; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428; Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 221. See note to next section.

5. What title acquired at sheriff's sale. An assignee of a sheriff's certificate of sale, as security against his liability for debts of the judgment debtor, with an agreement that he will cancel the same when the debts are paid and his liability is discharged, ceases to have any interest in the certificate when the debts are paid, and if he afterwards obtains a sheriff's deed, he does not acquire any title to the land. Baber v. McLellan, 30 Cal. 135. Where a duplicate of a sheriff's certificate of sale has been deposited by the sheriff with the recorder of the proper county, indorsed "Filed" by the latter officer, recorded as a deed in a book of records of deeds, and regularly indexed as a deed, and afterwards placed in a file of recorded deeds, but not with a file of certificates of sales, where it remained in said recorder's office till the time of the trial of the case, some ten years afterwards, it imparted notice to subsequent purchasers by the instrument thus deposited and preserved. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293. During the period which elapses between the sale of land on execution and the expiration of the time for redemption, the statute regards the purchaser as the equitable owner of the land, subject only to the right of redemption, and gives him the rents, profits, etc., in short, the entire beneficial interest in the property, except the actual possession. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293. If a plaintiff, in an action for foreclosure, purchases the property at sheriff's sale, he is deemed to buy with full knowledge of all defects in the proceedings relating to service of the summons. Steinbach v. Leese, 27 Cal. 297. Until the sheriff has given a deed of real property sold upon execution, the estate remains in the judgment debtor. Until then, the purchaser possesses only a right to an estate which may afterwards be perfected by conveyance. Cummings v. Coe, 10 Cal. 529. The title of a purchaser of real estate at sheriff's sale is not affected by the return of the officer. Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128; 73 Am. Dec. 526; Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 220; Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 438; Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 654; 99 Am. Dec. 441. Purchaser's title to property bought at sheriff's sale, discussed in Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441, and cases there cited; see also Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325. Tenant liable to purchaser for rent during period of redemption. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423; Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 516; 73 Am. Dec. 600; Henry v. Everts, 30 Cal. 425; Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 294. See also, further, as to what title is acquired at sheriff's sale, note to § 701, post.

§ 700a. When sales are absolute. What certificate must show. Sales of personal property, and of real property, when the estate therein is less than a leasehold of two years' unexpired term, are absolute. In all other cases the property is subject to redemption, as provided in this chapter. The officer must give to the purchaser a certificate of sale, and file a duplicate thereof for record in the office of the county recorder of the county, which certificate must state the date of the judgment under which the sale was made and the names of the parties thereto, and contain:

1. A particular description of the real property sold;

2. The price bid for each distinct lot or parcel;

3. The whole price paid;

4. If the property is subject to redemption, the certificate must so declare, and if the redemption can be effected only in a particular kind of money or currency, that fact must be stated.

Legislation § 700a. 1. Addition by Stats. 1901, p. 156; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

2. Re-enactment of code commissioners' unconstitutional addition, by Stats. 1907, p. 684; the code commissioner saying, "The only thing in this section is the requirement that the certificate of search shall include a statement of the date of the judgment and of the names of the parties thereto; the remainder of the change simply consists in recasting into more concise form what is clumsily expressed in the original section"; q.v., ante, Legislation § 700.

This section is an amendment of part of § 700, ante, as that section read prior to its amendment in 1907. See Legislation § 700, and note to that section; see also supra, Legislation § 700a.

Leasehold estates. The effect of the clause concerning leasehold interests, with respect to its bearing on the meaning of the words "real property," was merely to show, for the purposes of the section, that those words were used in a sense broader than their common-law meaning, and included chattels real as well as freehold estates; without that clause, the section could apply only to estates of inheritance and estates for life, or, by the common-law classification, freehold estates. Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529; 76 Pac. 243.

Certificate of sale. The certificate of sale, signed by the sheriff, is evidence of the sale, whereby the entire equitable title is conditionally vested in the purchaser, subject to be defeated by a redemption; but if not so redeemed, the certificate is evidence of the purchaser's right to a deed which shall vest in him the dry legal title which remained in the judgment debtor. Foorman v. Wallace, 75 Cal. 552; 17 Pac. 680. The sheriff's certificate to the purchaser is the evidence of the equitable interest which the purchaser has in the land, and is an instrument whereby an interest or title is created, within the meaning of § 1107 of the Civil Code. Foorman v. Wallace, 75 Cal. 552; 17 Pac. 680. The filing of a duplicate certificate of sale, in the mode prescribed by the statute, imparts constructive notice of the estate acquired under it, to subsequent purchasers. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293. This section does not require that the certificate issued by the sheriff shall be recorded, but simply that it be filed. Bristol v. Hershey, 7 Cal. App. 738; 95 Pac. 1040. The assignee of a certificate of sale, made under execution, may redeem from a sale made under the foreclosure of a prior mortgage executed by the judgment debtor. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454. The certificate of redemption need not state the capacity in which the redemption was made. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454.

§ 701. Real property so sold, by whom it may be redeemed. Property sold subject to redemption, as provided in the last section, or any part sold separately, may be redeemed in the manner hereinafter provided, by the following persons, or their successors in interest:

1. The judgment debtor, or his successor in interest, in the whole or any part of the property;

2. A creditor having a lien by judgment or mortgage on the property sold, or on some share or part thereof, subsequent to that on which the property was sold. The persons mentioned in the second subdivision of this section are, in this chapter, termed redemptioners.

Redemption, mode of. Post, §§ 702 et seq.
Judgment creditor, redemption by. Post, § 1505.
Parties entitled to redeem. Ante, §§ 346, 347.

Legislation § 701. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 230.

Construction of section. The inference, when redemption is effected under the provisions of this section and § 700, ante, is, that it is made of the whole property sold, and this inference is sustained by the provisions of §§ 702, 703, post. Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. The provision in § 1505, post, that a judgment creditor, who has a judgment which was rendered against the testator or intestate in his lifetime, may redeem any real estate of the decedent from any sale under foreclosure or execution in like manner and with like effect as if the judgment debtor were still living, when read in connection with the definition of a redemptioner in the second subdivision of this section, is a recognition of the existence of the posthumous judgment lien; and the concurrent provisions of the general practice of the probate procedure leave no doubt of the intention of the code not to extinguish the lien upon the death of the debtor. Morton v. Adams, 124 Cal. 229; 71 Am. St. Rep. 53; 56 Pac. 1038. The statutory right of redemption is equally applicable to sales under decrees in mortgage cases as to sales under ordinary judgments at law. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655.

When judgment debtor may redeem. A defendant in execution can redeem from an execution sale, notwithstanding he has conveyed to another the property sold under the execution. Yoakum v. Bower, 51 Cal. 539. Where the plaintiff obtained a decree foreclosing a lien upon a block of land, ordering the whole block to be sold by the sheriff, and purchased the whole block at the sheriff's sale as the property of the defendant in the foreclosure suit, in satisfaction of his lien, and, after redemption attempted by a successor of the judgment debtor, seeks from the sheriff a deed of the whole block, by writ of mandate, he will not be heard to object to the redemption of the land on the ground that the defendant in the foreclosure suit never owned the whole block. Southern California Lumber Co. v. McDowell, 105 Cal. 99; 38 Pac. 627; and see Lorenzana v. Camarillo, 45 Cal. 125; Yoakum v. Bower, 51 Cal. 539; Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531.

Successors in interest of the judgment debtor. Successors in interest stand in the place of judgment debtors; and when the statute uses the term "judgment debtors," as contradistinguished from "redemptioners," the words should be construed as broad enough to include successors in interest of judgment debtors. Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843. Whatever the nature of the purchaser's title at execution sale is, whether legal or equitable, he is a "successor in interest" of the judgment debtor, within the meaning of that term as used in this section. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454. The title of a plaintiff, which originated in the levy of a writ of attachment older than that claimed by the defendant, must prevail against a junior lien claimed by the defendant; and, as the successor in interest of the judgment debtor, the plaintiff is entitled to redeem the land conveyed to him upon execution sale, and the defendant, as a judgment creditor, has also the same right. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165. The filing, by a husband, of a declaration of homestead upon his separate property, vests the wife with an interest in the premises, of which she cannot be divested by any act of the husband alone, or by any action taken against him alone; and she has a right of redemption as his successor in interest. Watts v. Gallagher, 97 Cal. 47; 31 Pac. 626; and see Hefner v. Urton, 71 Cal. 479; 12 Pac. 486. The successors in interest of one or more of the judgment debtors, in some part of the property, may redeem the whole of the property from a foreclosure sale. Emerson v. Yosemite Gold Mining etc. Co., 149 Cal. 50; 85 Pac. 122. Successors in part can redeem, only by redeeming the whole. Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. During the time for redemption, the legal title is in the mortgagor, and the property may be conveyed by him, and the grantee becomes entitled to redeem, without paying to the mortgagee the unsatisfied portion of the judgment under which the property was sold to him, and the judgment for the deficiency is not a lien on the land. Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644. A successor in interest redeems in that capacity, where he presents his evidence of title to the commissioner, pays the money required, and receives the certificate of redemption. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454.

Redemption not fraudulent as to creditors of judgment debtor. The purchase, by an attorney, with his client's consent, of the client's property, sold under various executions, by procuring assignments to himself of the certificates of sale and deeds thereunder, in the absence of any showing that it was made for the benefit of the client, or was in fraud of his other creditors, must be presumed to have been fair and regular as between the attorney and the client, and not to have been, in effect, a redemption by the client, nor a fraud upon his creditors. Fisher v. McInerney, 137 Cal. 28; 92 Am. St. Rep. 68; 69 Pac. 622; and see dissenting opinion of Beatty, C. J.

Redemptioner, who is. The second subdivision of this section defines the class of persons who have a right to exercise the privilege of redemption; but it neither limits nor defines the extent of the right: the limitation of such extent is provided for elsewhere in the statute. Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. An action for slander of title is maintainable only by one who possesses an estate or interest in real or personal property; and to entitle the plaintiff to the status of a redemptioner in such action, it should be alleged in the complaint that he is a mortgagor, or judgment debtor, or the successor in interest of a judgment debtor, or a creditor having a lien by judgment or mortgage on the property sold. Edwards v. Burriss, 60 Cal. 157. A judgment creditor is not a redemptioner, where the judgment is not a lien on the land. Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 713; Bagley v. Ward, 27 Cal. 370. A deficiency judgment, which is not a lien upon the land, does not entitle the holder thereof to redeem. White v. Costigan, 6 Cal. Unrep. 641; 63 Pac. 1075. A judgment debtor is not a redemptioner, within the meaning of the second subdivision of this section (Yoakum v. Bower, 51 Cal. 539); nor is his successor in interest. Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843.

Lien prior to that of redemptioner. A purchaser who, as member of a partnership, holds a prior lien on lands purchased at execution sale, is not a creditor having a lien prior to that of the redemptioner, within the meaning of the second subdivision of this section. Campbell v. Oaks, 68 Cal. 222; 9 Pac. 77. The interest or estate vested in a purchaser or redemptioner cannot be superseded by the lien of a void judgment, which would prejudice his pre-existing right. Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509; 68 Am. St. Rep. 61; 55 Pac. 390.

Effect of redemption. The effect of a redemption of property sold subject to redemption depends upon the character of the person making the redemption: if made by a "redemptioner" as defined in the second subdivision of this section, and there is no further redemption within the statutory period, the redemptioner is entitled to a deed from the sheriff, conveying to him the interest of the judgment debtor therein; but if made by the judgment debtor, or his successor in interest, the effect of the sale is terminated, which fact is made to appear of record by a certificate of redemption, and a note thereof on the margin of the certificate of sale. Calkins v. Steinbach, 66 Cal. 117; 4 Pac. 1103. The reason for the distinction made between the judgment debtor and a redemptioner is, that, if the latter were permitted to redeem without paying the prior lien held by the purchaser, the title would pass to the redemptioner, and the lien of the purchaser would be defeated; but if the judgment debtor redeem, he is restored to his estate, and the lien held by the purchaser will be available. Sharp v. Miller, 47 Cal. 82. A redemption of land by a tenant in common, after a sale under a foreclosure of a mortgage executed by all the co-tenants, puts an end to the sale, and restores the parties to their original title; and the tenant in common making such redemption acquires thereby an equitable lien upon the interests of his co-tenants in the land, for their just proportion of the money paid by him in effecting the redemption; and a court of equity will enforce such lien, by decreeing that in default of payment the interests of the co-tenants be foreclosed. Calkins v. Steinbach, 66 Cal. 117; 4 Pac. 1103.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A sale without any right of redemption is a valid and sufficient remedy for the enforcement of the contract, and an act denying a right of sale would probably be such a vital assault upon the obligation as practically to destroy it, and therefore be unconstitutional. But a repeal of a right of redemption—in other words, an act making a sale absolute instead of conditional—would not impair the contract. These regulations were mere provisions of sale, governing the course of the process and its effects. The contract of indebtedness is not touched by these provisions; it stands as it stood before, a valid obligation to pay money, with the sanctions furnished by law for its enforcement. The mere fact that the judgments of the plaintiff were recovered before the passage of the act of 1859, did not vest in the holders of them the right to redeem from a sale made after the passage of the act of 1859, upon any terms different from those prescribed by that act. If this right to redeem was an incident to the judgment, under the act of 1851, it was a portion of the remedy which might be taken away by the legislature at any time before the right had become vested by the party availing himself of it. Commenting on Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 554, 70 Am. Dec. 748, as to equitable right of redemption in favor of certain persons not made parties to a mortgage foreclosure. Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515. See also case of Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 439, sustaining the last-named case, and holding People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127, to be overruled by Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515. Possession should not change to the purchaser until the expiration of the time limited for redemption. Guy v. Middleton, 5 Cal. 392; Stout v. Macy, 22 Cal. 647. The equitable right to redeem property sold under a decree of foreclosure held by subsequent encumbrancers is merged into a statutory right, not by any force given to the language of the decree, but by the fact that they have had their day in court, and an opportunity of setting up any equities they possessed. After the decree, they stand, as to their right of redemption, in the same position as ordinary judgment debtors. Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 317. As to the right to redeem property sold on execution, the court say: "The statutory right, in some instances, exists where there is no equity, and in other instances, in connection with the equitable right. Parties to the suit in which the judgment is rendered, under which the sale is made, are restricted to the six months given by statute, for they have had their day in court, and their rights after decree depend entirely upon the statute. Parties acquiring interests pending suits to enforce previously existing liens, taking their interests in subordination to any decree which may be rendered, have no equity, and are confined to the rights given by the statute, and so, as a consequence, are those whose interests are acquired after judgment docketed or sale made; but parties obtaining interests subsequently to the plaintiff, and before suit brought, who are not made parties to such suit, possess both the equitable and the statutory right. They may redeem, under the statute, or they may file their bill in equity." Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 547; 70 Am. Dec. 748; see also Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 317. The redemption should be beneficially construed. A subsequent judgment creditor, having a lien, may redeem real estate sold by foreclosure of a previous mortgage in the hands of the purchaser. Kent v. Laffan, 2 Cal. 595. On an execution sale, the buyer, before conveyance to him, has a right to redeem the property sold on the enforcement of a prior lien. After conveyance to him, he has the same right, as successor in interest to the debtor or mortgagor. McMillan v. Richards.

9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. Courts of equity favor the right of redemption. Hickox v. Lowe, 10 Cal. 207. A person who has a right of redemption may have the price at which his interest was sold ascertained, in order that he may redeem. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 20. A mortgagor may maintain an action to redeem the mortgage. Daubenspeck v. Platt, 22 Cal. 330. Redemption by tenant for years. See McDermott v. Burke, 16 Cal. 590. Who has a right of redemption. See Kirkham v. Dupont, 14 Cal. 563. When subsequent mortgagee could redeem premises from a sale under a judgment upon mechanics' liens. See Gamble v. Voll, 15 Cal. 510. A party who has no interest in mortgaged property when the action for foreclosure of the same was commenced, who buys pendente lite, and after notice of pendency of action has been filed, is not a necessary party to a foreclosure suit. See also, for other matters, Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194; see Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 713. The right of a subsequent mortgagee, as against the purchaser at the foreclosure sale under the first mortgage, is a right to redeem. A suit of foreclosure, as against a younger mortgagee, is a suit to cut off the right of redemption. When, therefore, the younger mortgagee is not made a party, his right to redeem is unaffected by a decree of foreclosure and a sale under it. See, as to redemption generally, Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 222; see also Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; see also §§ 346, 347, ante.

§ 702. When it may be redeemed, and redemption-money. The judgment debtor, or redemptioner, may redeem the property from the purchaser any time within twelve months after the sale on paying the purchaser the amount of his purchase, with one per cent per month thereon in addition, up to the time of redemption, together with the amount of any assessment or taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon after purchase, and interest on such amount. And if the purchaser be also a creditor, having a prior lien to that of the redemptioner, other than the judgment under which said purchase was made, the amount of such lien with interest.

Legislation § 702. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 231, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 302, which read: "The judgment debtor or redemptioner, may redeem the property from the purchaser within six months after the sale, on paying the purchaser the amount of his purchase, with twelve per cent thereon in addition, together with the amount of any assessment or taxes which the purchaser may have paid thereon after the purchase and interest on such amount; and if the purchaser be also a creditor having a prior lien to that of the redemptioner other than the judgment under which such purchase was made, the amount of such lien with interest."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 96, (1) adding "any time" before "within six months"; (2) changing "twelve per cent" to "two per cent per month"; (3) adding "up to the time of redemption" after "in addition"; and (4) omitting word "the" between words "after purchase."

3. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 225, changing "two" to "one" before "per cent."

4. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 41, (1) changing "six" to "twelve" before "months after the sale," and (2) changing the word "such" to "said" before "purchase was made."

Construction of section. Prior to the amendment of 1859, where real estate subject to a judgment lien was sold under execution on the judgment, to the judgment creditor, for a sum less than the whole amount of the judgment, he still continued to be a creditor having a lien for the unsatisfied portion of the judgment upon the property sold under the execution, and neither a judgment debtor, nor a redemptioner with a subsequent lien, could redeem without paying such judgment; but, by the amendment of 1860, the clause excusing the payment of the judgment for the deficiency, on redeeming, is equivalent to an explicit declaration, that, during the time for redemption, the unsatisfied portion of the judgment is not a lien on the land sold under the judgment. Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644.

What law governs. The amendment of this section in 1897, extending the time for redemption from sales under execution to one year, has no application to sales under the foreclosure of a mortgage executed prior to the enactment of such amendment. Savings Bank v. Barrett, 126 Cal. 413; 58 Pac. 914. The judgment debtor's right to redeem is governed by the law in effect when the contract was made and the judgment obtained, and not by the law in force under a subsequent amendment thereof. Welsh v. Cross, 146 Cal. 621; 106 Am. St. Rep. 63; 2 Ann. Cas. 796; 81 Pac. 229. The sale by the sheriff is regarded as a sale by the judgment debtor; and the purchaser is entitled to rely upon the statutory provisions for redemption existing at the time of the sale, to the same extent and in the same manner as if they were incorporated into a contract of sale executed by the debtor. Thresher v. Atchison, 117 Cal. 73; 59 Am. St. Rep. 159; 48 Pac. 1020; and see Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441. The purchaser at a public sale, though protected against any future impairment of his rights by subsequent legislation, is wholly governed by the laws in force at the time of the sale, including the law of redemption therefrom, and of its incidents and rights then existing. Leet v. Armbruster, 143 Cal. 663; 77 Pac. 653. The amendment of this section in 1895, reducing the percentage to be paid upon a redemption, from two per cent to one per cent a month on the amount of the purchase, has no retrospective operation upon a sale made prior to its passage: the legislature, by the subsequent amendment, was powerless to diminish the amount which the purchaser should receive, in order to effect a redemption from the execution sale (Thresher v. Atchison, 117 Cal. 73; 59 Am. St. Rep. 159; 48 Pac.

Offer to redeem. An offer to redeem, which does not conform to the statute, is void. Youd v. German Sav. & L. Soc., 3 Cal. App. 706; 86 Pac. 991.

Time for redemption. The right of redemption, as to time, is expressly limited. Summers v. Hammell, 17 Cal. App. 493; 120 Pac. 63. The statutory right to redeem a homestead vests in the administrator or the surviving wife, or in both, upon the death of the husband, and is restricted to the time provided by statute. Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. Prior to the amendment of this section in 1897, where the execution sale took place October 5, 1874, and the sheriff's deed was executed on April 5, 1875, the judgment debtor had the whole of the 5th of April in which to redeem, and a sheriff's deed executed before the expiration of that period was void. Perham v. Kuper, 61 Cal. 331; and see Gross v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 392; Bernal v. Gleim, 33 Cal. 668; Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428; Hall v. Yoell, 45 Cal. 584. A court of equity may, upon a proper showing of fraud, mistake, etc., relieve a judgment debtor, whose property has been sold on execution, from a failure to redeem within the statutory period. Bunting v. Haskell, 152 Cal. 426, 93 Pac. 110. Where the purchaser at a foreclosure sale employs the mortgagor's attorney to make the bid for him, and, through such attorney, misrepresents to the mortgagor that he has one year in which to redeem, and he, relying thereon, neglects to redeem within the statutory period, but tenders full redemption within one year, a refusal to accept such tender operates as a fraud upon him, and entitles him to equitable relief, whether or not such misrepresentations were fraudulently or honestly made; and the purchaser is estopped from insisting upon the statutory period for redemption, although the assurances were not in writing and were made without consideration. Benson v. Bunting, 127 Cal. 532; 78 Am. St. Rep. 81; 59 Pac. 991. Though the certificate of sale incorrectly names one year as the time for redemption, yet where the mortgage was made prior to the amendment of this section in 1897, fixing the limit of one year, as matter of law the purchaser is entitled to a deed at the expiration of six months. Tuohy v. Moore, 133 Cal. 516; 65 Pac. 1107; Malone v. Roy, 134 Cal. 344; 66 Pac. 313; and see Savings Bank v. Barrett, 126 Cal. 413; 58 Pac. 914; Benson v. Bunting, 127 Cal. 532; 78 Am. St. Rep. 81; 59 Pac. 991; Haynes v. Tredway, 133 Cal. 400; 65 Pac. 892. A judgment creditor whose judgment is delayed from becoming a lien within the statutory period for redemption from an execution sale is not entitled to equitable relief as a redemptioner thereafter, on the ground that the delay was caused by the intervention of legal holidays specially declared by the governor. Summers v. Hammell, 17 Cal. App. 493; 120 Pac. 63.

Legal title during time for redemption. The legal title remains in the judgment debtor or mortgagor during the time for redemption. Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644. The purchaser may be both a creditor and a purchaser, and still have a lien prior to that of the redemptioner: this can be so, only upon the principle that the legal estate is still in the judgment debtor until the delivery of the sheriff's deed. Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117.

Redemption-money. A judgment debtor is not a redemptioner, within the meaning of this section; and he may redeem by paying the purchaser the purchase-money, with the statutory percentage and the taxes: he is not obliged to pay other liens which the purchaser may have on the property; but if a redemptioner, or creditor, holding a subsequent lien on the property, redeems, he must also pay to the purchaser any lien he may have prior to that of the redemptioner, other than that for which the property was sold. Sharp v. Miller, 47 Cal. 82. A judgment debtor may redeem without paying the amount of a prior judgment against him, held by a partnership, of which the purchaser is a member. Campbell v. Oaks, 68 Cal. 222; 9 Pac. 77. The sheriff is the agent of the purchaser, merely for the purpose of receiving payment, and that payment, to bind his principal, must be made in the amount and kind of money to which the principal is entitled; he may refuse the tender of a check; but if, in a bona fide transaction, he accepts a check as a conditional payment, and that check is regularly paid, his principal has suffered no injury, and the transaction is quite within the scope of the agent's authority. Hooker v. Burr, 137 Cal. 663; 99 Am. St. Rep. 17; 70 Pac. 778. If, upon the foreclosure of a mortgage, the mortgagee purchases the land for a sum less than the amount of the judgment, and dockets a judgment for the deficiency, a purchaser from the mortgagor of the land, pending the time for redemption, is entitled as successor in interest to redeem from the mortgage, without paying the amount of the deficiency. Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A party entitled to redeem may have the price at which his interest was sold ascertained, in order that he may redeem. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14. When land is sold at judicial sale, and the proceeds do not amount to the whole judgment, but a balance is left unpaid, and the land is afterwards redeemed under the statute, the party redeeming (who was an assignee of the judgment debtor) was bound to pay the whole of the plaintiff's judgment, and not merely his bid, with interest and twelve per cent. The lien of the judgment continues until the balance is paid. Van Dyke v. Herman, 3 Cal. 295. Strict compliance with the statute is required to be shown by a person claiming title by virtue of a statutory redemption. Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54. A owes B a debt; to secure it, A and C jointly mortgage to B a piece of land owned by them in common. Afterwards, A mortgages his undivided interest in the land to secure a debt to D. B forecloses against A and C, and buys in the whole land, not making D a party. Period for redemption having gone, B gets a sheriff's deed. It was decided by the supreme court that D, as subsequent mortgagee, may redeem A's but not C's interest in the land, and that the sale is final as to C's interest, D not being a necessary party to the foreclosure. The redemption-money for A's interest is the amount of B's mortgage debt, with interest, etc., less one half of the purchase-money of the whole tract sold as the land of A and C under the foreclosure sale. Kirkham v. Dupont, 14 Cal. 559. Where a judgment is against two persons, one only of whom appeals, and the appeal is dismissed, with twenty per cent damages, the damages, with costs, do not become part of the original judgment, and the redemptioner is not obliged to pay them when he redeems from a sale under the judgment. Where a redemptioner pays to the sheriff an excess of money, under protest, the payment is not compulsory. The sheriff is the bailee of the redemptioner as to the excess, who may recover it back. A redemptioner is not required to pay interest on the purchaser's bid, over and above the twelve per cent, and he is not required to pay interest on the whole judgment of the purchaser, but only on the excess over and above the bid. McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232. The legal estate exists in the judgment debtor after expiration of the time for redemption, until execution of the conveyance to the purchaser. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655. The title to real estate passes only upon the execution and delivery of the deed. Anthony v. Wessel, 9 Cal. 103. A deed of a sheriff, which was executed before the expiration of the statutory period of redemption, is void, and not merely voidable. Gross v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 392; Savings and Loan Society v. Thompson, 32 Cal. 347; Bernal v. Gleim, 33 Cal. 668. Before the owner can be made to pay the purchaser taxes on redemption, the purchaser must show that the taxes were legally assessed and paid, and were a charge on the property before or at the time of the redemption, and the tax-collector's receipts are not sufficient proof. People v. Doane, 17 Cal. 476.

§ 703. When judgment debtor or another redemptioner may redeem. If property be so redeemed by a redemptioner, another redemptioner may, within sixty days after the last redemption, again redeem it from the last redemptioner on paying the sum paid on such last redemption, with two per cent thereon in addition, and the amount of any assessment or taxes which the last redemptioner may have paid thereon after the redemption by him, with interest on such amount, and, in addition, the amount of any liens held by said last redemptioner prior to his own, with interest; but the judgment under which the property was sold need not be so paid as a lien. The property may be again, and as often as a redemptioner is so disposed, redeemed from any previous redemptioner within sixty days after the last redemption, on paying the sum paid on the last previous redemption, with two per cent thereon in addition, and the amounts of any assessments or taxes which the last previous redemptioner paid after the redemption by him, with interest thereon, and the amount of any liens, other than the judgment under which the property was sold, held by the last redemptioner previous to his own, with interest. Written notice of redemption must be given to the sheriff and a duplicate filed with the recorder of the county, and if any taxes or assessments are paid by the redemptioner, or if he has or acquires any lien other than that upon which the redemption was made, notice thereof must in like manner be given to the sheriff and filed with the recorder; and if such notice be not filed, the property may be redeemed without paying such tax, assessment, or lien. If no redemption be made within twelve months after the sale, the purchaser, or his assignee, is entitled to a conveyance; or if so redeemed, whenever sixty days have elapsed, and no other redemption has been made, and notice thereof given, and the time for redemption has expired, the last redemptioner, or his assignee, is entitled to a sheriff's deed; but, in all cases, the judgment debtor shall have the entire period of twelve months from the date of the sale to redeem the property. If the judgment debtor redeem, he must make the same payments as are required to effect a redemption by a redemptioner. If the debtor redeem, the effect of the sale is terminated, and he is restored to his estate. Upon a redemption by the debtor, the person to whom the payment is made must execute and deliver to him a certificate of redemption, acknowledged or proved before an officer authorized to take acknowledgments of conveyances of real property. Such certificate must be filed and recorded in the office of the recorder of the county in which the property is situated, and the recorder must note the record thereof in the margin of the record of the certificate of sale.

Writ of assistance. Ante, § 682.
Certificate, recording. Pol. Code, § 4133.

Legislation § 703. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 232, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 302, which read: "If property be so redeemed by a redemptioner, either the judgment debtor or another redemptioner may, within sixty days after the last redemption, again redeem it from the last redemptioner, on paying the sum paid on such last redemption, with four per cent thereon in addition, and the amount of any assessment or taxes which the said last redemptioner may have paid thereon after the redemption by him, with interest on such amount, and in addition the amount of any liens held by said last redemptioner prior to his own, with interest; provided, that the judgment under which the property was sold need not be so paid as a lien. The property may be again, and as often as the debtor or a redemptioner is so disposed, redeemed from any previous redemptioner, within sixty days after the last redemption, with four per cent thereon in addition, and the amount of any assessments or taxes which the last previous redemptioner paid after the redemption by him, with interest thereon, and the amount of any liens, other than the judgment under which the property was sold, held by the said last redemptioner previous to his own, with interest. Notice of redemption shall be given to the sheriff; if no redemption be made within six months after the sale, the purchaser, or his assignee, shall be entitled to a conveyance; or if so redeemed, whenever sixty days have elapsed, and no other redemption has been made and notice thereof given, the time for redemption shall have expired, and the last redemptioner or his assignee, shall be entitled to a sheriff's deed. If the debtor redeem at any time before the time for redemption expires, the effect of the sale shall be terminated and he be restored to his estate." When § 703 was enacted in 1872, (1) "said" was omitted before "last redemptioner may have paid"; (2) "provided, that" was omitted after "with interest," and a new sentence made, beginning with "The judgment"; (3) "said" was omitted before "last redemptioner previous"; (4) "shall" was changed to "must" after "Notice of redemption," and "shall be" was changed to "is" before "entitled to a conveyance"; (5) "and" was omitted before "the time" and inserted before "the last"; (6) "shall have" was changed to "has" before "expired"; (7) "shall be" was changed to "is" before "entitled" and before "terminated"; and (8) "be" was changed to "is" before "restored to his estate."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 323, (1) striking out "either the judgment debtor or" before "another redemptioner"; (2) adding "but" before "the judgment under which"; (3) striking out "the debtor or" after "as often as"; (4) affixing the suffix "(er)" to "redemption," and adding after this erroneous correction the words "on paying the sum paid on the last previous redemption"; (5) changing "assessments" to "assessment" before "or taxes"; (6) prefixing the sentence beginning "Notice" with the word "Written," and adding to the sentence that part beginning with the words "and a duplicate" and ending "assessment, or lien"; (7) adding, at end of sentence beginning "If no redemption," the last clause, "but in all cases," etc., and adding thereafter a new sentence, "If the judgment debtor redeem," etc.; (8) changing sentence beginning "If the debtor" to read as at present; (9) adding the last two sentences of the present section, beginning "Upon a redemption."

3. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 226, (1) in first sentence, changing "four per cent" to "two per cent," (2) in sentence beginning "The property may," changing (a) "four per cent" to "two per cent," and (b) "assessment" to "assessments."

4. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 41, (1) in sentence beginning "The property may," changing "amount" to "amounts" before "of any assessments"; and (2) in sentence beginning "If no redemption," changing "six months" to "twelve months," in both instances.

Successive redemptions. If the property sold be redeemed by the redemptioner defined in the second subdivision of § 701, ante, another redemptioner may, within sixty days after the redemption, again redeem it from the last redemptioner, on making the payments prescribed in this section. Calkins v. Steinbach, 66 Cal. 117; 4 Pac. 1103.

Redemption from foreclosure. The Practice Act made no distinction between judgments rendered in suits to foreclose mortgages and judgments of a different character; and sales under executions issued on judgments for foreclosure are subject to redemption, as in other cases. Stout v. Macy, 22 Cal. 647.

Sufficiency of redemption. Where the redemptioner presents evidence of title, pays the money required, and receives a certificate of redemption, the redemption is sufficient. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454.

Who is not a redemptioner. The grantee of an interest in lands subject to a life estate, who redeems property from foreclosure sale, is not a redemptioner as that term is used in this section, and is not substituted to the full rights of the purchaser and entitled to a deed without a resale; by such redemption, the sale is set at large, leaving the land subject to a lien in his favor, and he is entitled to contribution from the life tenant and several remaindermen for their several portions of the money paid to redeem the land. Warner v. Freud, 138 Cal. 651; 72 Pac. 345.

Estoppel to question validity of redemption. Whether a person seeking to redeem from sheriff's sale is authorized to make such redemption, is a question which concerns him and the purchaser alone; and if the purchaser is willing to consider him as a redemptioner, and accepts and retains the redemption-money paid by him, he cannot thereafter question the effect of such redemption. White v. Costigan, 134 Cal. 33; 66 Pac. 78; and see Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

Effect of redemption. The redemption is equivalent to a transfer or assignment of the certificate of sale; and although the redemptioner may not be entitled to demand the amount of his lien from a subsequent redemptioner because of his failure to comply strictly with the law, yet if he is entitled to redeem, and effects the redemption to the satisfaction of the purchaser, the sheriff's deed passes the same title as it would have done had it been executed to the purchaser without redemption. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256; White v. Costigan, 134 Cal. 33; 66 Pac. 78; and see Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. When a redemption is made, all interest to the realty possessed by the purchaser at the sale ceases, and the title of the judgment debtor stands as if no sale had ever been made. Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843; Warner v. Freud, 138 Cal. 651; 72 Pac. 345. The effect of a redemption by a successor in interest, holding the legal and equitable title, is a restoration to the original estate; but this does not apply to one holding only the equitable title under a certificate issued upon a second sale. Bristol v. Hershey, 7 Cal. App. 738; 95 Pac. 1040.

Certificate of redemption. It is not necessary that the certificate of redemption, where the redemption is made by the successor in interest, shall state the capacity in which such redemption is made. Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390; 71 Pac. 454.

Sheriff's deed. A sheriff's deed is conclusive evidence of the facts of the sale as recited therein (Kelley v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 517; and see Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280; Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649; 99 Am. Dec. 441; Mayo v. Foley, 40 Cal. 281); and it vests in the purchaser the title of the execution debtor (Kelley v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 517); but a deed given by the sheriff, after redemption, is a nullity. Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843.

Reforming sheriff's deed. See note 78 Am. Dec. 136.

Effect of redemption. See note 67 Am. St. Rep. 510.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Title under sheriff's deeds and certificates. Who may execute deed, etc. A sheriff who sells land under execution, and gives a certificate of the sale to the purchaser, is the proper person to make the deed, notwithstanding his term of office has in the mean time expired. Anthony v. Wessel, 9 Cal. 103; see Lewes v. Thompson, 3 Cal. 266. The legal estate is still in the judgment debtor until the delivery of the sheriff's deed. Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117. Title of purchaser at judicial sale cannot be attacked in a collateral action. Nagle v. Macy, 9 Cal. 426. If parties claim under sheriff's deed, they are chargeable with notice of the defects in the judgment upon which execution issued. Wells v. Stout, 9 Cal. 479. If a person claims a sheriff's deed as having redeemed the property as successor in interest of the judgment debtor, his offer to redeem must be made in that character. A sheriff's certificate of the purchase of property as that of the defendant in execution, is not sufficient to entitle the holder to redeem as such successor, at least until the expiration of six months. Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54. The officer who makes a sale of land by virtue of an execution, and executes to the purchaser a deed therefor, must recite in such deed the recovery of the judgment, the names of the judgment creditors and debtors, and the issuing of an execution on the judgment, and the levy and sale. The recital of such facts is essential to show the transmission of the debtor's title in the property to the purchaser. Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411; 85 Am. Dec. 78; People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220. A sheriff's deputy may execute a deed for property sold under execution, but it must be executed in the name of the sheriff. Lewis v. Thompson, 3 Cal. 266; Mills v. Tukey, 22 Cal. 373; 83 Am. Dec. 74. And if the sheriff's term of office had expired at the time of its execution, the authority of the deputy must be shown, to authorize such deed to be read in evidence in an action of ejectment. Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128; 73 Am. Dec. 526. See also, for general matters in relation to sheriffs' deeds and certificates, Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 462; 76 Am. Dec. 540; People v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 655; Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 298; Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 438; Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552.

2. Mandamus to compel sheriff to execute conveyance. When mandamus will not lie against a sheriff to compel him to make a deed to land to a purchaser at execution sale. Williams v. Smith, 6 Cal. 91; see Frink v. Murphy, 21 Cal. 111; 81 Am. Dec. 149.

3. Proof of payment of taxes by purchasers. Before the owner can be compelled on redemption to pay certain taxes paid on the property, the purchaser must show that the taxes were legally assessed and paid, and were a charge on the property at or before the time of redemption. The tax-collector's receipts are not sufficient proof. People v. Doane, 17 Cal. 477. A decree cannot order sheriff to execute deed to buyer on foreclosure sale, the land being sold subject to redemption in six months. Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 173.

§ 704. In cases of redemption, to whom the payments are to be made. The payments mentioned in the last two sections may be made to the purchaser or redemptioner, or for him, to the officer who made the sale. When the judgment under which the sale has been made is payable in a specified kind of money or currency, payments must be made in the same kind of money or currency, and a tender of the money is equivalent to payment.

Specified kind of money. Ante, §§ 682, subd. 4, 692.

Legislation § 704. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 233, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 690, which had (1) the words "as the case may be" after "redemptioner"; (2) "said" before "payments" and "shall" instead of "must" after "payments"; and (3) "shall be" instead of "is" before "equivalent."

Redemption-money paid to whom. The right to redeem after the expiration of the statutory period depends upon the conditions of the decree granting the privilege of redeeming; and where one of these is, that the money shall be paid to a person designated, and there is a refusal to comply therewith, the right to redeem is lost. Bunting v. Haskell, 152 Cal. 426; 93 Pac. 110.

Sheriff as agent of purchaser or redemptioner. The sheriff is not so far the agent of the purchaser or of a prior redemptioner as to bind or estop him from questioning the validity of a subsequent redemption upon which the money is paid to the sheriff. Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509; 68 Am. St. Rep. 61; 55 Pac. 390.

Effect of tender. Tender and refusal are equivalent to performance in discharging all collateral and accessorial liens and rights, and, in the case of redemption of land, ipso facto work a restoration of the title to the judgment debtor or his successor in interest. Leet v. Armbruster, 143 Cal. 663; 77 Pac. 653. Tender is not required to be kept good for the purposes of the action: it is the tender itself, and its refusal, which instantaneously work the discharge of the purchaser's lien and the divestiture of his title, although the effect of the tender does not operate as a payment of the debt for all purposes, as the debt still remains due, with the sole right left in the purchaser of an action at law for the recovery of the money. Leet v. Armbruster, 143 Cal. 663; 77 Pac. 653; and see Hershey v. Dennis, 53 Cal. 77; Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843; Haile v. Smith, 113 Cal. 656; 45 Pac. 872. Where the law declares that an offer to redeem shall be, so far as the restoration of the estate is concerned, the equivalent of redemption, the purchaser buys with knowledge of this requirement, and takes his title subject to the condition that he may be divested of it either by redemption or by a valid offer to redeem. Leet v. Armbruster, 143 Cal. 663; 77 Pac. 653.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Generally. See People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127, commented on in Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 439; McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232; Mitchell v. Hackett, 14 Cal. 661; People v. Doane, 17 Cal. 476; People v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 658; Baber v. McLellan, 30 Cal. 137. Payment in certain kind of money. Belloc v. Davis, 38 Cal. 243. Tender of sum due on mortgage, whether the tender must be kept good, etc. See Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223. By the phrase, "officer who made the sale," is meant the incumbent at the time of the acts of sale, and not the official character of the person; and if such officer is dead, his successor cannot receive the redemption-money. People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406; 68 Am. Dec. 331; Anthony v. Wessel, 9 Cal. 103. Where a redemptioner, under the statute, pays to the sheriff an excess of money, under protest as to the excess, the payment is not compulsory. The sheriff is the bailee of the plaintiff as to the excess, who may recover it back on demand, the money not having been paid over to the redemptionee. McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232; see also McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 368; 70 Am. Dec. 655.

§ 705. What a redemptioner must do in order to redeem. A redemptioner must produce to the officer or person from whom he seeks to redeem and serve with his notice to the sheriff making the sale, or his successor in office;

1. A copy of the docket of the judgment under which he claims the right to redeem, certified by the clerk of the court, or of the county where the judgment is docketed; or, if he redeem upon a mortgage or other lien, a note of the record thereof, certified by the recorder;

2. A copy of any assignment necessary to establish his claim, verified by the affidavit of himself, or of a subscribing witness thereto;

3. An affidavit by himself or his agent, showing the amount then actually due on the lien.

Legislation § 705. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 234), (1) changing, in the introductory paragraph, "shall" to "must," and (2) omitting "and" at end of subd. 2, and as thus enacted read as at present, except for the addition made in 1909.

2. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 967, in introductory paragraph adding the words after "sheriff."

Construction of section. This section applies to redemptioners only, as defined in the second subdivision of § 701, ante. Yoakum v. Bower, 51 Cal. 539; Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843. Judgment debtors and their successors in interest are not redemptioners, and therefore are not required to follow the demands of this section in making a redemption. Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552; 54 Am. St. Rep. 369; 45 Pac. 843; Schumacher v. Langford, 20 Cal. App. 61; 127 Pac. 1057.

Production of required papers by redemptioner. The right to redeem is statutory, given only in the event of a tender and production of certain statutory proofs; and a valid redemption cannot be made, unless the creditor presents a copy of the docket of the judgment under which he claims, duly certified. Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54. The production of the papers mentioned in the statute as necessary to entitle one to redeem, as between the immediate parties to the redemption, may be waived. Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121; 99 Am. Dec. 256. The power of the sheriff is altogether statutory; and where the redemption is attempted to be effected through him, he has no authority either to receive the redemption-money from one claiming the right to redeem under the judgment or to execute a deed to him, unless the redemptioner produces a copy of the docket of his judgment. Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193. The sheriff has no authority to convey, in the absence of a written assignment; but, where the intent is apparent, the transaction, interpreted in the light of the circumstances, and of the law and usage of the state, may be regarded, in equity, as an assignment of the purchaser's interest. White v. Costigan, 6 Cal. Unrep. 641; 63 Pac. 1075; Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390; Eldridge v. Wright, 55 Cal. 531. Where the sheriff's deed does not recite that a copy of the docket of the judgment was produced to him by the party seeking to redeem, and it is not shown aliunde that such copy was produced, such deed does not transfer title. Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54; Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667; 76 Am. Dec. 459.

§ 706. Until the expiration of redemption-time, court may restrain waste on the property. What considered waste. Until the expiration of the time allowed for redemption, the court may restrain the commission of waste on the property, by order granted with or without notice, on the application of the purchaser or the judgment creditor. But it is not waste for the person in possession of the property at the time of sale, or entitled to possession afterwards, during the period allowed for redemption, to continue to use it in the same manner in which it was previously used; or to use in the ordinary course of husbandry; or to make the necessary repairs of buildings thereon; or to use wood or timber on the property therefor; or for the repair of fences; or for fuel in his family, while he occupies the property.

Waste, Post, §§ 745, 746.

Legislation § 706. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 235), (1) after "But it," changing "shall not be deemed" to "is not," and (2) omitting "it" before "in the ordinary." Quære as to second change.

Court may restrain waste. The judgment debtor is entitled to remain in possession of the property, where the mortgage thereon is foreclosed, until the expiration of the time allowed for redemption; during that period the purchaser has and can assert no right to the possession thereof, though, on his application, the court may restrain the commission of waste on the property. People's Sav. Bank v. Jones, 114 Cal. 422; 46 Pac. 278; West v. Conant, 100 Cal. 231; 34 Pac. 705.

Court may appoint receiver. A receiver should be appointed for a mine, where, during the period of redemption, it is worked, and gold extracted therefrom, to such an extent as to constitute waste, or destruction of the property itself, or all that is of any essential value; and it is to the interest of all the parties that a receiver be appointed, rather than stop working the claims entirely. Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191.

When action may be commenced to recover house removed from mortgaged premises. Claim and delivery to recover a house moved from mortgaged premises after foreclosure sale, and before the commissioner's deed is executed, is prematurely brought, where the statutory time for redemption has not expired, and the plaintiff is therefore not entitled to immediate possession of the property. People's Sav. Bank v. Jones, 114 Cal. 422; 46 Pac. 278.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Purchaser of mining claim, where judgment debtor remains in possession, working the claim, may have a receiver appointed to take charge of the proceeds during the time allowed for redemption. Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191. Purchaser entitled to rents and profits of, from date of sale until time for redemption expires. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 515; 73 Am. Dec. 600.

§ 707. Rents and profits. The purchaser, from the time of the sale until a redemption, and a redemptioner, from the time of his redemption until another redemption, is entitled to receive, from the tenant in possession, the rents of the property sold, or the value of the use and occupation thereof. But when any rents or profits have been received by the judgment creditor or purchaser, or his or their assigns, from the property thus sold preceding such redemption, the amounts of such rents and profits shall be a credit upon the redemption-money to be paid; and if the redemptioner or judgment debtor, before the expiration of the time allowed for such redemption, demands in writing of such purchaser or creditor, or his assigns, a written and verified statement of the amounts of such rents and profits thus received, the period for redemption is extended five days after such sworn statement is given by such purchaser or his assigns, to such redemptioner or debtor. If such purchaser or his assigns shall, for a period of one month from and after such demand, fail or refuse to give such statement, such redemptioner or debtor may bring an action in any court of competent jurisdiction, to compel an accounting and disclosure of such rents and profits, and until fifteen days from and after the final determination of such action, the right of redemption is extended to such redemptioner or debtor.

Legislation § 707. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 236, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 106), (1) changing "shall be" to "is" before "entitled"; (2) changing "provided that" to "But"; (3) omitting "provided further that" before "if the redemptioner," and adding after "redemptioner" the words "or judgment debtor"; (4) changing "shall make demand" to "demands" before "in writing"; (5) omitting (a) "or their" before "assigns" and (b) "for" before "a written"; (6) changing "amount" to "amounts"; (7) changing "shall be" to "is" before "extended" and before "given"; (8) adding "or debtor" after "redemptioner"; (9) omitting "and provided further, that" before "If"; (10) adding "or debtor" before "may bring"; (11) changing "shall be" to "is" and adding "or debtor" in last line.

Construction of section. The provisions of this section have no reference to tax sales. Mayo v. Woods, 31 Cal. 269.

Judgment creditor's right to rents. The judgment creditor does not become entitled to the value of the use and occupation of the premises until the sale is made. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337.

Rents and profits pending redemption. Rents should be considered in dealing with the question of the judgment debtor's right to restitution in making redemption. Yndart v. Den, 125 Cal. 85; 57 Pac. 761.

Lessor's right to rents. A lessor, to whose title the plaintiff has succeeded, is not entitled to the rents accruing, nor to the value of the use and occupation of the property, subsequently to the sale under foreclosure, unless such lessor effected a redemption from the sale; and the payment of rents by the lessee to the lessor, for a period extending beyond the date of such sale, is made at the peril of the lessee. Harris v. Foster, 97 Cal. 292; 33 Am. St. Rep. 187; 32 Pac. 246.

Purchaser's right to rents. The purchaser of real property at an execution sale from the time of sale until a redemption, and a redemptioner from the time of his redemption until another redemption, is entitled to receive from the tenant in possession the rents of the property sold, or the value of the use and occupation thereof; and this right is not limited to cases where there is a redemption; it begins at the time of the purchase, and continues until a redemption is made, or if there is no redemption, then until the time allowed for redemption has expired. Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723; Berson v. Ewing, 84 Cal. 89; 23 Pac. 1112; and see Reynolds v. Lathrop, 7 Cal. 43; McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592; Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600; Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191; Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423; Duff v. Randall, 116 Cal. 226; 58 Am. St. Rep. 158; 48 Pac. 66; Yndart v. Den, 125 Cal. 85; 57 Pac. 761. Where the rent is payable annually, the purchasers at the foreclosure sales are entitled to an amount of rent in proportion as the time intervening between their purchases and the expiration of the year term bears to one year, providing the six months' term of redemption had not expired in the mean time. Clarke v. Cobb, 121 Cal. 595; 54 Pac. 74. The purchaser at a foreclosure sale is not entitled to receive any of the rents and profits which accrued prior to the time of his purchase; and he cannot sue for and recover rents and profits until they are collected by a receiver. Pendola v. Alexanderson, 67 Cal. 337; 7 Pac. 756. A sale under the foreclosure of a mortgage upon leased land, upon which a portion of the products of the soil was to be delivered annually as rent, and which became due and payable for the year after the purchase from the sheriff, and before the expiration of the time for redemption, does not entitle the purchaser to the whole of the rent, but he is entitled only to an apportionment of a share of the annual rent, in proportion to the unexpired part of the lease year existing after the purchase. Clarke v. Cobb, 121 Cal. 595; 54 Pac. 74. A purchaser of land at sheriff's sale may maintain an action for rent against a tenant in possession under the judgment debtor, before the expiration of the time allowed for redemption, and as often as the rent becomes due under the terms of the lease existing when he purchased; the sale operates as an assignment of the lease for the time. Reynolds v. Lathrop, 7 Cal. 43.

Liability of tenant in possession for rents. The liability of a tenant in possession to the purchaser, for rents or use and occupation from the day of sale to the expiration of the time for redemption, is a statutory liability, and exists without the assent of the tenant: it is not a liability founded upon contract, express or implied, within the meaning of § 537, ante, authorizing the issuance of an attachment. Walker v. McCusker, 65 Cal. 360; 4 Pac. 206. The occupation of the premises from the time of the sheriff's sale to the execution of the sheriff's deed, render the tenant prima facie liable to the purchaser for the rent. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423. Where the judgment debtor remains in possession of the property during the redemption period, and collects the rents and profits, he is a trustee of the fund for the purchaser, and if the fund is in danger of loss, a bill in equity to account will lie. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600. A tenant in possession, paying rent to an execution defendant after the sale, is not relieved from the liability cast upon him to pay the rent to the purchaser. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423.

Tenant in possession, who is. The term "tenant in possession" is generic, and is intended to designate the class of persons from whom the purchaser is to receive the rents, and embraces, within the natural and usual meaning of the words, a judgment debtor, as well as his lessee. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600; Knight v. Truett, 18 Cal. 113. Where real property is sold at a foreclosure sale, a party to the foreclosure suit, who thereafter remains in possession under a claim of title which is subject to the mortgage, is a tenant in possession, and liable, as such, to account to the purchaser, in an action of assumpsit, for the value of the use and occupation. Walker v. McCusker, 71 Cal. 594; 12 Pac. 723. The owner in fee in possession is, in legal contemplation, no less a tenant than the man who occupies under him. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600.

Liability of administrator for rents, etc. An administrator is not liable for the use and occupation of the premises belonging to the estate, after the sale thereof by the sheriff; from that time the purchaser is entitled to the value of the use and occupation, and neither the estate nor the parties interested therein have any claim thereto. Walls v. Walker, 37 Cal. 424; 99 Am. Dec. 290; and see McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592; Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600; Kline v. Chase, 17 Cal. 596; Knight v. Truett, 18 Cal. 113. An administrator, who uses and occupies the premises belonging to the estate, after the sheriff's sale thereof, must account to the purchaser for the value of such use and occupation. Walls v. Walker, 37 Cal. 424; 99 Am. Dec. 290.

Pleading in actions for accounting for rents. The allegation that rent was payable monthly is not an averment that it was payable in advance. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423.

Possession of property. The judgment debtor, or his successor in interest in the property, is entitled to its possession until the time for a redemption from the sale has expired. Purser v. Cady, 120 Cal. 214; 52 Pac. 489.

Purchaser's interest in the land. The purchaser, by the mere fact of his purchase, does not get the title to the property sold at sheriff's sale: his right is rather the right to get a title in a given contingency, and the transaction is an executory, not an executed, contract; he may have a perfect statutory right to the profits, without having a right to the subject out of which the profits proceed. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600. The purchaser has, before the period for redemption expires, a species of equitable conditional estate, which becomes absolute upon the expiration of the time for redemption, leaving thereafter only the barren legal title in the judgment debtor until the execution and delivery of the sheriff's deed, and, during this redemption period, the statute regards the purchaser as the owner in equity, and gives him the rents and profits. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 294; and see Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509; 68 Am. St. Rep. 61; 55 Pac. 390. The purchaser at an execution sale, who pays the purchase price, is entitled to be regarded as an innocent purchaser, though the judgment debtor has the right to redeem during the period specified in the statute; and such purchaser is not affected by equities of which he had no notice when he paid the purchase-money, although he had notice thereof before he became entitled to a deed. Duff v. Randall, 116 Cal. 226; 58 Am. St. Rep. 158; 48 Pac. 66.

Undertaking on appeal. An undertaking on appeal from a judgment which directs the delivery of possession of real property, must provide against waste, and for the payment of the value of the use and occupation, and for those only, where there is no question as to the deficiency, pending such appeal. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337.

Rent, defined and explained. Rent to be paid in products of the soil after harvests is rent, within the meaning of this section; and contracts providing for such are in no sense cropping contracts. Clarke v. Cobb, 121 Cal. 595; 54 Pac. 74. Rent payable by the year is divisible. Clarke v. Cobb, 121 Cal. 595; 54 Pac. 74.

Right of purchaser at judicial sale with respect to rents. See note Ann. Cas. 1912B, 61.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Not applicable to tax sales. This section was held not to apply to sales for taxes, in Mayo v. Woods, 31 Cal. 269.

2. Paying taxes on property. A party in possession of premises, under sheriff's sale, and receiving rents and profits during the time for redemption, should, as between him and defendant in execution, pay the taxes assessed. If the owner does not pay them, then the party in possession is required to pay. If the premises are sold for taxes, and the person in possession buys them in, he can derive no benefit from the sale, even though the premises were bid in by one of two partners, while the possession under the sheriff's sale was by both partners. The duty to pay the tax was several, as well as joint. Kelsey v. Abbott, 13 Cal. 609; see also Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 472; 76 Am. Dec. 540.

3. Account of rents and profits. From the time of sheriff's sale the purchaser may receive the value of the use and occupation. Walls v. Walker, 37 Cal. 425; 99 Am. Dec. 290; McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592; Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600; Kline v. Chase, 17 Cal. 596; Knight v. Truett, 18 Cal. 113; Reynolds v. Lathrop, 7 Cal. 43. The occupation of the land during the period for redemption renders the tenant in possession liable to the purchaser for rent. If the tenant had paid the rent in advance, that is a matter in avoidance of tenant's liability to purchaser for rent. But it will not avoid the liability to purchaser if the tenant pays the rent in advance to defendant in execution after sale. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 424; see also McDevitt v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 592. The words "tenant in possession" embrace the judgment debtor, as well as his lessee. Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514; 73 Am. Dec. 600. As to who is a tenant in possession, see also Shores v. Scott River Co., 21 Cal. 135; Knight v. Truett, 18 Cal. 113. Even during the period which elapses between the sale and the expiration of the time for redemption, the statute regards the purchaser as the owner in equity, and gives him the rents and profits, or the value of the use and occupation—in short, the entire beneficial interest in the property, except the actual possession. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293; see also Guy v. Middleton, 5 Cal. 392; Henry v. Everts, 30 Cal. 425. The buyer at a judicial sale on a judgment recovered for taxes, is not entitled to receive the rents and profits during the period allowed for redemption. Mayo v. Woods, 31 Cal. 269. The mortgagor in possession is not, until a sale is made under the decree of foreclosure, accountable for rents or use and occupation, but he may be restrained from the commission of waste. Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233.

§ 708. If purchaser of real property be evicted for irregularities in sale, what he may recover, and from whom. When judgment to be revived. Petition for the purpose, how and by whom made. If the purchaser of real property sold on execution, or his successor in interest, be evicted therefrom in consequence of irregularities in the proceedings concerning the sale, or of the reversal or discharge of the judgment, he may recover the price paid, with interest, from the judgment creditor. If the purchaser of property at sheriff's sale, or his successor in interest, fail to recover possession in consequence of irregularity in the proceedings concerning the sale, or because the property sold was not subject to execution and sale, the court having jurisdiction thereof must, after notice and on motion of such party in interest, or his attorney, revive the original judgment in the name of the petitioner, for the amount paid by such purchaser at the sale, with interest thereon from the time of payment at the same rate that the original judgment bore; and the judgment so revived has the same force and effect as would an original judgment of the date of the revival, and no more.

Warranty, what only implied on judicial sale. See Civ. Code, § 1777.

Legislation § 708. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 237, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 303, which read the same as at present, down to and including the words "jurisdiction thereof," after which the Practice Act section read: "shall, on petition of such party in interest or his attorney, revive the original judgment for the amount paid by such purchaser at the sale, with interest thereon from the time of payment, at the same rate that the original judgment bore; and when so revived the said judgment shall have the same effect as an original judgment of the said court of that date, and bearing interest as aforesaid, and any other or after-acquired property, rents, issues, or profits, of the said debtor, shall be liable to levy and sale under execution in satisfaction of such debt; provided, that no property of such debtor sold bona fide before the filing of such petition, shall be subject to the lien of said judgment; and, provided further, that notice of the filing of such petition shall be made by filing a notice thereof in the recorder's office of the county where such property may be situated; and that said judgment shall be revived in the name of the original plaintiff or plaintiffs, for the use of said petitioner, the party in interest."

Construction of section. This section, being remedial in its character, is to be liberally construed. Cross v. Zane, 47 Cal. 602; Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac. 627; Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337. The object of this section is, not to disturb the rule of the common law in relation to the validity of executions or judicial sales, but to guard against its mischievous consequences in certain cases, by affording a remedy which the common law does not; it does not deal with the question as to when an execution or a sale shall be deemed valid, but leaves it as it was before, and merely provides that when, for any of the reasons given by the common law, a sale shall be declared void, the purchaser shall not be left, as at common law, without a remedy. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404. There is nothing to indicate that the legislature intended to control the effect or operation of this section, or the remedy under it, by § 336, ante; the only statute of limitations applicable to the remedy under this section is § 343, ante, providing that "an action for relief not hereinbefore provided for must be commenced within four years after the cause of action shall have accrued"; this section was intended to give a remedy, by petition, in an action which has culminated in a judgment sought to be revived, and the remedy intended to be given under it is as broad as that in the corresponding action in equity. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337; Doehla v. Phillips, 151 Cal. 488; 91 Pac. 330.

Action by purchaser. Where the homestead of a defendant is subjected to execution sale, but he succeeds, on appeal, in overthrowing the sale, the purchaser at that sale can recover from the judgment creditor the full amount paid. Turner v. Markham, 152 Cal. 246; 92 Pac. 485.

Revival of judgment. Though the statute does not expressly require notice, the court may, and generally should, require notice to the parties in possession, before reviving an old judgment. Hyde v. Boyle, 93 Cal. 1; 29 Pac. 247. Where the property sold under execution is not the property of the defendant therein, but wholly that of a stranger, there is a sale of property not subject to execution, within the meaning of the provision that the original judgment may be revived when "the property sold was not subject to execution and sale." Cross v. Zane, 47 Cal. 602; and see Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac. 627. Although the original judgment may be entered against the sureties under their undertaking to stay execution without notice to them, yet the judgment against them cannot be revived upon revival of the judgment against the original defendant, without notice to the sureties and an opportunity to them to be heard. Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac. 627. The revival of the judgment in favor of the purchaser, under this section, being conditioned upon the failure "to recover possession in consequence of irregularity in the proceedings concerning the sale," the statute of limitations, under § 343, ante, which is the only statute applicable to the case, does not begin to run until such failure; and where the motion to revive the judgment was made within a few days after the filing of the remittitur on appeal in an action to quiet title, in which the execution and sale were adjudged void, it cannot be barred by the statute. Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6; 96 Am. St. Rep. 91; 72 Pac. 337.

Action by judgment debtor for damages. Money collected on a judgment subsequently reversed may be recovered in an action against the real parties plaintiff, where the suit had been prosecuted by the assignee of a chose in action in the name of the assignor. Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616. An action is properly brought against the assignee of an erroneous judgment, who gives the plaintiff's property to be sold thereunder, and thereby produced the injury of which the plaintiff complained. Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616.

Jurisdiction of court. The court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter of a motion for an order to issue execution on the judgment, and incidentally to determine whether or not the apparent satisfaction of the judgment is void. McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268; 38 Pac. 730. An original satisfaction, entered inadvertently, or under such circumstances as requires it to be set aside, may be set aside by the court, and an order made, designating the amount for which the judgment should be permitted to stand. Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac 627.

Effect of reversal of judgment authorizing sale on title to land purchased at judicial sale by attorney of party to proceeding. See note 14 Ann. Cas. 185.

Amount of restitution where property is sold under judgment subsequently reversed. See note 15 Ann. Cas. 672.

Relief of purchaser on annulling sale. See note 69 L. R. A. 33.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Generally. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 376; 99 Am. Dec. 404; Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 565; 76 Am. Dec. 561; see also Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 90; Sargent v. Strum, 23 Cal. 361; 83 Am. Dec. 118; Fowler v. Harbin, 23 Cal. 630; Branham v. Mayor and Common Council, 24 Cal. 607.

§ 709. Party who pays more than his share may compel contribution. When property, liable to an execution against several persons, is sold thereon, and more than a due proportion of the judgment is satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale of the property of one of them, or one of them pays, without a sale, more than his proportion, he may compel contribution from the others; and when a judgment is against several, and is upon an obligation of one of them, as security for another, and the surety pays the amount, or any part thereof, either by sale of his property or before sale, he may compel repayment from the principal. In such case, the person so paying or contributing is entitled to the benefit of the judgment, to enforce contribution or repayment, if, within ten days after his payment, he file with the clerk of the court where the judgment was rendered, notice of his payment and claim to contribution or repayment. Upon a filing of such notice, the clerk must make an entry thereof in the margin of the docket.

Subrogation of surety on appeal bond. See post, § 1059.

Legislation § 709. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of section. A proceeding under this section being statutory, the course pointed out therein must be strictly pursued. Davis v. Heimbach, 75 Cal. 261; 17 Pac. 199; and see Hansen v. Martin, 63 Cal. 282. The first sentence of this section lays down only fundamental rules as to the rights of sureties and joint judgment debtors to compel contribution; the second sentence contemplates giving to sureties or joint judgment debtors the right to an execution in the original proceedings; the section was, no doubt, enacted for the benefit of sureties and joint judgment debtors, in order to enable them, without bringing an action, to use the judgment and the writs of the court for the purpose of compelling, in the case of sureties, repayment from their principal or contribution from co-sureties, and in the case of joint judgment debtors, contribution from their co-debtors. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762. The legislature, in enacting this section, did not have in mind a case where the parties paying the judgment had procured a written assignment of it: assignees have a remedy independently of this section, and could enforce their judgment if it had never been enacted. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762.

Effect of payment of judgment by one joint debtor. The mere payment of a judgment by one joint debtor does not operate as an accord and satisfaction of the judgment as to the other joint judgment debtors, unless it plainly appears that the payment was intended to have such effect. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762; and see Coffee v. Tevis, 17 Cal. 239. The payment of a judgment against co-defendants, by one of them, extinguishes the judgment, where no proceedings specified in this section have been taken. National Bank v. Los Angeles Iron etc. Co., 2 Cal. App. 659; 84 Pac. 466.

Who may compel contribution. Where the plaintiff paid a deficiency judgment, entered against himself and the defendant jointly, in order to prevent the sale of his property on execution, but on which judgment the defendant was primarily liable, such payment is not voluntary, and the plaintiff is entitled to maintain an action against the defendant for the amount. Treat v. Young, 135 Cal. 91; 67 Pac. 7; and see Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 369; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762. Where one person owes another money on a promissory note, and a person, for his own protection, is compelled to pay the debt, he is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, to enforce payment of the note. Finnell v. Finnell, 159 Cal. 535; 114 Pac. 820. Sureties, who are compelled to pay a debt of their principal, have a legal demand for reimbursement, which they may enforce against him by personal action if he is alive, or against his estate if he is dead; but, in either case, reimbursement can be claimed only for what has been expended. Estate of Hill, 67 Cal. 238; 7 Pac. 664. A co-surety or a joint judgment debtor has the right, the moment he pays the debt of his principal, to recover his proportionate share from his co-surety or joint debtor; and the obligation of the co-surety to pay is as binding as if it were created by promissory note or contract. Williams v. Riehl, 127 Cal. 365; 78 Am. St. Rep. 60; 59 Pac. 762. Where a surety, by his contract, imposes the burden of the whole debt upon his own land, in case the security of the principal debtor fails, all that he may justly ask, in case he satisfies the obligation of the principal, is, that he may be subrogated to all the rights and remedies of the judgment creditor. Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75. The rule that there is no right of contribution between joint tort-feasors, is not changed by this section. Forsythe v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 149 Cal. 569; 87 Pac. 24; Dow v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 162 Cal. 136; 121 Pac. 379. This section simply announces a rule of procedure, and provides a convenient method of enforcing contribution by a judgment debtor, who has paid a judgment, as against a co-defendant liable for a proportion of the debt. Dow v. Sunset Telephone etc. Co., 162 Cal. 136; 121 Pac. 379.

Notice, what constitutes. Some notice to the parties interested is necessary, the period and the manner of giving which are provided elsewhere in this code; and although the statute does not specify the person to whom notice is to be given, or its period, or the manner in which it is to be given, yet the natural meaning of the word "notice," in the phrase, "file with the clerk of the court where the judgment was rendered, notice of his payment and claim to contribution or repayment," is a notice to some one, and if the person is not indicated, the plain inference is, that the party intended is the person interested,—the party to be proceeded against. Davis v. Heimbach, 75 Cal. 261; 17 Pac. 199. The notice of motion for execution upon a judgment, for the purpose of compelling contribution or repayment under this section, should be served upon the party against whom such motion is directed; but it is not necessary that the notice filed with the clerk, to claim the right to contribution and repayment, shall be served on such party within ten days after the moving party pays more than his proportion of the judgment. Clark v. Austin, 96 Cal. 283; 31 Pac. 293.

Docket entry by clerk. The only purpose of the section in providing for the filing of the notice is to authorize and to enable the clerk to made the proper entry in the margin of the docket: without such notice, the clerk would have neither the authority nor the ability to make the proper docket entry. Clark v. Austin, 96 Cal. 283; 31 Pac. 293.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Kansas Code Civ. Proc., § 480.

§ 710. Collection of moneys due from judgment debtor. Procedure. The duly authenticated transcript of a judgment, for money, against a defendant, rendered by any court of this state may be filed with the controller of the state of California or the auditor of any county, city and county, city, or other municipal or public corporation, from which money is owing to the judgment debtor in such action (and in case there be no auditor then with the official whose duty corresponds to that of auditor), whereupon it shall be the duty of any such official, or of such public officer with whom such transcript shall have been filed, to draw his warrant in favor of or to pay into the court from the docket of which the transcript was taken, so much of the money, if sufficient there be, over which such state of California, county, city and county, city, or other municipal or public corporation of which he is an official, or over which said public officer has control and custody and which belongs to or is owing to the judgment debtor in the cause designated in said transcript as will cancel said judgment; the money so paid into court shall be a discharge pro tanto of any amount so due or owing to such judgment debtor. For filing such a transcript any such official or public officer may charge a fee of fifty cents. Upon the receipt by any court of money under the provisions of this act so much thereof as is not exempt from execution shall be paid to the judgment creditor, the balance to the judgment debtor. Such transcript when so filed, shall be accompanied by an affidavit on behalf of the person in whose interest the same is filed, stating the exact amount at the time due on such judgment, and that such person desires to avail himself of the provisions of this section.

Legislation § 710. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 362; approved March 21, 1903. There are two sections numbered 710, both passed at the session of 1903. This section logically belongs at the end of the chapter, as those following it (§§ 710–713½) were passed in one act (Stats. 1903, c. XCII, p. 101) and relate to the same subject, which is different from this section.

Scope of section. This section is not unconstitutional as being special legislation, or as not being uniform in its operation. Lawson v. Lawson, 158 Cal. 446; 111 Pac. 354. It applies generally to all public corporations; and the fact that there has heretofore been no means by which moneys due from the state, or from its public corporations, could be reached and applied upon the debts of the persons to whom they are due, and that considerations of public policy require that public corporations and public officers and employees should not be held subject to the ordinary provisions and processes of law for the garnishment of debts and claims due or owing, sufficiently distinguishes the classes of persons and assets to which this section relates, to justify the legislature in making special regulations concerning such persons, and the mode of reaching such assets; and the fact that the provisions of this section differ somewhat from the ordinary processes of attachment and execution does not destroy its character as a general law. Ruperich v. Baehr, 142 Cal. 190; 75 Pac. 782. A construction of this section, which would require the transcript of judgment to be filed after audit, and before delivery of the audited claim to the person entitled thereto, would practically nullify the remedy sought to be granted judgment creditors thereby. Payne v. Baehr, 153 Cal. 441; 95 Pac. 895. The purpose of this section is to afford means whereby money due from one municipal corporation to the debtor of another may be reached by his creditor, and is to be liberally construed. Ott Hardware Co. v. Davis, 165 Cal. 795; 134 Pac. 973.

Includes salaries and wages of public officials and employees. The salaries and wages of public officers and employees are within the meaning of this section, where it refers to moneys or amounts owing to or which belong to judgment debtors; and it necessarily follows that such officers and employees are subject to the garnishment authorized. Ruperich v. Baehr, 142 Cal. 190; 75 Pac. 782. This section is applicable to the salaries of all such public officers and employees as to whom its application is not inhibited by reason of some provision of the constitution, and is applicable to the salaries or fees of justices of the peace. Lawson v. Lawson, 158 Cal. 446; 111 Pac. 354.

Transcript of judgment, not abstract, required. The abstract of a judgment, prepared in accordance with the provisions of §§ 897, 900, post, and filed with the auditor of the county, is not sufficient to secure the benefits of this section, which requires a transcript or copy of the judgment to be filed. Erkson v. Parker, 3 Cal. App. 98; 84 Pac. 437.

Duty and liability of auditor. The auditor is liable in damages for a failure to perform his duty, and it is not essential to a cause of action against him that the plaintiff should have made any other demand than that embraced in the filing of the authenticated transcript of judgment and affidavit provided for in this section. Payne v. Baehr, 153 Cal. 441; 95 Pac. 895; and see Mock v. Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330; 58 Pac. 826. It is the official duty of the auditor to draw his warrant, for the benefit of a judgment creditor of a person to whom the municipality owes money, when the conditions specified in this section have been complied with. Payne v. Baehr, 153 Cal. 441; 95 Pac. 895.

Mandate to auditor. Mandamus lies, in a proper case, to compel the auditor to draw his warrant, under this section. Wilkes v. Sievers, 8 Cal. App. 659; 97 Pac. 677. A mandate cannot be issued requiring an auditor to audit and allow a demand in favor of an employee of the city, against whom garnishment provided for in this section has been served, where no demand was made except for the entire sum, as the auditor is entitled to proper demand before he becomes subject to a suit in mandamus. Ruperich v. Baehr, 142 Cal. 190; 75 Pac. 782. Mandamus lies to compel an auditor to draw his warrant in favor of the assignee of a claim as to an amount assigned prior to the filing of the transcript, and in favor of the court as to any amount involved in case the transcript is filed before the assignment. First National Bank v. Tyler, 21 Cal. App. 791; 132 Pac. 1053.

When jurisdiction of court attaches to money. After the salary of a public officer has been subjected to garnishment under this section, the court in which judgment was rendered is without power to make any order for the disposition of the money levied upon, until it has been paid into court, or the auditor's warrant therefor, drawn in favor of the court, has been delivered to the court. Lawson v. Lawson, 158 Cal. 451; 111 Pac. 354.

Assignment of unearned salary is void. An assignment of the unearned salary of a public officer is against public policy and void. Wilkes v. Sievers, 8 Cal. App. 659; 97 Pac. 677.

Approval of creditor's demand unnecessary. It is not necessary, under this section, that the judgment creditor's demand should have been approved by the city officers. Payne v. Baehr, 153 Cal. 441; 95 Pac. 895.

Right of officer to demand indemnity for enforcing execution. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 1045.

§ 710. Claimant of property may give undertaking and release property. Where property levied upon under execution to satisfy a judgment for the payment of money is claimed, in whole or in part, by a person, corporation, partnership or association, other than the judgment debtor, such claimant may give an undertaking as herein provided, which undertaking shall release the property in the undertaking described from the lien and levy of such execution.

Legislation § 710. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 101; approved March 9, 1903. See supra, Legislation § 710.

§ 710½. Claim of property. Undertaking, amount and conditions of. Such undertaking, with two sureties, shall be executed by the person, corporation, partnership or association, claiming in whole or in part, the property upon which execution is levied in double the estimated value of the property claimed by the person, corporation, partnership or association, provided, in no case need such undertaking be for a greater sum than double the amount for which the execution is levied; and where the estimated value of the property so claimed by the person, corporation, partnership or association is less than the sum for which such attachment is levied, such estimated value shall be stated in the undertaking, and said undertaking shall be conditioned that if the property claimed by the person, corporation, partnership or association is finally adjudged to be the property of the judgment debtor, said person, corporation, partnership or association will pay of said judgment upon which execution has issued a sum equal to the value, as estimated in said undertaking, of said property claimed by said person, corporation, partnership or association, and said property claimed shall be described in said undertaking.

Legislation § 710½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 102.

§ 711. Claim of property. Undertaking, filing and serving. Said undertaking shall be filed in the action in which said execution issued, and a copy thereof served upon the judgment creditor or his attorney in said action.

Legislation § 711. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 102.

§ 711½. Claim of property. Undertaking, objections to. Within ten days after the service of the copy of undertaking, the judgment creditor may object to such undertaking on the ground of inability of the sureties, or either of them, to pay the sum for which they become bound in said undertaking, and upon the ground that the estimated value of property therein is less than the market value of the property claimed. Such objection to the undertaking shall be made in writing, specifying the ground or grounds of objection, and if the objection is made to the undertaking that the estimated value therein is less than the market value of the property claimed. Such objection shall specify the judgment creditor's estimate of the market value of the property claimed. Such written objection shall be served upon the person, partnership, corporation or association giving such undertaking and claiming the property therein described.

Legislation § 711½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 102.

§ 712. Claim of property. Justification, approval and disapproval. When the sureties, or either of them, are objected to, the surety or sureties so objected to shall justify before the court out of which such execution issued, upon ten days' notice of the time when they will so justify being given to the judgment debtor or his attorney. Upon the hearing and examination into the sufficiency of a surety, witnesses may be required to attend and evidence may be procured and introduced in the same manner as in trial of civil cases. Upon such hearing and examination, the court shall make its order, in writing, approving or disapproving the sufficiency of the surety or sureties on such undertaking. In case the court disapproves of the surety or sureties on any undertaking, a new undertaking may be filed and served, and to any undertaking given under the provisions of this act the same objection to the sureties may be made, and the same proceedings had as in case of the first undertaking filed and served.

Legislation § 712. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 102.

§ 712½. Claim of property. Undertaking, estimate of value, and new undertaking. When objection is made to the undertaking upon the ground that the estimated value of the property claimed, as stated in the undertaking, is less than the market value of the property claimed, the person, corporation, partnership or association may accept the estimated value stated by the judgment creditor in said objection, and a new undertaking may be at once filed with the judgment creditor's estimate stated therein as the estimated value, and no objection shall thereafter be made upon that ground; if the judgment creditor's estimate of the market value is not accepted, the person, corporation, partnership or association giving the undertaking shall move the court in which the execution issued, upon ten days' notice to the judgment creditor, to estimate the market value of the property claimed and described in the undertaking, and upon the hearing of such motion witnesses may be required to attend and testify, and evidence be produced in the same manner as in the trial of civil actions. Upon the hearing of such motion, the court shall estimate the market value of the property described in the undertaking, and if the estimated value made by the court exceeds the estimated value as stated in the undertaking, a new undertaking shall be filed and served, with the market value determined by the court stated therein as the estimated value.

Legislation § 712½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 103.

§ 713. Claim of property. Undertaking, justification of sureties. The sureties shall justify on the undertaking as required by section one thousand and fifty-seven of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Legislation § 713. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 103.

§ 713½. Claim of property. Undertaking, when becomes effectual. The undertaking shall become effective for the purpose herein specified ten days after service of copy thereof on the judgment debtor, unless objection to such undertaking is made as herein provided, and in case objection is made to the undertaking filed and served, then the undertaking shall become effective for such purposes when an undertaking is given as herein provided.

Legislation § 713½. Added by Stats. 1903, p. 103.

CHAPTER II.

PROCEEDINGS SUPPLEMENTAL TO EXECUTION.

§ 714. Debtor required to answer concerning his property, when.
§ 715. Proceedings to compel debtor to appear. In what cases he may be arrested. What bail may be given.
§ 716. Any debtor of the judgment debtor may pay the latter's creditor.
§ 717. Examination of debtors of judgment debtor, or of those having property belonging to him.
§ 718. Witnesses required to testify.
§ 719. Judge may order property to be applied on execution.
§ 720. Proceedings upon claim of another party.
§ 721. Disobedience of orders, how punished.

§ 714. Debtor required to answer concerning his property, when. When an execution against property of the judgment debtor, or of any one of several debtors in the same judgment, issued to the sheriff of the county where he resides, or if he does not reside in this state, to the sheriff of the county where the judgment roll is filed, is returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the judgment creditor, at any time after such return is made, is entitled to an order from a judge of the court, requiring such judgment debtor to appear and answer concerning his property before such judge, or a referee appointed by him, at a time and place specified in the order; but no judgment debtor must be required to attend before a judge or referee out of the county in which he resides, or in which he has a place of business.

Conduct of examination. Ante, § 718.

Receiver, aiding proceedings. Ante, § 564, subd. 4.

Legislation § 714. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 238 (New York Code, § 292), which had (1) the words "shall be" instead of "is" before "entitled to an order," (2) the word "shall" instead of "must" before "be required," and (3) at end of section these words, "when proceedings are taken under the provisions of this chapter."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 5, (1) changing "the" to "a" before "judge of the court," and omitting, after these words, "or a county judge."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 157; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 685, (1) changing "do" to "does" before "not reside," and (2) adding "or in which he has a place of business" at end of section; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'or in which he has a place of business' are added to the section, thus making it possible to examine judgment debtors in supplementary proceedings in those counties in which they have a place of business."

Construction of sections. The difference between § 238 and § 239 of the Practice Act (the present § 714 and § 715, respectively, of this code) consists in this: that the latter allows the plaintiff to proceed earlier and in a more stringent manner; under one section the creditor can examine the judgment debtor only after execution returned, while under the other he can examine him before the return, and also have him arrested, upon a proper showing; but, under both sections, the same property may be made liable when ascertained. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. The distinction between this section and § 715, post, is, that, under the latter, supplementary proceedings may be commenced before the return of the execution, and an affidavit is necessary, showing that the judgment debtor has property which he refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment; but, under this section, where the execution has been returned unsatisfied, the judgment creditor is entitled to the order without any affidavit. Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513; 14 Pac. 135. Under the provisions of this chapter, a debtor of a judgment debtor may be fully examined as to property, credits, money, or other assets, in his possession or under his control; witnesses may be examined; and the judge may order any property of the judgment debtor, not exempt from execution, or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied towards the satisfaction of the judgment. Matteson etc. Mfg. Co. v. Conley, 144 Cal. 483; 77 Pac. 1042. This section and §§ 715–721, post, are, by § 905, post, made applicable to justices' courts. West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622.

Nature of supplementary proceedings. A proceeding supplementary to execution is entirely statutory; it is a separate proceeding in the original action, in which the court where the action is pending is called upon to exercise its jurisdiction in aid of the judgment in the action; and unless the requirements of the statute are complied with, the proceeding cannot be sustained. Bryant v. Bank of California, 2 Cal. Unrep. 475; 7 Pac. 128; and see Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378. It is a proceeding in the original case, auxiliary and supplementary thereto, and not a new action. Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513; 14 Pac. 135. Such proceedings supplant proceedings in equity, unless some special ground exists upon which to invoke the power of chancery; hence, a complaint, as a substitute for the proceedings provided by this chapter, is entirely insufficient, where it does not show that the remedies at law have been exhausted or would be unavailing, and where there is not only a failure to aver the return of an execution nulla bona or at all, but there is an affirmative averment that the judgment debtor has always been fully able to pay the judgment and execution. Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857. Proceedings supplementary to execution, under our code, are a substitute for a creditor's bill, as formerly used in chancery (Matteson etc. Mfg. Co. v. Conley, 144 Cal. 483; 77 Pac. 1042; and see Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187; McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120; Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 351; 12 Am. St. Rep. 63; 5 L. R. A. 713; 20 Pac. 874; High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386; 29 Am. St. Rep. 121; 30 Pac. 556; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857); and their purpose is to insure simplicity and economy; such proceedings, therefore, should receive a liberal construction, and the main intention and spirit of the act should be fairly carried out. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187.

What orders may be enforced under this chapter. Debts secured by mortgage, like other debts, may be attached by garnishment, but in no other way; and their payment may be enforced under provisions of this code relating to proceedings supplementary to execution. McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 566; 9 Pac. 839. The judgment debtor may be compelled, in proceedings supplementary to execution, to deliver a patent right in satisfaction of the judgment, to a receiver appointed to dispose of it in aid of the execution. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120.

Contempt. Where the judgment debtor, to defeat the process of the court, and the order directing him to turn over property to apply upon the judgment, procures delay in the proceedings, pending which he voluntarily and contumaciously disables himself from complying with the order he anticipates being made, the court rightfully adjudges him guilty of contempt. Ex parte Kellogg, 64 Cal. 343; 30 Pac. 1030; and see Galland v. Galland, 44 Cal. 475; 13 Am. Rep. 167.

Creditor's bill lies when. Where proceedings supplementary to execution afford an adequate legal remedy, a creditor's bill does not lie; otherwise, such a bill may still be had. Phillips v. Price, 153 Cal. 146; 94 Pac. 617. A complaint in an action against a garnishee to recover money due the plaintiff's judgment debtor, which fails to allege that an execution had been levied against the debtor and had been returned unsatisfied, cannot be treated as a creditor's bill, since it fails to show that the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law. Matteson etc. Mfg. Co. v. Conley, 144 Cal. 483; 77 Pac. 1042.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; Estate of Nerac, 35 Cal. 398; 95 Am. Dec. 111; Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187; Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 589.

Proceedings under this chapter, generally. Proceedings supplementary to execution, under § 294 of the code, may be taken to compel the treasurer of a joint-stock association to submit to an examination, upon the allegation that he is indebted to it, though the judgment is entered against him as treasurer of such association, and the action was commenced by the service of summons upon him under the act of 1849. Courtois v. Harrison, 1 Hilt. 109. An order in supplementary proceedings, directing that the defendant should "pay over to plaintiff's attorney the sum of eighteen dollars, being money that he has paid out and disposed of since the order made by me on the twenty-eighth day of April, restraining him from disposing of his said property, was duly served on him, and while the said order remained in full force and unrevoked, and that in default of payment of the said money aforesaid, the said M. be committed to the common jail," etc.: held, to show substantially a contempt, and the infliction of a fine, and sufficient to justify defendant's imprisonment. Reynolds v. McElhone, 20 How. Pr. 454. After a receiver of defendant's property had been appointed, in proceedings supplementary to execution against the defendant, instituted by plaintiff, the defendant's household furniture was destroyed by fire. The furniture was such as is exempt from execution, and therefore was not reached by the supplementary proceedings, but it was insured at the time of the fire. Held, that the claim for the insurance-moneys was subsequently acquired property, which did not pass to, and could not be enforced by, the receiver. Sands v. Roberts, 8 Abb. Pr. 343. Public moneys raised by a municipal corporation pursuant to law—e. g., by tax—for purposes of government, and in the hands of its fiscal officer, are not the property of the corporation, or a debt due to it, within the meaning of § 294 of the code, so as to entitle a judgment creditor of the corporation to an order requiring the officer to pay over the moneys in satisfaction of the judgment. Lowber v. Mayor etc. of New York, 7 Abb. Pr. 248. A judgment against a foreign corporation may be enforced by supplementary proceedings, under § 294 of the code, to reach property belonging to it in the hands of third parties, or debts due to it from third parties. McBride v. Farmers' Branch Bank, 7 Abb. Pr. 347. Form of affidavit and order in supplementary proceedings against third parties, under § 294 of the code. Seeley v. Garrison, 10 Abb. Pr. 460. The orders allowed to be made in supplementary proceedings—directing the application of property and money to the payment of a judgment, and to punish for contempt (Code, §§ 297, 302)—are entirely discretionary; and an order denying an application for them is not appealable. Joyce v. Holbrook, 7 Abb. Pr. 338. In order to put the debtor in contempt for interfering with his property after the order, it must be affirmatively shown that the property in question was acquired prior to the granting of the order. The order does not affect after-acquired property (Browning v. Bettis, 8 Paige Ch. 568; Stuyvesant v. Hall, 2 Barb. Ch. Pr. 153; Caton v. Southwell, 13 Barb. 335). Potter v. Low, 16 How. Pr. 549. The wife cannot be examined, under § 294 of the code, in supplementary proceedings against her husband. Andrews v. Nelson, 7 Abb. Pr. 3, note. It seems that the proper construction of § 294 would apply to the case of a judgment against any corporation. McBride v. Farmers' Branch Bank, 7 Abb. Pr. 347. It seems that proceedings under that section may be taken against a corporation. Courtois v. Harrison, 1 Hilt. 109. An order committing a party for contempt, and ordering that he be imprisoned until he comply with a previous order commanding him to pay into court a certain sum of money, is an excess of jurisdiction, and void, where the party had made affidavit, which was uncontradicted, that the money had passed from his possession and control before the proceedings in contempt were commenced. Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 316; 65 Am. Dec. 517. A judgment not property. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. A, although being indebted to the judgment debtor, was not a necessary party to a proceeding, where the plaintiff examined his judgment debtor as to a judgment held by him against A, and after examination obtained an order to apply the same to the judgment of plaintiff. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. The right to the examination under the code is unqualifiedly given wherever an execution has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part. Owen v. Dupignac, 9 Abb. Pr. 180. It appeared by the affidavit upon which the order for the examination of the defendant was founded, and the fact was recited in the order, that about fifteen years previously an execution had been issued upon the judgment, and had been returned wholly unsatisfied; and that an alias execution, issued shortly before the making of the affidavit, had not been returned. Held, that the affidavit was sufficient, and that the judgment creditor was entitled to the order for the examination of the defendant. Id. In supplementary proceedings against judgment debtors, an order was made, forbidding them to dispose of their property. On the day fixed by the order for their appearance for their examination, they appeared at the office of the judge, and, after waiting some time, the office being unoccupied, went away. Within an hour after the appointed time, the judge appeared at his office, and the plaintiff also appeared, and, in the absence of the defendants, took an order appointing the referee, and continuing the injunction. In conformity with this order, the defendants appeared and submitted to an examination. Held: 1. That the original injunction had not become revoked nor inoperative, nor had the proceedings been suspended by the circumstances; and if they were, it was waived by the subsequent appearance of the defendants. 2. That the act of the defendants in paying over money subsequently to their attendance at the office of the judge was a contempt. Reynolds v. McElhone, 20 How. Pr. 454. It seems that the provisions of the code for proceedings supplementary to execution are limited to reaching property of the debtor, whether in his possession or in the possession of others for him, and which is conceded to be his; also, money due to the debtor when the order is obtained and served. But when property or money appears to belong to him, but is in the hands of others, who make claim thereto, it should be reached through a receiver. Stewart v. Foster, 1 Hilt. 505. Examinations on supplementary proceedings to a judgment can only be extended to the discovery of the property in the possession or control of the defendant, which he can deliver over. If the property is in the possession of another claiming title, no matter how fraudulent the transfer, no order can be made to compel him to deliver, and therefore no questions can be put to the debtor or witness to discover or prove the fraud. Town v. Safeguard Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 683. For general matters relating to proceedings supplementary to execution, see Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 586.

§ 715. Proceedings to compel debtor to appear. In what cases he may be arrested. What bail may be given. After the issuing of an execution against property, and upon proof, by affidavit of a party or otherwise, to the satisfaction of a judge of the court, that any judgment debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply towards the satisfaction of the judgment, such judge may, by an order, require the judgment debtor to appear, at a specified time and place, before such judge, or a referee appointed by him, to answer concerning the same; and such proceedings may thereupon be had for the application of the property of the judgment debtor toward the satisfaction of the judgment as are provided upon the return of an execution. Instead of the order requiring the attendance of the judgment debtor, the judge may, upon affidavit of the judgment creditor, his agent or attorney, if it appear to him that there is danger of the debtor absconding, order the sheriff to arrest the debtor and bring him before such judge. Upon being brought before the judge, he may be ordered to enter into an undertaking, with sufficient surety, that he will attend from time to time before the judge or referee, as may be directed during the pendency of proceedings and until the final termination thereof, and will not in the mean time dispose of any portion of his property not exempt from execution. In default of entering into such undertaking he may be committed to prison.

Legislation § 715. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 239 (New York Code, § 292), as amended by Stats. 1854, p. 63 [90]. When § 715 was enacted in 1872, (1) "shall" was changed to "may" before "be directed," and (b) the prefix "de" was omitted (sic) before the word "termination."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 5, (1) adding "a judge of" before "the court," (2) omitting, after "the court," the words "or of a judge thereof, or county judge," and (3) omitting "court or" before "judge may, by an order."

Construction of sections. The judgment creditor may reach any property liable to execution, when proceedings are had under this section; and a judgment is property, within the meaning of this section. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. It is provided by this section, that, where it is sought to subject the property of the judgment debtor to the levy of the execution, the same proceedings may be had as those provided after the return of execution: and this expressly refers to §§ 717 et seq., post. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332.

Nature of proceedings. The proceeding is only a summary method of purging the debtor's conscience, and compelling the disclosure of any property he may have which is subject to the execution; no formal issues are required to be framed; for the very object of the proceeding is to compel the judgment debtor to give information concerning his property, and until disclosure is made, there is nothing upon which an issue can be framed. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; and see Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559.

The affidavit. An affidavit, under this section and § 717, post, as the basis for commencing proceedings supplementary to execution, takes the place of a creditor's bill in chancery, and must not only contain the necessary averments to give the court jurisdiction, but must also be filed in the court, or delivered to the court for that purpose. Bryant v. Bank of California, 2 Cal. Unrep. 475; 7 Pac. 128.

Practice and procedure. Proceedings under this section and § 719, post, can only be taken after a judgment is rendered and an execution issued thereon. Wells v. Torrance, 119 Cal. 437; 51 Pac. 626. The judgment creditor and the judgment debtor are parties to the proceeding, and each is at liberty to call and examine witnesses in respect to any contested fact which may be brought in issue. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298. It is not incumbent upon the court to make express findings in special proceedings in aid of execution. Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382; 51 Pac. 559.

Decision, and its effect. After hearing the case, the court or referee is to decide what property, if any, the judgment debtor has that is subject to be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment, and to direct its application accordingly; and its decision in the proceedings concludes both parties to the action and proceedings. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

Appeal. The judgment debtor cannot again litigate the same matters in an independent action; and if he claims that the property was exempt from execution, and that the court erred in ordering it to be applied in satisfaction of the judgment, he has a plain and adequate remedy by appeal. McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. As to commitment for contempt, see Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 318. Courts are exclusive judges of their own contempts, but a person cannot be imprisoned for refusing to do what is out of his power. Adams v. Haskell, 6 Cal. 316; 65 Am. Dec. 517; see also Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 201; see cases cited in § 714, ante.

§ 716. Any debtor of the judgment debtor may pay the latter's creditor. After the issuing of an execution against property, and before its return, any person indebted to the judgment debtor may pay to the sheriff the amount of his debt, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the execution; and the sheriff's receipt is a sufficient discharge for the amount so paid.

Attachment. Compare ante, § 544.

Legislation § 716. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 240 (New York Code, § 293), and (1) adding "and before its return" after "property," and (2) changing "shall be" to "is" after "receipt," when adopted in the code.

Construction of section. This section in no way trenches upon the sovereignty of the state, nor does it impose upon any officer of the state any duties which can embarrass his performance of official duties. Skelly v. Westminster School District, 103 Cal. 652; 37 Pac. 643.

Payment by debtor of judgment debtor. A person indebted to a judgment debtor has the right to pay to the sheriff, holding an execution, the amount of his debt; and where an execution has been regularly issued, a judgment debtor has the right to satisfy the same, without a formal levy, and is entitled to have the judgment against him satisfied of record, where the money has gone to the persons entitled to receive it. Buckeye Refining Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840; 124 Pac. 536.

Rights of assignee of judgment. Where the judgment creditor assigns the judgment, and the judgment debtor, without notice of the assignment, afterwards pays the same voluntarily to the sheriff by reason of the service of garnishee process upon him, the rights of the assignee are not affected, and he may still enforce the judgment. Brown v. Ayres, 33 Cal. 525; 91 Am. Dec. 655.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. B. recovered a judgment against A. and others, and thereafter assigned it, for a valuable consideration, to C. Subsequently to the assignment, and before notice thereof to the defendants, they paid the amount of the judgment, less $29.50, to the sheriff, who had served a garnishment upon them in V. v. B., and to a constable upon an execution held by him in V. v. B. Action brought by B. against A. and others to recover the amount of his judgment against them. Held, that the case came within the provisions of this section, and that, as the defendants were not in fact debtors of B., but of C., at the time of the payments, they were not discharged from liability on the judgment against them in favor of B. There must be a judgment and an execution thereon against property, and the person making the payment must be indebted, at the instant, to him against whom the execution runs, in order to come within the provisions of this section. Brown v. Ayres, 33 Cal. 528; 91 Am. Dec. 655. The plaintiff, after a verdict in his favor, and before judgment was entered, assigned the cause of action and verdict; judgment was afterwards entered, defendant was garnished under the execution issued on other judgments against the plaintiff, and paid the amount of the judgment in favor of the plaintiff against him, which was applied upon the executions. The assignment was void, and the payment by defendant to the sheriff was a satisfaction of the judgment. Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 173; see also cases cited in notes to §§ 714, 715, ante.

§ 717. Examination of debtors of judgment debtor, or of those having property belonging to him. After the issuing or return of an execution against property of the judgment debtor, or of any one of several debtors in the same judgment, and upon proof, by affidavit or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the judge, that any person or corporation has property of such judgment debtor, or is indebted to him in an amount exceeding fifty dollars, the judge may, by an order, require such person or corporation, or any officer or member thereof, to appear at a specified time and place before him, or a referee appointed by him, and answer concerning the same.

Receiver. Ante, § 564.
Referee. Ante, § 714.

Legislation § 717. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 241 (New York Code, § 294), except that the code commissioners evidently did not pay any attention to the "Errata" in Stats. 1851, and used the word "or" instead of "and" before "upon proof by affidavit." See infra, this paragraph.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 157; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 685, substituting "and" for "or" before "upon proof"; the code commissioner saying, "The word 'and' is substituted for 'or' after 'judgment' and before 'upon,' to make the section conform to what was evidently the intent of the legislature at the time of its passage."

Constitutionality. The provisions of this section and of § 719, post, are not unconstitutional, because not providing for notice to the judgment debtor, nor giving him an opportunity to be heard. Coffee v. Haynes, 124 Cal. 561; 71 Am. St. Rep. 99; 57 Pac. 482.

Affidavit as basis of proceedings. The affidavit serves no other purpose than as a basis to set the proceedings in motion: it is not a pleading, like a complaint, to which the party summoned is to plead, and in default of pleading thereto, to be taken in the proceeding as true. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581. No default can be entered upon the affidavit: it is simply the basis for the order, for the purpose of acquiring jurisdiction of a party who previously was a stranger to the case. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

Service on garnishee. A garnishee, being no party to the original action against the judgment debtor, need not be served with process therein: it is sufficient, to give the court jurisdiction of his person in supplementary proceedings, that copies of the order, and of the affidavit on which it was based, requiring him to appear for examination, were duly served on him, and that he appeared and was examined in obedience thereto. Bronzan v. Drobaz, 93 Cal. 647; 29 Pac. 254. No showing is required to the effect that a notice of garnishment has been served upon a person alleged to have property of the judgment debtor. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332.

Necessity for the examination. No judgment can be rendered without the examination of the garnishee. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Superior Court, 56 Cal. 265. A court is not authorized to make an order for the application of property of the judgment debtor, in the hands of a third party, to the satisfaction of the judgment, without first ascertaining, by an examination of the party alleged to have the property in his possession, the truth of the allegation. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

What may be reached by garnishment. Moneys held by a chief of police, not in his official capacity, but procured at the request and by the direction of the owner, a prisoner charged with murder, may be reached by garnishment, upon proceedings supplementary to execution. Coffee v. Haynes, 124 Cal. 561; 71 Am. St. Rep. 99; 57 Pac. 482.

Debt includes what. The word "debt," as used in the law of garnishment, includes only legal debts, and not mere equity claims. Hassie v. G. I. W. U. Congregation, 35 Cal. 378; Redondo Beach Co. v. Brewer, 101 Cal. 322; 35 Pac. 896.

Construction of sections. The creditor has his election to proceed against the debtor of the judgment debtor, under the provisions of this section, or he may proceed against his immediate debtor, either under § 714 or § 715, ante. Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187. There is nothing in this and the succeeding section that authorizes the court to make an order for the application of property of the judgment debtor, in the hands of a third party, to the satisfaction of the judgment, without first ascertaining, by an examination of the party alleged to have the property in his possession, the truth of such allegation. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581. Even though it be admitted that this section and § 720, post, have any application to an officer holding property of a judgment debtor by virtue of legal process issued against him, neither section, however, confers on the court the power to order such property sold, nor to direct that the proceeds thereof be paid to the clerk of the court. Brown v. Moore, 61 Cal. 432. Proceedings under this and the succeeding sections can reach everything that could formerly be made to contribute to the payment of the judgment by the aid of the creditors' bill, and such proceedings would reach choses in action arising from torts committed on the property of the judgment debtor, to which his creditor would have a right to resort (Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 178; 25 Pac. 346); but such proceedings do not imply any notice of garnishment: they are special, and can be inaugurated only after execution has been issued, and returned unsatisfied in whole or in part; and may be commenced by affidavit or other proof that any person has property of the judgment debtor. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. Property or credits in the hands of a debtor of a judgment debtor cannot be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment in a separate action, as the party cannot be sued upon the debt by one to whom he is not indebted: the proceedings provided by law must be followed, where such property is sought to be applied on the judgment. Matteson etc. Mfg. Co. v. Conley, 144 Cal. 483; 77 Pac. 1042.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See cases cited in notes to §§ 714, 715, and 716, ante. Sections 717, 718, and 719 of this code do not allow the court to make an order for the application of property of the judgment debtor in the hands of a third party to the satisfaction of a judgment, upon the mere affidavit of the plaintiff. The person said to have such property in his possession must first be examined. See Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 586.

§ 718. Witnesses required to testify. Witnesses may be required to appear and testify before the judge or referee, upon any proceeding under this chapter, in the same manner as upon the trial of an issue.

Witnesses, rights and duties of. Post, §§ 2064–2070.

Legislation § 718. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 242 (New York Code, § 295).

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See cases cited in notes to §§ 714, 715, 716, and 717, ante.

§ 719. Judge may order property to be applied on execution. The judge or referee may order any property of the judgment debtor, not exempt from execution, in the hands of such debtor, or any other person, or due to the judgment debtor, to be applied toward the satisfaction of the judgment; but no such order can be made as to money or property in the hands of any other person or claimed to be due from him to the judgment debtor, if such person claims an interest in the property adverse to the judgment debtor or denies the debt.

Exempt from execution, what is, generally. Ante, § 690.

Wages, etc., preference of. Post, § 1206.

Legislation § 719. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 243 (New York Code, § 297), which read the same as the present section, except for the limitation, which then read: "except that the earnings of the debtor for his personal services, at any time within thirty days next preceding the order, shall not be so applied, when it shall be made to appear by the debtor's affidavit, or otherwise, that such earnings are necessary for the use of a family supported wholly or partly by his labor." When § 719 was enacted in 1872, (1) the word "the" was changed to "a" after "property of," and (b) the exception was omitted.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 157; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 685, (1) restoring the word "a" to "the" after "property of," and (2) adding the limitation beginning "but no such order"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in adding the last clause, thus limiting the right of the judge or referee to order the delivery of property to those cases in which no adverse interest is claimed thereto."

Scope of section. The supplementary proceedings provided for in this section are only one of the three remedies of judgment creditors who seek to recover against third persons (Finch v. Finch, 12 Cal. App. 274; 107 Pac. 594); and payment of debts secured by mortgage may be enforced by such proceedings. McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 566; 9 Pac. 839.

Basis of order. The order to apply property to the satisfaction of the judgment must be based upon the answers of the party summoned, and such other testimony as may be adduced in connection with the answer: the statutory proceedings must be strictly pursued. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

What orders may be made. In supplementary proceedings, it is proper to order the execution debtor to assign to a receiver his patent right to an invention. Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120. A judgment by default cannot be entered in supplementary proceedings; and a writ of review will issue, where default is entered, upon such proceedings, in the superior court, upon a judgment rendered in a justice's court. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Superior Court, 56 Cal. 265.

When order shall be set aside. Upon the reversal of judgment in the main proceeding, the lower court should set aside an unexecuted order in proceedings supplementary to execution. Turner v. Markham, 156 Cal. 68; 103 Pac. 319.

Property in custodia legis. An officer, holding property of a judgment debtor by virtue of legal process issued against him, cannot be compelled by the court to sell such property and pay to the clerk the proceeds of the sale; and for disobedience of such a void order the officer cannot be punished for contempt. Brown v. Moore, 61 Cal. 432; Williams v. Dwinelle, 51 Cal. 442.

Adverse claim of title by garnishee. A fund cannot be reached by proceedings supplementary to execution, where the garnishee denies possession or control of any credits or other property of the judgment debtor, and asserts title to such assets in himself: in such a case, supplementary proceedings do not supersede the remedy by action, for the reason that they are not adequate to accomplish the purpose of the action. Rapp v. Whittier, 113 Cal. 429; 45 Pac. 703; and see Swift v. Arents, 4 Cal. 390; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 37 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857; Lewis v. Chamberlain, 108 Cal. 525; 41 Pac. 413. A complaint in the nature of a creditor's bill is the proper procedure, where an adverse claim or title is set up by the garnishee to funds sought to be subjected to the satisfaction of the judgment against the debtor. Rapp v. Whittier, 113 Cal. 429; 45 Pac. 703.

Denial of debt. The mere denial, by the garnishee, of the indebtedness which the other averments and admissions of the parties show to be an erroneous conclusion from the whole transaction, should not be deemed sufficient to divest the court of jurisdiction to make the order provided for in this section. Finch v. Finch, 12 Cal. App. 274; 107 Pac. 594.

Lien acquired by service of notice in supplementary proceedings. See note 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 123.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See cases cited in notes to §§ 714, 715, 716, 717, ante; see also Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522.

§ 720. Proceedings upon claim of another party. If it appears that a person or corporation, alleged to have property of the judgment debtor, or to be indebted to him, claims an interest in the property adverse to him, or denies the debt, the judgment creditor may maintain an action against such person or corporation for the recovery of such interest or debt; and the court or judge may, by order, forbid a transfer or other disposition of such interest or debt, until an action can be commenced and prosecuted to judgment. Such order may be modified or vacated by the judge granting the same, or the court in which the action is brought, at any time, upon such terms as may be just.

Receiver. Ante, § 564.
Wages, etc. Post, § 1206.

Legislation § 720. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 244 (New York Code, § 299), which had, (1) in first line "appear" instead of "appears," and (2) did not have the words "to be," which were added in 1872.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 157; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 686, (1) omitting, after "denies the debt," the words "the court or judge may authorize, by an order made to that effect," and (2) changing the words "to institute" to "may maintain"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in striking out the words 'the court or judge may authorize by an order made to that effect,' thus enabling the judgment creditor to sue for property to be subject to his execution without first obtaining an order of court."

Constitutionality of section. This section is not unconstitutional, in that the judgment debtor has, under it, no notice of the supplementary proceeding after judgment affecting his rights of property (High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386; 29 Am. St. Rep. 121; 30 Pac. 556); but see Bryant v. Bank of California, 2 Cal. Unrep. 567, 8 Pac. 644, holding that a law purporting to authorize a judge, by order, to permit the judgment creditor to institute and maintain an action against the debtor of the judgment debtor, as in this section, is unconstitutional and void, where no notice of such proceeding to the judgment debtor is provided for.

Jurisdiction of court. The court may make an order authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action against the garnishee, only when the garnishee, in good faith, denies that he has property of the judgment debtor, or is in any way indebted to him; but where it is evident that the garnishee is acting in bad faith in denying his indebtedness to the judgment debtor, and makes the denial only in form, and for purposes of vexation and delay, the court may treat it as fraudulent, and disregard it. Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522. Where the garnishee denies that he is indebted to the judgment debtor, neither the referee nor the court has power to compel him to pay to the sheriff the amount of his alleged indebtedness; but the court may enter an order authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action against the garnishee to determine the question of indebtedness. Hartman v. Olvera, 51 Cal. 501. If a third person has received money from a judgment debtor, which is claimed in good faith to be his own, the power of the court, in a proceeding supplementary to execution, is limited to authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action against such third person to recover the money, and to forbid a transfer of it until such action shall be prosecuted to judgment. Union Collection Co. v Snell, 5 Cal. App. 130; 89 Pac. 859. The order of the judge on supplementary proceedings, where the garnishee claims the property, is not an adjudication of the rights of the parties: the only power the judge has in the premises, is to make an order authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action in the proper court, and, should he choose to do so, to forbid a transfer, pending the action. High

v. Bank of Commerce, 103 Cal. 525; 37 Pac. 508; McDowell v. Bell, 86 Cal. 615; 25 Pac. 128. Where certain property, claimed by the judgment creditor to be the property of the judgment debtor, was conveyed to a third party upon the same day that the affidavit was filed for the institution of the supplementary proceedings, the court has no jurisdiction to take possession of the property by a receiver, but can only make an order authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action against the parties claiming it, for its recovery and subjection to the satisfaction of the debt, and forbidding its transfer until such action could be commenced and prosecuted to judgment. McDowell v. Bell, 86 Cal. 615; 25 Pac. 128; and see Hartman v. Olvera, 51 Cal. 501. Where a fund, claimed to be due to the judgment debtor, is garnished, and, before the judgment is rendered, the judgment debtor assigns the fund to another creditor, the proper procedure is, not to order the garnishee to pay the fund into court, but to authorize the judgment creditor to sue the garnishee. Schino v. Cinquini, 7 Cal. App. 244; 94 Pac. 83. The court has no jurisdiction to order the grantee of the judgment debtor, who claims title to the property mentioned in the affidavit, to surrender it, or to subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment. Lewis v. Chamberlain, 108 Cal. 525; 41 Pac. 413. To make an order in relation to property which the garnishee claims to own in his own right, requiring its application in satisfaction of the judgment of another, is to deprive the garnishee of his property upon a summary proceeding and without due process of law. Lewis v. Chamberlain, 108 Cal. 525; 41 Pac. 413; and see McDowell v. Bell, 86 Cal. 615; 25 Pac. 128. Where there are other persons claiming liens upon money in the possession of a garnishee, the court cannot properly order that the garnishee shall pay such money to the plaintiff, but is authorized only to make an order that an action be brought against the garnishee, to which action other persons claiming liens upon the fund may be made parties, to the end that all adverse claims might be adjusted, and conclusively settled in such action. Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801; and see Roberts v. Landecker, 9 Cal. 262; Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522; Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 612; Hartman v. Olvera, 51 Cal. 501; Ex parte Hollis, 59 Cal. 406. The garnishee may pay the moneys into court, and thereby relieve himself of all responsibility; and the court may order that an action be instituted, wherein all parties interested should be made parties. Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801.

Right of action under this section. One of the three remedies in favor of judgment creditors against third persons is a separate action to establish the indebtedness, if it is denied, and to recover the debt as authorized by this section. Finch v. Finch, 12 Cal. App. 274; 107 Pac. 594. A creditor making a garnishment under execution must first obtain an order under proceedings supplementary to execution before suing the garnishee, unless the garnishee waives such proceedings by interpleader or otherwise. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow, 1 Cal. App. 479; 82 Pac. 689. In an action based upon an order under this section, the plaintiff must aver and prove the existence of the order, and of the proceedings upon which it was founded; without the proceedings, the order is a nullity, and without the order, no action can be maintained. Bryant v. Bank of California, 2 Cal. Unrep. 475; 7 Pac. 128. No equitable circumstances need be shown, in order to justify the suit. Carter v. Los Angeles Nat. Bank, 116 Cal. 370; 48 Pac. 332. Where judgment creditors have prosecuted their proceedings supplementary to execution so far as to secure a denial by the garnishee of any indebtedness to their judgment debtor, they have the right to bring an action against their garnishee without any order of court. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242. An order of court, authorizing an action under this section, need not follow the precise language of the statute: it is sufficient, to permit the action, if it is in substantial compliance with the law. Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242.

Adverse claims of, or denial of debt by, garnishee. In proceedings supplementary to execution, the denial of the debt, or the adverse claim to the property, by the garnishee, is a claim or denial in good faith, and not one of mere pretense; but when it is evident that the garnishee is acting in bad faith in denying his indebtedness or asserting his claim, the referee may treat it as fraudulent, and disregard it, and, in the absence of explicit findings upon material points, it will be presumed that the referee found the facts necessary to support the judgment. Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522. An adverse claim of the garnishee is expressly set forth and interpleaded, where, upon examination, he fully informs the court of all such adverse claims. Deering v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 109 Cal. 73; 41 Pac. 801. Where the referee or the court disregards the adverse claim or denial on the ground of bad faith, the better practice is so to state in the finding, in order that it may be subject to review on appeal; but where the statement of the garnishee is so meager and unsatisfactory that the referee may well have treated his denial of the debt as evasive and made in bad faith, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment, to have been so found. Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522. Where a third person receives money from a judgment debtor, claimed in good faith to be his own, his title thereto cannot be litigated in supplementary proceedings. Union Collection Co. v. Snell, 5 Cal. App. 130; 89 Pac. 859.

Creditor's bill lies when. Statutory supplementary proceedings were designed to take the place of the equitable remedy by creditor's bill, formerly the only method of reaching assets which could not be seized on execution (Nordstrom v. Corona City Water Co., 155 Cal. 206; 132 Am. St. Rep. 81; 100 Pac. 242; Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520; 40 Am. Rep. 120); but they have not superseded or abolished the right to bring a suit in the nature of a creditor's bill. Union Collection Co. v. Snell, 5 Cal. App. 130; 89 Pac. 859; Rapp v. Whittier, 113 Cal. 429; 45 Pac. 703. When supplementary proceedings afford an adequate legal remedy, a creditor's bill does not lie; on the contrary, a creditor's bill may be had, where supplementary proceedings are inadequate. Phillips v. Price, 153 Cal. 146; 94 Pac. 617; Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 27 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857; Rapp v. Whittier, 113 Cal. 429; 45 Pac. 703. Before equity can be invoked in a creditor's bill, it must be shown that the remedies at law are unavailing, and the bill must aver that an execution has been returned unsatisfied. Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271; 27 Am. St. Rep. 50; 33 Pac. 857.

Other actions by creditors. Creditors who are entitled to a trust fund under an arrangement between the judgment debtor and the garnishee, are not concluded by a supplementary proceeding: they are not parties to it, and may, by an action in the nature of a bill of interpleader, settle the rights of all the parties interested. Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522. The remedy of the creditor against a fraudulent assignee is by direct action, where the good faith of an assignment is in issue. Hartman v. Olvera, 51 Cal. 501.

§ 721. Disobedience of orders, how punished. If any person, party, or witness disobey an order of the referee, properly made, in the proceedings before him under this chapter, he may be punished by the court or judge ordering the reference, for a contempt.

CHAPTER I.

ACTIONS FOR FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

§ 726. Proceedings in foreclosure suits.
§ 727. Surplus money to be deposited in court.
§ 728. Proceedings when debt secured falls due at different times.
§ 729. Oath and undertaking of commissioner. Report and account of sale. Compensation of commissioner.

§ 726. Proceedings in foreclosure suits. There can be but one action for the recovery of any debt, or the enforcement of any right secured by mortgage upon real or personal property, which action must be in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. In such action the court may, by its judgment, direct the sale of the encumbered property (or so much thereof as may be necessary), and the application of the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the costs of court, and the expenses of the sale, and the amount due plaintiff, including, where the mortgage provides for the payment of attorney's fees, such sum for such fees as the court shall find reasonable, not exceeding the amount named in the mortgage. The court may, by its judgment, or at any time after judgment, appoint a commissioner to sell the encumbered property. It must require of him an undertaking in an amount fixed by the court, with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the judge, to the effect that the commissioner will faithfully perform the duties of his office according to law. Before entering upon the discharge of his duties he must file such undertaking, so approved, together with his oath that he will faithfully perform the duties of his office. If it appear from the sheriff's return, or from the commissioner's report, that the proceeds are insufficient, and a balance still remains due, judgment must then be docketed by the clerk in the manner provided in this code for such balance against the defendant or defendants personally liable for the debt, and it becomes a lien on the real estate of such judgment debtor, as in other cases in which execution may be issued. No person holding a conveyance from or under the mortgagor of the property mortgaged, or having a lien thereon, which conveyance or lien does not appear of record in the proper office at the time of the commencement of the action, need be made a party to such action, and the judgment therein rendered, and the proceedings therein had, are as conclusive against the party holding such unrecorded conveyance or lien as if he had been a party to the action. If the court appoints a commissioner for the sale of the property, he must sell it in the manner provided by law for the sale of like property by the sheriff upon execution; and the provisions of chapter one, title nine, part two, of this code are hereby made applicable to sales made by such commissioner, and the powers therein given and the duties therein imposed on sheriffs are extended to such commissioner. In all cases heretofore, now or hereafter pending in the courts of this state, in the event of the death, absence from the state, other disability or disqualification of the commissioner appointed to sell encumbered property under the foregoing provisions of this section, the court may, upon the happening of either the death, absence from the state, other disability or disqualification of the commissioner, appoint an elisor to perform the duties of such commissioner which are then to be performed in such action. The elisor so appointed shall give the undertaking, and take the oath hereinbefore provided to be given and taken by a commissioner, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, and shall thereafter perform all duties left unperformed by the commissioner whom he is appointed to succeed, with like effect as if such duties had been performed by the commissioner. If the land mortgaged consist of a single parcel, or of two or more contiguous parcels, situated in two or more counties, the court may, in its judgment, direct the whole thereof to be sold in one of such counties by the sheriff, commissioner or elisor, as the case may be, and upon such proceedings, and with like effect, as if the whole of the property were situated in that county.

Assistance, writ of. See post, § 1210.
Injunction to restrain waste by party in possession. Post, § 745.
Judgment by default. Ante, § 585. Relief. Ante, §§ 580, 585.
Personal property, mortgage or pledge of. Remedies. See Civ. Code, §§ 2967, 2986–3011; post, § 2967.
Place of trial. Ante, § 392.
Pleading written document. Ante, §§ 447–449.
Foreclosure necessary to obtain possession. Post, § 744.
Receiver. Ante, § 564.
Lis pendens. Ante, § 409.
Several mortgages or debts, installments, etc. Post, § 728.
Tender. Post, § 997.

Legislation § 726. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 246, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 704. When § 726 was enacted in 1872, (1) in first sentence, "shall" was changed to "must"; (2) the beginning of the second sentence, before the words "direct the sale," was changed from "In such action, the court may"; (3) in the same sentence, (a) "to" was omitted before "direct a sale," (b) "the" was added before "expenses of the sale," (c) "shall" was changed to "can" before "then be," and (d) "shall then" was changed to "it becomes" before "a lien"; (4) in sentence beginning "No person," (a) "shall be" was changed to "are" before "as conclusive," and (b) "said" was changed to "the" before "action," the section then ending with this latter word; (5) omitting from end of section the words "and shall in all respects have the same force and effect."

2. Amended by Stats. 1893, p. 118, (1) in sentence beginning "In such action," the words "to the" were omitted after "amount due," and the word "plaintiff" was changed to "plaintiffs," changing the semicolon after this word to a period; (2) a new sentence was added, beginning "The court" and ending "property"; (3) "and" was omitted before "If it appear," and a new sentence was begun with these words, adding, in the same, after "sheriff's return," the words "or from the commissioner's report"; (4) in sentence beginning "No person," the word "made" was omitted after "he had been"; (5) a new sentence was added, reading, "If the court appoint a commissioner for the sale of the property, he shall sell it in the manner provided by law for the sale of like property by the sheriff upon execution, and the provisions of chapter one, title nine, part two, of the Code of Civil Procedure, are hereby made applicable to sales made by such commissioners, and the powers therein given and the duties therein imposed on sheriffs are extended to such commissioners"; the section then ending with this sentence.

3. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 98, (1) in sentence beginning "In such action," (a) "the" was omitted after "costs of," and (b) "plaintiffs" was changed to "plaintiff"; (2) a new sentence was added, reading, "In the event of the death, or absence from the state, or other disability or disqualification of the commissioner so appointed to sell encumbered property, the court may, after the time for redemption has expired, appoint an elisor to make the deed or deeds due to the purchaser or purchasers, or his or their assigns, of the property so sold by said commissioner."

4. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 48, (1) in first sentence, omitting "estate" after "real"; (2) in sentence beginning "In such action," (a) changing "a" to "the" before "sale of," and (b) adding, after "due plaintiff," from word "including" to end of sentence; (3) adding two new sentences, beginning "It must require" and ending "duties of his office"; (4) in sentence beginning "If it appear," (a) changing "can" to "must," (b) after "docketed," adding the words "by the clerk in the manner provided in this code," and (c) changing "on" to "in" after "other cases"; (5) changing and adding to section, after "If the court appoint," to read as at present.

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 158; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Procedure before adoption of codes. Before the adoption of the codes, the parties were at liberty to adopt, in the foreclosure of mortgages, the course pursued under the old chancery system, and take a decree adjudging the amount due upon the personal obligation of the mortgagor, and directing a sale of the premises and the application of the proceeds to its payment, and apply, after sale, for the ascertainment of any deficiency, and execution for the same, or take a formal judgment for the amount due in the first instance (Rowland v. Leiby, 14 Cal. 156; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337); and legal and equitable relief could be had in the same action, the result being, that, in foreclosure cases, a formal judgment in personam could be rendered against the defendant for the amount found due, with a provision for its enforcement against the property upon which the lien was established (Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337); and a personal money judgment in favor of all parties holding notes against the defendant could be rendered before sale of the property. Cormerais v. Genella, 22 Cal. 116.

Construction of section. Three essentials provided for by this section are: 1. To make the mortgaged property the primary fund out of which satisfaction is to be had; 2. To give the plaintiff a personal judgment for such balance as may remain due after the exhaustion of the mortgaged property; and 3. To confine a recovery to one action. Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550. This section was not intended to prohibit the ordinary transaction of putting up mortgages as collaterals to secure an indebtedness, nor to limit such collaterals to mortgages which can be foreclosed in the same action. Merced Security Sav. Bank v. Casaccia, 103 Cal. 641; 37 Pac. 648. It must be construed to have reference to the enforcement of those rights, only, which are necessary to the recovery of the debt and the foreclosure of the lien given to secure it, and not to any collateral contract in the mortgage which does not affect the interests of the parties in the mortgaged property. Ely v. Williams, 6 Cal. App. 455; 92 Pac. 393. A trust deed, given as security for a debt, is within the policy of this section, and may be foreclosed. Herbert Kraft Co. v. Brian, 6 Cal. Unrep. 923; 68 Pac. 1020. This section refers to persons having a lien on the mortgaged premises, as well as a conveyance thereof. Wemple v. Yosemite Gold Mining Co., 4 Cal. App. 78; 87 Pac. 280.

Mortgagee may become owner how. The mortgagee can, in no case, become the owner of the mortgaged premises, except by purchase upon sale under judicial decree. Warner v. Freud, 138 Cal. 651; 72 Pac. 345; and see McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Lord v. Morris, 18 Cal. 482.

Merger of mortgage in deed of trust. A deed of trust does not necessarily supersede or merge a prior mortgage: such merger is a question of intention. Crisman v. Lanterman, 149 Cal. 647; 117 Am. St. Rep. 167; 87 Pac. 89.

Bank cannot apply deposit on mortgage debt. A bank, holding a debt secured by a mortgage, cannot apply, in reduction or cancellation of the debt, a claim due by it to the mortgagor, founded upon a general and ordinary deposit of money with it by the mortgagor. McKean v. German-American Sav. Bank, 118 Cal. 334; 50 Pac. 656; John M. C. Marble Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 15 Cal. App. 347; 115 Pac. 59.

Payments on account of mortgage debt. Moneys paid by the mortgagor to the mortgagee between the filing of the complaint in foreclosure and the sale, which, by the terms of the contract between them, should have been credited on the mortgage indebtedness, but for which no credit was given, may be recovered back by the mortgagor. Maddux v. County Bank, 129 Cal. 665; 79 Am. St. Rep. 143; 62 Pac. 264.

Liability of surety, guarantor, and indorser. One who is a mere surety, as distinguished from a guarantor, has the right to demand that the creditor shall first apply the property of the principal debtor to the discharge of the debt; but the creditor has the right to sue a guarantor, upon default of the principal debtor, without proceeding first to realize upon other securities, or to foreclose a mortgage given by such debtor. Adams v. Wallace, 119 Cal 67; 51 Pac. 14. Sureties and indorsers are not released by the failure of the creditor to enforce the mortgage which he has taken to secure the debt; and it does not prevent the maintenance of an action by the mortgagee against the sureties or indorsers of the mortgagor because their promise is not secured by the mortgage. Carver v. Steele, 116 Cal. 116; 58 Am. St. Rep. 156; 47 Pac. 1007; Adams v. Wallace, 119 Cal. 67; 51 Pac. 14. The indorser of a note secured by mortgage may be sued upon his obligation, without a foreclosure of the mortgage. Kinsel v. Ballou, 151 Cal. 760; 91 Pac. 620.

Liability of grantee who assumes mortgage debt. The agreement of a grantee to discharge the mortgage debt is an obligation in the hands of the mortgagor, which the mortgagee may enforce for his own benefit when he seeks to obtain satisfaction of the mortgage debt, to the same extent that it could be enforced by the mortgagor. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. The grantee who assumes payment of the mortgage as part of the purchase price, becomes, as to the mortgagor, the principal debtor, with the mortgagor as surety. Williams v. Naftzger, 103 Cal. 438; 37 Pac. 411; Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868; Roberts v. Fitzallen, 120 Cal. 482; 52 Pac. 818. A formal promise by the grantee to pay the mortgage debt is not necessary, in order to render him liable therefor, if his intention to assume the debt appears from a consideration of the entire instrument; the obligation may be made orally, or in a separate instrument; it may be implied from the transaction of the parties, or shown by the circumstances under which the purchase was made. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. The liability of the mortgagor is contingent on the fact that a sale of the mortgaged premises shall fail to satisfy the debt and costs; and it is against this contingency that the purchaser, who agrees to pay the mortgage debt, indemnifies him. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609. The mortgagor is discharged from personal liability, where the mortgagee extends the time of payment to the grantee of the mortgagor, who has assumed payment of the mortgage debt. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139. The agreement of the grantee to pay the mortgage debt may be abandoned at any time by the parties to it, and they may mutually agree to release each other from its performance, and the mortgagee, being a stranger to the contract, can have no greater rights than the mortgagor himself would have. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609. The statute of limitations runs against the mortgage obligation, for that is the grantee's liability, and not against the promise to pay the mortgage as a new and independent agreement. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. Where the mortgagor grants the mortgaged property, and dies so shortly before the outlawing of the debt that no administration can be secured before the statute would run in favor of the grantee, the mortgagee may at once sue the grantee, and may subsequently, after the issuance of letters of administration, by amendment or supplemental pleadings, bring in the representatives of the deceased, and thus in one action secure all the remedies to which he may be entitled. California Title Ins. etc. Co. v. Miller, 3 Cal. App. 54; 84 Pac. 453. An agreement by the grantee to pay the mortgage debt upon the granted premises, renders the grantee liable therefor to the mortgagee, and, upon foreclosure of the mortgage, judgment may be rendered against such grantee, as well as against the mortgagor, for any deficiency. Williams v. Naftzger, 103 Cal. 438; 37 Pac. 411; Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868; Roberts v. Fitzallen, 120 Cal. 482; 52 Pac. 818. Equity, to avoid circuity of action, permits the joinder of the mortgagor and his grantee, who has agreed to assume the mortgage, in the action to foreclose the mortgage; but the only personal judgment that can be rendered against either of them is for the deficiency after the sale of the mortgaged premises. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. The mortgagee, in his action to foreclose, may proceed against the mortgagor alone for any deficiency in the proceeds of the sale, or he may avail himself of his right to proceed, in the same action, against the mortgagor and his grantee, who has assumed the payment of the mortgage debt; if he proceed against the mortgagor alone, and judgment is docketed against him for any deficiency, the mortgagor has a right of action over against his grantee, upon his agreement to assume the mortgage debt. Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133; 41 Pac. 868. The right of the mortgagee to recover a deficiency judgment directly against the grantee of the mortgagor, who has assumed to pay the mortgage debt, springs from the rule of equity, that a creditor is entitled to the benefit of any obligation or security given by his debtor to one who has become the surety of such debtor for the payment of the debt; but this rule is applicable only where the mortgagor is personally liable for the mortgage debt. Ward v. De Oca, 120 Cal. 102; 52 Pac. 130.

Conclusiveness of foreclosure sale. The judgment in a foreclosure suit, and all the proceedings therein, are conclusive against the grantee of the mortgagor, who fails to record his conveyance; in such case, the grantee, by standing idly by and permitting foreclosure proceedings to be prosecuted without intervention upon his part, consents to be represented by the mortgagor, and the legal effect of the foreclosure sale is to divest his title as completely as though he himself were a party to the foreclosure suit. Breedlove v. Norwich etc. Fire Ins. Soc., 124 Cal. 164; 56 Pac. 770.

Object of foreclosure. The object of a foreclosure suit is to subject to a judicial sale, and to vest in the purchaser thereunder, the same title or estate in the mortgaged property that the mortgagor had at the time of the execution of the mortgage. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958.

Mortgage covering real and personal property. A mortgage covering real and personal property is valid, and may be foreclosed in the same proceedings; and both the real and the personal property may be sold under the same decree. San Francisco Breweries v. Schurtz, 104 Cal. 420; 38 Pac. 92; and see Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 9 Am. St. Rep. 245; 18 Pac. 658. The fact that some of the personal property included in a mortgage of real and personal property is not mortgageable does not render the mortgage void as to the other property covered by it. San Francisco Breweries v. Schurtz, 104 Cal. 420; 38 Pac. 92.

Mortgaged property in two or more counties. Where the mortgaged property lies in different counties, the mortgagee may commence an action of foreclosure in either county, and in the single action obtain a judgment for the foreclosure of his mortgage upon the property in both counties. Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3; 79 Pac. 527; and see Murphy v. Superior Court, 138 Cal. 69; 70 Pac. 1070.

Other remedies in case of personal property. Where the mortgage provides that the mortgagee shall be entitled to possession of the chattels upon default, he has the right to bring an action of replevin after default; and such action does not contravene the provision of this section allowing but one action to enforce the debt or lien of the mortgage. Harper v. Gordon, 128 Cal. 489; 61 Pac. 84. The limitation upon the form of action, declared in this section, extends only to "mortgages"; and, as a stockholder's agreement that the corporation shall have a lien upon his stock is not a mortgage, the corporation may enforce payment of the indebtedness by action, without any foreclosure of the lien. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189; 81 Pac. 1029. Where a chattel mortgage gives a right to take possession upon default in payment, the mortgagee, after electing to foreclose, may sue in replevin to recover possession: such remedy is ancillary and auxiliary to foreclosure. Ely v. Williams, 6 Cal. App. 455; 92 Pac. 393. A pledgee may have his action to recover the debt without first exhausting the subject of his pledge. Jones v. Evans, 6 Cal. App. 88; 91 Pac. 532; John M. C. Marble Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 15 Cal. App. 347; 115 Pac. 59.

One action for recovery of debt secured by mortgage. There is but one form of action to recover a debt secured by mortgage. Lilly-Brackett Co. v. Sonnemann, 157 Cal. 192; 21 Ann. Cas. 1279; 106 Pac. 715. The plaintiff cannot waive the security, and bring an action on the indebtedness: he must bring his action of foreclosure, and exhaust the security before he can have recourse to the personal responsibility of the debtor. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 154; 23 Pac. 1086; Gnarini v. Swiss-American Bank, 162 Cal. 181; 121 Pac. 726. To an action at law upon a promissory note, it is a complete defense to set up the fact that the note is secured by mortgage; the mortgagee cannot bring an action and have judgment upon the note without foreclosure of the mortgage. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 109 Cal. 427; 50 Am. St. Rep. 52; 42 Pac. 447; 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. The intention of the legislature in enacting the provision that there can be but one action for the recovery of any debt secured by mortgage, was to prevent a multiplicity of suits: if one suit could be maintained upon a note, and another upon the mortgage by which it is secured, no change was effected by this enactment, because a mortgagee was previously limited to these two actions. Ould v. Stoddard, 54 Cal. 613. The provision of this section, that there shall be but one action for the recovery of any debt, relates to civil actions commenced and prosecuted in the courts of this state: it does not embrace and control proceedings sanctioned by the common law, which cannot, in any legal sense, be called actions at law or suits in equity. Wilson v. Brannan, 27 Cal. 258. Where a mortgagee has prosecuted an action in another state to final judgment, upon a note secured by mortgage on real property in this state, he cannot afterwards maintain an action for foreclosure in this state. Ould v. Stoddard, 54 Cal. 613. There can be no attachment, in any case, where the debt is secured by mortgage; and no action can be maintained, in such case, without a foreclosure of the mortgage. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 174; 24 Pac. 113. A separate action cannot be brought for the recovery of a debt for which a mortgage security has been given, though such security was originally valueless, or totally inadequate by reason of prior mortgages to the full value of the premises. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 154; 23 Pac. 1086. There is no difference between commencing and enforcing an attachment suit while there is a valid mortgage existing to secure the debt, and prosecuting an action already commenced after a mortgage is given to secure the debt which is the subject of that action: the mortgage subserves the same purpose in both cases, which is, to secure the debt, and, after it is given, the law steps in and limits the action to foreclosure proceedings to enforce the debt. Commercial Bank v. Kershner, 120 Cal. 495; 52 Pac. 848. Where a mortgage was given as an additional security for a debt then being enforced by an action pending, the plaintiff may not proceed with such action and then foreclose on the balance, if there should be any. Commercial Bank v. Kershner, 120 Cal. 495; 52 Pac. 848. A mortgagee may attach property for an unsecured debt, although he can maintain only one action for the recovery of the debt secured by the mortgage. Flores v. Stone, 21 Cal. App. 105; 131 Pac. 348, 351. The holder of a note secured by a second mortgage cannot, after foreclosure of the prior mortgage by a suit to which he was made a party defendant, and in which all his rights might have been settled, maintain an action on the note against the maker. Brown v. Willis, 67 Cal. 235; 7 Pac. 682. An action cannot be maintained on a note alone, unless its security is valueless. Bartlett v. Cottle, 63 Cal. 366. A personal action upon a note secured by a second mortgage is not prohibited by this section, after the security of the mortgage has been lost without the fault of the mortgagee, and through the failure of the mortgagor to pay the first mortgage, resulting in the foreclosure thereof, and sale of the mortgaged premises to pay the same. Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 28; 54 Pac. 273; and see Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550. Where, by mistake, the mortgagee does not secure a lien upon anything, he may be allowed a personal action on the note alone; the rule that the mortgagee is personally liable for the entire debt should be the same where no lien is created as where it has been lost without the fault of the mortgagee. Otto v. Long, 127 Cal. 471; 59 Pac. 895. A mortgage of property in which the mortgagor neither has nor acquires any interest creates no lien, and cannot properly be foreclosed; and, in such case, it does not violate the policy established by this section to allow a personal action upon the note. Otto v. Long, 127 Cal. 471; 59 Pac. 895. Where the mortgagor had neither possession, nor any estate, title, or interest of any kind or character, in the mortgaged premises, when he executed the mortgage, and never, at any time, acquired any, the debt is not one secured by a lien upon real property; if the mortgagor in good faith asserts a claim to the property, or has color of title, or asserts an equity in it, the mortgagee should foreclose; but where the mortgagor has no claim of title, and there is no mistake which can be corrected in a court of equity, it does not violate the policy established by this section to allow a personal action on the note. Otto v. Long, 127 Cal. 471; 59 Pac. 895. To inquire whether there is such property as that which the mortgage purports to cover, or whether, for any reason, it fails to create a lien, is not to violate the policy of the statute, nor the rule that, so long as there is an unexecuted lien on property to secure the debt, a personal action cannot be maintained. Otto v. Long, 127 Cal. 471; 59 Pac. 895. The relation of mortgagor and mortgagee is not created, where the vendor of the property retains a lien on the land for portion of the purchase-money remaining unpaid; and there is no statutory prohibition upon the right to a personal action to enforce the debt when it becomes due. Longmaid v. Coulter, 123 Cal. 208; 55 Pac. 791.

Action where mortgage is on property outside of state. This section refers solely to debts secured by mortgages of property in this state: it has no application to mortgages of property situated in another state or country. McGue v. Rommel, 148 Cal. 539; 83 Pac. 1000; Felton v. West, 102 Cal. 266; 36 Pac. 676. An action can be maintained here, upon a note secured by a mortgage on property out of the state, without a foreclosure of the mortgage. McGue v. Rommel, 148 Cal. 539; 83 Pac. 1000.

Action may be commenced when. A written agreement by a mortgagee to extend the time of payment of a note, in consideration of the payment of a large portion of the principal, and of a promise to pay interest on the balance monthly thereafter, is virtually a renewal of the note and mortgage for the new principal to the date agreed upon; and an action to foreclose, commenced prior to that date, is properly dismissed as premature. Seaton v. Fiske, 128 Cal. 549; 61 Pac. 666.

Foreclosure as to part of mortgaged premises. A mortgagee, by foreclosing on one piece of land, of two pieces covered by the same mortgage, waives his lien on the excluded piece; by the foreclosure, the mortgage is merged in the judgment, and a new action cannot be maintained. Mascarel v. Raffour, 51 Cal. 242; Hall v. Arnott, 80 Cal. 348; 22 Pac. 200; Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612; 60 Pac. 165; Commercial Bank v. Kershner, 120 Cal. 495; 52 Pac. 848. Where a loan is secured by a mortgage upon different pieces of real property, the lender may foreclose as to one of the securities only, if he does not seek a personal judgment against the defendant; and while the effect of this would be to waive the omitted security, yet the lender is at liberty to make such waiver if he chooses. Bull v. Coe, 77 Cal. 54; 11 Am. St. Rep. 235; 18 Pac. 808.

Successive actions to foreclose. This section does not prohibit successive foreclosures, when required by the circumstances, for distinct debts secured by the same mortgage: the power of a court of equity, in a proper case, to direct a sale of the property on foreclosure of the mortgage, saving from the effect of such sale a further lien secured by the same or some other encumbrance, is fully established. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612; 60 Pac. 165. Where a previous attempt to foreclose a mortgage was void, it does not operate as a waiver of the mortgage lien, nor of the right to foreclose the same in a second action. Ludwig v. Murphy, 143 Cal. 473; 77 Pac. 150. Where two successive mortgages are given to secure the same debt, and, by mistake, the first alone is foreclosed, which covers less property than the second, and is insufficient to pay the debt, the holder of the mortgage can maintain a suit to set aside the judgment of foreclosure, and for a foreclosure of the second mortgage, as against a subsequent judgment creditor. Gerig v. Loveland, 130 Cal. 512; 62 Pac. 830.

Rights of and actions by junior mortgagees. The second mortgagee is not required to bring suit to recover his debt at such time as the first mortgagee may see fit to do so, especially where it is apparent that, should he foreclose, he would receive nothing; and the mortgagor cannot be heard to complain that the second mortgagee did not so bring suit. Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 28; 54 Pac. 273. The holder of a second mortgage upon two distinct tracts may come in by way of cross-complaint in an action to foreclose the first mortgage upon one of such tracts only, and have his mortgage on the other and separate tract foreclosed in the same action. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612; 60 Pac. 165; Newhall v. Bank of Livermore, 136 Cal. 533; 69 Pac. 248. Where a subsequent mortgagee, made a party defendant in an action to foreclose the prior mortgage, filed an answer setting up his mortgage covering the tract of land involved in the action, and also another tract, and prayed that if any surplus should remain after applying the proceeds of the sale of the tract involved in the action to the payment of the first mortgage, it be applied to the payment of the second mortgage, a judgment foreclosing the first mortgage is not a bar to another action by him to foreclose his mortgage as against the other tract not involved in the first action. Brill v. Shively, 93 Cal. 674; 29 Pac. 324; Pauly v. Rogers, 121 Cal. 294; 53 Pac. 808. A junior mortgagee, made a party defendant in foreclosure, may plead his mortgage, and ask that any surplus derived from the sale of the property subject to both mortgages be applied as a credit upon his note; and by so doing he in no sense brings an action to foreclose his mortgage, and is not barred from thereafter bringing an action to foreclose the mortgage upon other property included therein, which was not subject to the prior mortgage. Pauly v. Rogers, 121 Cal. 294; 53 Pac. 808; and see Brill v. Shively, 93 Cal. 674; 29 Pac. 324. A junior mortgagee need not answer or set up his claim, by cross-complaint or otherwise, in foreclosure proceedings brought by the holder of a prior lien, although made a party defendant. Greenebaum v. Davis, 131 Cal. 146; 82 Am. St. Rep. 338; 63 Pac. 165; Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 28; 54 Pac. 273.

Action on assigned mortgage. An action to foreclose a mortgage which has been assigned as collateral security for the principal debt, is not an action for the recovery of the principal debt, but to preserve and enforce the security, which is a duty imposed upon the creditor by the contract of hypothecation, and the principal debt need not be enforced in such action. Merced Security Sav. Bank v. Casaccia, 103 Cal. 641; 37 Pac. 648; McArthur v. Magee, 114 Cal. 126; 45 Pac. 1068.

Negotiability of note secured by mortgage. A note, though negotiable in form, is, in law, not negotiable, if secured by a mortgage of even date, which makes it payable primarily out of a peculiar fund, at least as against one having knowledge of the mortgage. Hays v. Plummer, 126 Cal. 107; 77 Am. St. Rep. 153; 58 Pac. 447. A note secured by mortgage, which provides for attorneys' fees in case of foreclosure, is not negotiable, within the law merchant, nor was it so under the Civil Code, until the amendment to § 3088 of that code in 1905. Meyer v. Weber, 133 Cal. 681; 65 Pac. 1110. A note secured by a mortgage on land, both executed at the same time, is not negotiable, where a purchaser takes it with knowledge of the mortgage; and a recital in the note that it is so secured is notice of the fact. National Hardware Co. v. Sherwood, 165 Cal. 1; 130 Pac. 881.

Jurisdiction of court. The court has no jurisdiction to render judgment in foreclosure proceedings on lands lying outside of the county in which suit is brought, although the description of the lands in the mortgage erroneously recites that they are in such county. Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288; 43 Am. St. Rep. 100; 38 Pac. 81. The jurisdiction of the court, in actions of foreclosure, over the parties and the subject-matter continues until the foreclosure is completed by failure to redeem; and it has power to vacate an irregular sale before the expiration of the time for redemption, as against the purchaser, who, by his bid, submits himself to it. Van Loben Sels v. Bunnell, 131 Cal. 489; 63 Pac. 773. In an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage, the court has merely jurisdiction to foreclose the mortgage sued on and the rights of all parties holding under and subject thereto: it has no jurisdiction to reach over into a separate partition suit, begun prior to the execution of the mortgage by one of the tenants in common who were parties to the suit, and to take control and jurisdiction thereof in the interest of the mortgagee. Towle v. Quinn, 141 Cal. 382; 74 Pac. 1046. Where the maker of a note or bill of exchange resides in a remote country, or in a different state, and it is not shown that he has any property subject to seizure and sale within this state, such special circumstances are presented as to authorize the holder of the instruments given in pledge to resort to a court of equity for a foreclosure and sale. Donohoe v. Gamble, 38 Cal. 340; 99 Am. Dec. 399.

Allegation of complaint. A note and mortgage, set out in full as an exhibit in the complaint, are sufficiently referred to by the allegation that the defendant executed to the plaintiff a certain promissory note and a certain mortgage to secure the same, and that a copy of said note is set out in said mortgage, and said mortgage is hereto attached and marked "Exhibit B." Savings Bank v. Burns, 104 Cal. 473; 38 Pac. 102; and see Ward v. Clay, 82 Cal. 502; 23 Pac. 50; Whitby v. Rowell, 82 Cal. 635; 23 Pac. 40. A complaint upon a promissory note is not rendered insufficient to state a cause of action, merely because of a recital contained in the copy of the note set out in the complaint, that the note is secured by a mortgage of even date therewith, there being no averment in the complaint that the note was secured by a mortgage, and the recital not being the equivalent of such an averment. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573. An averment that the plaintiff is the owner of the note is but the averment of a conclusion of law, and not the averment of an issuable fact; it is immaterial, and may be omitted, where the conclusion of law necessarily follows from the other facts stated, and the denial of this averment of a conclusion of law does not raise a material issue. Wedderspoon v. Rogers, 32 Cal. 569; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118; 95 Am. Dec. 90; Monroe v. Fohl, 72 Cal. 568; 14 Pac. 514; Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337. In an action to foreclose a mortgage securing a note, the breach of the contract to pay the note is of the essence of the cause of action, and must be alleged: an averment that "there is now due and owing to the plaintiff" a specified sum is but the averment of a conclusion of law, and not of a fact, and is not the equivalent of an averment of non-payment. Ryan v. Holliday, 110 Cal. 335; 42 Pac. 891. Where the complaint merely avers that "the whole of said note is owing from said defendant to said plaintiff," without any averment of the fact of non-payment, it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Knox v. Buckman Contracting Co., 139 Cal. 598; 73 Pac. 428; and see Penrose v. Winter, 135 Cal. 289; 67 Pac. 772. An averment in the complaint, that a specified sum "is now due and owing," though the statement of a legal conclusion, in which the material fact of non-payment is implied, is sufficient to sustain a judgment by default. Penrose v. Winter, 135 Cal. 289; 67 Pac. 772. A complaint which sets out the note and mortgage, showing on their face that the principal was due and payable long before the commencement of the action, and which avers that no part of the principal sum has been paid, and that it is unpaid, and is owing by defendant to the plaintiff, sufficiently shows that the principal sum was due at the commencement of the action. Luddy v. Pavkovich, 137 Cal. 284; 70 Pac. 177. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, by the indorsee of a note payable "on or before two years after date," with interest payable semi-annually, a complaint which shows an indorsement and delivery by the payee to the plaintiff less than thirty days after the date of the note and continuous ownership of the note and mortgage by the plaintiff thereafter, and alleges payment of the interest for one year, and that the principal and interest thereafter accruing according to the terms of the note "still remains due and unpaid from the defendant (the mortgagor) to this plaintiff," is sufficient to support a judgment for the plaintiff against the mortgagor. Schwind v. Hall, 129 Cal. 40; 61 Pac. 573.

Counsel fees alleged how. The complaint need not aver that the counsel fee claimed is reasonable, nor need there be a finding to that effect: the fee is a mere incident to the action. McNamara v. Oakland Bldg. etc. Ass'n, 131 Cal. 336; 63 Pac. 670; and see Carriere v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 435; Monroe v. Fohl, 72 Cal. 568; 14 Pac. 514; Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 72 Cal. 532; 16 Pac. 325; First Nat. Bank v. Holt, 87 Cal. 158; 25 Pac. 272; White v. Allatt, 87 Cal. 245; 25 Pac. 420. Nor is it necessary to allege non-payment of counsel fees which have neither been earned in full nor yet fixed by the court: the amount of the fees, within the limits of the contract contained in the mortgage, is to be determined by the court. Damon v. Quinn, 143 Cal. 75; 76 Pac. 818. A prayer that the proceeds of the sale be applied to the payment of the amount due on the note and mortgage, with interest, disbursements, costs, and counsel fees, where the complaint alleges that the mortgage provides that in case of foreclosure the plaintiff shall be entitled to a certain per cent as counsel fees, is sufficient, and counsel fees should be allowed thereon, though the defendant suffers default. Thrasher v. Moran, 146 Cal. 683; 81 Pac. 32.

Demurrer. In an action brought on the note alone, the defendant may demur to the complaint, on the ground that it is doubtful or uncertain therefrom whether in fact the note, which was set forth by copy, and which stated that it was secured by mortgage, was in fact secured by mortgage; but, in the absence of such demurrer, the complaint is sufficient to sustain a judgment by default for the amount of the note; the allegations of the answer cannot be considered in determining the matter. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573.

Parties defendant. The only proper or necessary parties defendant to a suit of foreclosure are the mortgagor and those claiming an interest in the property, derived subsequently to the date of the mortgage; and titles adverse to that of the mortgagor, or superior to that covered by the mortgage, are not proper subjects for determination in such action. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958; and see San Francisco v. Lawton, 18 Cal. 465; 79 Am. Dec. 187; Croghan v. Minor, 53 Cal. 15; Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 456; Cody v. Bean, 93 Cal. 578; 29 Pac. 223; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220;

Williams v. Cooper, 124 Cal. 666; 57 Pac. 577; Murray v. Etchepare, 129 Cal. 318; 61 Pac. 930; Peachy v. Witter, 131 Cal. 316; 63 Pac. 468. Where the interest of a defendant in foreclosure proceedings is adverse or superior to that covered by the mortgage, the proper action of the court is to dismiss him from the suit. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958; and see Ord v. Bartlett, 83 Cal. 428; 23 Pac. 705; Cody v. Bean, 93 Cal. 578; 29 Pac. 223; Hoppe v. Hoppe, 104 Cal. 94; 37 Pac. 894. Under a statute allowing a creditor to enforce a mortgage against the mortgagor alone, the owner of the mortgaged property at the time of foreclosure must be made a party. Skinner v. Buck, 29 Cal. 253. A prior lien-holder is a proper though not a necessary party to an action to foreclose a mortgage; and when made a party, he may seek the foreclosure of his lien by cross-complaint. Van Loben Sels v. Bunnell, 131 Cal. 489; 63 Pac. 773. The holders of junior liens must be made parties defendant in foreclosure proceedings, in order to make the foreclosure effectual; and this implies that their rights, when brought into court, shall be adjudicated, and provision made for them in the decree of foreclosure by a proper disposition of the surplus proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. London etc. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Cal. 257; 71 Pac. 334. The indorsers of a note secured by mortgage are properly joined as parties defendant in foreclosure proceedings. Hubbard v. University Bank, 125 Cal. 684; 58 Pac. 297. Those acquiring title to the mortgaged property subsequently to the commencement of the foreclosure proceedings, in the face of the recorded lis pendens, or with actual notice of the suit, are not necessary parties to such proceedings. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Cochran, 141 Cal. 653; 75 Pac. 315. A purchaser who acquires title under a sale to satisfy the lien of a street assessment, is not a necessary party to an action to foreclose a mortgage on the property; the title acquired by him is superior and hostile to the mortgage, and cannot be litigated in the action of foreclosure. Wilson v. California Bank, 121 Cal. 630; 54 Pac. 119. The heirs of a deceased mortgagor are not necessary parties defendant in an action to foreclose: it is sufficient to make the administrator a party defendant. Finger v. McCaughey, 119 Cal. 59; 51 Pac. 13; and see Bayly v. Muehe, 65 Cal. 345; 3 Pac. 467; 4 Pac. 486; Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; 23 Pac. 700; Collins v. Scott, 100 Cal. 446; 34 Pac. 1085. In foreclosure proceedings, only those persons need be made defendants whose interests appear of record. Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194; 53 Pac. 563. The holder of a deed, not recorded when the action to foreclose was commenced, is not necessary party defendant, although such deed was executed prior to the commencement of the action. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Cochran, 141 Cal. 653; 75 Pac. 315. The holder of an unrecorded deed, made subsequently to the mortgage, need not be made a party to foreclosure proceedings; but such proceedings are conclusive against him, as though he had been made a party to the action. Breedlove v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc., 124 Cal. 164; 56 Pac. 770. The record of the deed, and not actual notice, determines the right of the grantee to be made a party to foreclosure proceedings, in order to be bound by the decree. Filipini v. Trobock, 134 Cal. 441; 66 Pac. 587. A purchaser of the mortgaged property, prior to the action of foreclosure, and subject to the mortgage, who fails to record his deed prior to the commencement of such action, and of whose interest the mortgagee had no notice at such time, is not a necessary party, in the sense that it is necessary to bring him in so that a foreclosure decree effectual as against him may be rendered, as, for all the purposes of obtaining jurisdiction, he is fully represented by the mortgagor. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Cochran, 141 Cal. 653; 75 Pac. 315. A party, who was the holder of an unrecorded deed from the mortgagor when foreclosure suit was commenced, need not be made a party thereto, and is concluded by the decree; and evidence is inadmissible, in his behalf, to show that the plaintiff had actual knowledge of the unrecorded deed before such suit was commenced. Hager v. Astorg, 145 Cal. 548; 104 Am. St. Rep. 68; 79 Pac. 68; Shurtleff v. Kehrer, 163 Cal. 24; 124 Pac. 724. A subsequent purchaser, whose deed was duly recorded prior to the commencement of an action to foreclose an antecedent mortgage, but who was not made a party to the action, is not bound by the foreclosure decree. Shurtleff v. Kehrer, 163 Cal. 24; 124 Pac. 724. In an action to foreclose a mortgage given by an heir upon his interest in certain real property owned by the deceased, which was thereafter sold under order of probate court, the purchaser at such probate sale, being made a party, is entitled to recover his costs, having taken the property, by such sale, discharged from encumbrance. Gutter v. Dallamore, 144 Cal. 665; 79 Pac. 383.

Answer. Where the complaint in an action of foreclosure contains a copy of the note and mortgage sued upon, and the answer is unverified, the genuineness and due execution of those instruments are admitted. Waldrip v. Black, 74 Cal. 409; 16 Pac. 226. An answer denying that the plaintiff was the owner and holder of the note and mortgage, raises no issue; that being the only denial, judgment upon the pleadings is proper. Clemens v. Luce, 101

Cal. 432; 35 Pac. 1032; and see Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604; 34 Pac. 337.

Cross-demand against mortgagor. A simple contract debt, due from a mortgagee to the mortgagor, is not available as a cross-demand: such indebtedness cannot be mutually compensated under this section. Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616.

Intervention. An intervention is not permissible to set up an adverse claim of title to part of the mortgaged property, in opposition to that of the mortgagor and the mortgagee, in an equitable action of foreclosure. Peachy v. Witter, 131 Cal. 316; 63 Pac. 468; and see McComb v. Spangler, 71 Cal. 418; 12 Pac. 347; Ord v. Bartlett, 83 Cal. 428; 23 Pac. 705; Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; 25 Pac. 356; Cody v. Bean, 93 Cal. 578; 29 Pac. 223; Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600; 29 Pac. 220; Williams v. Cooper, 124 Cal. 666; 57 Pac. 577; Murray v. Etchepare, 129 Cal. 318; 61 Pac. 930.

Evidence. In an action of foreclosure against the original mortgagor, an acknowledgment of the mortgage is not necessary to give it validity, and the note and unacknowledged mortgage are admissible in evidence against him. West v. Mears, 17 Cal. App. 718; 121 Pac. 700. The fact that the original note was surrendered, and marked "Paid" on its face, is not conclusive of the extinguishment of the debt which the mortgage was given to secure, where the original note was replaced by a new note, and where the mortgage given to secure it was allowed to stand as before; it may be shown that the original debt was not, in fact, extinguished. Bonestell v. Bowie, 128 Cal. 511; 61 Pac. 78; and see Welch v. Allington, 23 Cal. 322; Steinhart v. National Bank, 94 Cal. 362; 28 Am. St. Rep. 132; 29 Pac. 717.

Judgment to contain what. The judgment in foreclosure proceedings need only contain a statement of the amount due the plaintiff, a designation of the defendants who are personally liable for the payment of the debt, and a direction that the mortgaged premises, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be sold according to law, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the expenses of the sale, the costs of the action, and the debt: everything else is ministerial, and is expressly regulated by statute, which is not made clearer or more binding by being copied in the judgment. Leviston v. Swan, 33 Cal. 480; Hooper v. McDade, 1 Cal. App. 733; 82 Pac. 1116. In a foreclosure suit, where judgment is taken by default, the decree can give no relief beyond that demanded in the bill. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14.

Judgment on the pleadings. A judgment for the defendant, on the pleadings, cannot be granted in an action brought on the note alone, although the note was secured by mortgage, where the complaint does not set forth facts showing that the note was so secured: an answer setting forth such facts is not sufficient. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 117 Cal. 481; 49 Pac. 573.

Judgment for costs. The action of the clerk in inserting, in a decree of foreclosure, the amount of costs as claimed by the plaintiff, before the same have been taxed and ascertained, is a mere clerical misprision, not affecting the validity of the decree in other respects, nor invalidating the order of sale issued thereon, nor affecting the validity of the sale thereunder. Janes v. Bullard, 107 Cal. 130; 40 Pac. 108.

Interest. Interest due and payable on a note secured by mortgage, is a debt secured by the mortgage. Van Loo v. Van Aken, 104 Cal. 269; 37 Pac. 925. That a mortgagee cannot foreclose for interest in arrears, because there is no express agreement that he may do so, is opposed to the current of authority and to the reasonable construction of the statute. Van Loo v. Van Aken, 104 Cal. 269; 37 Pac. 925; and see Yoakam v. White, 97 Cal. 286; 32 Pac. 238. Where the note provides for the payment of interest semi-annually, and the mortgage provides that upon default in the payment thereof the mortgagee may cause the premises to be sold, the mortgagee has the right to bring an action of foreclosure upon default in the payment of interest, although the note does not provide for such default. Phelps v. Mayers, 126 Cal. 549; 58 Pac. 1048; and see Yoakam v. White, 97 Cal. 286; 32 Pac. 238. Where the provision of the note is, that, upon a default in paying interest, the principal shall become due at the election of the holder, the assertion of such election merely puts the holder in the position of the holder of a note which declares that upon default in interest the whole principal shall immediately become due; and the bringing of a foreclosure suit by the holder does not put it out of his power to waive the penalty, by accepting a payment of all interest due and dismissing the action. California Sav. & L. Soc. v. Culver, 127 Cal. 107; 59 Pac. 292.

Judgment for interest only. Where a foreclosure suit is begun upon default in payment of interest, in accordance with a provision therefor in the mortgage, which did not provide for maturity of the debt upon such default, the judgment can only provide for a sale to pay the interest then found to be due; and the remedy for subsequent defaults in the payment of principal or interest is, under § 728, post, to move for a subsequent order or orders of sale of the mortgaged premises therefor. Byrne v. Hoag, 126 Cal. 283; 58 Pac. 688. A judgment for the principal of a promissory note secured by mortgage, before it became due, and an order for the sale of the mortgaged premises for its payment, is erroneous; judgment may be had for the sale of so much of the premises as may be necessary to satisfy the interest due. Hunt v. Dohrs, 39 Cal. 304.

Counsel fees fixed and allowed how. Attorneys' fees are properly allowed, for the same reason that costs are allowed, as a necessary incident to the judgment. Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 532; 16 Pac. 325. Counsel fees are not recoverable as costs; and a special prayer for costs does not include counsel fees, nor does a stipulation in the mortgage, making counsel fees a charge secured by the mortgage, make such charge part of the costs of the action. Brooks v. Forrington, 117 Cal. 219; 48 Pac. 1073. It is not necessary to the allowance of counsel fees that the plaintiff should have actually paid or expressly agreed to pay such to his counsel: an implied agreement is sufficient. Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 535; 16 Pac. 325. Where an attorney received a regular salary for all his services rendered to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff has not agreed or become liable to pay him any compensation for his services in foreclosure proceedings, the plaintiff is not entitled to an allowance for counsel fees, the attorney not being entitled to receive such fees for himself. Bank of Woodland v. Treadwell, 55 Cal. 379; Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 532; 16 Pac. 325. Where the note secured by the mortgage provides for the payment of attorneys' fees not provided for in the mortgage, and does not provide in terms for the right to bring an action before its maturity, that right being created by the mortgage alone, and limited to a foreclosure of the mortgage, the holder cannot recover judgment for the attorneys' fees provided for in the note, without giving notice of his option to claim the whole amount to be due before bringing suit. Clemens v. Luce, 101 Cal. 432; 35 Pac. 1032. The court has no power to make a greater allowance for counsel fees than that specified in the mortgage (Monroe v. Fohl, 72 Cal. 568; 14 Pac. 514); or in the note secured by the mortgage. Hewitt v. Dean, 91 Cal. 5; 27 Pac. 423. Where the mortgage provides for a reasonable counsel fee to be fixed by the court in case of foreclosure, the duty of fixing the amount of compensation is cast on the court, and no evidence of the value of the services is necessary. Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2; Hotaling v. Monteith, 128 Cal. 556; 61 Pac. 95. In fixing an attorney's fee in foreclosure proceedings, the extent of the responsibility assumed by the attorney, by reason of the amount involved, is to be considered. Patten v. Pepper Hotel Co., 153 Cal. 460; 96 Pac. 296.

Counsel fees lien on mortgaged premises when. Where the mortgage merely provides security for the payment of the principal and interest specified in the note, and does not provide for securing the payment of any attorney's fee, such fee cannot become a lien on the land nor be provided for in the decree of foreclosure. Clemens v. Luce, 101 Cal. 432; 35 Pac. 1032. In an action to foreclose a mortgage, a provision for counsel fees therein contained cannot be charged as a lien upon the land, unless expressly so charged by the terms of the mortgage; and if not so charged, the fees are in the nature of special damage, which may be pleaded and recovered against the mortgagor. Klokke v. Escailler, 124 Cal. 297; 56 Pac. 1113. Where a note, secured by deed of grant, contains an agreement for attorneys' fees in case suit is brought, and a copy of the note is set out in the complaint, following which is an allegation that the conveyance of the land was made to secure the payment of the "said note," the term "said note" includes the contract to pay attorneys' fees, as well as the principal and interest of the note; and it is proper not only to give judgment for attorneys' fees, but also to make them a lien upon the mortgaged premises. County Bank v. Goldtree, 129 Cal. 160; 61 Pac. 785. Where the note set out in the complaint, and appearing to have been secured by mortgage, contains a provision for reasonable counsel fees as part of the note, it is proper to embody an allowance for counsel fees in the decree of foreclosure of the mortgage. Peachy v. Witter, 131 Cal. 316; 63 Pac. 468. A provision in a mortgage, to the effect that, in case of a suit for its foreclosure, a decree may be had for the sale of the mortgaged premises, and out of the proceeds there may be retained the costs and charges of making such sale and of suit for foreclosure, including counsel fees, authorizes the court to include such counsel fees in its decree as a part of the obligation secured by the mortgage. O'Neal v. Hart, 116 Cal. 69; 47 Pac. 926; and see Haensel v. Pacific States Savings etc. Co., 135 Cal. 41; 67 Pac. 38. Where the obligation for the payment of counsel fees is included in the note, but is not secured by the mortgage, the plaintiff may recover judgment for counsel fees, but such judgment is not a lien upon the real estate secured by the mortgage. Clemens v. Luce, 101 Cal. 432; 35 Pac. 1032. Where the mortgage provides for reasonable counsel fees, to be fixed by the court in case of foreclosure, and for all payments made by the mortgagee for specified purposes, which payments were to be deemed as secured by the mortgage, the mortgagee is not entitled to have such fees included in the mortgage lien, but must rely upon a personal judgment. Klokke v. Escailler, 124 Cal. 297; 56 Pac. 1113; and see Irvine v. Perry, 119 Cal. 352; 51 Pac. 544; Cortelyou v. Jones, 132 Cal. 131; 64 Pac. 119; Haensel v. Pacific States Savings etc. Co., 135 Cal. 41; 67 Pac. 38; Luddy v. Pavkovich, 137 Cal. 284; 70 Pac. 177.

Appointment of commissioner. The court is authorized to appoint a commissioner to make a sale under foreclosure, by its judgment, or at any time after judgment; no notice is required of the appointment, which may be made ex parte; and the appointment does not go to the substance of the decree. Granger v. Sheriff, 140 Cal. 190; 73 Pac. 816. The proceedings for the foreclosure of a street assessment are quite analogous to those for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon real property; and as no mode is specifically pointed out for the sale of real property under the judgment therein, it cannot be held that the appointment of a commissioner to sell the property under such judgment is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or even erroneous. Crane v. Cummings, 137 Cal. 201; 69 Pac. 984.

Liability for deficiency. A mortgagor has the right to insist that the mortgagee shall not, by releasing the land, which should be made to pay the debt, throw upon him a personal liability therefor. Crisman v. Lanterman, 149 Cal. 647; 117 Am. St. Rep. 167; 87 Pac. 89. Where the mortgagor quitclaims to a third person, without reference to the mortgage on the property, and such third person afterward conveys the premises by a deed reciting that the grantee assumes and agrees to pay such mortgage, the last-named grantee is not liable to the mortgagee for any deficiency judgment: there is no privity between the grantees and the mortgagee. Ward v. De Oca, 120 Cal 102; 52 Pac. 130. Where a mortgage is released after the mortgagee's death, to make a sale under a deed of trust effective, in being clear of all encumbrances, the mortgagee's estate, not having consented to such release, cannot be made liable for any deficiency arising in the application of the proceeds of sale to the mortgage debt. Crisman v. Lanterman, 149 Cal. 647; 117 Am. St. Rep. 167; 87 Pac. 89. The rule that the mortgagor undertakes to pay only the deficiency remaining after the return of the result of the sale on foreclosure, is not altogether nor literally true: he undertakes to pay the debt; but should there exist a valid lien to secure its payment, the result is the same as though his contract had been to pay only the deficiency; if, however, without fault on the part of the mortgagee, the lien is lost, the mortgagor may be held for the entire debt. Otto v. Long, 127 Cal. 471; 59 Pac. 895. A judgment imposing a personal liability for a debt upon a person, not a party to the note, is erroneous, and should be modified, as, under such judgment, the plaintiff could enter a deficiency judgment against such person; and the plaintiff cannot be heard to say that he will not avail himself of this power. Garretson Investment Co. v. Arndt, 144 Cal. 64; 77 Pac. 770.

Deficiency judgment may be given when. The provision of this section for a deficiency judgment is constitutional; and the court is warranted in providing, in the decree of foreclosure, for the entry of a deficiency judgment for any residue of the note left unpaid after the sale. County Bank v. Goldtree, 129 Cal. 160; 61 Pac. 785. The mortgaged property constitutes a fund which must first be exhausted before a personal judgment can be had against the mortgagor. Bull v. Coe, 77 Cal. 54; 11 Am. St. Rep. 235; 18 Pac. 808; Lavenson v. Standard Soap Co., 80 Cal. 245; 13 Am. St. Rep. 147; 22 Pac. 184; Hall v. Arnott, 80 Cal. 348; 22 Pac. 200. It is not necessary to give effect to the evident intent of the legislature, that there can be no deficiency judgment without a sale under a decree of foreclosure and a formal return by the sheriff, but whenever an application of the primary fund and a deficit remaining exist, and can only be reasonably ascertained by other means, these facts are not to be ignored because made apparent in another way. Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550. In foreclosure proceedings, it is error for the court to enter a mere money judgment against the defendant for the amount ascertained to be due on the note; until after a sale of the mortgaged premises, there can be no personal judgment docketed against him. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478; 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; 26 Pac. 1074; Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Thornton, 109 Cal. 429; 50 Am. St. Rep. 53; 42 Pac. 447; Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 36; 54 Pac. 273; Meyer v. Weber, 133 Cal. 684; 65 Pac. 1110. Until the decree is entered for the sale of the mortgaged premises, the mortgagor cannot legally be compelled to pay any part of it, no matter what the form of the debt, and the liability which then accrues to him is a liability to pay only the deficiency, which appears on the sheriff's return. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609; Brown v. Willis, 67 Cal. 235; 7 Pac. 682; McKean v. German-American Sav. Bank, 118 Cal. 334; 50 Pac. 656. The return of the sheriff fixes the amount for which the deficiency judgment shall be rendered, which must always follow and depend upon the decree for the sale of the premises. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609. The judgment creditor is not concluded by the sheriff's report from having a deficiency computed and docketed against his judgment debtor after the sheriff's return. Hooper v. McDade, 1 Cal. App. 733; 82 Pac. 1116. Where a receiver was appointed in an action to foreclose a mortgage on a steamer, and afterwards sold the same pendente lite, under authority of the court on a showing that the steamer was deteriorating in value, the court is warranted in awarding a personal judgment against the mortgagor and execution for the deficiency, without the necessity of a sale under a decree of foreclosure. Toby v. Oregon Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490; 33 Pac. 550. The mortgagee may not, without the consent of the mortgagor, release part of his security to a purchaser from the mortgagor, at less than its value, and then look to the mortgagor to make up the deficiency: a personal judgment is not authorized for a deficiency arising from a sale of part of the mortgaged premises; if the mortgagee could release part of the security, he could release all of it, and thus defeat the purpose of the law, which is to confine him to one action and to his security as a primary fund for the payment of his debt. Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 283; 63 Am. St. Rep. 108; 51 Pac. 2. If, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, a partnership is sued originally as one of the parties defendant, but in an amended complaint the members of such partnership are named individually as defendants, and the partnership is not named therein as a defendant, a deficiency judgment against the partnership is erroneous, and the fact that the original complaint and summons were served upon the partnership is immaterial. La Société Française v. Wiedmann, 97 Cal. 507; 32 Pac. 583. A personal judgment for a deficiency cannot be docketed against a defendant served by publication only; though no valid judgment can be entered for a deficiency against a nonresident mortgagor, yet the deficiency constitutes a subsisting indebtedness, upon which an action may be brought after the mortgage security has been exhausted by a foreclosure sale. Blumberg v. Birch, 99 Cal. 416; 37 Am. St. Rep. 67; 34 Pac. 102. A note secured by mortgage on property in another state may be sued on in this state, and a personal judgment recovered after foreclosure of the mortgage in such state, and deficiency entered. Felton v. West, 102 Cal. 266; 36 Pac. 676. The particular mode of entering a personal judgment for a deficiency is not an important matter in the policy embodied in this section, which is designed to prevent a multiplicity of suits and to compel the creditor to exhaust his security first; and such mode is a privilege given to the mortgagee. Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 28; 54 Pac. 273.

Docketing of judgment for deficiency. Until the judgment is docketed for the balance due the plaintiff, it does not become a lien on the real property of the judgment debtor. Culver v. Rogers, 28 Cal. 520; and see Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403; Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511; Frost v. Meetz, 52 Cal. 664. An adjudication of personal liability is necessary to authorize the clerk to docket a judgment for a deficiency. Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55; 65 Pac. 139; Scamman v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 93; 62 Am. St. Rep. 226; 50 Pac. 272. It is not the duty of the clerk, when the sheriff files a report of his sale showing a deficiency, to docket a judgment for such deficiency, without any request so to do from the party interested. Hooper v. McDade, 1 Cal. App. 733; 82 Pac. 1116.

Action for deficiency. When a deficiency exists after a sale regularly made under a trust deed to secure a promissory note, the payee thereof, after having credited upon the note the amount received from the sale, less the costs of sale, may maintain an action at law against the maker to recover the balance due upon the note. Sacramento Bank v. Copsey, 133 Cal. 663; 85 Am. St. Rep. 242; 66 Pac. 8; Herbert Kraft Co. v. Bryan, 140 Cal. 73; 73 Pac. 745. Where a mortgage is given to secure the entire payment of notes, pending an attachment suit upon them, in which a portion of the mortgaged property is levied upon, by the terms of which mortgage the time for the payment of the notes was extended for one year, if the mortgagee continues to enforce the notes in the attachment suit, and sells the attached property thereunder, he waives the right to foreclose the mortgage, and cannot maintain a separate suit to foreclose it for any deficiency remaining after the sale of the attached property. Commercial Bank v. Kershner, 120 Cal. 495; 52 Pac. 848.

Attacks on judgment. In an action to set aside a judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage on land, the failure of the complaint to allege, specifically, the name of the court in which the judgment was given, or the date of the judgment, does not render the complaint insufficient. Flood v. Templeton, 152 Cal. 159; 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 579; 92 Pac. 78. Any defect in a judgment of foreclosure, in using the word "referee," instead of "commissioner," employed in this section, is not available to the defendant upon a collateral attack. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boyd, 155 Cal. 193; 100 Pac. 239.

Equitable relief from judgment. Equity will give relief from a judgment in foreclosure proceedings, obtained by extrinsic or collateral fraud, but not where the fraud charged relates to matters upon which the judgment was regularly obtained, and where an opportunity was given to the party against whom it was entered to contest the matters in issue, or to present any available defense. Flood

v. Templeton, 152 Cal. 148; 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 579; 92 Pac. 78. A mistake in a mortgage, though the mortgage has been foreclosed, and the mistake has been carried into the judgment and the deed, may be corrected by a suit in equity. Bacon v. Bacon, 150 Cal. 477; 89 Pac. 317; Busey v. Moraga, 130 Cal. 586; 62 Pac. 1081.

Validity of order of sale. The direction of an order of sale, to the sheriff, is a harmless irregularity, where it plainly appears that the court intended its order to be executed by a commissioner, as in fact it was: the commissioner has the same powers as the sheriff. Taylor v. Ellenberger, 6 Cal. Unrep. 725; 65 Pac. 832. The omission of the seal of the court from an order of sale under a decree of foreclosure is, at the most, erroneous. Hager v. Astorg, 145 Cal. 548; 104 Am. St. Rep. 68; 79 Pac. 68.

When sale should be made. Where a trust mortgage to secure bondholders is foreclosed by the trustees, and there is no provision in the decree for delaying the sale of the mortgaged property, the trustees should proceed without unreasonable delay to have the decree executed; and upon their failure to do so, the court should, upon the application of a defendant, who is a large bondholder, and the owner of the mortgaged property, and interested in the execution of the decree, direct that its execution be proceeded with. Thomas v. San Diego College Co., 111 Cal. 358; 43 Pac. 965; Rowe v. Blake, 112 Cal. 637; 44 Pac. 1084.

Sale by commissioner. It is not an abuse of discretion for the commissioner, appointed to make a sale in foreclosure proceedings, to postpone the sale, where no reason appears why it should be postponed. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832. Where the decree follows the description in the mortgage, and is assented to by the defendant's attorney, and the order of sale follows the decree, it is the duty of the commissioner, in making the sale, to follow the decree and the order of sale. Meux v. Trezevant, 132 Cal. 487; 64 Pac. 848.

How property should be sold. The court may, under its power to direct the sale, direct how it shall be made; and where the judgment contains specific directions, they must be followed by the officer; the question is, not what the decree should have been, but what it is, and any sale made under it, not authorized by its terms, cannot stand. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. In an action of foreclosure upon several parcels of land, where the pleadings contain no allegation concerning the order in which the parcels should be sold, and the prayer of the complaint is a general one, it is error for the court, in its decree, to prescribe a particular order in which the parcels shall be sold. Carmichael v. McGillivray, 57 Cal. 8. In an action to foreclose a mortgage covering several adjoining tracts of land, the court has jurisdiction to provide, in the judgment, for a sale of the mortgaged premises in one parcel; and a sale so made, if in other respects fair, will not be set aside on the ground that the mortgagor requested the sheriff, at the time of the sale, to sell the land in separate tracts. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. The foreclosure of three mortgages, and a general judgment for the aggregate of the amounts due on them, where two of such mortgages were on the same real estate and the other was on personal property, is unauthorized: the real and the personal property should be ordered to be sold separately for the amounts ascertained to be due upon each. Taylor v. Ellenberger, 128 Cal. 111; 60 Pac. 1034. Where each distinct parcel is first offered for sale separately, and no bids are received, the property may then be offered and sold as a whole, and the sale will be upheld, unless other reasons appear for setting it aside. Marston v. White, 91 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 588; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812; Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902. It must be assumed from the fact that the sheriff was unable to sell the several parcels separately, and could only sell them as a whole that the lands were more valuable taken together than separately. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 121 Cal. 339; 53 Pac. 812. Lessees, whose rights are subsequent to the mortgage, have the right, upon foreclosure proceedings, to set up their lease, and to ask, in their answer, that the portion of the mortgaged premises unaffected by the lease be sold first, and that the lessees be allowed to redeem from any sale of the leased premises, or any part thereof. Mack v. Shafer, 135 Cal. 113; 67 Pac. 40. The owner of a right of way over mortgaged premises, subordinate to the mortgage, has the right, upon foreclosure of the mortgage, to have it explicitly ordered that the portion of the mortgaged premises not covered by the right of way shall be first sold, and that the right of way shall only be sold in case of deficiency. Merced Security Sav. Bank v. Simon, 141 Cal. 11; 74 Pac. 356. Where trustees have, by the terms of a deed of trust, a discretion to sell as a whole or in parcels, a manifest abuse of such discretion authorizes the disaffirmance of a sale made by them. Humboldt Sav. Bank v. McCleverty, 161 Cal. 285; 119 Pac. 82. Where the parties to the action of foreclosure consent that the officer making the sale shall disregard the express directions of the judgment as to the form and manner of the sale, they will not afterwards be permitted to object to such disregard. Humboldt Sav. & L. Soc. v. March, 136 Cal. 321; 68 Pac. 968. A discretion, given in a deed of trust, to sell the property as a whole or in parcels, must be exercised in good faith, for the best interests not only of the creditor, but also of the debtor and his successors in interest. Humboldt Sav. Bank v. McCleverty, 161 Cal. 285; 119 Pac. 82.

Proceeds of sale. The proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises constitute the primary fund out of which the mortgage debt must be paid. Porter v. Muller, 65 Cal. 512; 4 Pac. 531. In an action for an indebtedness secured by mortgage, the mortgaged premises must first be applied to the satisfaction of the debt, and there is no personal liability on the part of the mortgagor, unless the security proves insufficient to satisfy the debt. Moore v. Gould, 151 Cal. 723; 91 Pac. 616; Kinsel v. Ballou, 151 Cal. 754; 91 Pac. 620.

When sales will be vacated. A party to an action cannot claim an absolute right to have a sale on foreclosure vacated, unless he shows that he has sustained some injury by reason of the irregularity complained of. Humboldt Sav. & L. Soc. v. March, 136 Cal. 321; 68 Pac. 968. A sale under a foreclosure decree is void, only when it is conducted in a manner prohibited by the statute or by the directions of the decree. Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75. When a party comes into court and asks to set aside a sale, the burden is upon him to show such an irregularity or material departure from the statute as will justify the court in setting it aside. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832. A stranger to the action will not be permitted to intrude himself into the controversy, unless he clearly shows that he has some interest in the property sold, and also that, by reason of the manner in which the sale was conducted, he will be injuriously affected if the sale is permitted to stand. Humboldt Sav. & L. Soc. v. March, 136 Cal. 321; 68 Pac. 968. The rule undoubtedly is, to consider every fair sale as final; and upon an application for a resale, the rights of the purchaser will be taken into account, and will prevail when the sale has been fair and free from fraud. Hopkins v. Wiard, 72 Cal. 259; 13 Pac. 687. The fact that a commissioner made an invalid sale, which the court set aside for insufficiency of notice, cannot invalidate a sale afterwards made upon due notice; and the fact that a wrong date was first published cannot affect the sale, where an amended notice was sufficiently published prior to the sale. May v. Hatcher, 130 Cal. 627; 63 Pac. 33. Whether a motion to vacate a sale of property, made in execution of a judgment, on account of some irregularity on the part of the officer making the sale, should be granted, rests very largely in the discretion of the court before which the motion is made; and it is immaterial whether such irregularity consists in disregarding the provisions of the statute for making the sale or in failing to observe and follow some express direction in the judgment. Humboldt Sav. & L. Soc. v. March, 136 Cal. 321; 68 Pac. 968. Upon a motion to set aside a sale of property in one parcel, where it is shown that the property was sold for its full cash value, and that it would not have brought so much if sold in separate lots, the motion is properly denied. Meux v. Trezevant, 132 Cal. 487; 68 Pac. 848. The statute requiring separate sales of separate parcels of real property under execution applies to sales under a decree of foreclosure, where the decree is silent as to the manner or order in which the separate parcels shall be sold; it does not render a sale of separate parcels en masse, in disregard of its requirements, absolutely void, but merely voidable, and, on timely application, such sale will ordinarily be set aside. Marston v. White, 91 Cal. 37; 27 Pac. 588; Bechtel v. Wier, 152 Cal. 443; 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 549; 93 Pac. 75. Inadequacy of price is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a judicial sale, the judgment creditor being allowed to redeem. Connick v. Hill, 127 Cal. 162; 59 Pac. 832; and see Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Creed, 70 Cal. 497; 11 Pac. 772; Humboldt Sav. & L. Soc. v. March, 136 Cal. 321; 68 Pac. 968; Anglo-California Bank v. Cerf, 142 Cal. 303; 75 Pac. 902; Summerville v. March, 142 Cal. 554; 100 Am. St. Rep. 145; 76 Pac. 388.

Duty and power of sheriff. It is no part of the duty of a sheriff, as such, in the absence of statutory provision, to sell property under a foreclosure sale. McDermot v. Barton, 106 Cal. 194; 39 Pac. 538. The sheriff may, by virtue of his office and the general powers given him, execute a foreclosure decree under a writ issued to him, without other appointment by the court, and he may do so even without any writ; naming him in the decree confers no new powers upon him, but merely authorizes the exercise, in the particular case, of such powers as he already possesses. Granger v. Sheriff, 140 Cal. 190; 73 Pac. 816. The sheriff has no duty to perform in the case of a sale of real property under foreclosure, where the court appoints a commissioner to make such sale. McDermot v. Barton, 106 Cal. 194; 39 Pac. 538.

Statute of limitations. To establish a new contract for the purpose of taking a case out of the statute, there must be a promise to pay, or an acknowledgment from which a promise is necessarily implied, and such promise or acknowledgment must be made to the creditor himself. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609. The running of the statute begins on the maturity of the note, and not on default in payment of the interest, where the mortgage provides that on default in payment of interest the whole sum shall become due. Richards v. Daley, 116 Cal. 336; 48 Pac. 220. Where the debt secured by the mortgage is barred by the statute of limitations, the mortgage is also barred. Newhall v. Sherman, 124 Cal. 509; 57 Pac. 387. A mortgage barred by the statute is not renewed by a renewal of the note secured. Wells v. Harter, 56 Cal. 342. The renewal of the note by the mortgagor, who has sold the mortgaged property to a purchaser who agrees to pay the mortgage debt, and who thereafter retransfers such property to the mortgagor, does not give the mortgagee the right to foreclose his mortgage against such property, after the statute of limitations has run against such mortgage, although such note was not barred by the statute: the mortgagee could not take a decree for the sale, because of the statute; he could not take a personal judgment for a deficiency, because such deficiency could be ascertained only after a decree for the sale of the premises and the return of such sale. Biddel v. Brizzolara, 64 Cal. 354; 30 Pac. 609. Where a second foreclosure suit is begun much less than four years after the cause of action accrues, no question can arise as to the effect of laches, or as to the sufficiency of any excuses therefor. Ludwig v. Murphy, 143 Cal. 473; 77 Pac. 150. Although a mortgage sought to be foreclosed may not be barred, as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, by reason of the absence of the mortgagor from the state, yet where it appears to be barred by the statute, the holders of subsequent judgment liens may plead the statute as to their liens, and may enforce them as superior and paramount to the lien of the mortgage. Brandenstein v. Johnson, 140 Cal. 29; 73 Pac. 744. Where a husband and wife executed a mortgage upon their homestead declared on community property, the presentation of a claim against the estate of the deceased husband, and the allowance thereof, has only the effect of suspending the running of the statute as against the estate, but does not have that effect as against the surviving wife, upon whom the title to the homestead devolved absolutely upon the death of her husband; and both she and her successor in interest may plead the bar of the statute in foreclosure proceedings against them, if not brought within four years after the maturity of the mortgage. Vandall v. Teague, 142 Cal. 471; 75 Pac. 35. The right of the mortgagor to redeem is barred by the statute at the same time that the right of the mortgagee to foreclose is barred. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. The manner of enforcing a judgment of foreclosure is prescribed by this section, and every process that may be required to enforce it must be taken out within five years after its entry: a judgment for a deficiency does not become a new and independent judgment by being docketed. Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621.

Res adjudicata. The only issue tendered to a junior mortgagee by making him a party to a suit to foreclose, brought by the prior mortgagee, is in the allegation that the right or claim of the junior mortgagee is subject to the lien claimed by the plaintiff in the foreclosure suit; and as to any possible defense such junior mortgagee may have to that issue so tendered, he is concluded by the decree, whether he appears or not. Savings Bank v. Central Market Co., 122 Cal. 28; 54 Pac. 273. Where the complaint in foreclosure sets forth the facts upon which an adverse claimant, made defendant, bases his claim of title, and he allows issues to be tried thereon without objection, he is concluded by the judgment. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958. Where parties having a title prior, adverse, and paramount to that of the mortgage were made parties defendant to the foreclosure thereof, under the usual allegations of the complaint that the defendants, other than the mortgagor, claim some interest in the premises, and that such interest is subsequent and subordinate to that created by the mortgage, without setting forth the particulars of the defendant's claim, or showing that it was prior in time to the mortgage, the judgment of foreclosure does not become res adjudicata as to the prior adverse title of the plaintiffs. Beronio v. Ventura County Lumber Co., 129 Cal. 232; 79 Am. St. Rep. 118; 61 Pac. 958.

Appeal. A stay bond in double the amount for which the premises are to be sold is unreasonable, on appeal by the mortgagee from the decree of foreclosure: a bond for waste, use and occupation, and deficiency, is all that is required, other than the three-hundred-dollar bond, on appeal. Boob v. Hall, 105 Cal. 413; 38 Pac. 977. On appeal from a judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon personal property, an undertaking in the sum of three hundred dollars is sufficient to stay the execution of the judgment, pending the appeal. Snow v. Holmes, 64 Cal. 232; 30 Pac. 806. Where the decree, as entered by the court, ordered the encumbered property to be sold by the sheriff, while the order made and entered on the same day appointed a commissioner to discharge the same duty, there is a mere oversight by the court, not calling for an appeal, which may be remedied by a motion to amend and correct the decree. McDermot v. Barton, 106 Cal. 194; 39 Pac. 538. The appellate court will not, in the first instance, allow counsel fees to the respondent mortgagee, none having been fixed by the court below on account of the appeal. Fender v. Robinson, 135 Cal. 26; 66 Pac. 969.

Terms defined, distinguished, and explained. A trust deed has no feature in common with a mortgage, except that it is executed to secure an indebtedness; and a suit for foreclosure and sale does not lie, if the contract is, that, upon default, the trustee shall sell upon the happening of a certain event: there is no equity to foreclose. Koch v. Briggs, 14 Cal. 256; 73 Am. Dec. 651; Fuquay v. Stickney, 41 Cal. 583; Whitmore v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 50 Cal. 145; Grant v. Burr, 54 Cal. 298; Durkin v. Burr, 60 Cal. 360; Savings and Loan Society v. Deering, 66 Cal. 281; 5 Pac. 353; Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470; 12 Pac. 480; More v. Calkins, 95 Cal. 435; 29 Am. St. Rep. 28; 30 Pac. 583; Savings etc. Soc. v. Burnett, 106 Cal. 514; 39 Pac. 922; Herbert Kraft Co. v. Bryan, 140 Cal. 73; 73 Pac. 745. The distinction between a mortgage and a pledge is clearly recognized by the Civil Code: in the case of a pledge, the pledgee may resort to a judicial sale, or he may sell on notice without suit, the latter remedy not being given in the case of mortgage. This section refers, in terms, to mortgages only, and contains nothing to prevent a pledgee from having his action to recover the debt without first exhausting the subject of the pledge. Ehrlich v. Ewald, 66 Cal. 97; 4 Pac. 1062; Savings Bank v. Middlekauff, 113 Cal. 463; 45 Pac. 840. A lien on personal property may exist in many forms, other than by way of mortgage; and although every mortgage is a lien, yet every lien is not a mortgage: the essential element of a mortgage is a transfer or conveyance of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor to the mortgagee. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189; 81 Pac. 1029. The word "security," as used in this section, does not import that the security shall be adequate, but has reference only to the purport of the mortgage as it appears on its face. Barbieri v. Ramelli, 84 Cal. 154; 23 Pac. 1086. Where the judgment on foreclosure provides for the appointment of a "referee" to make the sale, the so-called "referee" is practically the "commissioner" provided for in this section. CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Mortgage, defined. Civ. Code, § 2920, and note.

2. Must be in writing. Civ. Code, § 2922, and note.

3. Lien, when special. Civ. Code, § 2923, and note.

4. What transfer is deemed a mortgage. Civ. Code, § 2925, and note.

5. Conveyance absolute may be shown by parol to have been intended as a security. Civ. Code, § 2925, and note; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 61; Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28; Hughes v. Davis, 40 Cal. 119.

6. Mortgage is a lien upon everything that would pass by grant. Civ. Code, §§ 2926, 2947, and notes.

7. Right of the mortgagee to possession. Civ. Code, § 2927, and note.

8. Power of sale in mortgage. Civ. Code, § 2932, and note; Cormerais v. Genella, 22 Cal. 116; Blockley v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 326; 82 Am. Dec. 747.

9. Assignment of mortgage carries debt. Civ. Code, § 2936, and note.

10. Mortgage does not pass the title. Civ. Code, § 2888; Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 221.

11. Parties to the action. The foreclosure of the first mortgage, in an action to which the holder of a junior mortgage was not a party, does not affect the right of the latter; but the purchaser at the sale under the first mortgage acquires the legal title, subject only to the lien of the junior mortgage. Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 221. If one purchase the mortgaged premises, pending the foreclosure action, before or after final judgment, with notice, the judgment is binding upon him, and there is no ground for setting aside the sale or opening the judgment. Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 391. The grantee of mortgaged premises is not affected by the sale under the mortgage, if the foreclosure action was commenced after the conveyance to the grantee, unless he is a party to the action. Bludworth v. Lake, 33 Cal. 265. Subsequent encumbrancers are proper but not necessary parties. Carpentier v. Brenham, 40 Cal. 221. Where one partner executes a mortgage upon his separate property to secure a debt of the firm, an action to foreclose the mortgage may, after the death of the mortgagor, be maintained against his executor, without any showing by the plaintiff that the partnership is insolvent, or that he has pursued his remedy upon the debt against the surviving partner. Savings and Loan Society v. Gibb, 21 Cal. 595. If the real holders of the title are not parties to the action, a court of equity will allow them to be made such by a supplemental complaint, if application be made within a reasonable time. Heyman v. Lowell, 23 Cal. 106; see notes to §§ 369, 378, 379, ante.

12. Actions against executors and administrators. The creditor of the estate of a deceased person, whose debt is secured by mortgage, may, after having presented his claim for allowance to the executor, whether it be allowed or rejected, proceed to foreclose his mortgage in the district court. Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 499; Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 24; 81 Am. Dec. 140; Pechaud v. Rinquet, 21 Cal. 76.

13. Action on a debt payable in installments. In a foreclosure suit, the debt being evidenced by a promissory note not due, but upon which the interest was payable monthly, a judgment directing the sale of the premises and the application of the proceeds to the payment of the principal and interest, was held erroneous; the judgment should have been for the sale of so much of the premises as might be necessary to satisfy the interest then due. Hunt v. Dohrs, 39 Cal. 305. If the debt is payable in installments, the mortgagee or his assignee may maintain an action to foreclose the mortgage when the first installment falls due and is not paid. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; see § 728, post; Taggart v. San Antonio Ridge etc. Mining Co., 18 Cal. 460.

14. Form of judgment. All that a judgment under this section need or should contain is:

1. A statement of the amount due the plaintiff;

2. A designation of the defendants who are personally liable for the payment of the debt;

3. A direction that the mortgaged premises (describing them), or so much thereof as may be necessary, be sold according to law, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the expenses of the sale, the costs of the action, and the debt.

Nothing further is required. All else is ministerial, and is expressly regulated by statute, which is not made clearer or more binding by being copied into the judgment. There is, under our system, no master in chancery,—no master's report.—and no confirmation of the sale by the court. That mode of procedure is wholly foreign to our system. Under our system, the sheriff is furnished with a certified copy of the judgment. Armed with this process, he proceeds to sell the mortgaged premises in the mode and manner, and at the place, designated in the code, for the sale of real property under judicial process, and makes return of his proceedings, as in case of an execution upon a money judgment. If it appears from his return that the amount due the plaintiff has not been fully paid by the sale, the clerk then dockets judgment for the balance due against those defendants named in the judgment as being personally liable for the debt, without any order from the court. Per Sanderson, J., in Leviston v. Swan, 33 Cal. 483. A personal judgment cannot be rendered against a defendant until the balance due is ascertained by the sheriff's return. Hunt v. Dohrs, 39 Cal. 304. Cases in which it was held that a personal judgment might be taken (but compare these with cases cited, supra, and statutes existing at the time of the decisions): Rowland v. Leiby, 14 Cal. 156; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 348; Comerais v. Genella, 22 Cal. 116; Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403. The omission of the words "be sold" will not affect the judgment. Moore v. Semple, 11 Cal. 360. A judgment for the sale of the premises, where the mortgagor has transferred his estate in the premises previous to the institution of the suit, and his grantee was not made a party, is void, so far as it orders a sale. Bogga v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 559; 76 Am. Dec. 561. Where defendants claiming adversely are in possession, a judgment directing upon the sale a conveyance of the fee and a delivery of possession to the purchaser, and conferring upon him, until redemption made, the right to recover the rents, issues, and profits of the land, is erroneous. In such case, the decree must be limited to a sale of the rights and interests which the mortgagor possessed at the date of his mortgage, leaving the purchaser to assert his right to the possession, after receiving his conveyance by action. San Francisco v. Lawton, 21 Cal. 589; 18 Cal. 465; 79 Am. Dec. 187; Elias v. Verdugo, 27 Cal. 420; Kelsey v. Abbott, 13 Cal. 609. The judgment should not apportion the debt among the several co-tenants of the land who acquired undivided interests therein at the same time, and subsequently to the execution of the mortgage. Perre v. Castro, 14 Cal. 531; 76 Am. Dec. 444. Where the proceedings were delayed by agreement, in consideration of the execution of a second mortgage on other property, in which third parties joined as additional security, and, subsequently, plaintiff filed a supplemental complaint, setting up the second mortgage, and asking a sale of the premises described in both mortgages, judgment was taken by default for the debt, and the court decreed a foreclosure of the several mortgages and a sale of the property conveyed, and directed that the property described in the mortgage executed by Reynolds should be first offered for sale; but that no bid should be received for a less sum than the full amount of judgment and costs. If this sum was not bid, then the whole property included in the two mortgages—from Reynolds and from Kirk and Reynolds—was to be sold together. The judgment was, on appeal, held erroneous. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14. A was indebted to B, to secure which indebtedness the latter held the promissory note of the former, and it was agreed that A should give a mortgage upon real estate to secure the indebtedness, and that B should give up and cancel the notes, and waive all claim upon the personal responsibility of A. It was held, that, in an action to foreclose the mortgage, B was not entitled to a personal judgment against A for any balance which should remain unpaid after the sale of the mortgaged premises. Moore v. Reynolds, 1 Cal. 351. The judgment should not direct that the sheriff execute a deed to the purchaser on the sale, the land sold being subject to redemption in six months. Harlan v. Smith, 6 Cal. 174. If the judgment is by default, the relief given should not exceed that demanded in the complaint. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14. A referee may be appointed to compute the amount due. Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 416.

15. Special cases in which relief from erroneous or void judgments were granted. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87; Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 566; 76 Am. Dec. 561; Leviston v. Swan, 33 Cal. 483; Phelan v. Olney, 6 Cal. 478; Raun v. Reynolds, 15 Cal. 468.

16. Effect of judgment. See subd. 11 of this note. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Shores v. Scott River Co., 21 Cal. 135; Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103; 81 Am. Dec. 146; Branham v. Mayor and Common Council, 24 Cal. 585; San Francisco v. Lawton, 18 Cal. 465; 79 Am. Dec. 187; Bludworth v. Lake, 33 Cal. 265; Skinner v. Buck, 29 Cal. 253; Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87; Christy v. Dana, 34 Cal. 548.

17. Effect of death of mortgagor after judgment. Nagle v. Macy, 9 Cal. 426; Cowell v. Buckelew, 14 Cal. 640.

18. Order of sale. Sheriff cannot make the sale without an order of sale. Heyman v. Babcock, 30 Cal. 367. Copy of judgment constitutes the order. Leviston v. Swan, 33 Cal. 483. Alias order may issue. Shores v. Scott River Water Co., 17 Cal. 626. Statute of limitations, how far applicable. Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621.

19. Sale. Property must be sold in parcels, and property included in the first mortgage should be exhausted before recourse is had to the second. Raun v. Reynolds, 11 Cal. 14; Shores v. Scott River Water Co., 17 Cal. 629. Sale should be made by the sheriff, unless the judgment contains directions to the contrary. Heyman v. Babcock, 30 Cal. 367.

20. Costs and counsel fees. Where the mortgage provided for the payment of costs and counsel fees, not exceeding five per cent on the amount due, it was held that the limitation applied to counsel fees alone. Gronfier v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 492. See Carrière v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 435.

21. Redemption. Generally. Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 307; Dewey v. Latson, 6 Cal. 609; McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; 70 Am. Dec. 655; McDermott v. Burke, 16 Cal. 580; Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540; Daubenspeck v. Platt, 22 Cal. 330; Bludworth v. Lake, 33 Cal. 255–265; Alexander v. Greenwood, 24 Cal. 506; Cowing v. Rogers, 34 Cal. 648; Espinosa v. Gregory, 40 Cal. 61; Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28; Hughes v. Davis, 40 Cal. 119; Cunningham v. Hawkins, 24 Cal. 403; 85 Am. Dec. 73; 27 Cal. 603.

22. Writs of assistance. A writ of assistance is the proper remedy to place the purchaser in possession, after sheriff's deed. Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 677; 76 Am. Dec. 459; Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 190; Wolf v. Fleischacker, 5 Cal. 244; 63 Am. Dec. 121; Skinner v. Beatty, 16 Cal. 156; Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103; 81 Am. Dec. 146. When it will be issued. Frisbie v. Fogarty, 34 Cal. 11; Skinner v. Beatty, 16 Cal. 156; Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103; 81 Am. Dec. 146; Montgomery v. Byers, 21 Cal. 107. It will be issued, although the judgment contain no direction to that effect. Horn v. Volcano Water Co., 18 Cal. 141; Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103; 81 Am. Dec. 146. When it will not be issued. Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87; Harlan v. Rackerby, 24 Cal. 561; Steinbach v. Leese, 27 Cal. 295; Chapman v. Thornburg, 23 Cal. 48.

23. Receivers in mortgage cases. See subd. 3 of note to § 564 of this code.

24. Collateral attacks. The title acquired by the purchaser under a foreclosure sale cannot be impeached collaterally for irregularity in the proceedings on sale. Nagle v. Macy, 9 Cal. 426. Generally. Alderson v. Bell, 9 Cal. 321; Hayes v. Shattuck, 21 Cal. 51.

25. Grantees of the mortgagor may plead statutes of limitations. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; McCarthy v. White, 21 Cal. 495; 82 Am. Dec. 754; Low v. Allen, 26 Cal. 141; Lent v. Shear, 26 Cal. 361.

26. Caveat emptor. How far applicable to foreclosure sales. Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 564; 76 Am. Dec. 561.

27. Generally. Mortgage of public lands, when title is subsequently acquired. Christy v. Dana, 34 Cal. 548. If, through inadvertence or mistake, satisfaction of mortgage has been entered of record, a judgment, foreclosing the mortgage without first setting aside the satisfaction, is erroneous. Russell v. Mixer, 39 Cal. 504. Whether a tender by a subsequent mortgagee, of the sum due on the prior mortgage, if made after the law-day of the mortgage, without keeping the tender good, was discussed, but not decided, in Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223. If, at the time of the making of a promissory note, the maker also gives the payee a bill of sale of personal property by way of mortgage to secure the note, and also delivers possession of the property, the maker has a right to have the property mortgaged applied in satisfaction of the debt; and if the payee sells any of the property, he has a right to have the proceeds or value applied toward the satisfaction of the debt. McGarvey v. Hall, 23 Cal. 140. A commenced an action against B to foreclose a mortgage given to secure a debt. On motion of A's attorney, the prayer for foreclosure of the mortgage and sale of the property was stricken out and a money judgment taken. On appeal, it was held that this was an abandonment and waiver of A's right to a foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged property. Ladd v. Ruggles, 23 Cal. 232. The mortgagee of real estate can maintain an action to recover damages for wrongful and fraudulent injuries done to the mortgaged property, by which security of the mortgage has been impaired. Robinson v. Russell, 24 Cal. 472; Buckout v. Swift, 27 Cal. 434; 87 Am. Dec. 90.

§ 727. Surplus money to be deposited in court. If there be surplus money remaining, after payment of the amount due on the mortgage, lien, or encumbrance, with costs, the court may cause the same to be paid to the person entitled to it, and in the mean time may direct it to be deposited in court.

Deposit in court. Ante, §§ 572, 573, 574.

Legislation § 727. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 247.

§ 728. Proceedings when debt secured falls due at different times. If the debt for which the mortgage, lien, or encumbrance is held is not all due, so soon as sufficient of the property has been sold to pay the amount due, with costs, the sale must cease; and afterwards, as often as more becomes due, for principal or interest, the court may, on motion, order more to be sold. But if the property cannot be sold in portions, without injury to the parties, the whole may be ordered to be sold in the first instance, and the entire debt and costs paid, there being a rebate of interest where such rebate is proper.

Legislation § 728. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 248, changing (1) "be" to "is" before "not all due," and (2) "shall" to "must" before "cease."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. The failure to sell any portion of the mortgaged property, under a decree of sale for a first installment of interest, will not prevent a sale of the whole property, on motion, when the unmatured portion of the note falls due: the provisions of this section make for the benefit of the debtor, to prevent the sale of more of his property than is necessary to pay the amount due, and not to impose upon him the cost of several sales. Bank of Napa v. Godfrey, 77 Cal. 612; 20 Pac. 142. This section does not apply to a case where an installment secured by the mortgage falls due after the mortgage has been enforced for an installment due at an earlier date. McDougal v. Downey, 45 Cal. 165; Higgins v. San Diego Sav. Bank, 129 Cal. 184; 61 Pac. 943. Where the judgment fails to provide for the sale of any portion of the mortgaged premises upon a subsequent default in principal or interest, this section supplies such omission, and authorizes further orders of the court until the entire mortgaged premises are sold in satisfaction of the debt; and the action of the court in ordering a sale of the property to satisfy installments as they become due, subsequently to decreeing foreclosure in amount originally found due, is not a further judgment in such action, but is only an order after judgment. Byrne v. Hoag, 126 Cal. 283; 58 Pac. 688.

Maturity of principal or interest of mortgage debt. Where the mortgage is given to secure the payment of the principal sum of a note five years after its maturity, with interest at the specified rate, according to the terms and conditions of a promissory note, which make the interest payable annually, and if interest is not so paid, to draw interest the same as the principal, but no provision is made for the collection of the note, or for the foreclosure of the mortgage before the maturity of the note, the mortgagee has no right to foreclose until its maturity. Van Loo v. Van Aken, 104 Cal. 269; 37 Pac. 925; and see Yoakam v. White, 97 Cal. 286; 32 Pac. 238. Where the first mortgagee commenced his action to foreclose his mortgage, making the second mortgagee defendant, and, pending the action, assigned his mortgage to the second mortgagee, who was substituted as plaintiff, and who sought to foreclose both mortgages in an amended complaint, the court, in its decree, may properly provide for the sale of the premises to satisfy the second mortgage, although it did not become due until after the amended complaint was filed, but was due when the case was tried and the decree entered. Orange Growers' Bank v. Duncan, 133 Cal. 254; 65 Pac. 469; Windt v. Gilleran, 135 Cal. 94; 66 Pac. 970. Where some of the notes secured by mortgage are not due at the commencement of the suit, but become due before trial, the court has jurisdiction to decree a foreclosure to satisfy all of them. Bostwick v. McEvoy, 62 Cal. 496. A judgment for the principal of a promissory note secured by mortgage, and an order for the sale of the mortgaged premises for its payment, is erroneous, where the note was not due when the action was commenced, but judgment may be had for the sale of so much of the mortgaged premises as may be necessary to satisfy the interest due. Hunt v. Dohrs, 39 Cal. 304. Where the mortgage provides for the payment of the note "according to the terms and conditions thereof," and that, "in default of the payment of the note by its terms," the mortgagee may foreclose, and the terms of the note were, that the interest should be payable annually and the principal at the end of five years, the mortgagee has the right to foreclose it, upon a default in the payment of the interest, for the amount of interest due, and need not wait until a default in the payment of the whole note, principal and interest. Yoakam v. White, 97 Cal. 286; 32 Pac. 238; Phelps v. Mayers, 126 Cal. 549; 58 Pac. 1048.

Default in payment of installments. A decree of the court is proper, which provides for a sale of so much of the mortgaged premises as may be necessary to pay the installment due, and that thereafter, as more shall become due, the plaintiff may apply for a decree that more of the mortgaged premises shall be sold. Bank of Napa v. Godfrey, 77 Cal. 612; 20 Pac. 142. Where a note, secured by mortgage, provides for the payment of the principal in installments, and the mortgage provides that in case of failure to make the payments as in the note provided, the property may be sold and the proceeds applied to pay the whole amount of the note, the mortgagee is entitled to foreclose for the full amount of the unpaid installments upon default in the payment of any of them, although, by the terms of the note, some are not due. Maddox v. Wyman, 92 Cal. 674; 28 Pac. 838.

Motion for order of sale. Upon a subsequent default in the payment of principal or interest, the proper practice is to apply by motion, and not by petition, for a sale of more of the mortgaged premises: an amended petition is not authorized, but may be treated as a motion. Bank of Napa v. Godfrey, 77 Cal. 612; 20 Pac. 142; Byrne v. Hoag, 126 Cal. 283; 58 Pac. 688. Where the court does not determine that any sums will be due in the future, and no provision is made in the decree for any future sales of property to meet the installments to become due, a new and independent action should be brought to sell other portions of the land for portions of the debt which subsequently become due; but where the court makes provision for future sales to enforce the payment of further installments, which it determines will be due in future, the simpler and less expensive mode of procedure is provided by motion, by this section. Higgins v. San Diego Sav. Bank, 129 Cal. 184; 61 Pac. 943.

Priority of liens. Where some liens are superior to a mortgage and also to other liens, and the rest are inferior to the mortgage, the decree should provide that prior claimants be paid as if there were no mortgage, and that the residue be applied, first to the mortgage and then to the inferior liens. Burnett v. Glas, 154 Cal. 249; 97 Pac. 423.

Right to successive foreclosures of mortgages payable in installments. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 846.

Proceedings to enforce mortgage for part of debt. See note 37 L. R. A. 737.

Decree in proceeding to enforce mortgage for part of debt. See note 37 L. R. A. 743.

Effect of foreclosure by taking possession before all of mortgage debt due. See note 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 343.

Effect of foreclosure of one of several simultaneous mortgages upon the others. See note 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 524.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16. See subd. 13 of note to § 726, ante.

§ 729. Oath and undertaking of commissioner. Report and account of sale. Compensation of commissioner. The commissioner, before entering upon his duties, must be sworn to perform them faithfully, and the court making the appointment shall require of him an undertaking, with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the court, in an amount to be fixed by the court, to the effect that he will faithfully perform the duties of commissioner, according to law. Within thirty days after such sale, the commissioner must file with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, a verified report and account of the sale, together with the proper affidavits, showing that the regular and required notice of the time and place of the sale was given, which report and account shall have the same force and effect as the sheriff's return in sales under execution. In all cases of sales made by a commissioner, the court in which the proceedings are pending shall fix a reasonable compensation for the commissioner's services, but in no case to exceed the sum of ten dollars.

Legislation § 729. 1. Added by Stats. 1893, p. 119.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Written affidavit of commissioner unnecessary. A motion to vacate a judgment, not void on its face, foreclosing a mortgage, made after the judgment had become final, cannot be entertained upon the ground that no written oath or affidavit of the commissioner who made the sale is on file in the clerk's office: the law does not require the commissioner to make a written affidavit, or to file it anywhere, and it is sufficient if the record shows that he was sworn. May v. Hatcher, 130 Cal. 627; 63 Pac. 33.

Commissioner's return is evidence of sale. A return of the sale of land, made by a commissioner, under this section, is prima facie evidence of such sale. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Boyd, 155 Cal. 193; 100 Pac. 239.

CHAPTER II.

ACTIONS FOR NUISANCE, WASTE, AND WILLFUL TRESPASS, IN CERTAIN CASES, ON REAL PROPERTY.

as the same is defined in section thirty-four hundred and eighty of the Civil Code, by the district attorney of any county in which such nuisance exists, or by the city attorney of any town or city in which such nuisance exists, and each of said officers shall have concurrent right to bring such action for a public nuisance existing within a town or city, and such district attorney, or city attorney, of any county or city in which such nuisance exists must bring such action whenever directed by the board of supervisors of such county or whenever directed by the legislative authority of such town or city.

"Nuisance." definition. Compare Civ. Code, §§ 3470, 3480, 3481; see also Civ. Code, §§ 3482, 3483, 3490.

Such action may be brought by any person whose property is injuriously affected, or whose personal enjoyment is lessened by the nuisance; and by the judgment the nuisance may be enjoined or abated, as well as damages recovered."

Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. A person may not use his own property, even in a business lawful in itself, in such a manner as to interfere with another in the legitimate use of his property. Tuebner v. California Street R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 171; 4 Pac. 1162. Accompanying the ownership of every species of property is the corresponding duty so to use it as that such use shall not be an abuse of the right of others. People v. Gold Run etc. Mining Co., 66 Cal. 138; 56 Am. Rep. 80; 4 Pac. 1152. A franchise from a municipality to a railroad company, to run its cars along the streets of a city does not authorize the company to injure materially the adjoining proprietors in their property rights. Tuebner v. California Street R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 171; 4 Pac. 1162.

Nuisance, what constitutes. The unwarrantable use of property by one person, which works an injury to the right of another in the enjoyment of his own property, produces thereby such material annoyance, discomfort, and inconvenience as, in law, imports damage to such party. Meyer v. Metzler, 51 Cal. 142. Where a business is necessary or useful, it is always presumable that there is a proper place and a proper manner for carrying it on; but it can hardly be said that that is a lawful business which cannot be carried on without detriment to the surrounding population. Tuebner v. California Street R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 171; 4 Pac. 1162. Where one of two owners of adjoining lots erects a brick building on his lot, one wall of which leans so as to prevent the other owner from raising and repairing his own building, such brick wall is a nuisance, and its maintenance imports damage to the other owner, notwithstanding the fact that it is safe and secure. Meyer v. Metzler, 51 Cal. 142. Wrongfully causing water to flow upon another's land, which would not flow there naturally, is to create a nuisance per se: it is an injury to the right in the land, and it cannot be continued because others may have a low estimate of the damage which it causes; and especially is this so, where the continuance of the wrongful act might ripen into a right in the nature of an easement or servitude. Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; 18 Pac. 872; 21 Pac. 11; and see Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 317; 68 Am. Dec. 262; Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 107; Leach v. Day, 27 Cal. 643; More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590; Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62; 28 Pac. 113. A legitimate business, founded upon a local custom, which develops into such a force as to threaten the safety of the people, and destruction to public and private rights, becomes unreasonable, because dangerous to public and private rights, and such custom cannot be invoked to justify the continuance of the business in an unlawful manner. People v. Gold Run Ditch etc. Co., 66 Cal. 138; 56 Am. Rep. 80; 4 Pac. 1152. The fact that the acts complained of are made a misdemeanor, and punishable as such, does not make them any the less a nuisance, nor imply that the legislature intended to make the criminal remedy exclusive of the civil. People v. Truckee Lumber Co., 116 Cal. 397; 58 Am. St. Rep. 183; 39 L. R. A. 581; 48 Pac. 374. Neither the existence of a nuisance nor the right to have it abated depends upon the depreciation in the value of neighboring property. Meek v. De Latour, 2 Cal. App. 261; 83 Pac. 300.

Private action for private nuisance. Where a nuisance in a highway affects only the plaintiff in common with the public at large in the use of the highway, he cannot have his private action; but if the free use of his private property is interfered with by such nuisance, he may have his private action to abate the same, and the question whether such obstructions amount to a nuisance is one of fact for the jury. Blanc v. Klumpke, 29 Cal. 156. A private individual may maintain an action to abate an obstruction, which, while obstructing the public highway, also cuts off access from his premises to the public highway, and thus becomes, as to him, a private nuisance; his complaint being, not that it obstructs the street or road, but that it prevents him from reaching it. Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623; 26 Pac. 1106; and see Aram v. Schallenberger, 41 Cal. 449; San José Ranch Co. v. Brooks, 74 Cal. 463; 16 Pac. 250. An obstruction of a private right of way is a nuisance, and an action may be maintained by the owner of such right of way, and for the abatement of such nuisance, against all persons who participate in maintaining the same, regardless of any interest in the land over which the right of way is claimed; and the special administrators of a deceased owner of such land may be joined as parties defendant, notwithstanding the obstruction was originally placed there by the decedent, of whose estate they are special administrators. Hardin v. Sin Claire, 115 Cal. 460; 47 Pac. 363. A nuisance, the effect of which extends to the dwellings or places of business of other persons to such an extent as to render their occupancy materially uncomfortable, is a private nuisance as to each of them, for which each one thus injured may have a private action, though there are many persons thus affected, and the result will be to promote a multitude of suits. Fisher v. Zumwalt, 128 Cal. 493; 61 Pac. 82; and see Lewiston Turnpike Co. v. Shasta etc. Wagon Road Co., 41 Cal. 562; Payne v. McKinley, 54 Cal. 532; Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248; 1 Am. St. Rep. 51; 13 Pac. 655; McCloskey v. Kreling, 76 Cal. 511; 18 Pac. 433; Gardner v. Stroever, 89 Cal. 26; 26 Pac. 618; Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623; 26 Pac. 1106; Lind v. San Luis Obispo, 109 Cal. 340; 42 Pac. 437; Siskiyou Lumber etc. Co. v. Rostel, 121 Cal. 511; 53 Pac. 1118; Spring Valley Water Works v. Fifield, 136 Cal. 14; 68 Pac. 108. Multiplicity of actions affords no good reason for denying a person all remedy for actual loss and injury which he may sustain in his person or property by the unlawful acts of another, although it may be a valid ground for refusing redress to individuals for a mere invasion of a common and public right. Lind v. San Luis Obispo, 109 Cal. 340; 42 Pac. 437. A private nuisance may be abated by an individual, notwithstanding a city charter authorizes the common council to abate the same. Humphrey v. Dunnells, 21 Cal. App. 312; 131 Pac. 761. Under this section, a lot-owner abutting on an alley may maintain an action to restrain the owner of the legal title from obstructing the way. Smith v. Smith, 21 Cal. App. 378; 131 Pac. 890.

Private action for public nuisance. A prescriptive right cannot be maintained against a public nuisance, where the action is brought by a private party who has suffered special injury in consequence thereof. Bowen v. Wendt, 103 Cal. 236; 37 Pac. 149. A private person may maintain an action for a public nuisance, where it is specially injurious to himself; and where a public sewer of a city is so constructed as to cause disagreeable and offensive odors to residents along a creek into which the sewage is emptied, and sewage matter is deposited upon the plaintiff's lot and near his house, and remains there the greater part of the year, the plaintiff suffers a special injury to his private property and private rights, which is not common to the public generally, and he may maintain an action to abate the nuisance. Lind v. San Luis Obispo, 109 Cal. 340; 42 Pac. 437. A complaint for special injury to plaintiff's property from a public nuisance is fatally defective, where it fails to show that other and adjacent property-owners in the town will not suffer a like injury; the complaint is to be construed most strongly against the pleader; and the failure to aver therein that there are other property-owners will not preclude the presumption that there are such, when the premises are designated in the complaint as being in a town, which implies an aggregation of inhabitants and a collection of occupied dwellings. Siskiyou Lumber etc. Co. v. Rostel, 121 Cal. 511; 53 Pac. 1118. The mere allegation that an alleged nuisance is specially injurious to the plaintiff is insufficient, in an action by a private person to abate a public nuisance, being a mere conclusion of law: the specific facts must be alleged, showing that the maintenance of the nuisance results in a special injury to him. Spring Valley Water Works v. Fifield, 136 Cal. 14; 68 Pac. 108.

Injunction to prevent or abate nuisance. An alleged nuisance ought not, in an ordinary case, to be abated by a preliminary injunction, since it may appear on the trial that the alleged nuisance was not such, or that the plaintiff had no right to sue for its abatement in his own name. Gardner v. Stroever, 89 Cal. 26; 26 Pac. 618. Where a private nuisance is created, which results in the depreciation of adjoining property owned by the plaintiff, he may recover damages, and also enjoin the further commission of the nuisance, or have it abated. Farmer v. Behmer, 9 Cal. App. 773; 100 Pac. 901; Melvin v. E. B. & A. L. Stone Co., 7 Cal. App. 327; 94 Pac. 390. An obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with its comfortable enjoyment, is a nuisance, and, notwithstanding it existed before the com menecement of the action to abate it, it may be abated by a mandatory injunction, or by a judgment that the obstruction be removed and the nuisance abated. Gardner v. Stroever, 89 Cal. 26; 26 Pac. 618. The owner of an incorporeal hereditament, though he may have no estate in the land, shows a sufficient case in equity to sustain an injunction, where the complaint avers possession and the right to the possession of a toll-road for the purpose of collecting tolls thereon, and that the county, through its board of supervisors, interferes with and obstructs the free use and enjoyment of his property by depriving him of his tolls. Welsh v. Plumas County, 80 Cal. 338; 22 Pac. 254. The right to an injunction to prevent a nuisance does not depend upon the extent of the damage, measured by a money standard: the maxim, De minimis non curat lex, does not apply: the main object of the action is to declare a nuisance, and to prevent the continuance by a mandatory injunction. Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; 18 Pac. 872.

Public actions to abate public nuisances. A county has a special interest in the preservation of county roads, which authorizes it to resort to such remedial measures as will preserve them for the free and unobstructed use of the public. Sierra County v. Butler, 136 Cal. 547; 69 Pac. 418; and see People v. Holladay, 93 Cal. 241; 27 Am. St. Rep. 186; 29 Pac. 54; San Francisco v. Buckman, 111 Cal. 25; 43 Pac. 396. Where the cause of obstructions in a public highway is remote from such highway, and the road-overseer has no authority to remove it, and the obstructions can only be prevented by closing defendant's mining operations, a bill in equity is proper to enjoin the defendant from committing the acts complained of, and such action is properly brought in the name of the county. Sierra County v. Butler, 136 Cal. 547; 69 Pac. 418. An action brought by a county to abate a nuisance caused by the obstruction of a public highway cannot be supported: such action must be brought in the name of the road-overseer. San Benito County v. Whitesides, 51 Cal. 416; Bailey v. Dale, 71 Cal. 34; 11 Pac. 804; Hall v. Kauffman, 106 Cal. 451; 39 Pac. 756. The attorney-general has authority to institute an action in the name of the people to enjoin or abate a public nuisance caused by obstructions upon a public street in a city (People v. Beaudry, 91 Cal. 213; 27 Pac. 610); and a city has the same right to maintain an action to prevent the unlawful obstruction of a street as the people of the state have. People v. Holladay, 93 Cal. 241; 27 Am. St. Rep. 146; 29 Pac. 54; San Francisco v. Buckman, 111 Cal. 25; 43 Pac. 396.

Recovery of damages. An owner of property may recover damages for any interference with the comfortable enjoyment thereof. Coates v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co., 1 Cal. App. 441; 82 Pac. 640. At common law, an action on the case for damages was the usual remedy for injuries occasioned by a nuisance, but in that action the nuisance could not be ordered to be abated; and where the injury could not be adequately compensated by damages at law, or was likely to be a recurring grievance, resort could be had to equity; and thus a suit to prevent a threatened nuisance was brought in equity, as that court alone had jurisdiction. This section, defining a nuisance, declares it to be the subject of an action, and that it may be enjoined or ordered to be abated, and that the judgment may also award damages for the injury. The relief that was obtainable in equity must still be sought in that forum, for the statute makes no change in that respect, but simply permits the recovery of damages in the same action without resorting to a separate action at law, the claim for damages being treated as a mere incident to the main action. Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Mining Co., 30 Cal. 573. An action to abate a nuisance is an action in equity, and the demand for damages is but incidental to the main purpose of the suit. Meek v. De Latour, 2 Cal. App. 261; 83 Pac. 300. The fact that the defendant remedied the evil complained of after the commencement of the action does not affect the right of the plaintiff to recover damages for injuries sustained prior to that time. Tuebner v. California Street R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 171; 4 Pac. 1162. Where the evidence clearly shows that the plaintiff was largely and seriously damaged by water flowing over his land, and that a very large part of the water was caused to flow there by the acts of the defendant, though mingled with a larger volume of water flowing from other sources, a finding that the damage caused by the acts of the defendant was to the extent of only one dollar is not supported by the evidence. Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; 18 Pac. 872. The use of an open sewer by a city, in the vicinity of the plaintiff's land, constitutes a nuisance which he is entitled to have abated; and although the plaintiff was damaged by the nuisance, yet where he failed to show that he was damaged in the amount found, or in any other ascertainable amount, that part of the judgment awarding damages cannot be sustained on appeal. Adams v. Modesto, 131 Cal. 501; 63 Pac. 1083. In an action to recover special damages caused by placing an obstruction, in the nature of a nuisance, in the street, opposite the residence of the plaintiff, if the decreased value of the premises could be considered, it would be their decreased market value, and not their decreased value as a family residence; so that evidence of the latter is not admissible. Hopkins v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 190. The penalty prescribed by the Political Code as damages for the obstruction of a highway, is to be enforced only as provided for in that code; hence, where an action is brought in the name of a county to abate such an obstruction as a nuisance, and thus resting upon the general equity powers of the court, and not on the sections of the Political Code, the penalty cannot be recovered. Sierra County v. Butler, 136 Cal. 547; 69 Pac. 418. A wrongdoer who contributes to a damage cannot escape liability because his proportional contribution to the result cannot be accurately measured. Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; 18 Pac. 872.

Landlord's liability for nuisance. A landlord is not liable for the consequences of a nuisance in connection with a building in the possession and control of his tenant, unless such nuisance existed at the time the premises were demised, or the building was in a condition likely to become a nuisance in the ordinary and reasonable use of the same for the purpose for which it was constructed or let, and the landlord failed to repair it. Kalis v. Shattuck, 69 Cal. 593; 58 Am. Rep. 568; 11 Pac. 346; Riley v. Simpson, 83 Cal. 217; 7 L. R. A. 622; 23 Pac. 293.

Negligence, nuisance resulting from. The duty of exercising ordinary care to prevent injury to children is imposed upon one who places an attractive but dangerous contrivance in a place frequented by children, knowing or having reason to believe that they will be attracted to it and subjected to injury thereby; such doctrine is not confined to cases of turntables. Pierce v. United Gas etc. Co., 161 Cal. 176; 118 Pac. 700. The process of blasting, without reference to locality, is not so intrinsically dangerous as to be ipso facto a nuisance, rendering the blaster liable for injury; his liability depends upon whether or not he was guilty of any negligence. Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co., 152 Cal. 500; 14 Ann. Cas. 1159; 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 913; 93 Pac. 82; Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co., 152 Cal. 574; 93 Pac. 377. Where a highway is obstructed under license and by authority, the person who placed the obstruction is chargeable only with ordinary care to see that such obstruction does not become a cause of injury to any person lawfully traveling the highway; but where a superintendent of streets, after knowledge that a contractor has obstructed a street, whether rightfully or wrongfully, fails to see that proper precautions are taken to abate the obstruction, or to warn the public of the danger of its presence, he is answerable for injuries caused by such obstruction. Stockton Automobile Co. v. Confer, 154 Cal. 402; 97 Pac. 881.

Jurisdiction. The prevention or abatement of a nuisance is accomplished by means of an injunction, either prohibitive or mandatory; and an action therefor is within the equitable jurisdiction of the court, and is to be governed by the principles prevailing in that jurisdiction. McCarthy v. Gaston Ridge etc. Mining Co., 144 Cal. 542; 78 Pac. 7. The constitution has conferred upon the superior court original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and also of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; and a plaintiff, seeking judgment for the damages sustained, may bring his action either in the superior court or in a justice's court, according to the amount of damages claimed; or, seeking the abatement or prevention of the nuisance, he may bring his action only in the superior court, and this, whether he seeks, in addition thereto, to recover damages in excess of three hundred dollars, or even if no damages are claimed. McCarthy v. Gaston Ridge etc. Mining Co., 144 Cal. 542; 78 Pac. 7.

Parties to action for abatement. Where different persons separately appropriate the waters of a stream, and are severally using the same under certain regulations as to the time and manner of such use, they are tenants in common, and each of them may maintain an action to enjoin a trespasser from obstructing or diverting such waters. Lytle Creek Water Co. v. Perdew, 65 Cal. 447; 4 Pac. 426. Any person creating or assisting to create or maintain a nuisance is liable to be sued for its abatement and for damages. Hardin v. Sin Claire, 115 Cal. 460; 47 Pac. 363.

Joinder of causes of action for. Any number of separate causes of action for distinct nuisances may be set up in the same complaint, without being subject to demurrer for misjoinder: different elements of damage, arising from the same nuisance, do not constitute different causes of action. Astill v. South Yuba Water Co., 146 Cal. 55; 79 Pac. 594.

Evidence. In an action in behalf of the people to abate a nuisance on a street, proof is necessary that such street is a public highway. People v. Dreher, 101 Cal. 271; 35 Pac. 867; and see People v. Sausalito etc. Ferry Co., 106 Cal. 621; 40 Pac. 11.

Res adjudicata. The nature of an action cannot be changed by changing the name of the thing objected to: an action to abate a gate as a nuisance is of the same nature as an action to remove the same gate as an obstruction, and a judgment in one action is a bar to an action in the other. Phelan v. Quinn, 130 Cal. 374; 62 Pac. 623.

Appeal. Pending an appeal from a judgment enjoining the operation of a cement plant, because of injury arising to adjoining owners of property from the dust produced in the processes of manufacture, the supreme court will not, upon an original application made to it, stay the operation of the injunction, although the defendant offers to furnish a bond of indemnity to the plaintiffs. CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Nuisance, defined. "A nuisance consists in unlawfully doing an act, or omitting to perform a duty, which act or omission either: 1. Annoys, injures, or endangers the comfort, repose, health, or safety of others; or, 2. Offends decency; or, 3. Unlawfully interferes with, obstructs, or tends to obstruct, or renders dangerous for passage, any lake, or navigable river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway; or 4. In any way renders other persons insecure in life, or in the use of property." Civ. Code, Ann. Ed., vol. II, p. 475, § 3479.

"This definition corresponds with that given of public nuisance, in the Penal Code, § 371, except that it is modified to embrace private nuisance also. Numerous authorities on the different branches of the definition are collected in a note to the section of the Penal Code referred to, which is also given here, pointing to the subdivisions. "What constitutes a technical nuisance is hardly capable of a precise definition; the law is best explained by particular instances of annoyance or injury adjudged to be or not to be a nuisance. An action may be maintained where the enjoyment of property is destroyed or substantially injured or depreciated. Cropsey v. Murphy, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 126; and per Knight Bruce, V. C., in Walter v. Telfe, 4 De G. & S. 315, this language is held: 'Is the convenience more than fanciful, or one of mere delicacy and fastidiousness, as an inconvenience materially interfering with the ordinary comfort physically of human existence, not merely according to elegant or dainty modes and habits of living, but according to plain, sober, and simple notions among the English people.' See Garrison v. State, 14 Ind. 287; Columbus Gaslight etc. Co. v. Freeland, 12 Ohio St. 392. In regard to the remedy by injunction, it is true, the loss of health, the enjoyment of quiet and repose, and the comforts of home, cannot be restored or compensated in money. 1 Hilliard on Torts, pp. 549, 550 et seq. A private action may not be sustained for a public nuisance, without proving special and peculiar damages. Harrower v. Ritson, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 301; Crommelin v. Coxe, 30 Ala. 318; 68 Am. Dec. 120; Mechling v. Kittanning, 1 Grant, 416. Finding a proposed railroad 'will be specially injurious to the property of the plaintiffs, and other property similarly situated,' shows a special and direct injury to each of the plaintiffs, severally, not a remote one, and not merely a public nuisance. Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. (13 Smith) 612; 84 Am. Dec. 314. The case of Silton v.

De Held, 2 Sim. 145, elaborately and exhaustively discusses the whole subject. Such nuisances equity will restrain by injunction. Hamilton v. Whitridge, 11 Md. 128; 69 Am. Dec. 184; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling etc. Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518; 14 L. Ed. 249. Some instances are here given of what are adjudged nuisances (see 1 Hilliard on Torts, p. 557), public and private, or either: An offensive smell; anything offensive to decency, as a distillery, with sties and hogs, or offal, rendering waters unwholesome, etc. Acts rendering waters less pure, which are used for the ordinary purposes of life, fat-boiling establishments, soap-boiling, stables, sties, and slaughter-pens, though not necessarily nuisances, may be so built and so kept as to become such. So a livery-stable near a hotel, powder-magazine in a large city, slaughter-houses, and melting-houses in cities; so dwelling-houses, cut up into small apartments and crowded with poor people in filthy condition, calculated to breed disease; and it may, by those thereby annoyed, be abated by tearing it down, especially during prevalence of disease like Asiatic cholera. But a person sick in his own house or at suitable apartments in a hotel or boarding-house is not a nuisance. These are a few instances of the great many nuisances which may be abated and enjoined. A more extended enumeration of adjudged nuisances may be found by consulting 1 Hilliard on Torts, pp. 557 et seq., and California Digest of Decisions, tit. 'Nuisance.' Any one of a community injured by a nuisance may abate it, he being presumed to be aggrieved by it, whether he is or not. Gunter v. Geary, 1 Cal. 462. House on fire, a nuisance to those near it, and may be abated on special grounds. Surocco v. Geary, 3 Cal. 69; 58 Am. Dec. 385. Overflowing mining claim by a dam of defendants, a nuisance, which may be abated entirely, or lowered to prevent overflow. Ramsay v. Chandler, 3 Cal. 90.

2. Nothing done under express authority of statute is a nuisance. Civ. Code, Ann. Ed., vol. II, p. 481, § 3482:

"Harris v. Thompson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 350; Plant v. Long Island R. R. Co., 10 Barb. 26; Leigh v. Westervelt, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 618; Williams v. New York Central R. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Particular instances are enumerated in the following cases: Delmonico v. New York, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 222; Brewer v. New York, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 254; Stein v. Burden, 24 Ala. 130; 60 Am. Dec. 453; Akron v. McComb, 18 Ohio, 229; 51 Am. Dec. 453; Howell v. Buffalo, 15 N. Y. 512; Ross v. Madison, 1 Ind. 281; 48 Am. Dec. 361; Dayton v. Pease, 4 Ohio St. 80; Stone v. Augusta, 46 Me. 127; Conrad v. Trustees, 16 N. Y. 158; Weightman v. Washington, 1 Black (U. S.), 39; 17 L. Ed. 52; Lloyd v. New York, 5 N. Y. 369; 55 Am. Dec. 347; Lacour v. New York, 3 Duer, 406. On the other hand, the general rule is stated to be, that an action does not lie against a municipal corporation for neglect of duty imposed by a general law, and not by its charter, unless authorized by statute, etc. See 2 Hilliard on Torts, p. 406, § 2a, text and notes with cases; see also 1 Hilliard on Torts, pp. 550–552, §§ 4–4a. 'The principle is laid down, that if one carry on a lawful business in such a manner as to prove a nuisance to his neighbor, he is answerable for the damages. Fish v. Dodge, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 311; 47 Am. Dec. 254. But it is also said, that which is authorized by an act of the legislature cannot be a nuisance.' Per Hand, J.; First Baptist Church v. Utica etc. R. Co., 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 313; Stoughton v. State, 5 Wis. 291; Hatch v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 28 Vt. 142; see Commonwealth v. Reed, 34 Pa. St. 275; 75 Am. Dec. 661; Samuels v. Mayor, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 298; People v. Law, 34 Barb. 494; Call v. Allen, 1 Allen (Mass.), 137; Butler v. State, 6 Ind. 165; and other notes there to be found."

3. Successive owners, who neglect to abate a continuing nuisance, liable. Civ. Code, Ann. Ed., vol. II, p. 481, § 3483.

"1 Hilliard on Torts, p. 572, § 15a, it is said: 'One who demises premises for carrying on a business necessarily injurious to adjacent proprietors, is liable as the author of the nuisance.' Fish v. Dodge, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 311; 47 Am. Dec. 254; Brady v. Weeks, 3 Barb. 157. Writs of nuisance held in New York to be obsolete. Klintz v. McNeal, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 436. The action must be brought against the party erecting the nuisance, or if he has transferred the land to another, then against both these parties. An action against the alienor alone for keeping up and continuing a nuisance erected by his grantor was unknown to the common law. Brown v. Woodworth, 5 Barb. 550; and note (a), p. 572, 1 Hilliard on Torts. In this respect, however, the text changes the common-law rule. It is sufficient to show the nuisance was caused by authority of the defendant, or that, having acquired the title to the land after the nuisance was erected, he has continued it. 2 Greenleaf on Evidence, p. 527, § 472; (2) Pennruddock's Case, 5 Co., p. 100; Davenport v. Lamson, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 72. So if the injury is caused by a wall erected partly on defendant's land, case lies for the nuisance, though the wall is erected partly on plaintiff's land, by an act of trespass. Wells v. Ody, 1 M. & W. 452; Winter v. Charter, 3 Y. & J. 308. See cases in point: Brown v. Cayuga etc. R. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 486; compare Terry v. Mayor, 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 504."

4. A private person may maintain an action for a public nuisance, if it is specially injurious to himself; but not otherwise. Civ. Code, Ann. Ed., vol. II, p. 484, § 3493: "When injurious to himself (Pierce v. Dart, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 609), but not otherwise. Davis v. Mayor, 14 N. Y. 506; 67 Am. Dec. 186; Dougherty v. Bunting, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 1; Myers v. Malcolm, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 292; 41 Am. Dec. 744; see Lansing v. Smith, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 146; 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; 21 Am. Dec. 89; First Baptist Church v. Schenectady etc. R. R. Co., 5 Barb. § 732. Waste, actions for. If a guardian, tenant for life or years, joint tenant, or tenant in common of real property, commit waste thereon, any person aggrieved by the waste may bring an action against him therefor, in which action there may be judgment for treble damages.

Waste. Post, § 746.
Enjoining. Post, § 745.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. This section is not penal, but remedial, although providing for treble damages; it presents an instance in which no new right of action or remedy for private injury is created, but the damages authorized to be recovered are enhanced. Jahns v. Nolting, 29 Cal. 507.

Waste, what constitutes. At common law, acts which, if committed by a tenant for life or years, would constitute waste, would not be waste if committed by a tenant in common; but, by statute, a co-tenant is now liable for acts which would constitute waste if committed by a tenant for life or years, and resort must now be had to the common law to ascertain what acts would constitute waste. McCord v. Oakland Quicksilver Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863. A vendee of mines, under a contract of sale, with a right to prospect and develop the mines, has no right to commit waste or remove from its situs that which constitutes a part of the realty, other than ore-bodies or minerals, or to make such use of timber, and the like, as may be necessary in the working of the mines. Conde v. Sweeney, 14 Cal. App. 20; 110 Pac. 973; 16 Cal. App. 157; 116 Pac. 319. A tenant for years, taking ore from a mine, the sole subject of the demise, during his term, is not guilty of waste: the extraction of the ore is that for which he pays rent. McCord v. Oakland Quicksilver Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863.

Tenant in common may be sued for waste. An action for waste may be brought against a tenant in common (Scarborough v. Woodill, 7 Cal. App. 39; 93 Pac. 383); but one of several tenants in common of a mine, who does not exclude his co-tenants, may work the mine in the usual way, and extract ore therefrom, without being chargeable with waste, or liable to the other co-tenants for damages; and an injunction will not be granted, at their instance, to prevent the working of the mine. McCord v. Oakland Quicksilver Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863.

Damages. Damages are not necessarily confined to compensation for waste and injury only, but the value of the rents and profits may enter into the estimate of damages. Tewksbury v. O'Connell, 25 Cal. 262.

Treble damages. Where an act of waste is done under an honest claim of right, or as the result of an honest mistake as to the defendant's right, it would not be just to inflict the penalty of treble damages, and no strained construction of words should be allowed to have this effect; hence, the court does not abuse its discretion, where it refuses to treble the damages where the waste was not committed willfully, wantonly, or maliciously. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 140 Cal. 678; 74 Pac. 294.

Injunction to prevent waste. Where cypress-trees between orange-orchards are owned in co-tenancy, and one of the tenants in common commits waste by cutting down some of such line-trees, an injunction will lie, at the suit of the other co-tenant, to prevent the cutting down, injuring, or destroying of any of the remaining trees growing on the line. Scarborough v. Woodill, 7 Cal. App. 39; 93 Pac. 383. Where a lease of land for sugar-beet farming provides against waste, and that the land is to be farmed in accordance with custom, one fourth of the crop to go to the lessor as yearly rental, but does not provide for any division of the tops, which, by custom, are left on the ground, to be plowed under for fertilization, the lessor is entitled to enjoin the lessee from waste by diverting three fourths of the tops, under a claim of right thereto. Corey v. Struve, 16 Cal. App. 310; 116 Pac. 975.

Terms defined and explained. The common law must apply to the definition of "waste," as that term is not defined by the code. Scarborough v. Woodill, 7 Cal. App. 39; 93 Pac. 383. The word "waste" is not an arbitrary term, to be applied inflexibly, without regard to the quantity or quality of the estate, the nature and species of the property, or the relation to it of the person charged to have committed the wrong. McCord v. Oakland Quicksilver Mining Co., 64 Cal. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 686; 27 Pac. 863. The word "may," as used in this section, is not mandatory, and is not to be construed to mean "must," where there is nothing in the connection of the language, or in the sense or policy of the provision, to require an unusual interpretation. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 140 Cal. 678; 74 Pac. 294; Isom v. Book, 142 Cal. 666; 76 Pac. 506.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Chipman v. Emeric, 3 Cal. 283. Demand for triple damages must be inserted in the complaint. Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 239; Rees v. Emerick, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 288; Newcomb v. Butterfield, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 342; Livingston v. Platner, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 175; Benton v. Dale, 1 Cow. 160. Injunction to restrain waste. Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 116.

§ 733. Trespass for cutting or carrying away trees, etc., actions for. Any person who cuts down or carries off any wood or underwood, tree, or timber, or girdles or otherwise injures any tree or timber on the land of another person, or on the street or highway in front of any person's house, village, or city lot, or cultivated grounds; or on the commons or public grounds of any city or town, or on the street or highway in front thereof, without lawful authority, is liable to the owner of such land, or to such city or town, for treble the amount of damages which may be assessed therefor, in a civil action, in any court having jurisdiction.

Treble damages for injuries to trees. See Civ. Code, § 3346.

Legislation § 733. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 251), changing (1) "shall cut" to "cuts," (2) "girdle" to "girdles," (3) "injure" to "injures," and (4) "shall be" to "is" before "liable."

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. This section is not mandatory. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 140 Cal. 678; 74 Pac. 294.

Treble damages allowed when. To recover treble damages under this section, the plaintiff must allege and prove that the defendant's act was willful and malicious. Stewart v. Sefton, 108 Cal. 197; 41 Pac. 293. A complaint, not averring that the trespass was willful, but only that the entry and cutting of timber was wrongful and without the plaintiff's leave, does not come within the purview of this section, and, though stating an action good at common law, entitling the plaintiff to recover his actual damages, does not state a case in which the damages can be trebled. Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303; Stewart v. Sefton, 108 Cal. 197; 41 Pac. 293; Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 140 Cal. 678; 74 Pac. 294. Where timber is cut down through an innocent mistake as to the true boundary line of the land, the plaintiff cannot recover treble damages. Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303.

Damages for injury to, destruction of, or wrongful cutting of trees. See notes 19 L. R. A. 653; 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 244.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Sampson v. Hammond, 4 Cal. 184; Buckelew v. Estell, 5 Cal 108.

§ 734. Measure of damages in certain cases under the last section. Nothing in the last section authorizes the recovery of more than the just value of the timber taken from uncultivated woodland for the repair of a public highway or bridge upon the land, or adjoining it.

Legislation § 734. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 252), changing "authorizes" from "shall authorize."

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Chipman v. Hibberd, 6 Cal. 162.

§ 735. Damages in actions for forcible entry, etc., may be trebled. If a person recover damages for a forcible or unlawful entry in or upon, or detention of any building or any cultivated real property, judgment may be entered for three times the amount at which the actual damages are assessed.

Treble damages.

1. Forcible entry and unlawful detainer. Post, § 1174.

2. Tenant willfully holding over. See Civ. Code, § 3345.

Legislation § 735. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 253.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. The construction to be given to this section, in connection with § 1174, post, and § 3294 of the Civil Code, is, that the power of the jury extends only to the assessment of damages actually sustained, and that the court has power to treble the damages or rent, only by way of punishment, upon evidence that the tortious act charged against the defendant has been committed by him wantonly, or by oppression, or with malice. San Francisco etc. Bldg. Society v. Leonard, 17 Cal. App. 254; 119 Pac. 405.

Treble damages are allowed by court. The complaint need not contain a claim for treble damages, but rather a claim for the damages which the jury is competent to assess: the office of trebling the damages belongs to the court. Tewksbury v. O'Connell, 25 Cal. 265. The court may render judgment for the rent due at the trial, and award treble damages for the whole amount of rent then unpaid, without amendment of the complaint. Nolan v. Hentig, 138 Cal. 281; 71 Pac. 440.

Mandamus and appeal. Mandamus does not lie to compel the trial court to render judgment for treble damages: the party has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy by appeal. Early v. Mannix, 15 Cal. 149.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It is the duty of the court to treble the damages, although treble damages are not demanded in the complaint. Tewksbury v. O'Connell, 25 Cal. 262. But mandamus will not lie to compel the court to treble the damages. The remedy is by appeal. Early v. Mannix, 15 Cal. 149.

2. Amended by Stats. 1895, p. 72, adding the provisos.
3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 159; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. The action provided by this section to determine adverse claims is an improvement upon the old bill of peace; the class of cases in which equitable relief could formerly be sought in quieting title is enlarged; and it is not now necessary that the plaintiff shall first establish his right by an action at law; nor is it necessary that the adverse claim shall be of any particular character. Castro v. Barry, 79 Cal. 443; 21 Pac. 946; and see Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259. Under this section, one having the legal title is not required to bring his action at law, and then, after recovery of the possession, to file a bill to quiet his title or possession against equitable claims asserted by the defendant in ejectment, and to have such claims decreed to be invalid, but may secure both ends in one proceeding. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. There is no difficulty in so conducting a suit, under this section, as to protect fully the legal rights of the parties, and at the same time to secure the beneficial result afforded by a court of equity in bills of peace, which is, repose from further litigation. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096; Curtis

v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259. The purpose of this section is to afford a remedy similar in character to that of the old bill of peace, but extending it to cases which the latter remedy did not reach. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091. In a suit under this section, the complaint is to be treated as a bill in equity, and a general verdict of the jury, therefore, is to be disregarded. Brandt v. Wheaton, 52 Cal. 430; Hancock v. Plummer, 66 Cal. 337; 5 Pac. 514; Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176; 12 Pac. 449. An action, under this section, to cancel a void tax deed, can accomplish, in effect, nothing more or nothing less than an action under § 3412 of the Civil Code. Guptill v. Kelsey, 6 Cal. App. 35; 91 Pac. 409. The McEnerney Act, to quiet title, is remedial in its nature, and is to be liberally construed to effect its main purpose. Hynes v. All Persons, 19 Cal. App. 185; 125 Pac. 253.

Possession by plaintiff as prerequisite to action. Possession in plaintiff is not now required, in order to maintain an action to quiet title (People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; Brusie v. Gates, 80 Cal. 462; 22 Pac. 284; Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771; Casey v. Leggett, 125 Cal. 672; 58 Pac. 264; Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517); but, prior to the adoption of the codes, possession by the plaintiff, at the time of the commencement of the action, was essential. Rico v. Spence, 21 Cal. 504; Lyle v. Rollins, 25 Cal. 437; Ferris v. Irving, 28 Cal. 645; Sepulveda v. Sepulveda, 39 Cal. 13. It is sufficient, under this section, if, while the plaintiff is in possession of the property, a party out of possession claims an estate or interest adverse to him: he can immediately, upon knowledge of the assertion of such claim, require the nature and character of the adverse estate or interest to be produced, exposed, and judicially determined, and the question of title be thus forever quieted. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481. This section always allows an action to be brought by any person against another who claims an estate or interest adverse to him; its language is very broad; if the plaintiff is out and the defendant is in possession, nevertheless the action can be maintained; and so, where the plaintiff as well as the defendant claims to be the owner in fee, the question as to who has the better right may be tried in an action of ejectment, but it may also be tried in an action under this section. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. This section, giving a right of action to the party in possession, does not confine the remedy to the case of an adverse claimant setting up a legal title, or even an equitable title; but it embraces every description of claim whereby the plaintiff might be deprived of the property, or its title be clouded, or its value be depreciated, or whereby the plaintiff might be incommoded or damnified by the assertion of an outstanding title already held or to grow out of the adverse condition. Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149; Joyce v. McAvoy, 31 Cal. 273; 89 Am. Dec. 172. A plaintiff out of possession is authorized, under this section, to maintain an action to quiet title; and the defendant in such action may assert a legal estate, or any equity which he may claim to have enforced; and the judgment, if in favor of the plaintiff, may provide for a restitution of the possession, and decree the claims of the defendant to be invalid. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. In quieting title under the McEnerney Act, proof of actual possession by the plaintiff is essential to judgment. Vanderbilt v. All Persons, 163 Cal. 507; 126 Pac. 158. The actual possession required to be had to invoke the benefit of the McEnerney Act, to quiet title, must be such as is required to sustain title by adverse possession, when such title is founded upon a written instrument. Loftstad v. Murasky, 152 Cal. 64; 91 Pac. 1008.

Title, estate, or interest required of plaintiff. Whatever interest the plaintiff has in real property may be quieted. German-American Sav. Bank v. Gollmer, 155 Cal. 683; 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 102 Pac. 932; Mentry v. Broadway Bank etc. Co., 20 Cal. App. 388; 129 Pac. 470. Whether the plaintiff, in an action under this section, is the owner in fee or not, he is entitled to have defendant's adverse claim determined. Stoddart v. Burge, 53 Cal. 394. The owner of an estate for years is entitled to have any claim adverse to his interest determined. German-American Sav. Bank v. Gollmer, 155 Cal. 683; 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 102 Pac. 932. The owner of an estate or interest in land, less than an estate in fee, can maintain an action to determine an adverse claim made by another person. Pierce v. Felter, 53 Cal. 18. The owner of a leasehold interest in real property may maintain an action against the person owning the fee in the demised premises, to quiet his title under the lease against any adverse claim asserted thereto by the owner in fee. German-American Sav. Bank v. Gollmer, 155 Cal. 683; 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 102 Pac. 932. A party who has been in the exclusive adverse possession of lands for a period of time which, under the statute of limitations, vests him with a title thereto, may maintain an action against a party claiming under a record title, to have the claim determined and adjudged null and void as against him. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722; Liebrand v. Otto, 56 Cal. 242. A plaintiff, entitled to the possession of the premises, may bring an action against the defendant to obtain a judgment that the plaintiff is legally the owner of such premises, that the defendant has no legal estate, or any such equities as would entitle him to retain possession as against the title of the estate under which he claims, and that he has no equities which would justify a decree in his favor as against the legal owner in possession. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. To maintain a suit to quiet title, by a party in possession, it is sufficient that he claims under a deed which creates an equitable estate, or even a right of possession. Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107. The trustor in a deed of trust can maintain an action to quiet title, under the McEnerney Act. Charles A. Warren Co. v. All Persons, 153 Cal. 771; 96 Pac. 807. In an action to quiet title, the question is, Has the plaintiff established a right, under the allegation of ownership, such as will entitle him to the relief asked? and where the plaintiff's title is merely an option to purchase, the action will not lie. San José Land etc. Co. v. San José Ranch Co., 129 Cal. 673; 62 Pac. 269. The interest of a vendee, under a contract for the sale of land, is merely equitable, and he cannot maintain an action to quiet title against a subsequent grantee of the legal title. Los Angeles County v. Hannon, 159 Cal. 37; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1065; 112 Pac. 878. This section was not designed to enable one who has an executory contract for the purchase of land to obtain a judicial construction of his contract, and it cannot be construed as enabling such person to call in those claiming adversely to his vendor, and compel them to try their claim of title, when a judgment in their favor would not bind the vendor. Cooper v. Birch, 137 Cal. 472; 70 Pac. 291. The grantees of a toll-road, constructed pursuant to an act of the legislature, have a sufficient estate or interest in the land upon which the wagon-road rests to enable them to sue the county, under this section, to determine an adverse claim by it to the ownership of the road as a free public highway: the right of way for the road is private property, though held for a public use, and is incident and necessary to the privilege of collecting tolls thereon, and constitutes an interest in the land upon which the wagon-road rests. Welch v. Plumas County, 80 Cal. 338; 22 Pac. 254. An action cannot be brought to quiet title to land, where the plaintiff deraigns title under a deed from the state tide-land commissioners, the state not having any title to the land, which was within the limits of the pueblo of San Francisco. United Land Ass'n v. Pacific Improvement Co., 139 Cal. 370; 69 Pac. 1064. In an action to quiet title to land, against a defendant in possession, where the plaintiff counts upon title alone, he can prevail only on the strength of his own title; and where he deraigns title by conveyance from a grantor subsequently to a conveyance made by such grantor to a third party, and not through such third party, he can derive no support from the title of such grantor, whether it was valid or invalid. McGrath v. Wallace, 116 Cal. 548; 48 Pac. 719. A plaintiff, who purchases the title of an owner who is estopped to claim title as against the defendant, with knowledge of the facts upon which the estoppel is based, is in no better situation than his grantor, and is bound by the estoppel. Ions v. Harbison, 112 Cal. 260; 44 Pac. 572. An action lies to quiet title to a city lot, the sale of which is void, as having been made under a void assessment for street-work, the contract for which unlawfully delegated power to the superintendent of streets greatly to increase or lessen the expense of the work, and was thereby rendered invalid. Chase v. Scheerer, 136 Cal. 248; 68 Pac. 768. The mere fact that the defenadnt in an action to quiet title is shown to have some valid interest or estate in the property in controversy, does not warrant the denial of all relief to the plaintiff, who has also shown a valid interest therein. Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 1; 109 Am. St. Rep. 107; 81 Pac. 121. Where the title of the plaintiff is the entry of the land in controversy as a homestead under the laws of the United States, it is a material question in the case, whether, at the date of the entry or homestead filing, the land was known as mineral land, within the meaning of the Federal statute, and so not subject to entry as a homestead. Austin v. Gagan, 3 Cal. Unrep. 533; 30 Pac. 790. Where the plaintiff makes his proof of citizenship, and that he made a discovery of gold-bearing quartz in the land, and shows a location according to the requirements of the law, and that the land is public land, he establishes his case prima facie, and he is not called upon to make further proof that the land was unoccupied mineral land of the United States: the presumption is that all public land is unoccupied. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23. In an action to quiet title to a mining claim, if it is shown and found that the plaintiff has no title, it becomes immaterial to inquire into the rights of the defendant, or as to whether he has failed to prove that the original locators of his claims were qualified, or that he had properly marked the boundaries of his claims by monuments. Schroder v. Aden Gold Mining Co., 144 Cal. 628; 78 Pac. 20.

Title to what property or rights may be quieted. Water flowing in its natural channel is real property, and while flowing, by right, through a canal or pipe, which is real property, and owned by the owner of the water, it is appurtenant to the canal or pipe, and therefore real property, and an action to quiet the title to such water right will lie. Fudickar v. East Riverside Irrigation Dist., 109 Cal. 29; 41 Pac. 1024. An action may be brought, under this section, to determine conflicting claims to the use of water (Inyo Cons. Water Co. v. Jess, 161 Cal. 516; 119 Pac. 934; Merritt v. Los Angeles, 162 Cal. 47; 120 Pac. 1064; Shurtleff v. Kehrer, 163 Cal. 24; 124 Pac. 724); and to quiet title to a claim of a right of way for a water-ditch, alleged to have existed as an easement upon the land, which had been obviously and permanently used by the plaintiff, "whose estate was transferred, for the benefit thereof, at the time when the transfer was agreed upon or completed" (Riverside etc. Irrigation Co. v. Jensen, 73 Cal. 550; 15 Pac. 131); and to determine conflicting interests in mining claims (Madison v. Octave Oil Co., 154 Cal. 768; 99 Pac. 176; Riley v. North Star Min. Co., 152 Cal. 549; 93 Pac. 194; New England etc. Oil Co. v. Congdon, 152 Cal. 211; 92 Pac. 180; Bernard v. Parmelee, 6 Cal. App. 537; 92 Pac. 658; Garibaldi v. Grillo, 17 Cal. App. 540; 120 Pac. 425); and to determine the validity of tax titles (Holland v. Hotchkiss, 162 Cal. 366; 123 Pac. 258; Campbell v. Canty, 162 Cal. 382; 123 Pac. 266; Boyer v. Gelhaus, 19 Cal. App. 320; 125 Pac. 916); and the owner of a right to cut growing timber, and of easements in connection therewith, may maintain an action to quiet title. Gazos Creek Mill etc. Co. v. Coburn, 8 Cal. App. 150; 96 Pac. 359. Where, in the allegations of the complaint in an action to quiet title, the pleader denominates his claim as a mere right of way, but on the trial the language of conveyances, which are part of the complaint and which control as to description, shows that there is a definite interest or estate in a canal or pipe line, that interest is a corporeal estate, and not an easement or servitude, and to that estate the water right is appurtenant, and the right to which may be determined in an action under this section. Fudickar v. East Riverside Irrigation Dist., 109 Cal. 29; 41 Pac. 1024.

Adverse claim, what constitutes. Under the maxim, Omne majus continet in se minus, an adverse claim to a right of way situated across land adversely possessed is necessarily included in the general adverse claim to the land; and where the title to the land is not vested in the adverse claimant by prescription or otherwise, and the intention is apparent to appropriate the land to the use of the right of way, the claim thus to use part of it will, as part of the general claim to the land, be adverse to the owner. Cavanaugh v. Wholey, 143 Cal. 164; 76 Pac. 979. Where one is the owner and in possession of land, and another asserts a claim to the same property, which is founded neither in law nor in equity, the asserted claim is necessarily adverse. McNeil v. Morgan, 157 Cal. 373; 108 Pac. 69. Where the title to the land becomes vested in the party in possession, either by prescription or otherwise, all adverse claims to easements must, from the nature of the case, cease, for one cannot have an adverse claim against one's self; but this reason does not apply to the case before user, and hence, unless there is a merger, if the intention to appropriate the land to the use be shown, the claim to the land will include the claim to the use of part of it, and this, as a part of the general claim, will be adverse to the owner. Cavanaugh v. Wholey, 143 Cal. 164; 76 Pac. 979. The owner's denial of the existence of any leasehold interest in real property is the assertion of an adverse claim against the lessee. German-American Sav. Bank v. Gollmer, 155 Cal. 683; 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1066; 102 Pac. 932.

Adverse possession, what constitutes. Title to land may be acquired by adverse possession for five years, within the limits of an inclosure, although the inclosure was made under a mistaken belief as to the boundary of the land, where it is claimed, as matter of fact, that the fences were upon the line; but if the inclosure was made without claiming that the fences were upon the line, but with the expectation of moving them to the true line when it should be determined, the possession would not be adverse, and the statute would not run. Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781.

Adverse claims, action to determine. The object of an action, brought under this section, is to settle finally and determine, as between the parties, all conflicting claims to the property in controversy, and to decree to each such interest or estate therein to which he may be entitled. Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 1; 109 Am. St. Rep. 107; 81 Pac. 121. This section authorizes an action for the purpose of determining any adverse claim that may be asserted therein by a defendant to the land in controversy; but this does not mean that the court shall simply ascertain, as against a plaintiff shown to have a legal interest, whether or not such defendant has some interest, but that the court shall also declare and define the interest held by the defendant, if any, so that the plaintiff may have a decree finally adjudicating the extent of his own interest in the property in controversy. Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 1; 109 Am. St. Rep. 107; 81 Pac. 121. The plaintiff has a right to be quieted in his title, whenever any claim is made to real estate, of which he is in possession, the effect of which claim might be litigation, or the loss of his property. Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149; Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194; Joyce v. McAvoy, 31 Cal. 273; 89 Am. Dec. 172. An action may be brought by any person against another who claims an interest in real property adverse to him; and this applies to the claim of a city in the flow in a watercourse. Amestoy Estate Co. v. Los Angeles, 5 Cal. App. 273; 90 Pac. 42. A contract for the sale of real estate, which, for any reason, is incapable of specific enforcement, is not a valid claim to an interest in the land, and, if asserted, the owner has a right to have his title quieted against such claim. Jolliffé v. Steele, 9 Cal. App. 212; 98 Pac. 544. After the right to possession is proved, the court may, under this section, determine the adverse claims of the defendant; and if the plaintiff's right to possession is under a legal title, the rights of the parties are to be adjudicated as if the plaintiff had been in possession at the commencement of the action. Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. One tenant in common of real estate, in the actual possession thereof, may maintain an action to determine the validity of an adverse claim of title by a co-tenant. Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313. An action to determine an adverse claim may be maintained, under this section, although such claim rests on proceedings which are void on their face. Kittle v. Bellegarde, 86 Cal. 556; 25 Pac. 55. Under this section, it is unnecessary for the plaintiff to delay seeking the equitable interposition of the court until he is disturbed in his possession by the institution of a suit against him, and until judgment in such suit is passed in his favor; he can immediately, upon knowledge of the assertion of such claim, require the nature and character of the adverse estate or interest to be produced, exposed, and judicially determined, and the question of title be thus forever quieted. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. This section is very broad in its terms, and includes all adverse claims, from claims of title in fee to the smallest leasehold; and it is the duty of the defendant to set out his interest, when called upon; and if he has an adverse claim which will support an issue at law, upon which he desires a jury trial, it is his duty to set out that claim, make that issue, and demand a jury trial. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771. An action lies to quiet the title of the plaintiff against an asserted right of the defendant, based upon a fraudulent transfer. Dorris v. McManus, 3 Cal. App. 576; 86 Pac. 909. Where general relief is demanded, and the allegations of the complaint to quiet title are true, the plaintiff's title is paramount to that of a defendant claiming a lien by mortgage made by the plaintiff, obtained by fraud; and whether his deed to the defendant was procured by fraud and without consideration, or whether it was in fact a mortgage, he is entitled to have his rights determined. Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349. Where the plaintiff proves his title, and no affirmative defense is shown, the defendant's claim is without right, whether adverse or not. Dorris v. McManus, 4 Cal. App. 147; 87 Pac. 287. Where the plaintiff has the legal title to the premises, subject to a contract made by his predecessor, giving the defendant the right to remove timber therefrom, it is error to grant a nonsuit: the plaintiff has the right to have the adverse claim of the defendant, under the timber contract, defined and determined. Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 1; 109 Am. St. Rep. 107; 81 Pac. 121. The distinction between suits to determine adverse claims under the old chancery practice, and actions under the provisions of this section, is clear; the difference is not merely in form, but in purpose: in the former, the proceeding is aimed at a particular instrument, or piece of evidence, dangerous to the plaintiff's rights, and which may be ordered to be destroyed in the hands of whomsoever it may happen to be; while in the latter, the proceeding is for the purpose of stopping the mouth of a person who has asserted, or who is asserting, a claim to the plaintiff's property, whether such claim is founded upon evidence or is utterly baseless. Castro v. Barry, 79 Cal. 443; 21 Pac. 946; Dranga v. Rowe, 127 Cal. 506; 59 Pac. 944. One claiming title to mining-ground may bring an action, under this section, to quiet title, against a defendant denying his title, and claiming title thereto by a former judgment of the court in which the action is brought, the former action being of the same nature, to determine the adverse claim of the defendants to the property described in the complaint. Russell v. Brosseau, 65 Cal. 605; 4 Pac. 643. An action may be brought, under this section, to determine an adverse title, claimed by the defendant, to mineral lands, veins, lodes, and ledges, of which plaintiff claims to be the owner. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 613; 23 Pac. 1109.

Cloud upon title, what constitutes. An apparently good record title constitutes a cloud upon the title acquired by adverse possession, under the statute of limitations; it is of record, and, when produced, makes out a prima facie case, which can only be defeated by evidence of adverse possession which is not of record, unless established in a judicial proceeding, but rests in parol, and is liable to be lost and established with difficulty. Arrington v. .

Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. Where the sale of land, made by a tax-collector, is void because for a sum greater than that authorized by law, as § 3776 of the Political Code does not require that the certificate shall specify the particulars of the "amount paid," or the "amount of assessment," non constat that the deed would necessarily do so, if executed, and if it did not, evidence would be required dehors the recitals of the deed to ascertain the illegality of any of the items, to collect which the sale was made, and a cloud would thus be cast upon the title. Axtell v. Gerlach, 67 Cal. 483; 8 Pac. 34; Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 586; 11 Pac. 343; Chase v. City Treasurer, 122 Cal. 540; 55 Pac. 414.

Cloud upon title, action to quiet. Where the cause of action set up is adverse possession of some twelve years, under a conveyance which gives a title under the statute of limitations, and an outstanding conveyance from the same source of title, which, under the circumstances alleged, become a cloud, the plaintiff has the right to have the same adjudged to be a cloud and to have it removed. Arrington v. Liscom, 34 Cal. 365; 94 Am. Dec. 722. An adverse claim, estate, or interest, which has no just foundation in law or equity, is a cloud upon the title, and impairs the market value of the property and obstructs its alienation, and is the basis of a suit brought by one of the defendants against the plaintiff and against his tenants, and title may be quieted in such action, under this section. Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563. The plaintiff has a right of action against defendants who pretend and give out in speeches that he has no valid title to the land, and that the legal title is in themselves, and that they are entitled to the possession thereof, and thereby cast a cloud upon his title, and cause many persons to believe it to be worthless, and thereby greatly impair its market value. Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620. Where an alcalde made a grant to two persons jointly, and delivered possession and completed the proceedings, the title vested in the two jointly, and the claim of a defendant to a title under one of the grantees was a cloud upon the title, to clear which a suit was properly brought, under this section. Lick v. Diaz, 37 Cal. 437. The object of this section, and of § 739, post, is to enable the plaintiff, in an action to determine an adverse claim, to dispel it as a cloud upon his title; for, even though the defendant makes no adverse claim, third persons may regard the plaintiff's title as subject to the adverse claim of the defendant, which would thus be a cloud upon the plaintiff's title, depreciating its value, and this claim he is entitled to have removed by the decree of the court, so that his record title may appear perfect. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 589; 23 Pac. 1102. An action may be maintained by the owner of property subject to an invalid street assessment, to have it adjudged invalid, where there is nothing upon the face of the assessment to show that the lien is not valid, and where, by reason of matters outside of the assessment as it is recorded, the apparent lien may be shown not to be a valid encumbrance; in such case the assessment constitutes a cloud upon the title, which the property-owner is entitled to have removed by a court of equity, although the same matters may be asserted as a defense to an action for the enforcement of the assessment. Bolton v. Gilleran, 105 Cal. 244; 45 Am. St. Rep. 33; 38 Pac. 881. Where, if the plaintiff succeed, it must be on the ground that no title passed from Spain to the defendant by mesne conveyance, and, in that event, a conveyance from the defendant would not cast any cloud upon the plaintiff's title, and the circumstances would not justify an action under this section: the conveyance would be like any other conveyance from a stranger to the title, and be of no effect. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259. A plaintiff, holding title by virtue of a sheriff's deed, made upon a decree of foreclosure, may maintain an action against a defendant claiming under an invalid mortgage lien, such lien being a cloud upon the plaintiff's title, which he has the right to have quieted. Withers v. Jacks, 79 Cal. 297; 12 Am. St. Rep. 143; 21 Pac. 824. Where the judgments under which the defendant is said to claim are void upon their face, they constitute no cloud, and no basis for an action to quiet title, under this section. Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380.

Form of action. An owner of land, who verbally permits a railroad company to enter thereon and construct and operate its railroad, in consideration of its verbal promise to erect a passenger-depot thereon, at which all such trains should stop, cannot, after the default of the company in erecting such depot and stopping its trains as agreed, maintain an action to quiet his title to the land: the remedy is an action for the value of the land taken, and damages arising therefrom. Southern California Ry. Co. v. Slauson, 138 Cal. 342; 94 Am. St. Rep. 58; 71 Pac. 352. Where the plaintiff avers ownership and right of possession in a mining claim, and that defendants are in possession, wrongfully and unlawfully withholding the same, and taking ore therefrom, and prays for an injunction, and for a decree for the restitution of the lands and the mining claims, the fact that the complaint asks for an injunction does not make the action one of an equitable nature: the action is one at law, and in form ejectment. Haggin v.

Kelly, 136 Cal. 481; 69 Pac. 140. An action to quiet title does not lie in favor of the owner of an equitable title, for whom the defendant holds the legal title in trust: the only proper remedy for such plaintiff is an action to enforce the trust, and to compel a conveyance of the legal title. Harrigan v. Mowry, 84 Cal. 456; 22 Pac. 658. Where a wife purchases property with the earnings of her husband, after marriage, and takes title in her own name, as her separate property, without his knowledge or consent, and holds it adversely to him, she takes it in trust for the marital community; and the husband cannot maintain an action against the wife's vendee to quiet his title thereto: he is merely entitled to have it adjudged, in a proper action, that the vendee holds the legal title in trust for the marital community. Shanahan v. Crampton, 92 Cal. 9; 28 Pac. 50. An action to quiet title cannot be maintained by the owner of an equitable estate against the holder of the legal title, under a complaint containing only the usual averments commonly made in such actions; but where the facts upon which the plaintiff's claim is based are alleged, there is authority to grant any proper relief within the limitations of § 580, ante, and appropriate remedies, such as cancellation, reconveyance, or decrees quieting title, or establishing or enforcing trusts, or determining the priorities of opposing equities, may be had, as between proper parties, under our system, whenever they are required upon equitable considerations, and are justified by the pleadings and proof. Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349.

Parties. All the property of the deceased, real and personal, remains in the possession of the administrator until administration of the estate is had, or a decree of distribution is made by the probate court: the administrator, until then, is the proper party plaintiff in a suit to quiet title to the estate. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259. An administrator may maintain a suit to quiet the title of the estate against any adverse claim; and a suit to set aside and cancel a deed of the decedent, for want of capacity of the grantor, is, in effect, a suit to quiet the title of the estate against the pretended grantee. Collins v. O'Laverty, 136 Cal. 31; 68 Pac. 327. An administrator may bring an action to quiet title to real estate which belonged to his decedent: such action may be brought by any one who has the right of possession, against any one who claims an estate or interest adverse to such right. Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 127; 22 Pac. 398. Under this section, an action may be brought by the people of the state, not only to annul a patent to swamp-lands, but also for a decree that the plaintiffs, out of possession, are the legal owners, entitled to the possession, and that the defendants have acquired no rights under the act of the legislature; and the question whether they have acquired rights under the act is to be determined upon evidence that the defendants, or their predecessors, did or did not reclaim the lands, or, at least, that the governor and the surveyor-general had so certified, as required by the act of the legislature. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. Without any statute conferring the power, the attorney-general may file an information in the nature of a bill in chancery to annul a patent for lands granted by the state to an individual, where the matter involved in the suit immediately concerns the interests of the state. People v. Stratton, 25 Cal. 242. An action may be brought by the attorney-general, in the name and in behalf of the people of the state, to determine adverse claims to real property owned by the state, and for other incidental relief; and he may institute an action to quiet the title of the state to lands in the navigable waters constituting the harbor of the cities of Oakland and Alameda, and to determine adverse claims made thereto; the authority which he has to institute such proceedings is derived from the constitution and the laws of the state, which give him authority to institute an action in any case in which the rights and interests of the state are directly involved, without any new authority expressly conferred by law. People v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 234; 50 Pac. 305. The grant, by the state, of the soil under navigable waters carries with it no right to obstruct navigation, and the state may enjoin its grantees, or their successors, from erecting or maintaining structures which will impair or interfere with the exercise of the public right of navigation, so as to constitute a public nuisance; and where each of several defendants is acting independently of the others in the erection and maintenance of separate structures, obstructing navigation, each may be sued in a separate action by the attorney-general to quiet title of the state. People v. Oakland Water Front Co., 118 Cal. 234; 50 Pac. 305. Under this section, the holder of an equitable title has the right to come before the court, in an action to quiet title, and have his equities declared superior to any and all opposing equities; although, as a general rule, the possessor of an equitable title cannot bring an action to quiet such title against the holder of a legal title. Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 672; 41 Pac. 806. An action to quiet title to land may be maintained to determine which party has the superior equity. Buehner v. Malloy, 155 Cal. 253; 100 Pac. 687. An action to quiet title does not lie, in any case, in favor of the holder of a merely equitable title or interest in land as against the holder of the legal title (Robinson v. Muir, 151 Cal. 118; 90 Pac. 521; Buchner v. Malloy, 155 Cal. 253; 100 Pac. 687; Los Angeles County v. Hannon, 159 Cal. 37; Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1065; 112 Pac. 878); nor in favor of the owner of an equitable title, for whom the defendant holds the legal title in trust. Harrigan v. Mowry, 84 Cal. 456; 22 Pac. 658. If an action for partition lies in a given case, then an action by the holder of an equitable title against parties claiming adverse equities should be recognized and countenanced, under this section. Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 670; 41 Pac. 806. In an action to quiet title, wherein the defendant was a purchaser under an execution, and the plaintiff was a person who took title in his own name, to defraud a creditor, the title is in such purchaser. Clifton v. Herrick, 16 Cal. App. 484; 117 Pac. 622. An action may be brought, under this section, by the owner of land, to quiet his title thereto, against the person who holds a unilateral contract for the purchase of the land, but who, for more than four years after the execution of the option, has failed to make tender of performance (Levy v. Lyon, 153 Cal. 213; 94 Pac. 881); and an action may be brought, under this section, by the owners in possession of real property, to determine an adverse claim against the assignee of a mortgage encumbrance thereon, without any previous tender or offer to pay the amount due on the mortgage. Mentry v. Broadway Bank and Trust Co., 20 Cal. App. 388; 129 Pac. 470. The equitable owner of swamp-land, who has paid the state fully therefor, has a sufficient title to support an action to quiet title against a subsequent patentee from the state. Pioneer Land Co. v. Maddux, 109 Cal. 633; 50 Am. St. Rep. 67; 42 Pac. 295. An action, under this section, may be maintained by a plaintiff claiming under two certificates of purchase from the state, as against a defendant claiming under certificates of purchase under a judgment against the defendant in an action foreclosing and annulling his interest in certain certificates of purchase. Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. Where the trustee of a resulting trust conveyed land to the purchaser by an unrecorded deed, which was afterwards delivered back, and then destroyed with the consent of the purchaser, the legal title vested in the purchaser, and did not return to the trustee by the subsequent destruction of the deed: the fact that the record title remained in the name of the grantor is not sufficient to create a trust, and the purchaser may maintain an action to quiet his title to the land so conveyed to him, as against the grantor. Weygant v. Bartlett, 102 Cal. 224; 36 Pac. 417. One claiming to be the owner of premises may bring an action, under this section, against a settler upon public lands, who claims title thereto under the pre-emption laws of the United States. Byers v. Neal, 43 Cal. 210. An action may be brought, under this section and § 380, ante, to try title to and recover possession of land, by a plaintiff who derives title under a patent from the United States, against a defendant holding under an imperfect and unconfirmed Mexican grant, and who has a right to plead the statute of limitations. Anzar v. Miller, 90 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 299. One who was in adverse possession of premises from 1853 to 1867, at which time the defendant claims that the plaintiff obtained possession through collusion with his tenant, is subject to an action to quiet title. Walsworth v. Johnson, 41 Cal. 61. Where a mortgage, made to a husband and wife jointly, was foreclosed by the husband and the wife's administrator, as co-plaintiffs, and the title under foreclosure was taken in trust for the benefit of the husband and of the wife's estate, according to their respective interests in the decree, by one who afterwards became administrator of the wife's estate, the husband cannot maintain an action to quiet title against the trustee, either individually or as administrator of the wife's estate. Yoakam v. Kingery, 126 Cal. 30; 58 Pac. 324. A gift to a wife, by her husband, of an undivided half of real estate becomes her separate property. Lapique v. Geantit, 21 Cal. App. 515; 132 Pac. 78.

Joinder of plaintiffs. Devisees in severalty, of distinct tracts of land, under the same will, have a common source of title, and may unite, as plaintiffs, to remove from their title the cloud of a fraudulent deed, executed by their testator, which affects the whole land. Gillespie v. Gouly, 152 Cal. 643; 93 Pac. 856. A portion of the owners of a mining claim may bring an action to quiet their title against opposing claimants, without joining the other owners as co-plaintiffs: the rule is, that tenants in common may, but need not, join as plaintiffs. McCleary v. Broaddus, 14 Cal. App. 60; 111 Pac. 125.

Joinder of defendants. In an action to quiet title to a water right, the plaintiff may join as defendants all persons who claim title from a common source adversely to that claimed by him; and it is immaterial whether they are a voluntary association or are copartners, or whether they hold whatever rights they may have as individuals. Senior v. Anderson, 115 Cal. 496; 47 Pac. 454.

Joinder of causes of action. Three causes of action, to wit, an action to annul and set aside a fraudulent conveyance from one of the defendants, an action under this section to determine adverse claims to the real property, and an action of ejectment to recover possession of said land, with the rents and profits thereof, cannot be united and joined in one statement, without being separately set forth as distinct causes of action. Pfister v. Dascey, 65 Cal. 403; 4 Pac. 393. A cause of action to acquire title to lands cannot be united with a cause of action against a surviving trustee to compel a conveyance: a demurrer for misjoinder of actions, in such case, should be sustained. Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183; 9 Pac. 176.

Complaint, sufficiency of. A complaint which avers that the plaintiff is the owner and in possession of certain land, that defendant claims an interest therein adverse to the plaintiff, and that such claim is without right, has every element of a complaint to quiet title. Gray v. Walker, 157 Cal. 381; 108 Pac. 278. An allegation in the complaint, that the plaintiff is "the owner in fee" of the premises, is a sufficient statement of his right to maintain an action to quiet title. Davis v. Crump, 162 Cal. 513; 123 Pac. 294. A complaint alleging the title of the plaintiff in fee to the real property described, and averring that the defendant, without right, makes some claim thereto, adversely to the plaintiff's title and estate, states a cause of action under this section, and not under §§ 749–751, post. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co., 150 Cal. 647; 89 Pac. 615. In an action under this section, it is not essential that the complaint shall aver the plaintiff to be the owner in fee: it is sufficient if it appears that the plaintiff claims an interest in the land, and that the defendant asserts a claim of title adverse to the plaintiff's claim. Stoddart v. Burge, 53 Cal. 394. A complaint alleging that the plaintiff is in possession of and claims title in fee to the described premises, and that the defendant claims an estate or interest adverse to him, is sufficient. Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155; 71 Pac. 510. No allegation of possession is necessary, under this section: the maintenance of an action by any person, whether in or out of possession, is authorized. Davis v. Crump, 162 Cal. 513; 123 Pac. 294. It is not necessary to allege in the complaint the nature of the estate or interest claimed by the defendant. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481; Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380; Stratton v. California Land etc. Co., 86 Cal. 353; 24 Pac. 1065; McNeil v. Morgan, 157 Cal. 373; 108 Pac. 69. An action, not averring that the defendant claims any estate or interest in real property adverse to the plaintiff, is not an action under this section. Berry v. Ivanice, 53 Cal. 653. The only purpose of averring an adverse claim is to notify the defendant of the nature of the action, and that he is required to set forth and litigate any adverse title he may have, or to disclaim it, either expressly or by default. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 589; 23 Pac. 1102. In an action to quiet title to a mining claim, located on public lands, a possessory title is sufficient to maintain the action by a party in possession, as against one out of possession; and where the plaintiff alleges that by reason of the defendant's adverse claim he is greatly embarrassed in the use and disposition of the claim, and that thereby its value is greatly depreciated, there is a sufficient averment of injury to sustain the action. Pralus v. Pacific Gold etc. Mining Co., 35 Cal. 30. A complaint, under this section, having no averments inconsistent with the scope thereof, presents, on its face, a case for equitable relief: it seeks to have something done which a court of law cannot do; it invokes a decree in equity, not a mere judgment at law, which, in its nature, is only for the recovery of the possession of specific real or personal property, or for damages. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091. In an action to quiet title, an averment that the plaintiff is the owner of a right to purchase from the defendant certain described real estate, is of a conclusion of law, and is a mere argumentative averment, which is not the equivalent of an averment of the ultimate fact of title to the land, and renders the complaint insufficient. Cooper v. Birch, 137 Cal. 472; 70 Pac. 291. The fact that a claim for moneys is included in the complaint to quiet title cannot affect the result of the trial of the issue of ownership, especially where such claim was ignored by the jury, and only nominal damages of one dollar were awarded. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517. A company, made defendant in an action to quiet title, under which the plaintiff derives no right, need not be alleged in the complaint to be a corporation; and where such company appears and answers under the name by which it is sued, it will not be allowed to say that it was not properly named in the complaint, or that the complaint does not show how it came to bear that name. Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155; 71 Pac. 510.

Amendment of complaint. Where the evidence tends strongly to suggest that, though the legal title is in the defendant, the plaintiff is equitably entitled to a conveyance from the defendant, as purchaser with notice of the plaintiff's equity, the ends of justice are best subserved by permitting the plaintiff, who has filed a sufficient complaint, to amend, so as to avail himself of his equities. Pioneer Land Co. v. Maddux, 109 Cal. 633; 50 Am. St. Rep. 67; 42 Pac. 295.

Defenses and answers. The owner of a mere equitable title to land, if of such a character as to entitle him to possession in equity, may set up such title as a sufficient defense to an action for the possession, brought even by the holder of the legal title. Doherty v. Courtney, 150 Cal. 606; 89 Pac. 434. The defendant, in an action to quiet title, is not called upon to do more than to negative the plaintiff's cause of action, unless, by alleging title, he wishes to avail himself of a jury trial, or unless he seeks to avail himself of an equitable title against the legal title of the plaintiff, which he must specifically plead. United Land Ass'n v. Pacific Improvement Co., 139 Cal. 370; 69 Pac. 1064. A defendant, in an action to quiet title, who does not, himself, claim some right, title, interest, or possession, has no status to question the validity of a conveyance of the property by a third person to the plaintiff. Williams v. San Pedro, 153 Cal. 44; 94 Pac. 234. A Mexican grant, whether perfect or not, which was not presented to nor confirmed by the United States board of land commissioners, is forfeited, and confers no title, although judicial possession was given thereunder to the original grantee, and is no defense in an action to try title and recover possession. Anzar v. Miller, 90 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 299. Where the defendant's title is dependent solely upon the question of the payment of taxes upon the land in controversy, he having been in the exclusive possession thereof under a claim of right for a term longer than that required by statute, his claim cannot be defeated by failure to pay taxes, when the assessment thereof was absolutely void. Harvey v. Meyer, 117 Cal. 60; 48 Pac. 1014. In an action to quiet title, against a city, a defense of a lien for delinquent taxes cannot be sustained, where the right of action for the collection of the taxes is lost under the statute of limitations: in such case, the lien therefor is lost, and the plaintiff's title is quieted accordingly. Clark v. San Diego, 144 Cal. 361; 77 Pac. 973. A claim to mining-ground may be determined by showing that the claimant never performed any of the acts necessary to the location of the claim, or by showing, if such acts were performed, that a prior location existed, which precluded the possibility of a valid location having been made by the plaintiff; such proof can properly be made under a general denial of the plaintiff's title and right of possession. Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. A discovery of oil, subsequently to the location of the lands as oil-lands, will relate back to and perfect the location, except so far as the rights of others may intervene, and the rights of the locators are the subject of sale and transfer as well before as after discovery; and a prior discovery, upon an adjoining claim, which perfects a prior location of eighty acres of oil-lands, cannot be used to support a consolidated location of the whole quarter-section so as to interfere with the first locators of the adjoining eighty acres, who are in possession by their lessees, preparing to drill a well, with proper diligence and in good faith, for the purpose of discovering oil, where the consolidated location is made; and in an action by the consolidated claimants to quiet title to the lands in controversy, against the prior locators in possession, judgment is properly rendered for the defendants, upon the facts. Weed v. Snook, 144 Cal. 439; 77 Pac. 1023. If the answer in an action to quiet title admits plaintiff's ownership in fee-simple and possession, the rightfulness of the possession follows the admission; and even if the plaintiff went into possession by leave of the defendant's tenant, he is not estopped from denying the defendant's title. Reed v. Calderwood, 32 Cal. 109. In an action to quiet title, where the answer sets up a deed from the plaintiff to the defendant, and alleges the delivery of the deed by the plaintiff, the allegation is deemed to be controverted by the plaintiff, and he may disprove such delivery. Drinkwater v. Hollar, 6 Cal. App. 117; 91 Pac. 664. Answers, though not denying the possession of the plaintiff, which denied that the plaintiff was at any time the owner of any right, title, or interest in or to the premises, or any part or parts thereof, and denied that the defendants had no estate, right, title, or interest in the lands, and affirmatively alleged that at the commencement of the action two of the defendants named own, and still own, the title in fee to the premises, raise issues upon which the defendants are entitled to be heard. Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155; 71 Pac. 510. In an action to quiet title to land, the answer of the defendant, denying the plaintiff's ownership, and denying that he himself claims any interest in the land, except the right to maintain a dam in a creek which flows over the land, and to maintain pipes connecting with said creek at the said dam for the purpose of conducting the waters thereof to lands below for the purposes of irrigation and for domestic use, sets up a valid defense. San José Land etc. Co. v. San José Ranch Co., 129 Cal. 673; 62 Pac. 269.

Cross-complaint. In a suit to quiet title to a tract of land, the defendant may, by cross-complaint, enforce the specific performance of a contract between the plaintiff and the defendant's assignor, which provided that, upon the performance of conditions specified in the contract, such assignor should be entitled to a conveyance of a certain number of acres, where the cross-complaint shows that the conditions were fully performed by the defendant and his assignor. Fleishman v. Woods, 135 Cal. 256; 67 Pac. 276.

Consolidation of actions. Consolidation of actions may be ordered, where, pending an action for partition, one of the parties commences an action against other parties to the action to enforce a trust relative to the property involved. Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

Issues. Whether an action involves legal issues, or issues of equitable cognizance, must depend upon the facts alleged in the particular case. Davis v. Judson, 159 Cal. 121; 113 Pac. 147. Until the answer comes in, in an action under this section, setting forth the defendant's claim, it need not appear that the issues to be tried are legal, as distinguished from equitable, issues; a proceeding by which one may compel another to expose and have adjudicated the nature of the interest on which he is asserting an adverse claim against the estate of the former, is one to be conducted in a court of equity, and the discovery of the nature of the adverse claim precedes its adjudication. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481; Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. The main effect of this chapter is to give the parties the right to compel others, by suit, to litigate and determine controversies in cases where such right did not before exist; but if, in such a suit, legal issues arise, the right to have such issues tried by a jury is not taken away. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. Because a suit is brought in equity, it does not follow that the determination of questions, purely of a legal character, in relation to the title, will necessarily be withdrawn from the ordinary cognizance of a court of law: the court, sitting in equity, may direct, whenever it may become proper, an issue to be framed upon the pleadings and submitted to the jury. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259; Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. An action, brought by a claimant to real estate, to remove the claim of the defendant, who also claimed that the plaintiff had wrongfully and unlawfully entered on such premises and ousted the defendant therefrom, formerly could not be maintained at all; the plaintiff was compelled to wait until the defendant chose to disturb his possession by an action; now the code enables him to commence the legal contest; but when he thus brings the defendant into court, he must be prepared to meet any pertinent issues which the latter may tender, and to try them in the way in which the defendant has the right to have them tried. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. In an action to quiet the title of the plaintiff to all the waters of a creek, where the complaint does not allege the nature of the plaintiff's right to the water, whether riparian or prescriptive, and the answer sets up riparian rights of the defendants in the creek, on land several miles above the lands of the plaintiff, and also a prescriptive right to use all of the waters flowing through their lands for irrigation, domestic use, and the watering of stock, upon the issues thus joined it is the duty of the court to determine and declare the extent of the right of the defendants, as well as that of the plaintiff. Southern California Investment Co. v. Wilshire, 144 Cal. 68; 66 Pac. 767.

Jury trial, right to. Whether, when brought under the code, an action be called an action at law, in which the statute authorizes a judgment determining the estate or interest claimed by the plaintiff, or be called a suit in equity to quiet the plaintiff's title against the adverse claim, the superior court has jurisdiction; and if it be considered an action at law, the defendant may demand a jury. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. The right to a jury trial of legal issues cannot be avoided by calling an action equitable; nor can the plaintiff, by bringing an equitable action, deprive the defendant of a jury trial, to which he would have been entitled if the parties had been inverted, and the defendant had sued the plaintiff. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096; McNeil v. Morgan, 157 Cal. 373; 108 Pac. 69. Whether either party is entitled to a jury must depend greatly upon the facts of the particular case. McNeil v. Morgan, 157 Cal. 373; 108 Pac. 69. Although an equitable action to quiet title to land is, in form, brought under this section, yet if it is, in reality, an action to recover specific real property, the substance must control the form, and a party has the right to a jury trial, under § 592, ante. Davis v. Judson, 159 Cal. 121; 113 Pac. 147. Where an action is brought, under this section, by the heirs of a deceased woman, who sought to avoid a title claimed by the defendants under an execution sale had as the result of a litigation begun while she was mentally unsound, and was not represented by guardian, such sale passing no title to purchasers with knowledge, in view of the fact that the cause possesses elements of an action at law, it should be submitted to the jury upon the evidence offered. Gillespie v. Gouly, 120 Cal. 515; 52 Pac. 816. Where the defendant is in possession, claiming adversely to the plaintiff, the obviously proper action to bring is an action of ejectment, that is, an action for the recovery of specific real property, in which case the defendant is clearly entitled to a jury; and where the plaintiff endeavors to accomplish the same result, that is, the restitution of possession, in the form of a statutory action under this section, it is evident that by simply framing his complaint in a particular way he cannot deprive the defendant of a jury trial of the issues raised by his answer. Newman v. Duane, 89 Cal. 597; 27 Pac. 66. The essential allegations necessary to an action in ejectment are, the estate of the plaintiff, possession by the defendant at the commencement of the action, and his wrongful withholding of the same; and even if the action is regarded as an action under this section, still the plaintiff is entitled to a jury; the equitable relief of a restraining order against waste, during the pendency of the action, does not change the nature of the action, but is ancillary merely, and permissible under the pleading. Haggin v. Kelly, 136 Cal. 481; 69 Pac. 140. Courts, in guarding the constitutional rights to a jury trial, have repeatedly held, that, where the suit should have been, and in substance is, an action for the recovery of the possession of land, the right of a defendant to a jury cannot be defeated by the mere device of bringing the action in an equitable form. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091. This section must not be construed as intending to violate that provision of the constitution which says that the right to trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate, unless such construction is unavoidable: issues about titles to land were triable at law at the time the constitution was adopted, and therefore either party has the right to have such issues tried by a jury. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. If, in an action under this section, the plaintiff avers a legal title against a defendant in possession, the latter is perhaps entitled, under the constitution, to a trial by jury of the issue at law thus presented. Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. Where the pleadings show that the plaintiff is in possession, and the answer sets up as a defense a cause of action in ejectment, averring that the defendant was rightfully in possession and was ousted by the plaintiff before the commencement of the action, and that the plaintiff wrongfully withholds the possession, the defendant is entitled to a jury trial upon those issues. Donahue v. Meister, 88 Cal. 121; 22 Am. St. Rep. 283; 25 Pac. 1096. In an action under this section, brought by a party out of possession, against one claiming title and in possession, and asking for a restitution of the premises, either party is entitled to a jury trial, as a matter of right. Gillespie v. Gouly, 120 Cal. 515; 52 Pac. 116. In a suit to quiet title, as in other suits, a denial of the allegations of the complaint is a sufficient answer, and a finding upon the issues thus raised, if adverse to the plaintiff, is a sufficient finding; this implies, that, if possession be alleged, the fact of possession, as well as that of title, must be negatived; and it may be, also, that a defendant, in order to avail himself of his right to a jury trial, if he have such right, should allege his title. United Land Ass'n v. Pacific Improvement Co., 139 Cal. 370; 69 Pac. 1064; 72 Pac. 988. Where the plaintiff is in possession, an action to quiet title, under this section, against a defendant who is alleged to claim under a forged deed from the plaintiff's testator, is of an equitable nature; and where the defendant has never been in possession, nor ousted therefrom, the equitable character of the action cannot be overthrown by the defendant's claim of title and prayer to be let into possession, either by answer or by cross-complaint; and the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial of the action by reason of such claim of title and possession. Angus v. Craven, 132 Cal. 691; 64 Pac. 1091. Where the defendant admits the legal title to the land to be in the plaintiff, and claims a right to the possession thereof under an alleged agreement for the sale of the land, made by the predecessor of the plaintiff, to which he claims to have succeeded by assignment, and which he, in effect, asks to have specifically performed, he is not entitled to a jury for the trial of the equitable issues thus presented. Crocker v. Carpenter, 98 Cal. 418; 33 Pac. 271. Where an action to quiet title was set for trial, and no jury had been demanded or ordered, and a jury was first demanded by the plaintiff after the cause was called for trial and the parties had announced themselves ready, and no deposit of jury fees was made or offered by the plaintiff, it is not error to refuse a jury trial on account of the failure of the plaintiff to comply with the reasonable rule of the court requiring the party demanding a jury trial to deposit such fees with the clerk. Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. In an action under this section, it is not necessary to determine whether or not the pleadings are sufficient to entitle either party to a jury as to any of the issues created; if not sufficient, the defendant should make them so, if his adverse claim of interest justifies such a course, and where he does not do so, he cannot afterwards be heard to complain that he was deprived of his right to a jury trial. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771. The fact that the record is erroneous in stating that the parties waived a jury, cannot be shown by an affidavit of the judge who tried the cause; a party cannot try his cause before a judge without objection, and after losing it, complain that the case was not tried by a jury. Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107.

Admissibility of evidence. One claiming title to property under a sheriff's deed, executed on the foreclosure of a mortgage, may, in an action brought by him to quiet his title against one who claims under a sheriff's deed executed on the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien, in which foreclosure he was not a party, show that no such lien existed. Horn v. Jones, 28 Cal. 194. A prior lien-holder, who was not made a party to an action of foreclosure by subsequent lien-holders, is not in privity with the defendant in such action, within the meaning of the rule making those in privity with parties to an action bound by the judgment therein; and, after acquiring title of such defendant under his lien, he may show, in an action to quiet title as against such subsequent lien-holders, that the liens which were foreclosed by them, and which resulted in the sheriff's deed under which they claim title, were invalid, although his foreclosure and sale were subsequent in time to theirs. Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1; 27 Pac. 52. Where the plaintiff obtained his title from the successor of the stipulated owner by commissioner's deed on foreclosure sale, evidence of the record in the foreclosure action, and the commissioner's deed, and a writ of assistance issued by the court, with the return of the sheriff thereon, showing the delivery of the property, is admissible to show the title and possession, so far as it can be obtained as against the judgment debtor, but not to show an ouster of the defendants as third parties. Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63; 79 Pac. 739. Where the defendant, in an action to quiet title, sets up title through a sale by a trustee under a deed of trust, executed by the plaintiff's predecessor in interest, the plaintiff, in avoidance of such defense, may offer evidence to show that the trustee's sale and deed were fraudulent, without pleading the fraud in his complaint. José Realty Co. v. Pavlicevich, 164 Cal. 613; 130 Pac. 15. Where the parties stipulated, prior to the first trial of an action to quiet title, that a person named had died seised and possessed of the land in controversy, the stipulation was available to both parties; and where the court, on the second trial, ruled out the stipulation as not binding at such second trial, it had discretion to change its ruling, and admit the stipulation in evidence in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, in the absence of anything limiting its effect or any change of the issues. Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63; 79 Pac. 739. Since the passage of § 2324, U. S. Rev. Stats., providing that the location of a mining claim must be distinctly marked on the ground, so that its boundaries can be readily traced, a party can show a right to the possession of a mining claim, where no patent has been issued, only by showing an actual pedis possessio as against a wrong-doer, or by showing a compliance with the requisites of the act. Funk v. Sterrett, 59 Cal. 613. In an action to quiet title to a mining claim, evidence of abandonment is admissible, under a denial of title. Trevaskis v. Peard, 111 Cal. 599; 44 Pac. 246. In an action to quiet title to a specified lot and block in a certain rancho, "according to the official map thereof on file in the office of the county recorder," which map was proved by plaintiff in deraigning his title, where the defendant claimed under a deed from the collector of an irrigation district comprising the same rancho, executed for non-payment of an assessment by the plaintiff, and giving the same description of lot and block as in the complaint, without referring to the map, and the admission of which was objected to for that omission, parol evidence was admissible for the defendant to show that at the time of the assessment there was but one such lot and block in that rancho, and that that fact was then well known, as tending to identify the lot and block deeded with that described in the complaint, and that plaintiff was not misled by the assessment, but was fully informed that his lot was chargeable therewith. Best v. Wohlford, 144 Cal. 733; 78 Pac. 293.

Sufficiency of evidence. In an action to quiet title to real property, the plaintiff must establish a legal, as distinguished from a merely equitable, title (Fudickar v. East Riverside Irrigation Dist., 109 Cal. 29; 41 Pac. 1024); and where the plaintiff claims under an execution sale based upon a judgment against the judgment debtor, it is only necessary for him, in making out a prima facie right to recover as against the defendant, to show the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, the execution thereon and the sale thereunder, and transmission of the title to the plaintiff. Reilly v. Wright, 117 Cal. 77; 48 Pac. 970. As against the judgment debtor, the production of the judgment, execution, and sheriff's deed is prima facie evidence of the plaintiff's right to recover; but if the action is against a stranger to the judgment, the plaintiff must also show that the judgment debtor had the title or possession of the land at the date of the lien or of the sale. Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675; 34 Pac. 120.

Burden of proof. In an action to quiet title, the burden rests upon the plaintiff to show title in himself, and if he fails to make out a case, he cannot recover; possession was also formerly necessary, in such case, but is not now required. Heney v. Pesoli, 109 Cal. 53; 41 Pac. 819. The rule that a plaintiff is not entitled to recover, where he fails to show title in himself, does not require that he shall, in opening his case, show that the title which the defendant may plead in his answer has been forfeited: he may not, and often does not, know what the adverse interest is, against which he seeks to quiet his title. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23. Where the plaintiff acquired title under the stipulated owner, the burden of proof is upon the defendant to show title by adverse possession, and the burden is not sustained where the defendant does not show payment of all taxes assessed on the land in controversy, and did not protect it by an inclosure within five years, nor show any continuous or uninterrupted possession thereof. Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63; 79 Pac. 739.

Presumptions. In an action to quiet title, proof of the legal title in a party raises a presumption of the right of possession in him, and establishes a prima facie case in his favor. Flood v. Templeton, 152 Cal. 148; 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 579; 92 Pac. 78.

Extrinsic evidence affecting writings. Where the statute makes an assessment a lien upon the property of the plaintiff, and so, also, a bond issued upon non-payment, and there is nothing upon the face of either the assessment or the bond to show that the lien is not in all respects valid, it is obvious that, to defeat such assessment and bond, or a deed thereunder, the plaintiff must resort to evidence extraneous of any recitals to be found in it, which is the test of his right to invoke the aid of equity to restrain the sale. Chase v. City Treasurer, 122 Cal. 540; 55 Pac. 414.

Competency of witnesses. In an action by a husband to quiet title to land jointly conveyed to him and his deceased wife, against the administrator of her estate, as being community property belonging to the husband and not to the estate, the husband is a competent witness: the controversy is concerning the property of the plaintiff, and to quiet a claim or demand or title asserted by the estate to such property. Bollinger v. Wright, 143 Cal. 292; 76 Pac. 1108.

Findings. In an action to quiet title, the absence of a finding that the defendants asserted a claim adverse to the plaintiff is immaterial. Title etc. Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan, 150 Cal. 289; 119 Am. St. Rep. 199; 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 682; 88 Pac. 356. Where the plaintiff's ownership of the land in controversy is established, an averment in the answer, that the defendant made valuable improvements upon the land while in possession thereof, is immaterial, and a finding thereupon is not required. Eshleman v. Malter, 101 Cal. 233; 35 Pac. 860. An action to determine adverse claims to mining-ground is equitable in its nature, whether considered as an action for trespass coupled with an injunction, or an action to quiet title coupled with an injunction to prevent further claims, and where the plaintiff has been ousted from possession, and the question of ownership is in issue, the parties are entitled to a jury trial upon that issue, and their general verdict thereupon is conclusive upon the court, and no findings are required thereupon. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517. Possession is not essential to the maintenance of an action by the owner of land to quiet his title thereto; and a finding upon that question is immaterial, and it is immaterial whether it is supported by the evidence. Casey v. Leggett, 125 Cal. 664; 54 Pac. 264. Where the defendant was the only witness as to possession prior to a certain date, and his testimony shows that he was not possessed of sufficient knowledge to state whether or not the possession of one of the claimants of any part of the land was continuous or uninterrupted between certain dates, the burden being upon the defendant to show such adverse possession, upon this condition of the evidence the court was not bound to find that the action was barred, and its finding that it was not barred is therefore sustained by the evidence. Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63; 79 Pac. 739. Where the owner of the legal title brings an action to quiet title, proof of a mere equity in the defendant will not sustain a finding that such defendant is the owner of the property. Robinson v. Muir, 151 Cal. 118; 90 Pac. 521. Where the defendant, in an action to quiet title, is not equitably entitled to any interest, it is not error for the court to refuse to make a finding fixing the cash value of the property. Estate of Munroe, 161 Cal. 10; Ann. Cas. 1913B, 1161; 118 Pac. 242.

Costs. In an action to quiet title, the appellate court has jurisdiction of an appeal from an order striking out a cost-bill in a sum less than three hundred dollars, the appealability of an order made before or after final judgment not being controlled or affected by the amount involved in such order; and where the plaintiff has any judgment in his favor in such an action, though it is only for a part of the property, and though the defendant has judgment in his favor for the residue, the plaintiff is entitled, under the terms of the statute, to recover his costs, as of course. Sierra Union etc. Mining Co. v. Wolff, 144 Cal. 430; 77 Pac. 1038.

Judgment may provide for what. Where the plaintiff was in possession of the premises at the time the action was commenced, but, during its pendency, was turned out of possession, the judgment in his favor may provide for a restitution of the premises; and such action is not thereby changed into one for the recovery of the possession of the land, but remains an equitable one. Polack v. Gurnee, 66 Cal. 266; 5 Pac. 229. Where the plaintiff brought an action to quiet title to land which had been conveyed to the defendant as a mortgage security to pay a note barred by the statute of limitations, the court may decree that, upon the failure of the plaintiff to pay the amount remaining unpaid upon the mortgage debt, within a time specified by the court, the action shall be dismissed; and it is erroneous to adjudge that, upon the failure of the plaintiff to pay that amount, all his title to the property shall cease, and the defendant's title shall be good and valid, since the defendant can have no affirmative remedy for the debt barred by the statute. Boyce v. Fisk, 110 Cal. 107; 42 Pac. 473. If the rights of parties depend upon the terms of a written contract, and modifications thereof, and the vendor seeks to claim a forfeiture of the contract by an action to quiet title against the purchaser, the defendant may be relieved from the forfeiture upon the payment of full compensation into court; the plaintiff then holds the legal title subject to the contract and agreement of purchase, and it may be so decreed. McDonald v. Kingsbury, 16 Cal. App. 244; 116 Pac. 380. It is not essential that the judgment itself, in an action to quiet title, shall direct the issuance of the writ of possession: the law is fully satisfied by a supplemental order to that effect. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771.

Who entitled to judgment. In an action under this section, the plaintiff cannot have a judgment in direct contradiction of the material allegations of his complaint; if any cause of action can be brought to determine an adverse claim upon an equitable interest, which is doubted, it cannot be brought against the holder of the legal title. Von Drachenfels v. Doolittle, 77 Cal. 295; 19 Pac. 518; Chase v. Cameron, 133 Cal. 231; 65 Pac. 460; Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349. Where, in his complaint, the plaintiff distinctly claimed ownership and right of possession to mining lands, but did not allege that the defendant claimed some interest therein, nor call upon the defendant to set forth his title, but the defendant met the complaint by a denial of the plaintiff's ownership and an assertion of title in himself, and where the issues thus formed were tried by jury and decided in the plaintiff's favor, the court properly gave judgment accordingly. Reiner v. Schroeder, 146 Cal. 411; 80 Pac. 517. Occupancy sufficient to bar an action to recover property confers a title thereto, denominated a title by prescription, sufficient against all, and no title can be better or more absolute; and the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree quieting the title to his estate in the land in controversy. Woodward v. Faris, 109 Cal. 12; 41 Pac. 781. In an action to quiet title, the plaintiff must obtain judgment upon the strength of his own title; and if it is shown that he has no title, it becomes immaterial to inquire into the defendant's rights. Schroder v. Aden Gold Mining Co., 144 Cal. 628; 78 Pac. 20. Standing timber is part of the realty, and it may be transferred to a third party, who is not the owner of the land; and the grantee is entitled, in an action by the owner to quiet his title to the land, to have the timber granted reserved from the operation of any decree that may be made therein. Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 1; 109 Am. St. Rep. 107; 81 Pac. 121. If the plaintiff claims under a deed, for which there was no consideration, the defendant is not required to demand, by cross-complaint, that the deed be canceled and delivered up; in such a case, judgment should be for the defendant. Stanton v. Freeman, 19 Cal. App. 464; 126 Pac. 377.

Judgment on constructive service. Publication of summons may be made in an action to quiet title, and judgment against a non-resident, based thereon, is not void, although he does not appear: the judgment, so far as it settles the title, is in the nature of one in rem. Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 580; 21 Am. St. Rep. 67; 25 Pac. 51.

Effect of judgment. A decree, in a suit under this section, that the defendant has no right, title, or interest in certain land, would be more effective as a final adjudication with respect to the legal rights of the parties, than a mere judgment for the recovery of the possession: the latter, to some extent, leaves open to be proved, by evidence dehors the record, what rights might have been asserted in the action of ejectment. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. A judgment in favor of the plaintiff, in an action to quiet title, becomes a muniment of title to his successor in interest, and he cannot impair its effect by withholding consent or authority for the entry of judgment by the clerk. Baker v. Brickell, 102 Cal. 620; 36 Pac. 950. The defendant in an action at law to recover lands, against whom judgment has passed, cannot subsequently, in a distinct suit, assert a legal right which existed when the ejectment was commenced, nor subsequently claim relief based upon an equity which was pleaded by cross-complaint in the ejectment; so far, the judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the action of ejectment is conclusive of the defendant's rights. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; 6 Pac. 481. When it has been adjudicated that the defendant has no adverse claim or interest in the property in controversy, the subject of litigation is exhausted; and if the plaintiff is out of possession, the judgment necessarily entitles him to possession. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465;

29 Pac. 771. One who is not a party or privy to a judgment is not affected by it, and neither the judgment nor an execution sale of the land affected by it can change his rights in the land or create a cloud upon his title. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 586; 11 Pac. 343. A judgment of dismissal of an action of ejectment, brought by the plaintiff in an action to quiet title against the same defendant for the recovery of the premises, upon the same day, but dismissed by stipulation of the parties, after judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the action to quiet title, each party paying his own costs, cannot be set up to defeat a motion for the writ of possession, whatever its effect may be as a defense to another claim afterwards brought upon the same cause of action. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771. "Adverse claimants" must be made parties to an action to quiet title, whether the service is personal or by publication; and where the virtual representation of unborn remaindermen is precluded, such unborn persons, not parties to the action, cannot be bound by the decree therein. Los Angeles County v. Winans, 13 Cal. App. 234; 109 Pac. 640.

Priority of liens. A title to land, under a judgment of foreclosure of a street-assessment lien, relates back to the date of the original liens foreclosed; and a sheriff's deed, based upon a judgment of foreclosure of such a lien, conveys a superior title to a sheriff's deed based upon a prior judgment of the same character, where the liens under which the prior judgment was rendered are invalid. Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1; 27 Pac. 52.

Mining claims. Relation between Federal and state laws. An action to quiet title to mining property is not an action brought under § 2326 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to determine which of the parties is best entitled to purchase from the United States, but only an ordinary action to quiet title; the proceedings in the land-office of the United States are utterly immaterial in the state court, unless they tend to show title or right of possession in one of the parties. Altoona Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Mining Co., 114 Cal. 100; 45 Pac. 1047. An action to quiet title to a mining claim, not involving a contest in the United States land-office, is to be governed and determined by the practice and the rules of pleading governing in state courts in ordinary suits brought to settle disputes as to interests in land; and want of title in the plaintiff renders it unnecessary to examine the title of the defendant. Schroder v. Aden Gold Mining Co., 144 Cal. 628; 78 Pac. 20. Under state laws, either party may bring an action to determine an adverse claim to mining property, but the jurisdiction and the procedure governing the action depend entirely upon the state constitution and laws; this action seems well adapted to the object sought to be accomplished by the Federal law, for the rights of the parties are wholly determined by act of Congress, and involve the same questions, as to the relative rights of the parties, which the officers of the land-office would otherwise be required to pass upon. Altoona Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Mining Co., 114 Cal. 100; 45 Pac. 1047. The rights of the parties to the possession of a mining claim are entirely determined by the laws of the United States granting the right to enter upon mineral lands and to extract metals therefrom and to acquire title thereto; but the suit must be tried in every respect as if no contest were pending in the land-office of the United States in regard to the right to purchase the same. Altoona Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Mining Co., 114 Cal. 100; 45 Pac. 1047.

Mining-lands, title to, by prescription. Where the defendant disclaims any interest, but alleges that the plaintiff conveyed to him the claim in controversy, and he, in turn, conveyed to other defendants, and the evidence at the trial showed that the defendant wished to develop and work the mine, and in exchange for the right to do so, purported to convey to the plaintiff the same right to work other mines, so that the transaction practically amounted to an exchange of a right to work separate mining claims, the conveyance from the plaintiff to the defendant does not preclude the plaintiff from afterwards acquiring title to the land by prescription, as against the grantee of the mining right, and those claiming under it. Baker v. Clark, 128 Cal. 181; 60 Pac. 677.

Mining-lands. Rights of agriculturists subject to those of miners. The maxim, Qui prior in tempore, potior in jure, cannot be applied in protection of a person who settles upon lands reserved from settlement by the policy of the law, as against one entering for a purpose encouraged wherever minerals may be found; if it were otherwise, persons without any right but that of possession could, under the pretense of agriculture, invade the mineral districts of the state, and swallow up the entire mineral wealth by settlements upon quarter-section tracts of land, and thus destroy, for his own benefit, the business of a neighborhood, and put the government, as well as the mining public, at defiance. McClintock v. Bryden, 5 Cal. 97; 63 Am. Dec. 87; Stoakes v. Barrett, 5 Cal. 37. Where a person settles for agricultural purposes, upon any of the mining-lands of this state, such settlement is subject to the rights of miners, who may proceed, in good faith, to extract therefrom any valuable metals found in such lands, in the most practicable manner, and with the least injury to the occupying claimant. McClintock v. Bryden, 5 Cal. 97; 63 Am. Dec. 87.

Location of mining claims. The laws of the state constitute a part of the laws by which a mining right is determined; therefore, where possession has continued for five years before the adverse right exists, it is equivalent to a location, under the Federal law. Altoona Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Mining Co., 114 Cal. 100; 45 Pac. 1047. The discovery of a mining claim vests no right or title to the property, and is but one step in acquiring title thereto, and must be followed by a location, which consists of the marking of the claim by monuments so that its boundaries can be readily traced, the posting of a notice thereon, and, where the state or district law requires it, the recording of such notice. Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. Where, at the date of the location of a mining claim, the land was vacant public land of the United States, open to exploration and location, and the plaintiff performed the various acts necessary to effect an effectual location, he is entitled to judgment in an action to quiet title. Mitchell v. Hutchinson, 142 Cal. 404; 76 Pac. 55. Where the plaintiff first made the discovery of a mining claim, but left without making a location, and a valid location of claims extending each way from the point of plaintiff's discovery is first made by other persons, the title of such locators will prevail as against the first discoverers. Adams v. Crawford, 116 Cal. 495; 48 Pac. 488. A location of a mining claim is not invalid because it conforms only partially to the United States system of public-land surveys: such conformity is required, only in so far as it is reasonably practicable. Mitchell v. Hutchinson, 142 Cal. 404; 76 Pac. 55. The statutes and mining laws of the United States do not contemplate the forcible or clandestine entry and location of lands in the peaceable possession of other parties, who have located the same in good faith, and who are endeavoring to secure their claims; and in an action to quiet title thereto, the claim of parties under such entry cannot be sustained. Weed v. Snook, 144 Cal. 439; 77 Pac. 1023.

Recording notice of location of mining claim. Where an act provided that a copy of the notice of location should be recorded within six days from the date of posting, and that a notice posted without being so recorded should not be considered notice to subsequent locators, a substantial compliance with the requirements of the act is sufficient; and if the description contained in the notice is complete enough to enable any one examining it to ascertain therefrom that the land actually claimed is included therein, there is such a substantial compliance as will satisfy the statute, for such a description gives full notice that the land has been in fact appropriated by others. Mitchell v. Hutchinson, 142 Cal. 404; 76 Pac. 55.

Development-work on mines. To hold that possession is enough to remove a mining claim from the category of unoccupied land, or that it is sufficient to prevent one from making a valid location thereon, would be to permit a locator to hold it against all the world for an indefinite time without doing any development-work whatever. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23. Where a mine is idle, the services of a watchman in looking after the property and taking care of the same may constitute work upon the claim sufficient to hold it, if such care is necessary to preserve tunnels, buildings, or structures erected to work the mine; but if there is only the naked claim to be looked after, and the watchman is placed there merely to warn prospectors, and thus prevent a relocation, it is not labor upon the mine, in the sense of the statute. Altoona Quicksilver Mining Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Mining Co., 114 Cal. 100; 45 Pac. 1047. Where the defendant did no work on a mining claim at any time subsequent to its location, as required by law, it ceases to have any validity as against a valid relocation by the plaintiff, and the mere possession of the claim by the defendant, whether actual or constructive, without development-work, cannot prevent such relocation. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23. Where the defendant proves a prior location, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove a failure of the defendant to do the required annual work; and this he has a right to do in rebuttal, without any averment to that effect in his complaint. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23.

Statute of limitations, and laches. A plea of the statute of limitations may be interposed in a suit in equity, as well as in an action at law; and this, without changing the character of the action; one of the defenses peculiar to a court of equity is the lapse of time. Hancock v. Plummer, 66 Cal. 337; 5 Pac. 514. As between the parties to a suit in partition, the statute of limitations does not run while the suit is pending. Christy v. Spring Valley Water Works, 97 Cal. 21; 31 Pac. 1110. Where the plaintiff asserts no equitable rights, the statute of limitations, and not the doctrine of laches, plainly furnishes the rule by which to determine whether the delay to assert the right is fatal to the action. Anzar v. Miller, 90 Cal. 342; 27 Pac. 299. Where the plaintiff claimed title derived from the heirs of a grantee under a Mexican grant, the statute of limitations did not begin to run against his action for the recovery of possession until the patent was issued by the board of land commissioners. Valentine v. Sloss, 103 Cal. 215; 37 Pac. 326. The statute of limitations did not commence to run against parties claiming under a patent confirming a Mexican grant until the date of the issuance of the patent, where the adverse claimant did not show the existence of a perfect grant prior to the issuance of the patent. Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 670; 41 Pac. 806. The time to commence an action, by the people of the state, under this section is limited, by § 315, ante, only by a continuous adverse possession of the lands for ten years, on the part of the defendant; the mere assertion of an adverse claim, without possession, or any proceeding to enforce it, can never ripen into a legal or equitable right as against one seised of legal estate when the adverse claim was first asserted; each day's assertion of an adverse claim gives a cause of action to quiet title, until such action has been brought. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263. A plaintiff, who has been in the possession of land, cannot be guilty of laches in the bringing of an action to remove a cloud, at any time before an action has been brought to disturb his possession, or to deprive him of any enjoyment of his right; the continued assertion of the adverse claim constitutes, from day to day, a new cause of action. Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493; 16 Pac. 380. A wife who executed and acknowledged a deed of her separate property to her husband, and retained the same without delivery, is equitably estopped to deny the delivery and to claim the premises in an action to quiet title against a bona fide purchaser deriving title through her husband, who wrongfully obtained possession of the deed and sold the property, where, instead of promptly repudiating the act of her husband, she, with full knowledge of the facts, allowed such purchaser to make permanent improvements upon the property, without notice of her claim thereto prior to the commencement of the action, which was nearly three years after acquiring such knowledge. Baillarge v. Clark, 145 Cal. 589; 104 Am. St. Rep. 75; 79 Pac. 268. An action to correct a mistake in a conveyance, to compel the defendant to execute a deed conveying to the plaintiff land included by mistake in another conveyance, and to quiet the plaintiff's title thereto, is not barred, except by the five years' limitation statute. Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141; 73 Pac. 820. Where the deceased executed deeds of distinct parcels of land to his daughter, which were absolute and unlimited, an action begun more than five years after the execution of the deeds, by the widow of the deceased, against the daughter and other children and the administrator, to quiet her title to one third of the property, and to have it adjudged that the defendants have no other title or interest therein than as heirs of the deceased, on the ground that the deeds were made upon certain alleged trusts which were invalid and contrary to law, is barred by the statute of limitations; and where the deceased, at the time of the execution of the deeds, assigned and delivered to his son, one of the defendants, certain notes, bonds, and other evidence of indebtedness, upon like trusts, such assignment is also barred by the statute, as against the widow. Page v. Page, 143 Cal. 602; 77 Pac. 452. In an action to quiet title to city lots, the defense that the lots were assessed and taxes levied more than three years prior to the beginning of the action, and demanding their payment as a condition of plaintiff's recovery, is barred by the statute; and where the record in the case shows that the assessment and the levy were not made as directed by law, they were invalid and void. Dranga v. Rowe, 127 Cal. 506; 59 Pac. 944.

"He who seeks equity must do equity." The rule that he who seeks equity must do equity applies to actions under this section. Holland v. Hotchkiss, 162 Cal. 366; 123 Pac. 258; Campbell v. Canty, 162 Cal. 382; 123 Pac. 265. Where the purchaser of land pays a deposit on account of the sale, under an agreement with the vendor, by which he was to have the deposit returned to him if the title should not be satisfactory, and it appears that the purchaser is entitled to a return of the deposit, the vendor cannot have his title quieted against the purchaser until he first restores the money received. Benson v. Shotwell, 87 Cal. 49; 25 Pac. 249; Heney v. Pesoli, 109 Cal. 53; 41 Pac. 819.

Appeal. In an action to quiet title, counsel will not be allowed to try the case upon the theory that the issue was properly before the court below, and thus entice his adversary into a trap to be sprung in the appellate court at the last moment: technical objections to pleadings will not be countenanced on appeal, when the case was tried in the court below upon the theory that the issues were properly made. Casey v. Leggett, 125 Cal. 664; 58 Pac. 264. In an action to determine the right to a mining claim, where the burden rested upon the plaintiff to satisfy the court that his contention as to the location of the monuments was correct, the finding of the court should not be disturbed, as, on appeal, interference with the findings is only warranted where they are contrary to all the evidence, and there is no substantial evidence to support them. Schroder v. Aden Gold Mining Co., 144 Cal. 628; 78 Pac. 20. In an action to quiet title, alleged error in the admission of a certain judgment roll in evidence will not be considered, where the roll is not incorporated in the record. Robinson v. Muir, 151 Cal. 118; 90 Pac. 521.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Section 380 of this code provides that "in an action brought by a person out of possession of real property to determine an adverse claim of an interest or estate therein, the person making such adverse claim and all persons in possession must be joined as defendants." Section 381 provides that "persons claiming an interest in lands under a common source of title may unite as plaintiffs in an action against any person claiming an adverse interest therein, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim, or of establishing such common source of title, or of declaring the same to be held in trust, or for removing a cloud thereon." And § 384, ante, that "all persons holding as tenants in common, joint tenants or coparceners, or any number less than all, may jointly or severally commence or defend any civil action or proceeding for the enforcement or protection of the rights of such property." See also Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313. This section enlarges the class of cases in which equitable relief could be formerly sought to quiet title. Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259. This action does not lie to determine an adverse claim to the use of water. Nevada County etc. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 283. But does not lie to determine an adverse claim to mining claims. Merced Mining Company v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 319; 68 Am. Dec. 262. The "adverse claim, estate, or interest" need not be of a legal or equitable title; the terms include every description of claim whereby the plaintiff might be deprived of the property, or its title be clouded, or value depreciated, etc. Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149. The test by which the question whether a deed would cloud title, is this: Would the owner of the property, in an action of ejectment brought by the adverse party, founded upon the deed, be required to offer evidence to defeat a recovery? If such proof would be necessary, the cloud would exist; otherwise not. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 128. If it is adjudged that the defendant has no title, the judgment will not be reversed because it restrains the defendant from setting up the title or claim declared invalid. Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563.

§ 739. When plaintiff cannot recover costs.

If the defendant in such action disclaim in his answer any interest or estate in the property, or suffer judgment to be taken against him without answer, the plaintiff cannot recover costs.

Costs. Post, §§ 1022 et seq.

Legislation § 739. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 255), changing "shall not" to "cannot."

Where judgment will be without costs. Even where the defendant makes no claim, he must file a disclaimer, and judgment may be entered against him, though in case of a disclaimer the judgment must not be for costs. Castro v. Barry, 79 Cal. 443; 21 Pac. 946. When, in an action to quiet title to land, the defendant disclaims any interest or estate in the premises, it is immaterial whether or not he had ever before claimed an interest or estate therein adversely to the plaintiff; in either event, the plaintiff would be entitled simply to a judgment quieting his title, without costs. Bulwer Consol. Mining Co. v. Standard Consol. Mining Co., 83 Cal. 589; 23 Pac. 1102. Where the defendant disclaims as to part of the premises, the dismissal of the action as to such part is not erroneous: in such case the judgment for the plaintiff would, in any event, be merely formal, and without costs. Packer v. Doray, 4 Cal. Unrep. 297; 34 Pac. 628. In an action to quiet title, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment, although the defendant makes a disclaimer, but without costs, the same as in case of default: it would be strange if the plaintiff were entitled to judgment on disclaimer, and not entitled to judgment where the answer shows no legal defense. Dranga v. Rowe, 127 Cal. 506; 59 Pac. 944.

When judgment will be set aside. An order setting aside a judgment quieting the title of the plaintiff to city lots, to which the defendant disclaimed title, and allowing the grantees of the defendant to come in and defend, will not be disturbed, where it is shown, on the part of the defendant and his grantees, that the disclaimer was made through an inadvertence and mistake of fact of the defendant's attorney in supposing that the property had been conveyed by the defendant before the commencement of the suit, whereas, in fact, the conveyances were made pending the suit, and after a notice of lis pendens had been filed by the plaintiff. Underwood v. Underwood, 87 Cal. 523; 25 Pac. 1065.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the defendant, while disclaiming, denies the possession of plaintiff and compels him to prove it, plaintiff is entitled to costs. Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563.

§ 740. Where plaintiff's right terminates pending suit, what he may recover. In an action for the recovery of property, where the plaintiff shows a right to recover at the time the action was commenced, but it appears that his right has terminated during the pendency of the action, the verdict and judgment must be according to the fact, and the plaintiff may recover damages for withholding the property.

Pendency of action. Post, § 1049.

Legislation § 740. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 256), changing "shall" to "must."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 686; the code commissioner saying, "The word 'real' is omitted before the word 'property,' the amendment thus extending the benefit of the section to all classes of property."

Pleading. If the defendant has acquired title to the demanded premises pending the litigation, evidence of this fact cannot be introduced, unless it is pleaded as a defense in a supplemental answer. McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238. A denial of the allegations of the complaint puts in issue the title of the plaintiff at the date alleged, or at the commencement of the action; and any title acquired subsequently to the issue thus joined must be set up by a supplemental answer in the nature of a plea puis darrein continuance. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

Defense. Where judgment has been rendered in favor of the plaintiff in an action to quiet title, the fact that the defendant, since the date of the judgment, has purchased an outstanding title, is no defense to an application for a writ of possession, nor can the merits of the claim be considered upon such application. Landregan v. Peppin, 94 Cal. 465; 29 Pac. 771.

Findings. In an action to quiet title, where the defendant disclaims any other interest than that the lands were situated within the boundaries of an irrigation district, and that the same were sold to him on account of an assessment, levy of tax, and delinquent sale thereunder, for the benefit and at the instance of the irrigation district, it is error for the court to find that the plaintiff is the owner in fee, and that there is no adverse claim of defendant to be determined in the action, and that any rights which the defendant may have acquired through his purchase at the delinquent sale cannot be determined in the action. Quint v. McMullen, 103 Cal. 381; 37 Pac. 381.

Damages. Where a successor to title, in ejectment, recovers, the resultant damages for the value of the use and occupation, during the period of the unlawful detention, are properly awardable to him. Cassin v. Nicholson, 154 Cal. 497; 98 Pac. 190.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Moore v. Tice, 22 Cal. 513; Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467; Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472.

§ 741. When value of improvements can be allowed as a set-off. When damages are claimed for withholding the property recovered, upon which permanent improvements have been made by a defendant, or those under whom he claims, holding under color of title adversely to the claim of the plaintiff, in good faith, the value of such improvements must be allowed as a set-off against such damages.

Counterclaim.
1. Generally. Ante, § 438.
2. Waived, unless defendant sets it up. Ante, § 439.

Legislation § 741. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 257), changing (1) "claims" to "claim" and (2) "shall" to "must."

Set-off of improvements. The value of improvements upon the premises, even where the defendant holds under color of title adversely to the plaintiff, in good faith, can only be allowed as a set-off to the damages. Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465. The defendant cannot have his improvements set off against the mesne profits, where they were made after the plaintiff's title accrued, or where the holding of the defendant is not adverse, within this section. Bay v. Pope, 18 Cal. 694. The right to set off the value of improvements, against the claim for damages, comes from the statute, and, as a matter of pleading, all the facts upon which the right is by the statute made to hinge should be alleged. Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346. The right of a defendant to set off the value of improvements made by him, against the claim of the plaintiff for damages, depends upon whether they were made by him or his grantors holding under color of title adverse to the plaintiff, in good faith, and upon whether they were permanent or not. Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346; Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 487; Wise v. Burton, 73 Cal. 174; 14 Pac. 683. The provisions of this section for the set-off of improvements apply only to improvements made in good faith, under color of title, where the holding is adverse; and the holding of such purchaser is not adverse to his vendor until after the demand for possession. Hannan v. McNickle, 82 Cal. 122; 23 Pac. 271. Under this section, allowances for improvements can only be made as an offset for damages claimed for withholding possession, where the court finds that the value of the improvements placed on the land is in excess of the value of the rents and profits, and therefore allowed no judgment for rents or damages. Huse v. Den, 85 Cal. 390; 20 Am. St. Rep. 232; 24 Pac. 790.

Damages for improvements. Although the owner is entitled to full compensation for the land taken, and for all permanent improvements thereon made by himself, or by those from whom he derived title, yet he is not entitled to damages for improvements made by the party at whose suit the land is afterwards condemned, without authority of law or the consent of the owner of the land. Stewart v Sefton, 108 Cal. 197; 41 Pac. 293.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Value of improvements can only be allowed as a set-off to the damages. Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465; Ford v. Holton, 5 Cal. 319. Such set-off must be claimed in the answer. Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160. The defendant cannot have his improvements set off against the mesne profits, if the improvements were made after plaintiff's title accrued, or where the holding of the defendant is not adverse. Bay v. Pope, 18 Cal. 694. One who entered under a bond for a deed from the plaintiff, can set off his improvements against the damages for use and occupation. Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 145; 56 Am. Dec. 326. Where the defendant occupied and improved the land, under color of title, the improvements erected by him constitute a set-off, to the extent of their value, to the damages recovered by the plaintiff for the withholding of possession. Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165. But the improvements must have been made in good faith. Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330; Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 347; Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 488; Carpentier v. Mendenhall, 28 Cal. 485; 87 Am. Dec. 135.

2. Damages. In ejectment, if the court finds the value of the use and occupation in both gold and United States treasury notes, judgment may be rendered for the currency value. Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 347. If the defendant pleads the statute of limitations, the plaintiff can only recover the rents and profits (Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330), or damages for the detention for three years next before the commencement of the action. Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 488. Plaintiff is entitled to recover damages measured by the value of the rents and profits up to the time of judgment. Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 488.

§ 742. An order may be made to allow a party to survey and measure the land in dispute. The court in which an action is pending for the recovery of real property, or for damages for an injury thereto, or a judge thereof may, on motion, upon notice by either party for good cause shown, grant an order allowing to such party the right to enter upon the property and make survey and measurement thereof, and of any tunnels, shafts, or drifts therein, for the purpose of the action, even though entry for such purpose has to be made through other lands belonging to parties to the action.

Order for survey, where title to land in two counties disputed. See Pol. Code, § 4216.

Legislation § 742. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 258), (1) adding "or for damages for an injury thereto," (2) adding "and of any tunnels, shafts, or drifts thereon," (3) changing "purposes" to "purpose," and (4) adding last clause, beginning "even though."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 11, (1) striking out "or a county judge" after "judge thereof," and (2) changing "thereon" to "therein."

§ 743. Order, what to contain, and how served. If unnecessary injury done, the party surveying to be liable therefor. The order must describe the property, and a copy thereof must be served on the owner or occupant; and thereupon such party may enter upon the property, with necessary surveyors and assistants, and make such survey and measurement; but if any unnecessary injury be done to the property he is liable therefor.

Legislation § 743. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 259), changing (1) "shall" to "must" in both instances, (2) "measurements" to "measurement," and (3) "shall be" to "is."

§ 744. A mortgage must not be deemed a conveyance, whatever its terms. A mortgage of real property shall not be deemed a conveyance, whatever its terms, so as to enable the owner of the mortgage to recover possession of the real property without a foreclosure and sale.

Conveyance deemed mortgage. Civ. Code, §§ 2924, 2925.
Proof. Civ. Code, § 2925.
Mortgagee's possession. Civ. Code, § 2927.

Legislation § 744. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 260.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. This section was adopted in full view of the fact that mortgages were in common use and recognized by law, whether enforced in a court of law or of equity, in various forms, some with a condition of defeasance in the instrument itself, others in a separate instrument, and still others without any defeasance in writing at all; and the provision covers all these cases, whatever the terms of the instrument; it was intended to put them all on a common footing, and treat them, as the parties intended, as securities for the performance of the thing to be performed, and not as transferring either the title or the right of possession, without an express agreement that possession might be taken by the party secured. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28. The words, "whatever its terms," in this section, do not prohibit separate stipulations between the parties for the possession, or for the sale of premises upon default; but were intended merely to control the terms of grant, bargain, and sale generally employed in mortgages. Fogarty v. Sawyer, 17 Cal. 589. The provision of this section, prohibiting a recovery, has reference to an action at law, and it necessarily assumes that the fact which shall defeat the recovery may be shown in the very action in which the recovery is sought; if it cannot be thus shown, then, as to a large number of cases embraced within the provisions of the statute, the purpose of the legislature is defeated; but courts of equity exercise no arbitrary powers; they simply administer, in forms peculiarly their own, one branch of the municipal law; there must be a right recognized by the municipal law, before even a court of equity can enforce it; their mode of proceeding was different; but now, under our system, there is no difference in the forms of proceeding. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28.

Nature of mortgage. The original character of mortgages has undergone a complete change: they have ceased to be conveyances, except in form; they are no longer understood as contracts of purchase and sale between the parties, but as transactions by which a loan is made on the one side and a security is given for its repayment on the other, and default in the payment of the money secured does not change their character; they create only a lien on the land, which is an incident of the secured debt, and passes by a similar assignment of the debt (Savings and Loan Society v. McKoon, 120 Cal. 177; 52 Pac. 305); and payment after default operates to discharge the lien, equally with payment at maturity of the debt. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28. This section changes the common-law character of the mortgage, and, under it, the mortgage creates a mere lien for the purposes of security, and, as in other cases of lien upon real property, can only be enforced by judicial proceedings, except by the authority of the owner of the property; by virtue of the mortgage alone, the mortgagee can neither acquire the possession nor dispose of the premises, but the existence of the mortgage does not prevent the owner from making an independent contract for the possession, nor from authorizing a sale of the premises, the mortgagee consenting thereto, to pay off the debt. Fogarty v. Sawyer, 17 Cal. 589.

Mortgage does not pass title. A mortgage is not a conveyance, and does not pass title. Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 32; 77 Pac. 712. All mortgages, whether in the usual form, or absolute conveyances on their faces, stand upon the same footing in the respect that neither conveys a title in fact. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28. The mortgagee is not regarded as ever having the title of the mortgagor until judicial foreclosure and sale: the title remains with the mortgagor, whether possession be taken or otherwise. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28; Johnson v. Sherman, 15 Cal. 287; 76 Am. Dec. 481.

Deed deemed a mortgage when. A deed, absolute in form, if intended as a mortgage, does not transfer title as between the parties to it. Cunningham v. Hawkins, 27 Cal. 603; Taylor v. McLain, 64 Cal. 513; 2 Pac. 399; Healy v. O'Brien, 66 Cal. 517; 6 Pac. 386; Turner v. McDonald, 76 Cal. 177; 9 Am. St. Rep. 189; 18 Pac. 262. No title passes to the grantee by a deed, absolute in form, without any defeasance, if the purpose of the deed is to secure a debt; and, in this respect, a conveyance, absolute on its face, stands on the same footing as a conveyance with a defeasance. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28. A deed, absolute on its face, made to a creditor of the grantor, as security for a sum of money due from the grantor to the grantee, in pursuance of an understanding that the grantee will sell the land, pay off a mortgage held by a third party, retain the sum of money due himself, and pay the residue to the grantor, is a mortgage, and conveys no title to the creditor, though sufficient to pass title as between the grantor and a purchaser from the grantee in good faith and for a valuable consideration, without notice. Wenzel v. Schultz, 100 Cal. 250; 34 Pac. 696. Where a deed was intended as, and was in fact, a mortgage, made to a party formerly the agent of the grantor, but who did not continue as such agent after the execution of the deed, nor continue to receive and disburse moneys and render services subsequently to that time, as was the case previously, the legal title does not pass by the deed, and subsequent encumbrancers or purchasers with notice acquire no rights as against the plaintiff. Leonis v. Hammel, 1 Cal. App. 390; 82 Pac. 349.

Evidence proving deed to be a mortgage. Testimony is admissible to show that a deed, absolute on its face, was intended as a mortgage. Cunningham v. Hawkins, 27 Cal. 603. Parol evidence is admissible at law, as well as in equity, to show that a deed, absolute on its face, was given as security for money, and is in fact a mortgage. Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28; Gay v. Hamilton, 33 Cal. 686. A clear case should be made, in order to justify a court or jury in finding, upon parol testimony, that a deed, absolute on its face, is a mortgage. Hopper v. Jones, 29 Cal. 18.

Mortgagee's power to sell, and right to possession. The right to dispose both of the possession and the estate follows necessarily from the ownership of the property; this being so, no valid objection can be urged against incorporating the contract and the power in the same instrument with the mortgage: they do not become, in that way, any part of the mortgage, but are as much independent of it as though contained in separate instruments. Fogarty v. Sawyer, 17 Cal. 589. The power given in a mortgage, "to proceed to sell in the manner prescribed by law," is, in substance, the same as a power to proceed to sell by means of an action to foreclose. Brickell v. Batchelder, 62 Cal. 623. Where the mortgage is in the usual form, and conveys the property, but provides that if certain payments shall be made, the instrument is to be void, but if default shall be made in their payment, the property may be sold, until default and a consequent foreclosure and sale, the mortgagee has no right to enter upon or take possession of the premises, and where he does so, he may be ejected, the same as any other intruder. Kidd v. Teeple, 22 Cal. 255. Possession taken with the consent of the owner, or by contract with him, may confer rights as to third parties, but they are independent and distinct from any rights springing from the mortgage, from which they derive no support. Johnson v. Sherman, 15 Cal. 287; 76 Am. Dec. 481.

Deed of trust conveys title. A deed of trust conveys the legal title: the contract is, that the party in whom the debtor has seen fit to vest the legal title may, in case of default, sell the property and transfer the legal title to the purchaser; such is the meaning and intention of the contract, and there is nothing therein to make it invalid, nor is there any reason, under this section, why its provisions should not be carried out. Bateman v. Burr, 57 Cal. 480.

Deed with defeasance is not mortgage. Where the plaintiff borrowed a sum of money, and to secure the payment thereof made a deed conveying real property to a second party, with the lender named as party of the third part in the deed, which recited that it was made to secure the indebtedness, and provided that upon default in payment, and on the request of the third party, the party of the second part should sell the premises, the instrument is not a mortgage, but a deed of trust, and conferred a power of sale upon the party of the second part. Bateman v. Burr, 57 Cal. 480.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It was held in Hughes v. Davis, 40 Cal. 117, that an absolute deed, though shown by parol evidence to have been intended as a mortgage, does convey the legal title. In Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 28, upon a review of all the authorities, the reverse was held. See also Civ. Code, §§ 2888, 2920, 2924, and notes.

§ 745. When court may grant injunction; during foreclosure; after sale on execution, before conveyance. The court may, by injunction, on good cause shown, restrain the party in possession from doing any act to the injury of real property during the foreclosure of a mortgage thereon; or, after a sale on execution, before a conveyance.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In Sands v. Pfeiffer, 10 Cal. 258, it was held that this remedy was only preventive, and did not exclude any other remedy.

§ 746. Damages may be recovered for injury to the possession after sale and before delivery of possession. When real property has been sold on execution, the purchaser thereof, or any person who may have succeeded to his interest, may, after his estate becomes absolute, recover damages for injury to the property by the tenant in possession after sale, and before possession is delivered under the conveyance.

Damages in ejectment. Resultant damages for the value of the use and occupation of property, during the period of an unlawful detention thereof, may properly be awarded to the plaintiff in ejectment. Cassin v. Nicholson, 154 Cal. 497; 98 Pac. 190.

§ 747. Action not to be prejudiced by alienation pending suit. An action for the recovery of real property against a person in possession cannot be prejudiced by any alienation made by such person, either before or after the commencement of the action.

Legislation § 747. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 263.

§ 748. Mining claims, actions concerning, to be governed by local rules. In actions respecting mining claims, proof must be admitted of the customs, usages, or regulations established and in force at the bar or diggings embracing such claim; and such customs, usages, or regulations, when not in conflict with the laws of this state, must govern the decision of the action.

Legislation § 748. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 621), (1) omitting "constitution and" before "laws," and (2) changing "shall" to "must."

Construction of section. There seems to be implied, from the language of this section, a permission, upon the part of the state, to the miner, to seek, whenever he chooses, in the gold-bearing districts, for the precious metals, and that the state extends to him whatever right it has to the mineral when found: it is the policy of both the Federal and the state governments to reserve public lands containing precious metals from settlement for agricultural purposes; and the entry, for mining purposes, upon public lands already settled, is not tortious. McClintock v. Bryden, 5 Cal. 97; 63 Am. Dec. 87.

Possession proved how. In ascertaining the limits of a mining possession, the same common-law principles are to be relied upon as those which regulate the right to the possession of agricultural lands, although the indicia of possession are not necessarily the same; the possession, in such case, may be proved by satisfactory evidence of notorious acts of occupation, reference being had to the nature of the lands, the uses to which they can be put, and to the general practices or customs of the region with respect to the occupation of lands of the particular character; but the possession, however proved, being established, the presumption of grant arises. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 10 Pac. 674.

Local usage and customs as to mining customs. Local usages and customs, demanded by new necessities, by which persons engaged in mining pursuits were governed in the acquisition, use, and forfeiture or loss, of mining-ground, having received the sanction of the legislature, have become as much a part of the law of the state as the common law itself, which was not adopted in a more solemn form. When the provisions of this section became a part of the laws of this state, there had sprung up, throughout the mining regions, local customs and usages, by which persons engaged in mining pursuits were governed in the acquisition and use, and forfeiture or loss, of mining-ground (the word "forfeiture" being used here in its mining-law sense); these customs, differing in different localities, and varying according to the character of the mines, and prescribing the acts by which the right to mine a particular piece of ground could be secured, and its use and enjoyment preserved, were few, plain and simple, and well understood by those with whom they originated, and well adapted to secure the end designed to be accomplished, and were adequate to the judicial determination of all controversies touching mining rights. Morton v. Solambo Copper Mining Co., 26 Cal. 527.

Proof of mining customs, usages, and regulations. A local mining regulation or custom, adopted after the location of a claim, cannot be given in evidence to limit the extent of a claim previously located; nor, in order to show reasonableness of extent, is evidence admissible of local usages and customs in different counties in the mineral regions, varying from each other as to the size of claims; a general uniform custom, as to size, should be proved, if one exist; but where there are no local customs or regulations in force in the district where the claim is located, at the time of its location, general customs then in force are admissible in evidence upon the question of reasonableness of extent. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 31 Cal. 387. The customs, usages, and regulations accepted by the miners of a particular district are binding only as to possessory rights within that district, and they must be proved as facts. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; 10 Pac. 674. No distinction is made, by this statute, between the effect of a "custom" or "usage," the proof of which must rest in parol, and a "regulation," which may be adopted at a miners' meeting and embodied in a written local law. Harvey v. Ryan, 42 Cal. 626.

Abandonment pleaded and proved how. Abandonment of a mining claim need not be especially pleaded, but may be given in evidence under a denial of title, and may be proved by the plaintiff in an action to quiet title, to rebut a title set up by the defendant under an earlier location; if the intention to abandon has been formed and once acted upon, the abandonment is as absolute, if it exists for a moment, as though it continued for years. Trevaskis v. Peard, 111 Cal. 599; 44 Pac. 246.

Forfeiture proved how. Forfeiture of a mining claim cannot be established, except upon clear and convincing proof of the failure of the owner to perform the work or to make the improvements to the amount required by law. Goldberg v. Bruschi, 146 Cal. 708; 81 Pac. 23.

Sale proved how. The entry of the sale of a mining claim, made by the recorder of a mining district, in a book kept for the record and transfers of claims, and authorized by the mining customs and laws in force in the district where the claim is situated, is admissible in evidence to prove the sale of the claim, unless objected to: such entry is at least secondary evidence of the sale. St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 263.

Terms defined. The term "forfeiture," as used in our mining customs and codes, means the loss of a right, previously acquired, to mine a particular piece of ground, by neglect or failure to comply with the rules and regulations of the bar or diggings in which the ground is situated; and "abandonment," in its common-law sense, is merely a question of intention, and takes place when the ground is left by the locator, without any intention of returning or making any future use of it, independently of any mining rule or regulation. A right to hold and work a mining claim, when acquired, may be lost by a failure or neglect to comply with the rules and regulations of the miners, relative to the acquisition and tenure of claims, in force in the bar or diggings where the claim is located; and if such rules and regulations are not complied with by those holding claims in the district, the ground becomes once more open to the occupation of the next comer. St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 263.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The power of miners to make rules and regulations was sustained in English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574; see also Pralus v. Jefferson Gold etc. Mining Co., 34 Cal. 558; Pralus v. Pacific Gold etc. Mining Co., 35 Cal. 30. The act of 1859 (chap. 97), respecting the mines; the Practice Act of 1851 (§ 621), relative to proof in actions respecting mining claims; the act of 1852, relative to possessory actions, commented on, and the conclusion reached, that, so far as they touched the question of a license from the state to mine, they relate to public lands alone. Biddle Boggs v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 279. Where parol evidence is given of certain regulations of miners, and it does not appear until the cross-examination of the witness that the regulations were in writing, the course to pursue, if any objection is taken to the evidence, is by motion to strike it out. Kiler v. Kimbal, 10 Cal. 267. Mining laws are to be construed by the court, and the question whether by such laws a forfeiture had accrued, is a question of law, and cannot be properly submitted to a jury. Fairbanks v. Woodhouse, 6 Cal. 433. Where a party's rights to a mining claim are fixed by the rules of property, part of the general law of the land, they cannot be divested by any mere neighborhood custom or regulation. Waring v. Crow, 11 Cal. 366. The quantity of ground a miner can claim by location or prior appropriation, for mining purposes, may be limited by the mining rules of the district. Prosser v. Parks, 18 Cal. 47; English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107; 76 Am. Dec. 574. But the quantity he can acquire by purchase cannot be limited. Prosser v. Parks, 18 Cal. 47. The fact that mining laws and regulations were passed on a different day from that advertised for a meeting of miners, does not invalidate them. The court will not inquire into the regularity of the modes in which these local legislatures or primary assemblages act. They must be the judges of their own proceedings. It is sufficient that the miners agree, whether in public meeting or after due notice, upon their local laws, and that these are recognized as the rules of the vicinage, unless fraud be shown or other like cause for rejecting the laws. Gore v. McBrayer, 18 Cal. 582. If a mining custom allows one to locate a lode or vein for himself and others, by placing thereon a notice, with his own name and the names of the others appended thereto, designating the extent of his claim; and one person thus locates a lode for himself and several others, some of whom have no knowledge of the location, the persons who have no knowledge of the location by the same become tenants in common with the locator and the others, and cannot be divested of their interest by the locators afterwards tearing down the notice and posting up another, omitting their names, unless this is done with their knowledge and consent. Morton v. Solambo Copper Mining Co., 26 Cal. 527; Gore v. McBrayer, 18 Cal. 582. A local mining regulation or custom, adopted after the location of a mine, cannot limit the extent of a claim previously located. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 31 Cal. 387. Where the original records have been destroyed by fire, and the miners, by a resolution subsequently passed, requiring the claims to be re-recorded in a new book, such book is admissible in evidence in the trial of an action for a mining claim, to show that the rules of the vicinage have been complied with. McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426. Plaintiffs having offered in evidence the book where mining claims are recorded according to mining rules, to show title in the original locators, then offered the entry in that book of the transfer of said claims from such locators to the lessors of plaintiffs, as proof of the fact of transfer. The court properly excluded this entry until proof aliunde of the transfer. Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37; 76 Am. Dec. 567. Upon the question of reasonableness of the extent of a mining location, a general custom, existing anterior to the location, may be given in evidence. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 20 Cal. 198. Controversies affecting a mining right must be solved and determined by the customs and usages of the bar or diggings embracing the claim to which such right is asserted or denied, whether such customs and usages are written or unwritten. Morton v. Solambo Copper Mining Co., 26 Cal. 527.

§ 749. [Related to mode of service in actions relating to real property. Repealed.]

Legislation § 749. 1. Added by Stats. 1891, p. 278 (erroneously numbered 149), approved March 31, 1891.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Repealed by Stats. 1907, p. 686; the code commissioner saying, "This section is hereby repealed because it has been made superfluous by the late amendments to § 412 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Moreover, there are two sections 749 in the code, one enacted in 1891 and the other in 1900 [1901]. They do not supersede each other[,] under the principle of Ex parte Ruffin, 119 Cal. 487. The superfluous one is here repealed, leaving the other in force."

§ 749. Determination of adverse claims to real property. Unknown defendants. Lis pendens. An action may be brought to determine the adverse claims to and clouds upon title to real property by a person who, by himself or by himself and his predecessors in interest, has been in the actual, exclusive and adverse possession of such property continuously for twenty years prior to the filing of the complaint, claiming to own the same in fee against the whole world, and who has paid all taxes of every kind levied or assessed against the property during the period of five years continuously next preceding the filing of the complaint. Said action shall be commenced by the filing of a verified complaint averring the matters above enumerated. The said complaint may include as defendants in such action, in addition to such persons as appear of record to have, all other persons who are known to the plaintiff to have, some claim or cloud on the lands described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership, or other persons unknown claiming any right, interest or lien in such lands, or cloud upon the title of plaintiff thereto, and the plaintiff may describe such unknown defendants in the complaint as follows: "also all other persons unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership, or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto." Within ten days after the filing of the complaint, plaintiff shall file, or cause to be filed, in the office of the county recorder of the county where the property is situated, a notice of the pendency of the action, containing the matters required by section four hundred and nine of this code.

Legislation § 749. 1. Added by Stats. 1901, p. 579, and then read: "If, in an action to determine an adverse claim to real property, it appears by a verified complaint that the plaintiff, or the plaintiff and his predecessors in interest, have been for twenty years prior to filing such complaint, in the actual and exclusive possession of such property in his or their own right, holding and claiming the same adversely to all other persons, and that, in addition to the defendant named in the complaint, there is or may be some other person or persons whose names are unknown to him, who claim some estate or interest in such property adversely to him, the clerk must issue a summons which must contain the matters required by section four hundred and seven, and, in addition thereto, a description of the property, and a direction that all persons claiming any estate or interest therein, appear and answer the complaint within thirty days after the service thereof."

2. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 104. See ante, Legislation § 749.

Construction of section. Whether or not an action is a proceeding under this section and §§ 750 and 751, post, is to be determined from the terms of the sections. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co., 150 Cal. 647; 89 Pac. 615.

Service by publication, effect of. In an action relating to real property, summons may be served by publication, but the jurisdiction acquired is in rem. Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266; 56 Am. St. Rep. 97; 37 L. R. A. 626; 47 Pac. 37.

Substituted service as to unknown claimants. Courts have jurisdiction to declare title to real property within the state to be vested in the plaintiff as against other claimants, known or unknown, upon substituted service: unknown claimants cannot be dealt with by personal service. Title etc. Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan, 150 Cal. 289; 119 Am. St. Rep. 199; 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 692; 88 Pac. 356.

Estoppel against defendant voluntarily appearing. A defendant sued under a fictitious name, who appears and answers, is bound by the judgment, although his true name was never inserted in the record; and one who voluntarily appears in an action to quiet title cannot complain that a notice of lis pendens was not filed; and such omission cannot affect the court's jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the action. Blackburn v. Bucksport etc. R. R. Co., 7 Cal. App. 649; 95 Pac. 668. A complaint to determine adverse claims to realty, in the usual form, alleging that the title to the land is in the plaintiff, and that the defendants, without right, make some claim thereto adversely to the plaintiff's title and estate, but which does not have the necessary allegations required by this section and §§ 750 and 751, post, sufficiently states a cause of action under § 738, ante, but not under this section and §§ 750, 751, post. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Farming etc. Co., 150 Cal. 647; 89 Pac. 615.

Action to quiet title against unknown owners. See note 87 Am. St. Rep. 366.

Whether ancestor must have been in possession to give heirs the benefit of his color of title. See note 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 403.

§ 750. Summons; service, and proof of service. Publication of summons. Within one year after the filing of the complaint, as required by the preceding section, a summons must be issued, which shall contain the matters required by section four hundred and seven of this code, and in addition a description of the property and a statement of the object of the action. In said summons the said unknown defendants shall be designated as in the complaint. Within thirty days after the issuance of the summons, the plaintiff shall post or cause to be posted a copy thereof in a conspicuous place on the property. All defendants residing in the state of California, whose place of residence is known to the plaintiff, shall be served personally. After service on all such defendants has been made, the plaintiff, or his agent, or attorney, shall make and file an affidavit wherein there shall be stated the names of the defendants who have been served personally, the names of the defendants who reside out of the state and their places of residence, if known to the plaintiff, and the names of the defendants residing in or out of the state whose place of residence is unknown to the plaintiff, and thereupon the court or a judge thereof shall make an order directing the said summons to be served upon the defendants residing out of the state, whose place of residence is known to the plaintiff and upon the defendants residing in or out of the state, whose place of residence is unknown to the plaintiff, and upon all the unknown defendants as stated in the complaint and summons, by publication in some newspaper of general circulation printed and published in the county where the property is situated, and if there be no such paper in such county, then in some adjoining county, to be designated by the court or judge thereof, which publication shall be for once a week for two successive months. A copy of the summons and complaint, within ten days after the making of said order, properly addressed and with the postage thereon fully prepaid, shall be mailed to each of the defendants who reside out of the state, at their place of residence, if known, and also to the defendants residing in or out of the state whose place of residence is unknown to plaintiff, addressed to them at the county seat of the county where the action is commenced. All such unknown persons so served shall have the same rights as are provided by law in cases of all other defendants named, upon whom service is made by publication, or personally, and the action shall proceed against such unknown persons in the same manner as against the defendants who are named upon whom service is made by publication or personally and with like effect; and any such unknown person who has or claims to have any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the said property, or cloud on the title thereto, adverse to plaintiff, at the time of the commencement of the action, who has been duly served as aforesaid, and any one claiming under him, shall be concluded by the judgment in such action as effectually as if the action was brought against the said person by his or her name and personal service of process was obtained, notwithstanding any such unknown person may be under legal disability. Service shall be deemed complete upon the completion of the publication.

Publication of summons. See ante, § 412.

Legislation § 750. 1. Added by Stats. 1901, p. 579, and then read: "The court, at any time after the issuing of the summons mentioned in the preceding section, may make an order that it be served as against all unknown owners and all persons not named in the complaint who claim any estate or interest in the property, by posting a copy thereof in a conspicuous place on such property, and by publication for the time and in the manner designated in section four hundred and thirteen. With respect to the defendants whose names are stated in the complaint, the summons must be served as in other cases."

2. Amended by Stats. 1903, p. 105.

Jurisdiction upon constructive service of process against a non-resident as to lands within state. See note 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 625.

§ 751. Judgment must not be entered by default. When entered, is conclusive. Remedy is cumulative. When the summons has been served as provided in the preceding section and the time for answering has expired, the court shall proceed to hear the case as in other cases and shall have jurisdiction to examine into and determine the legality of plaintiff's title and of the title and claim of all the defendants and of all unknown persons, and to that end must not enter any judgment by default, but must in all cases require evidence of plaintiff's title and possession and hear such evidence as may be offered respecting the claims and title of any of the defendants and must thereafter direct judgment to be entered in accordance with the evidence and the law. The court before proceeding to hear the case must require proof to be made that the summons has been served and posted as hereinbefore directed and that the required notice of pendency of action has been filed. The judgment after it has become final is conclusive against all the persons named in the summons and complaint who have been served and against all unknown persons as stated in the complaint and summons who have been served by publication, but shall not be conclusive against the state of California or the United States. Said judgment shall have the effect of a judgment in rem except as against the state of California and the United States; and provided further, that the said judgment shall not bind or be conclusive against any person claiming any estate, title, right, possession or lien to the property under the plaintiff or his predecessors in interest, which claim, lien, estate or right of possession has arisen or been created by the plaintiff or his predecessors in interest within twenty years prior to the filing of the complaint. The remedy provided in this and the two preceding sections shall be construed as cumulative and not exclusive of any other remedy, form or right of action or proceeding now allowed by law.

Decrees affecting realty, to be recorded. See Pol. Code, § 4134.

Legislation § 751. 1. Added by Stats. 1901, p. 579, and then read: "When summons has been served as provided in the preceding section and the time for answering has expired, the court has jurisdiction to examine into and determine the legality of plaintiff's title and of the title and claim of all unknown claimants and of all other persons, and to that end must not enter any judgment by default, but must, in all cases, require evidence of the plaintiff's title and possession and hear such evidence as may be offered respecting the claim and title of any other person and must thereafter direct judgment to be entered in accordance with the evidence. The judgment when entered is conclusive against all the parties named in the summons and upon whom it has been served, and also against all unknown claimants and all other persons, other than this state or the United States, and excepting persons whose title or estate is disclosed by the records in the office of the county recorder of the county wherein the property is situated, and who have not been made parties to the action."

Partition of dominant tenements. Easements. Civ. Code, § 807.

Intervention. Ante, § 387.

Legislation § 752. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 264, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 704.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. The operation of the action of partition, as known at the common law, has been greatly enlarged. Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221. The whole scope and tenor of the statute relating to the partition of lands show that the intention was to make the one judgment of partition final and conclusive on all persons interested in the property, or any part of it, of whom the court could acquire jurisdiction; such actions, though regulated to a great extent by the statute, partake more fully of the principles and rules of equity than those of law, both in respect to the mode of procedure prescribed and the remedies provided. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. There is nothing in the law that requires the whole of a Mexican grant to be included in a partition suit: all that is required is, that the land sought to be partitioned comes within the description given in this section. Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 19; 77 Pac. 712; 69 Pac. 228.

Purpose of proceeding. The purpose of an action for partition is to enable the co-tenants to enjoy the possession in severalty, and not to be compelled to submit to joint possession. Mills v. Stump, 20 Cal. App. 84; 128 Pac. 349. The provision of the code being that the title of the respective parties of any portion of the land may be determined in an action of partition, there is no reason why the determination should not be as conclusive as it would be if made in an action brought for the sole purpose of its determination. Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590. The action of partition was not intended to try the title to the land, and where possession cannot be effected as the result of the partition, there is no necessity for making it. Mills v. Stump, 20 Cal. App. 84; 128 Pac. 349. A proceeding in partition answers the double purpose of dividing the land and settling the title; and the mere fact of an adverse holding by the defendant constitutes no objection to the proceeding. Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590.

Jurisdiction. The probate court has no jurisdiction to make partition of real estate, except in the course of the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, and for the purpose of distribution to the heirs or devisees of such estates. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227. Where persons are tenants in common with an estate, or its distributees, and they do not deraign their title through the estate, the superior court only has jurisdiction to make partition. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

Who may bring action. Only the co-tenants mentioned in this section, who hold and are in possession, can bring an action for partition, and only the real property thus held by them can be partitioned; the co-tenancy is that which gives the right to a partition; several persons together may own a thing without being co-tenants thereof, and, in such a case, under a statute like ours, no partition can be had. Jameson v. Hayward, 106 Cal. 682; 46 Am. St. Rep. 268; 39 Pac. 1078. A co-tenant not in possession can maintain a suit in partition against a co-tenant whose possession is adverse and hostile. Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590; Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934. The right of a tenant in common to maintain an action for partition is not affected by the lien of a mortgage upon his share, which may be discharged at any time by payment of the debt secured; nor is it affected by a prior trust in the land, created by all of the tenants in common, which, if valid, has terminated in the cessation of the estate of the trustee therein. Gardiner v. Cord, 145 Cal. 157; 78 Pac. 544. Where there is no adverse possession against a tenant in common by any of his co-tenants, or if possession was had by a trustee, it was as much the possession of the plaintiff as of the other co-tenants, and there was no possession such as to put the plaintiff on inquiry, and no open repudiation of any trust by the trustee to the knowledge of the plaintiff, he is not barred from bringing his action in partition. Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 500; 24 Pac. 172; 25 Pac. 64. This section gives to any one or more of several co-tenants of real property a right of action for its partition according to the respective rights of the persons interested therein, and for a sale of said property if partition cannot be had; and in the succeeding sections provision is made for ascertaining the respective rights of the parties to the action, and for the satisfaction or other disposition of any liens thereon; and, although a party may, by some act or agreement on his part, estop himself from enforcing his right to a partition, the mere fact that his interest in the land is subject to a lien or encumbrance will not, of itself, operate as such estoppel. Gardiner v. Cord, 145 Cal. 157; 78 Pac. 544. An action in partition should be brought in the name of the real party in interest; and a holder under a conveyance by one tenant in common of a specific parcel of the common lands, as well as the co-tenants of his grantor, should be made a party to such action. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. An action for partition may be maintained by the owner of an equitable title; such a title is real property and an estate of inheritance, which may descend or be conveyed by the owner; and as legal and equitable remedies may be had in the same case, the owner of the equitable title to an undivided interest in land may sue to establish his right, and to obtain a partition of the common estate. Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 500; 24 Pac. 172; 25 Pac. 64. The owner of an equitable title to an undivided interest may sue to establish his right, and to obtain a division of the common estate. Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934. The administrator of an estate has no such interest in the land of the deceased as to entitle him to institute partition proceedings; he cannot represent either side in a contest between heirs, devisees, or legatees; and the language of the court in Bath v. Valdez, 70 Cal. 350, is clearly obiter dictum, where it is said that actions may be maintained by the administrator of an estate for the partition thereof; the intent of § 1581, post, is, not to give the administrator the right to sue for partition of the estate, but to give to the heirs and devisees the benefit of the administrator's possession for the purpose of their maintaining the actions described in that section, including suits by them for partition of the estate. Ryer v. Fletcher Ryer Co., 126 Cal. 482; 58 Pac. 908. If a purchaser of timber standing on land has ten years in which to remove it, but fails to do so, a court of equity, upon a showing by the owner that the land is valueless to him so long as the timber remains thereon, but would be valuable if it were removed, has power to accomplish a segregation and beneficial appropriation of the respective interests in the property to the respective owners. Gibbs v. Peterson, 163 Cal. 758; 127 Pac. 62.

Necessary parties. Where partition is had of several tracts in one action, all parties must be co-tenants of each tract; otherwise there would be a misjoinder of causes of action. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. A mortgagee, who has no lien when an action of partition is commenced, need not be made a party. Towle Bros. v. Quinn, 141 Cal. 382; 74 Pac. 1046. The grantee of a special location occupies, as to such location, the identical position that his grantor held immediately before the execution of the conveyance; hence, the holder of such special location is a necessary party to an action for the partition of the general tract. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

Complaint, sufficiency of. A complaint in an action for partition must aver that the co-tenants hold and are in possession of the real property as joint tenants or as tenants in common, in which property one or more of them have an estate of inheritance, or for life or lives, or for years; and if these averments are not made, it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69.

Action when defendant is out of possession. The fact that the defendant was out of possession when the action was commenced, is not material, where the judgment, under the authority of § 759, post, determines the rights of the parties, as though each were in possession. Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221.

Partition in one or several actions. Partition may be had, in one action, of two or more tracts of land, though such tracts are situated in different counties; such suit being maintainable in any county in which a part of the property is situated. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. Real and personal property may be partitioned separately, where it does not appear that such a course will greatly prejudice the owners. Woodward v. Raum, 3 Cal. Unrep. 734; 31 Pac. 930. The fact that the rights of adverse occupants of the land sought to be partitioned may be put in issue, tried, and determined, does not affect the question of joinder as to different tracts of land. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232.

Estate or interest not subject to partition. The grant of an undivided interest in mining-ground, expressly conditioned that no rights are conveyed, except a mining right upon the premises, vests in the vendee only the right of taking from the land any minerals contained in it to the extent of the interest granted; the vendee does not, by virtue of the conveyance, become a coparcener, joint tenant, or tenant in common, with the vendor, in the land itself; and his interest is not an estate which can be the subject of an action for partition. Smith v. Cooley, 65 Cal. 46; 2 Pac. 880. A right to the use of state lands for oyster-beds is not a subject of partition. Darbee & Immel Oyster etc. Co. v. Pacific Oyster Co., 150 Cal. 392; 119 Am. St. Rep. 227; 88 Pac. 1090. There can be no partition of a homestead by either party. Hannon v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 12 Cal. App. 350; 107 Pac. 335; Mills v. Stump, 20 Cal. App. 84; 128 Pac. 349.

Effect of conveyance by co-tenant. One co-tenant cannot, by a conveyance of his interest in a portion of the property held in common, prejudice the rights of his co-tenants. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. One tenant in common cannot appropriate to himself any particular parcel of the general tract; as, upon a partition, which may be claimed by the co-tenants at any time, the parcel may be set apart in severalty to a co-tenant; he cannot defeat this possible result whilst retaining his interest; not being able to invest his grantee with rights greater than his own, such grantee would take subject to the contingency of the loss of the premises, if, upon the partition of the general tract, they should not be allotted to the grantor. Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 362; Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. A conveyance by one tenant in common, or any number of them less than the whole, of a specific portion of the common lands, is not void, but cannot be made to the prejudice of the tenants not uniting in the conveyance; the grantee at such sale acquires all the interest of his grantor in such special tract, which interest is a tenancy in the special tract with the co-tenants of his grantor. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

Tenants in common, who are. The joint proprietors of water-ditches in the mining districts, in the absence of any special facts constituting them something else, are tenants in common of real estate, and their rights in the ditches and in sales of water are governed by the laws of tenancy in common. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69.

Co-tenancy and copartnership differentiated. A tenancy in common results from a rule of law, by which it is controlled and governed, and each co-tenant sells or encumbers his interest at pleasure, regardless of the knowledge or consent or wishes of co-proprietors, without affecting the legal relation existing between them, beyond the going out of one and the coming in of another; a copartnership is the result of an agreement between the parties, and one of the firm cannot sell his interest in the same, nor can a stranger buy the same, at pleasure; and where such purchase or sale is made with the consent of the firm, it works a dissolution of the partnership, and necessitates the final closing out and settlement of the old firm. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69.

Real property, defined. The "real property" referred to in this section, is that as to which such unity of title exists as authorizes a single action. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232.

Right to partition of property held in trust. See note Ann. Cas. 1912C, 327.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. See Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. The right may be exercised at any time. Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361. The proceeding is a special one, and the statute prescribes its course and effect; and though, after jurisdiction has attached, errors in the course of the cause cannot be collaterally shown to impeach a judgment, yet, so far at least as the rights of infants are involved, the court has no jurisdiction except over the matter of partition. Waterman v. Lawrence, 19 Cal. 210; 79 Am. Dec. 212. Rule for partition in respect to improvements. Seale v. Soto, 35 Cal. 102. Partition among tenants in common must be of the whole tract. One tenant cannot have partition of part only of the entire common property. Sutter v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 112. If the court finds that the parties hold and are in possession as joint tenants or as tenants in common, and that one or more of them have an estate of inheritance, or for life, or lives, or for years, the partition should be made, although the findings may also show that the plaintiff, in his complaint, has incorrectly set forth the title or interest of the parties, or of one or more of them, in the land. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81. A tenant in common out of possession may, in equity, as a collateral incident to a claim for partition, compel his co-tenant in possession to account for rents and profits received by him from tenants of premises. State v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 514. Corporations cannot together hold as joint tenants. De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289.

2. Water. Where the action is for partition of a water-ditch, an account of the proceeds for water rates can be taken, and if one of the tenants in common holds a mortgage on the interests of his co-tenants, that can be adjusted in the action, by an application of the proceeds of the mortgagor's interest towards the payment of the same. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69. Water flowing in a ditch cannot be partitioned mechanically. McGillivray v. Evans, 27 Cal. 96.

3. Mining claims may be partitioned as other real property, and the fact that a mining claim is owned and worked by several persons as partners, is no valid objection to a partition of the same, if the answer does not set up, and it is not shown, that a suit in equity is necessary to settle the accounts and adjust the business of the partnership; and all the material allegations in a complaint for partition of real property, which are not denied by the answer, are deemed admitted for the purpose of the trial. Hughes v. Devlin, 23 Cal. 501.

4. Parol partition. A parol partition may be made by co-owners under the Mexican law, as well as by tenants in common under the common law. In order to uphold a parol partition under both the Spanish and common law, it must satisfactorily appear that there was not only an agreement to make the partition, but that it was executed and followed up by a several possession, by either the parties themselves or their grantees. Long v. Dollarhide, 24 Cal. 222; Elias v. Verdugo, 27 Cal. 420; Carpentier v. Thirston, 24 Cal. 280. If an attorney in fact, not authorized, make partition, the principal may ratify it, either expressly or by implication. Borel v. Rolins, 30 Cal. 408.

§ 753. Interests of all parties must be set forth in the complaint. The interests of all persons in the property, whether such persons are known or unknown, must be set forth in the complaint, as far as known to the plaintiff; and if one or more of the parties, or the share or quantity of interest of any of the parties, is unknown to the plaintiff, or is uncertain or contingent, or the ownership of the inheritance depends upon an executory devise, or the remainder is a contingent remainder, so that such parties cannot be named, that fact must be set forth in the complaint.

Complaint in partition.
1. Generally. Ante, § 426.
2. Parties. Post, § 754; ante, §§ 384, 387.
Unknown persons.
1. Use of fictitious names. Ante, § 474.
2. Summons. Post, § 756.
Abstract of title, procured before suit. Post, § 799.

Legislation § 753. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 265), changing "shall" to "must," in both instances.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 603, changing (1) "be" to "are" before "known," and to "is" before "unknown," before "uncertain," and after "remainder"; (2) changing "depend" to "depends"; and (3) omitting the words "specifically and particularly" after "in the complaint"; the code commissioner saying, "Omits the words 'specifically and particularly,' so that a general statement of the interests of the respective parties will be sufficient."

Setting forth interests of all parties. An action for partition, under our statute, is, to some extent, sui generis: the parties named in the complaint, whether as plaintiffs or defendants, are all actors, each representing his own interest. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289. In an action under this section, the plaintiff is required to set forth the interests of all parties, known or unknown, so far as they are known to him, and each defendant is required to set forth in his answer, fully and particularly, the nature and extent of his interests (De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 330; 87 Am. Dec. 81); but it would be idle to require the plaintiff to set forth interests specifically, of the character and extent of which he is ignorant. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289. All the interests of all persons in the property must be set forth, as far as known to the plaintiff: the nature of the action makes the bringing in of a new party matter of substance. San Diego Sav. Bank v. Goodsell, 137 Cal. 420; 70 Pac. 299. Where a wife claims a homestead right or an interest in the premises, she is not only a proper but a necessary party to partition proceedings. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 330; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

Sufficiency of complaint. In a complaint to obtain a partition of land, a general allegation, that the premises cannot be divided by metes and bounds without prejudice, is sufficient; a complaint is good, which is silent upon the subject of the mode of partition; and whether partition can or cannot be made by metes and bounds, is the only necessary averment in the complaint, as that is purely a question of fact, and the ultimate fact to be found; the constituent facts, or those which lie behind, are probative, and need not be averred. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 329; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

Persons interested. All interested persons, to be bound by the judgment, must be made parties in partition. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139; Hancock v. Lopez, 53 Cal. 362; Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590. Where an action is brought as authorized by this section, for the benefit of all persons interested in the estate, all are actors from its commencement. Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

Joinder of several parcels. Where one co-tenant has conveyed his interest, the whole property originally held in common by the co-tenants may be partitioned, although a necessary party defendant may be a co-tenant as to only one of the parcels involved. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. The question of joinder, in partition, as to different tracts of land, is not affected by the fact that the rights of adverse occupants of the land sought to be partitioned may be put in issue, tried, and determined. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the complaint does not fully state the origin, nature, or extent of the interest of the plaintiff, the objection must be taken by demurrer, or it is waived. Broad v. Broad, 40 Cal. 493. An action for partition under our code is to some extent sui generis. The parties named in the complaint, whether as plaintiffs or defendants, are all actors, each representing his own interest. Whether plaintiffs or defendants, they are required to set forth fully and particularly the origin, nature, and extent of their interests in the property, and the interests of each and all may be put in issue by the others and tried. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 295; Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 642. All the tenants in common should be made parties. All grantees of original owners should be joined as parties. Sutter v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 112. If the wife claim a homestead right, she is a proper party. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81. A tenant in common of part of a tract of land is a proper party in a suit for partition of the whole. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139; Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609; 82 Am. Dec. 765; Hathaway v. De Soto, 21 Cal. 191. The complaint must aver that the co-tenants hold and are in possession of real property as joint tenants, or as tenants in common, in which property one or more of them have an estate of inheritance, or for life or lives, or for years; and if these averments are not made, it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 76. A general allegation of "the premises cannot be divided by metes and bounds without prejudice," is sufficient, without an allegation of the facts upon which the plaintiff is to obtain a particular mode of partition. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

§ 754. Lienholders not of record need not be made parties. No person having a conveyance of or claiming a lien on the property, or some part of it, need be made a party to the action, unless such conveyance or lien appear of record.

Legislation § 754. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 266, as amended by Stats. 1866, p. 704.

Scope of section. This section is confined to an action for partition. Unger v. Roper, 53 Cal. 39.

Mortgagee not necessary party when. The plaintiff in a partition suit is not called upon to make a mortgagee a party thereto, where his lien was not of record when the suit was commenced. Towle v. Quinn, 141 Cal. 382; 74 Pac. 1046.

§ 755. Plaintiff must file notice of lis pendens. Immediately after filing the complaint in the superior court, the plaintiff must record in the office of the recorder of the county, or of the several counties in which the property is situated, a notice of the pendency of the action, containing the names of the parties so far as known, the object of the action, and a description of the property to be affected thereby. From the time of filing such notice for record all persons shall be deemed to have notice of the pendency of the action.

Lis pendens. Ante, § 409.

Legislation § 755. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 267, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 705), changing "shall" to "must" after "plaintiff," the last sentence then reading, "From the time of the filing, it shall be deemed notice to all."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 325, (1) after "plaintiff must," the words "file with" were changed to "record in the office of"; (2) the words "either a copy of such complaint or" were omitted before "a notice"; and (3) the last sentence was changed to read as at present.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 11, changing "district court" to "superior court."

§ 756. Summons. To whom directed, and must contain what. The summons must contain a description of the property sought to be partitioned, and must be directed to all of the persons named as defendants in the complaint, and when it shows that some person has or claims an interest in or lien upon the property whose name is unknown to the plaintiff, the summons must also be directed to all persons unknown who have or claim any interest in or lien upon the property.

Summons in partition.

2. Contents. See ante, § 407.

Legislation § 756. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 268, which read: "The summons shall be directed to all the joint tenants and tenants in common, and all persons having any interest in, or any liens of record by mortgage, judgment, or otherwise, upon the property, or upon any particular portion thereof; and generally, to all persons unknown, who have or claim any interest in the property." When § 756 was enacted in 1872, "shall" was changed to "must."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 604; the code commissioner saying, "Simplifies the summons in partition, so as to make it clear that it need not be directed to 'persons unknown,' when the complaint refers to known persons only."

Validity of summons. A summons in an action of partition is not void upon a collateral attack, though it was not issued until after the expiration of a year. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

§ 757. Unknown parties may be served by publication. If a party having a share or interest is unknown, or any one of the known parties reside out of the state, or cannot be found therein, and such fact is made to appear by affidavit, the summons may be served on such absent or unknown party by publication, as in other cases. When publication is made, the summons, as published, must be accompanied by a brief description of the property which is the subject of the action.

Service by publication. Ante, §§ 412, 413.

Legislation § 757. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 269), changing "shall" to "must."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 160; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

§ 758. Answer of defendants. What to contain. If the defendant fails to answer within the time allowed by law, he is deemed to admit and adopt the allegations of the complaint. Otherwise, he must controvert such of the allegations of the complaint as he does not wish to be taken as admitted, and must set forth his estate or interest in the property, and if he claims a lien thereon must state the date and character of the lien and the amount remaining due, and whether he has any additional security therefor, and if so, its nature and extent, and if he fails to disclose such additional security, he must be deemed to have waived his lien on the property to be partitioned.

Notice. Abstract of title. Post, § 799.

Legislation § 758. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 270, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 705, which read: "The defendants who have been personally served with the summons and a copy of the complaint, or who shall have appeared without such service, shall set forth in their answers, fully and particularly, the origin, nature, and extent of their respective interests in the property; and if such defendants claim a lien on the property by mortgage, judgment, or otherwise, they shall correctly state the original amount and date of the same, and the true sum remaining due thereon; also, whether the same has been secured in any other way or not; and if secured, the nature and extent of such security, or they shall be deemed to have waived their right to such lien." When § 758 was enacted in 1872, (1) "shall" was omitted before "have appeared"; (2) "shall" was changed to "must" before "set forth"; (3) "shall correctly" was changed to "must" before "state"; (4) "true" was omitted before "sum"; and (5) "are" was changed from "shall be" before "deemed."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 161; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 604; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment provides that if the defendant fails to answer within the time allowed by law, he is deemed to admit and adopt the allegations of the complaint, thus excusing the defendant from alleging his interest by way of answer, if the complaint sufficiently discloses such interest."

Disclaimer. In an action of partition, a defendant cannot claim that the action be dismissed as to him, on the ground that his answer disclaims any interest in the land, unless he has made the disclaimer in absolute and unconditional terms; his answer disclaiming all interest in the land in dispute, except such as he may have under the homestead law, by virtue of the dedication of the land to homestead uses by himself and his wife, is not a disclaimer. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 330; 87 Am. Dec. 81.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A defendant is not entitled to have the action dismissed by reason of any defense which he may set up in his answer, or on the ground that his answer disclaims any interest in the land, unless he has made the disclaimer in absolute and unconditional terms. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81. Guardians ad litem, representing infants in a case of partition, have power to defend solely against the claim set up for partition of the common estate. Waterman v. Lawrence, 19 Cal. 210; 79 Am. Dec. 212. See also subd. 1 of note to § 752.

§ 759. Rights of all parties may be put in issue and determined in action. The rights of the several parties, plaintiff as well as defendant, may be put in issue, tried, and determined in such action; and when a sale of the premises is necessary, the title must be ascertained by proof to the satisfaction of the court before the sale can be ordered; except that where there are several unknown persons having an interest in the property, their rights may be considered together in the action, and not as between themselves.

Final judgment. Post, § 766.

Intervention. Ante, § 387.

Legislation § 759. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 271, which read: "The rights of the several parties, plaintiffs as well as defendants, may be put in issue, tried and determined by such action; and when a sale of the premises is necessary, the title shall be ascertained by proof to the satisfaction of the court, before the judgment of sale shall be made; and where service of the complaint has been made by publication, like proof shall be required of the right of the absent or unknown parties, before such judgment is rendered; except that where there are several unknown persons having an interest in the property, their rights may be considered together in the action, and not as between themselves." When § 759 was enacted in 1872, (1) "plaintiff" was substituted for "plaintiffs" and "defendant" for "defendants," (2) "in" for "by" before "such action," (3) "must" for "shall" before "be ascertained," (4) "can" for "shall" before "be made," and (5) "must" for "shall" before "be required."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 161; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 604; the code commissioner saying, "Substituting the words 'sale can be ordered' in place of 'judgment of sale can be made,' and omitting the requirement that proof must be made of the title of absent and unknown parties before judgment can be entered, to avoid the conflict between this section and § 774, referred to in Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 433."

Jurisdiction. The court, in partition proceedings, has jurisdiction to try and determine all issues, whether at law or in equity, and must determine them as part of the proceeding itself. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 629; 2 Pac. 418. This section, and § 774, post, so far as applying to the determination by the court of questions of title as between hostile claimants to any share or parcel, or to the proceeds of the sale thereof, are to be construed as limited to the determination of issues over which the court in which the partition proceedings are pending has jurisdiction, and not as applicable to the determination of hostile claims to the estate of a deceased co-tenant, over which the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction. Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 427; 58 Am. St. Rep. 188; 48 Pac. 481.

Interests, rights, and claims that may be determined. Any question affecting the right of the plaintiff to a partition, or the rights of each and all of the parties in the land, may be put in issue, tried, and determined in such action. De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 335; 87 Am. Dec. 81; Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289; Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139; Hancock v. Lopez, 53 Cal. 362; Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590. Where the plaintiffs have set forth the origin, nature, and extent of their interests, the interest of each or all may be put in issue by the others; and if so, such issues are to be first tried and determined, and no partition can be made until the respective interests of all the parties have been ascertained and settled by a trial. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289. In partition, where the requisite unity of title as to the co-tenants exists, the claims of any and all persons adverse to the co-tenants may be determined and settled: a determination of adverse claims is merely incidental to the action. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232. Even where partition is not maintainable, the proceeding may be retained to settle a dispute as to title. Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221.

Mortgage claims. In an action for the partition of a water-ditch, a mortgage claim can be settled and adjusted, and, as collateral to the main question, an account of the water rates can be taken, and the rights of the parties therein respectively ascertained. Bradley v. Harkness, 26 Cal. 69.

Rights of what persons may be determined. In partition, the rights of all parties may be fully inquired into and determined (Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590; Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; 27 Pac. 356; Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221; Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934); as may also the rights of adverse occupants of land sought to be partitioned. Middlecoff v. Cronise, 155 Cal. 185; 17 Ann. Cas. 1159; 100 Pac. 232; Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934; Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 19; 77 Pac. 712; 69 Pac. 228. Where, if a trust was invalid from the beginning, the title and estate of the owners of the land was not affected thereby, and if it was valid, it had terminated, and the estate of the trustee had ceased, the rights of the owners of the land can be adjudicated in a court of equity, or in a proceeding for partition under this section, without the necessity of an actual reconveyance thereof from the trustee. Gardiner v. Cord, 145 Cal. 157; 78 Pac. 544. In an action for partition, where two or more have entered into a fraudulent scheme for the purpose of obtaining property, in which all are to share, and the scheme has been carried out so that all the results of the fraud are in the hands of one of the parties, a court of equity will not interfere in behalf of the others to aid them in obtaining their shares, but will leave the parties in the position where they have placed themselves. Mitchell v. Cline, 84 Cal. 409; 24 Pac. 164.

Necessary parties defendant. Where a mortgagee had no lien when an action for partition was begun, the plaintiff therein is not bound to make him a party thereto; but such mortgagee may intervene in the suit and set up his mortgage lien, and have it adjusted in the partition decree. Towle v. Quinn, 141 Cal. 382; 74 Pac. 1046.

Averments necessary in answer. Where the defendant in partition proceedings has two deeds, each purporting to convey an undivided two-thirds of the property, and one of them was given as a substitute for the other, that fact must be averred: the statute does not provide that rights such as these may be tried or determined without being put in issue. Miller v. Sharp, 48 Cal. 394.

Findings. In partition proceedings, it is not necessary to find specifically whether there has been an ouster of their co-tenants, on the part of those who successfully plead the statute of limitations: the finding of the ultimate fact, that the statute had run in their favor, is all that is necessary. Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 19; 77 Pac. 712; 69 Pac. 228.

Possession as affecting proceeding. In partition, if one party is in possession and the other out of possession, the judgment determines the rights of the parties as though each were in possession. Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221. An action for partition is not affected by the fact that the complaint shows the adverse possession of a co-tenant. Varni v. Devoto, 10 Cal. App. 304; 101 Pac. 934. Partition may be had subject to temporary possession under a lease. Buhrmeister v. Buhrmeister, 10 Cal. App. 392; 102 Pac. 221.

Effect of conveyance by tenant in common. A tenant in common, after a conveyance of a specific parcel of the general tract, is often mentioned as a tenant in common of the general tract, but this is not true in any sense, nor for any purpose: the remaining tenants in common, in applying for a partition, are entitled to the same relief, in every respect, that they could demand were the special locations remaining in the hands of the tenant in common who conveyed them; and the same would be the case, if, instead of special locations, the tenant in common had conveyed portions of his undivided interest. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

Statute of frauds. An oral agreement, prior to partition, for a right of way across one of the pieces, concerns an interest in real estate, and is void, under the statute of frauds. Oliver v. Burnett, 10 Cal. App. 403; 102 Pac. 223.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 753, ante; Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289; De Uprey v. De Uprey, 27 Cal. 331; 87 Am. Dec. 81. Title may be tried in this action. Bollo v. Navarro, 33 Cal. 459.

§ 760. Partial partition. Whenever from any cause it is, in the opinion of the court, impracticable or highly inconvenient to make a complete partition, in the first instance, among all the parties in interest, the court may first ascertain and determine the shares or interest respectively held by the original co-tenants, and thereupon adjudge and cause a partition to be made, as if such original co-tenants were the parties, and sole parties, in interest, and the only parties to the action, and thereafter may proceed in like manner to adjudge and make partition separately of each share or portion so ascertained and allotted as between those claiming under the original tenant to whom the same shall have been so set apart, or may allow them to remain tenants in common thereof, as they may desire.

Legislation § 760. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 272, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 705), substituting (1) "is" for "shall have become" before "in the opinion of the court," and (2) "the court may" for "it shall be lawful for the court to"; (3) omitting "to" before "adjudge"; (4) substituting "may" for "to" before "proceed"; and (5) inserting "may" before "allow."

Construction of section. This section makes provision for cases where, by reason of the impracticability or inconvenience of doing otherwise, the court may set apart portions or parcels to co-tenants, subsequently segregating the interests of such co-tenants. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714. After the court has ascertained who are tenants in common, between whom the land is to be partitioned, it must ascertain and determine the respective rights and interests of each of the tenants in common, and adjudge partition between them according to their respective rights. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 629; 2 Pac. 418; 90 Cal. 444; 27 Pac. 356. This section is intended to allow, and does allow, two partitions,—one between the original co-tenants, and the other between all the parties to the action; after the first partition is made, which is allowed as an aid to accomplish the second one, the court is authorized to proceed, in like manner, to adjudge and make partition separately of each share or portion so ascertained and allotted as between those claiming under the original tenant, to whom the same shall have been so set apart; but there is but one judgment. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418.

Interlocutory decree. Whether, in proceedings by co-tenants for a partition of real property, a partition is to be ordered or a sale directed, it is indispensable that a decree, interlocutory in its character, be first entered, definitely ascertaining the rights and interests of the respective parties in the subject-matter; in case a sale is to be directed, it is impossible for any party, in the absence of such an interlocutory decree, to know whether he is interested in maintaining or in resisting the proceedings. Lorenz v. Jacobs, 53 Cal. 24. In an action for partition, only one interlocutory decree or judgment is provided for by the code; under this section, the court may, as preliminary and ancillary to the judgment, and as an aid in reaching it, ascertain and determine the shares and interests respectively held by the original co-tenants, and cause a partition to be made as if such original co-tenants were the sole parties in interest; it must then proceed to adjudge and determine the share or portion of each party to the cause; an interlocutory decree or judgment may then be made and entered, which shall adjudge and clearly set forth the rights and shares of each of the parties to the action; these shares must be so specified and declared in the decree, that the referees who may be appointed to make the partition may divide and allot the several portions to each of the parties without having to determine any question of title; all such questions must be determined by the court. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. The effect of an interlocutory decree is merely to determine the relative rights of the respective parties to the action in the entire tract, but it does not accomplish any severance of possession: it is thereafter necessary that a partition according to these respective rights shall be made, and the particular share of each party allotted to him; and, until this is done by final judgment, it cannot be known to which of the parties any particular parcel will fall, and therefore, prior to such segregation, there can be no adverse holding of any portion by either party to the action against any of the other parties thereto. Christy v. Spring Valley Water Works, 97 Cal. 21; 31 Pac. 1110.

§ 761. Rights of lienholders. Appointment of referee. If it appears to the court that there are outstanding liens or encumbrances of record upon such real property, or any part thereof, which existed and were of record at the time of the commencement of the action, and the persons holding such liens are not made parties to the action, the court must either order such persons to be made parties to the action, by an amended or supplemental complaint, or appoint a referee to ascertain whether or not such liens or encumbrances have been paid, and if not paid, what amount remains due thereon, and their order among the liens or encumbrances severally held by such persons and the parties to the action, and whether the amount remaining due thereon has been secured in any manner, and if secured, the nature and extent of the security.

Legislation § 761. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 273, as amended by Stats. 1862, p. 88), (1) substituting (a) "appears" for "shall appear," in first line, (b) "the" for "said" before "action," (c) "must" for "shall" after "court," (d) "such" for "the said" before "persons," and (2) omitting "said" before "action."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 161; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 604, (1) omitting "by the certificate of the county recorder or county clerk, or by the sworn or verified statement of any person who may have examined or searched the records" after "If it appears to the court"; (2) omitting "or portion" before "thereof"; (3) substituting (a) "amended" for "amendment," and (b) "and" for "or" before "if not paid"; the code commissioner saying, "Omitting after 'court' the words 'by the certificate of the county recorder or of the county clerk, or by the sworn or verified statement of any person who may have searched the records,' leaving the existence of the liens to be established by any competent evidence."

§ 762. Lienholders must be notified to appear before the referee appointed. The plaintiff must cause a notice to be served, a reasonable time previous to the day for appearance before the referee appointed as provided in the last section, on each person having outstanding liens of record, who is not a party to the action, to appear before the referee at a specified time and place, to make proof, by his own affidavit or otherwise, of the amount due, or to become due, contingently or absolutely thereon. In case such person be absent, or his residence be unknown, service may be made by publication or notice to his agents, under the direction of the court, in such manner as may be proper. The report of the referee thereon must be made to the court, and must be confirmed, modified, or set aside, and a new reference ordered, as the justice of the case may require.

Legislation § 762. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 274, (1) substituting "must" for "shall," in all instances, and (2) omitting "true" before "amount due."

§ 763. Partition of real property. Referees. In incorporated city. Action of court. Sale. Deed. In case of death of party. Attorney's fees. If it appears by the evidence, whether alleged in the complaint or not, that the property or any part of it is so situated that partition cannot be made without great prejudice to the owners, the court may order the sale thereof; otherwise, upon the requisite proofs being made, it must order a partition according to the respective rights of the parties as ascertained by the court, and appoint three referees therefor, and must designate the portion to remain undivided for the owners whose interests remain unknown, or are not ascertained; or the court, with the consent of the parties, may appoint one referee instead of three, and he when appointed, has all the powers and may perform all the duties required of three referees; and the court must appoint as referee any person or persons to whose appointment all the parties have consented, and no person shall be appointed as referee who is disqualified from acting as an appraiser under the provisions of section fourteen hundred forty-four of the Code of Civil Procedure. When the site of an incorporated city or town is included with the exterior boundaries of the property to be partitioned, the court must direct the referees to survey and appraise the entire property to be partitioned by actual lots and subdivisions then existing in the actual possession of the several tenants in common, exclusive of the value of improvements thereon, first setting apart necessary portions of the property for ways, roads, and streets, as in section seven hundred sixty-four provided, and to report such survey and separate appraisement on each lot and subdivision to the court. The court may confirm, change, modify, or set aside the report in whole or in part, and if necessary appoint new referees. When, after the final confirmation of the report of such survey and appraisement, it appears by evidence to the satisfaction of the court that an equitable partition of the whole property is impracticable, and a sale of the site of such city or town, or any portion thereof, will be for the best interests of the owners of the whole property, it must order a sale thereof; provided, that within sixty days thereafter any tenant in common, or tenants in common, having improvements erected on any town or city lot or subdivision included in such order of sale, shall have the prior right to purchase the same at such appraised valuation, and may pay into court the amount so appraised as the value thereof, and upon such payment the title shall vest in such purchaser or purchasers, and the court shall cause to be executed by such referees a deed for such lot or subdivision in fee and in severalty to such purchaser or purchasers; such further proceedings shall then be had as to the remainder of the property, and the money so paid to the court, as by this chapter provided. If, during the pendency of the action, any of the parties die, or become insane, or otherwise incompetent, the proceedings shall not for that cause be delayed or suspended, but the attorney who has appeared for such party may continue to represent such interest; and in case any such party has not appeared by an attorney, the court must appoint an attorney to represent the interest which was held by such party, until his heirs or legal representatives, or successors in interest, shall have appeared in the action; and an attorney so appointed must be allowed by the court a reasonable compensation for his services, which may be taxed as costs against the share or interest represented by such attorney, and may be adjudged a lien thereon in the discretion of the court.

Partition of dominant tenement, burden must be apportioned. Civ. Code, § 807.
Referees. Post, § 797.
Modifying decree. Post, § 766.

Legislation § 763. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 275, which read: "If it be alleged in the complaint, and be established by evidence, or if it appear by the evidence without such allegation, in the complaint, to the satisfaction of the court, that the property, or any part of it, is so situated that partition cannot be made without great prejudice to the owners, the court may order a sale thereof. Otherwise, upon the requisite proofs being made, it shall order a partition, according to the respective rights of the parties, as ascertained by the court, and appoint three referees therefor; and shall designate the portion to remain undivided for the owners whose interests remain unknown, or are not ascertained." When § 763 was enacted in 1872, (1) "be" was omitted before "established," and (2) "must" substituted for "shall," in both instances.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 60, (1) the first sentence, before "that the property," reading, "If it be alleged in the complaint and established by evidence, or if it appear by the evidence without such allegation in the complaint to the satisfaction of the court"; (2) the same sentence had the word "a" instead of "the," before "sale thereof"; and (3) after "or are not ascertained" and before "direct the referees," the section read, "provided, that when the site of an incorporated city or town is included within the exterior boundaries of the property to be partitioned, then on said fact being established by evidence the following proceedings shall be had. The court shall thereupon"; (4) in sentence beginning, "The court must," after "section seven hundred [and] sixty-four," the words "of this code" were used; (5) the sentence beginning "When, after," (a) "shall appear" instead of "appears," (b) "shall" instead of "must," before "order a sale," and (c) "said" instead of "such," before "referees"; (6) the sentence beginning "If, during," had "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 161; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 605; the code commissioner saying, "The changes are omitting the words 'If it be alleged in the complaint and established by evidence, or if it appear by the evidence without such allegation in the complaint to the satisfaction of the court,' and substituting therefor, 'If it appears by the evidence, whether alleged in the complaint or not'; and inserting the matter in former § 797, authorizing the court to appoint one referee instead of three."

5. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 235, (1) inserting at the end of the first sentence, after "duties required of three referees," the clause, "and the court must appoint as referee a new person or persons to whose appointment all the parties have consented, and no person shall be appointed as referee who is disqualified from acting as an appraiser under the provisions of section fourteen hundred forty-four of the Code of Civil Procedure"; (2) in second sentence, striking out the conjunction "and" in the section number.

Consent to appointment of a single referee. The parties may consent to the appointment of a single referee to make partition, and a decree reciting such consent is not objectionable because certain of the parties were minors, if the record shows that they appeared by general guardian. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227. The objection that a single referee was appointed, instead of three, cannot be collaterally urged; when the interlocutory decree recites that the appointment of one referee was made with the consent of all the parties, that is sufficient to sustain it, even if the appointment were in fact irregularly made. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

Irregular appointment of a single referee. In partition proceedings, the irregular appointment of but one referee will not, upon a collateral attack, avoid the judgment. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

Proof of necessity for sale. Whether or not a partition can be made without great prejudice to the owners, is a question of fact, the decision of which is not to be aided by judicial notice of any fact or circumstance not proved; and the party asking for a sale, instead of a partition, has the burden of proving that a partition cannot be made without great prejudice to the owners. Mitchell v. Cline, 84 Cal. 409; 24 Pac. 164.

Complaint not alleging necessity for sale. From the language of this section, it seems to be contemplated that the court may investigate the question as to whether a sale is requisite to avoid great prejudice to the owners, even in the absence of any allegation in the complaint to that effect. Bartlett v. Mackey, 130 Cal. 181; 62 Pac. 482.

Discretion of court. The power of the court, where a sale is necessary, is not greater than where a partition is to be made, nor is the discretion to be exercised different in such case; and if the court orders a partition of the rights of the parties to the property as tenants for years, it is not incumbent upon it, nor even proper, to award either to the plaintiff or to a defendant any share or interest with another defendant in the reversion. Jameson v. Hayward, 106 Cal. 682; 46 Am. St. Rep. 268; 39 Pac. 1078.

Partition ordered when. Courts favor a partition in kind, where it is practicable; owners of real estate should not be deprived of their title, unless a sale thereof is necessary to prevent great prejudice to the owners. Muller v. Muller, 14 Cal. App. 347; 112 Pac. 200. Partition cannot be allowed where injustice and wrong would result from it, on account of part of the land being subject to a homestead. Mills v. Stump, 20 Cal. App. 84; 128 Pac. 349.

Decree of sale leaving certain rights undetermined. Where the court has determined all matters over which it has jurisdiction, and has definitely ascertained all the interests of all the co-tenants, except only the issues between the contesting claimants in the probate court of the interest of a deceased co-tenant, over which issues it has no jurisdiction, and the premises must be sold in order to effect a just division, a decree of sale leaving the rights of such contesting claimants to be determined in the court having jurisdiction thereof, is proper, is warranted by the general law of partition, and is not violative of any provision of the code. Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 427; 58 Am. St. Rep. 188; 48 Pac. 481.

Merger. In an action for a partition, equity will prevent or permit a merger, as will best subserve the purposes of justice and the actual and just intent of the parties, and, in the absence of an expression of intention, if the interest of the person in whom the several estates have united would be best subserved by keeping them separate, the intent to do so will ordinarily be implied; and the interest of a tenant in common in an estate for years, which is subject to the partition, will not be held to have been merged in the reversion owned by the same person. Jameson v. Hayward, 106 Cal. 682; 46 Am. St. Rep. 268; 39 Pac. 1078.

Appeal. An appeal from a decree in partition, pending proceedings for its modification, is premature: the modified decree is the only appealable judgment. Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522. Under this section, a notice of appeal in an action for partition may be served upon the attorney of record of another party, notwithstanding the death of such party prior to the appeal; and such notice may be served upon the original attorney of record, where there has been no substitution, notwithstanding another attorney may have appeared and signed an amended pleading for such party. Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1046.

Allowance for improvements in partition. See notes 62 Am. Dec. 484; 81 Am. St. Rep. 185.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See subd. 3 of note to § 752, ante.

§ 764. Partition must be according to rights of parties. Sale of undivided interests. Allotment of shares of each party. In making partition, the referees must divide the property, and allot the several portions thereof to the respective parties, quality and quantity relatively considered, according to the respective rights of the parties as determined by the court, pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, designating the several portions by proper landmarks, and may employ a surveyor with the necessary assistants to aid them. Before making partition or sale, the referees may, whenever it will be for the advantage of those interested, set apart a portion of the property for a way, road, or street, and the portion so set apart must not be assigned to any of the parties or sold, but must remain an open and public way, road, or street, unless the referees shall set the same apart as a private way for the use of the parties interested, or some of them, their heirs and assigns, in which case it shall remain such private way. Whenever the referees have laid out on any tract of land roads sufficient in the judgment of said referees to accommodate the public and private wants, they must report that fact to the court, and upon the confirmation of their report all other roads on said tract cease to be public highways. Whenever it appears, in an action for partition of lands, that one or more of the tenants in common, being the owner of an undivided interest in the tract of land sought to be partitioned, has sold to another person a specific tract by metes and bounds out of the common land, and executed to the purchaser a deed of conveyance, purporting to convey the whole title to such specific tract to the purchaser in fee and in severalty, the land described in such deed shall be allotted and set apart in partition to such purchaser, his heirs or assigns, or in such other manner as shall make such deed effectual as a conveyance of the whole title to such segregated parcel, if such tract or tracts of land can be so allotted or set apart without material injury of the rights and interests of the other co-tenants who may not have joined in such conveyance. In all cases it is the duty of the referees, in making partition of land, to allot the share of each of the parties owning an interest in the whole or in any part of the premises sought to be partitioned, and to locate the share of each co-tenant, so as to embrace as far as practicable the improvements made by such co-tenant upon the property, and the value of the improvements made by the tenants in common must be excluded from the valuation in making the allotments, and the land must be valued without regard to such improvements, in case the same can be done without material injury to the rights and interests of the other tenants in common owning such land.

Legislation § 764. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 276, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 705, which read: "In making the partition the referees shall divide the property and allot the several portions thereof to the respective parties, quality and quantity relatively considered, according to the respective rights of the parties as determined by the court, pursuant to the provisions of this chapter, designating the several portions by proper landmarks, and may employ a surveyor with the necessary assistants to aid them." When § 764 was enacted in 1872, "shall" was changed to "must."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 325, (1) in first sentence, changing "assistants" to "assistance," and (2) adding sentence beginning "Before making" and ending "private way," which then had the words "shall" instead of "must," in both instances.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 96, making another addition, beginning with the words "Whenever the referees," and reading as at present, except for the changes of 1907.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 162; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 606, (1) in first sentence, changing "assistance" to "assistants"; (2) in sentence beginning "Before making," changing "shall" to "must" before "not be" and before "remain"; (3) in sentence beginning "Whenever the referees," (a) changing "shall" to "must" after "they," and (b) omitting "shall" before "cease"; (4) changing "appears," in words "Whenever it appears," from "shall appear"; (5) beginning a new sentence with the words "In all cases," and changing the first words to read as at present, from "provided, that in all cases the court shall direct the referees," and, in this sentence, (a) adding the word "the" before "allotments," (b) changing "improvement" to "improvements," and (c) changing "to" to "of" after "interests"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in declaring what shall be the duties of the referees, instead of requiring those duties to be inserted in each decree."

Agreement for partition, validity of. A partial agreement for the partition of lands is void, under the statute of frauds, and cannot be enforced; but, where consummated and ratified by the parties thereto, it will be upheld. Gordon v. San Diego, 101 Cal. 522; 40 Am. St. Rep. 73; 36 Pac. 18.

Title and rights of purchaser of specific parcel from co-tenant. The title of the purchaser of a specific parcel is good against all the world, except the other tenants in common, and as to them, it is subject to the contingency of being taken by them, if it should be found necessary to do so, in order to make a proper partition of the general tract. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. All the authorities are to the effect that a sale by a tenant in common, by specific bounds, of a portion of the land held in common, is not binding upon his co-tenant, unless ratified by him. Gordon v. San Diego, 101 Cal. 522; 40 Am. St. Rep. 73; 36 Pac. 18.

Partition where moieties are specified. Where the moieties in which a partition is to be made are specified in the first judgment, and a writ de partitione faciendo issued thereon in the action at law and in the first judgment, and a commission issued thereon in the suit in chancery, in neither case are the shares of interest of the parties nor any matter of title to be determined by the sheriff in the one case nor by the commissioners in the other. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See subd. 2 of note to § 752, ante.

§ 765. Referees must make a report of their proceedings. The referees must make a report of their proceedings, specifying therein the manner in which they executed their trust, and describing the property divided, and the shares allotted to each party, with a particular description of each share. Any party to the action, after giving at least ten days' notice in writing to the other parties who have appeared therein of his intention to do so, may move the court to confirm, change, modify, or set aside such report.

Legislation § 765. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 277, which read: "The referees shall make a report of their proceedings, specifying therein the manner of executing their trust, describing the property divided, and the shares allotted to each party, with a particular description of each share." When § 765 was enacted in 1872, it read the same as the first sentence of the present section.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 163; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 607; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in declaring that either party may, upon ten days' notice to the others, move to confirm, change, modify or set aside the report."

Report on valuation. A referee, appointed to make partition after an interlocutory decree, whose sole duty it is to apportion and allot the land between the co-tenants according to their respective interests as determined by the court, and to report their proceedings to the court, is not required to go further, and report any valuation, nor are the parties entitled to any hearing before him. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

§ 766. Court may confirm, etc., report. Judgment binding on whom. The court may confirm, change, modify, or set aside the report, and if necessary, appoint new referees. Upon the report being confirmed, judgment must be rendered that such partition be effectual forever, which judgment is binding and conclusive.

1. On all persons named as parties to the action, and their legal representatives, who have at the time any interest in the property divided, or any part thereof, as owners in fee or as tenants for life or for years, or as entitled to the reversion, remainder, or the inheritance of such property, or any part thereof, after the determination of a particular estate therein, and who by any contingency may be entitled to a beneficial interest in the property, or who have an interest in any undivided share thereof, as tenants for years or for life;

2. On all persons not in being at the time said judgment is entered, who have any interest in the property divided, or any part thereof, as entitled to the reversion, remainder or the inheritance of such property, or any part thereof, after the determination of a particular estate therein, and who by any contingency may be entitled to a beneficial interest in the property; provided, that in case sale has been made under the provisions of this chapter the judgment shall provide for keeping intact the share of the proceeds of said sale, to which said party or parties not in being at the time are or may be entitled until such time as such party or parties may take possession thereof;

3. On all persons interested in the property, who may be unknown, to whom notice has been given of the action for partition by publication;

4. On all other persons claiming from such parties or persons, or either of them.

And no judgment is invalidated by reason of the death of any party before final judgment or decree; but such judgment or decree is as conclusive against the heirs, legal representatives, or assigns of such decedent, as if it had been entered before his death. If during the pendency of the action, and before final judgment therein, any of the co-tenants has conveyed to another person his interest, or any part of his interest, such conveyance, whatever its form, shall be deemed to have passed to the grantee any lands which, after its execution, may have been set aside to the grantor in severalty, or such proportionate interest in such lands as the interest so conveyed bears to the whole interest of the grantor.

Decrees partitioning realty to be recorded. See Pol. Code, § 4134.

Record of decree as notice. See Pol. Code, § 4135.

Legislation § 766. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 278, as amended by Stats. 1867–68, p. 630, which had (1) in introductory paragraph, (a) "shall" instead of "must" before "be rendered," and (b) "shall be" instead of "is" before "binding"; (2) in subd. 2, "shall have" instead of "has"; (3) in last paragraph, (a) "shall be," instead of "is," before "invalidated" and before "as conclusive," (b) "decease," instead of "death," before "of any party," and (c) "as if such final judgment were entered before such decease," instead of the words at end of first sentence of present paragraph. The changes from the original code section are noted infra.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 164; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 607, (1) in subd. 1, striking out the word "of" in the phrase "or of any part thereof," and (2) adding the last sentence of the final paragraph; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists of the last sentence, providing that a grantee of lands[,] pending the suit[,] takes the part set aside to his grantor."

4. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 366, (1) at end of introductory paragraph, substituting a period for a colon (a clerical or typographical error); (2) adding subd. 2; (3) renumbering the old subds. 2 and 3, subds. 3 and 4, respectively.

Construction of section. The words, "any part thereof," in the first subdivision of this section, necessarily mean, in the connection in which they are used, any part of the property, and not any portion of an undivided interest in the property: it would be very inconsistent, if not absurd, that the judgment should be conclusive on those who were not proper parties to the action. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

Referee's report, power of court over. It is not required that a referee shall report a valuation of the whole, or of any allotment, or for any hearing of the parties before him; but if any contest should arise as to the relative value of the several allotments, or as to the justice of the referee's report in any other respect, the settlement of such dispute is to be had before the court, which has full power to confirm, change, modify, or set aside his report. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

Confirming sale, discretion of court in. The purchaser at a judicial sale in a partition suit, while assuming legal obligations, acquires legal rights, which are to be protected and enforced just as the rights of others; he is entitled to ask for and to have confirmation of the sale, if there is no valid reason in law for setting it aside; and the court has no arbitrary power to confirm, or to refuse to confirm, but only a sound legal discretion, which must be exercised with a just regard to the rights of all concerned. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 Cal. 51; 69 Pac. 847.

Judgment binding and conclusive upon all the parties to the action. The force and effect of a final judgment in partition proceedings are clearly and explicitly stated in this section; and such judgment is declared to be binding and conclusive upon all persons named in the complaint as parties to the action, who have been served with summons, and their legal representatives. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289. The judgment is binding and conclusive, as to title, upon all parties served with summons or who appear, and is a bar to a new action. Martin v. Walker, 58 Cal. 590. Where, in action for partition, the complaint avers that a defendant has, or claims to have, some interest in the land, which interest is unknown to the plaintiff, and a summons is served on such defendant, and he fails to appear, and the judgment does not give such defendant any interest, it is res adjudicata, and estops him from recovering in a new action. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289. In an action of ejectment for a parcel of lands of a tract, brought by one of the defendants in a partition suit, and against persons who were parties to that action, or who claimed title under them, the judgment in that action is admissible in evidence to prove title in the plaintiff in the action of ejectment, and is conclusive upon that issue in respect to the title held or claimed by the parties to that action at the time of its commencement. Hancock v. Lopez, 53 Cal. 362. Where partition was adjudged between tenants in common, and their respective shares set apart in severalty, and before partition the plaintiff was accustomed to pass over the defendant's land, but there never was a right of way appurtenant to the parcel allotted to the plaintiff, a decree in partition, entered upon the report of the referee, which laid out several new roads and made changes in old ones, is conclusive against the plaintiff's claim of right of way. Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159.

Judgment conclusive on all persons interested. Many intricate questions may have to be settled between the holders of special locations and those claiming undivided interests in a large tract; but complete partition, where the parties desire it, should be made in one action, instead of in many new actions, and thus the rights of all the parties, when put in issue, tried and determined: the whole scope and tenor of the statute relating to partition show that the intention was to make the one judgment of partition final and conclusive on all persons interested in the property, or any part of it, on whom the court can acquire jurisdiction, and not to permit the matter to be taken up piecemeal. Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139.

Final judgment operates from its date. The final judgment in partition operates as an adjudication as to the co-tenancy and unity of possession of the parties from its date, and not from the date of the interlocutory decree; and a party to the proceedings cannot avail himself of any adverse possession between the date of the interlocutory decree and the date of the final decree. Christy v. Spring Valley Water Works, 97 Cal. 21; 31 Pac. 1110.

Appeal. The court may appoint new referees in an action of partition, in place of those who have resigned, in order to carry its interlocutory decree into effect, and their action, and the action of the court upon their report, may be reviewed upon appeal from the final judgment, but no direct appeal can be taken from the order appointing such new referees. Fallon v. Brittan, 84 Cal. 511; 24 Pac. 381.

Effect of judgment in partition. See note 40 Am. Dec. 640.

Effect of compulsory partition. See note 101 Am. St. Rep. 864.

Decree in partition. See note 124 Am. St. Rep. 713.

Effect of judgment in partition upon rights of defendants, as between themselves, which were not brought to the attention of the court. See note 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 333.

Effect of partition to create easement as between separate parcels. See note 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 342.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The effect of the judgment in this action is determined by the code, not by the common law. It is binding and conclusive upon all parties properly before the court. Morenhout v. Higuera, 32 Cal. 289; see also Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139. In Tormey v. Allen, 45 Cal. 119, the supreme court say: "We held in Regan v. McMahon, 43 Cal. 625, that the practice prescribed in the Practice Act as to the granting of new trials in civil actions was applicable to the review of decrees rendered in proceedings on partition. Section 193 defines the grounds upon which, and § 195 the procedure by which, such motions may be made and determined, and there is hardly a conceivable case in which, under the provisions of the act, relief may not be had, if irregularity, accident, or surprise, or any other misfortune by which the substantial rights of the parties, or of any of them, have been sacrificed, have intervened. An action for a partition is as completely within the operation of the act as any other civil action for the conduct of which rules of procedure are therein prescribed."

§ 767. Judgment not to affect tenants for years to the whole property.

The judgment does not affect tenants for years less than ten to the whole of the property which is the subject of the partition.

Legislation § 767. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 279, which had as the introductory words, "But such judgment and partition shall not."

Order striking out answer reviewable. The old § 279 of the Practice Act required the appellate court to review an interlocutory order in an action in partition, when it involved the merits and necessarily affected judgment; and an order striking out an answer regularly on file, and rendering judgment without trial, falls within this class. Stevens v. Ross, 1 Cal. 94.

Compensation of referee. In fixing the compensation of a referee in an action for partition, the court is not limited to a compensation of five dollars a day, but has a wide discretion to determine what is a proper compensation to the referee, and its action will not be disturbed upon appeal, if there is no plain abuse of discretion. Mesnager v. De Leonis, 140 Cal. 402; 73 Pac. 1052.

Costs as general lien. In partition, where a share has been set off to co-tenants, the award of costs as a general lien on the property, including the interests of all the owners therein, without segregation, does not render the judgment void or collaterally assailable for errors. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

§ 768. Expenses of partition must be apportioned among the parties. The expenses of the referees, including those of a surveyor and his assistants, when employed, must be ascertained and allowed by the court, and the amount thereof, together with the fees allowed by the court, in its discretion, to the referees, must be apportioned among the different parties to the action, equitably.

Fees of referees. See post, § 1028.

Legislation § 768. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 280, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 706, which read: "The expenses of the referees, including those of a surveyor and his assistant or assistants, when employed, shall be ascertained and allowed by the court, and the amount thereof, together with the fees allowed by the court in its discretion to the referees, shall be apportioned among the different parties to the action, equitably." By an act approved March 4, 1872 (Stats. 1871–72), the session at which the codes were adopted, Practice Act, § 280, supra, was amended, (1) omitting the words "or assistants" after "assistant"; (2) substituting "law" for "the court in its discretion"; (3) adding, after "to the referees," the words "and such attorneys' fees expended for the common benefit, both for plaintiff and defendants, as the court shall deem just and proper"; and (4) omitting the word "equitably" from end of section.

§ 769. A lien on an undivided interest of any party is a charge only on the share assigned to such party. When a lien is on an undivided interest or estate of any of the parties, such lien, if a partition be made, shall thenceforth be a charge only on the share assigned to such party; but such share must first be charged with its just proportion of the costs of the partition, in preference to such lien.

Legislation § 769. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 281, which had the words "shall be first" instead of "must first be."

§ 770. Estate for life or years may be set off in a part of the property not sold, when not all sold. When a part of the property only is ordered to be sold, if there be an estate for life or years, in an undivided share of the whole property, such estate may be set off in any part of the property not ordered to be sold.

Legislation § 770. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 282.

Contingent or future estates when subject to partition. See note 32 Am. St. Rep. 778.

Partition of reversions and remainders. See note 113 Am. St. Rep. 55.

§ 771. Application of proceeds of sale of encumbered property. The proceeds of the sale of encumbered property must be applied under the direction of the court, as follows:

1. To pay its just proportion of the general costs of the action;
2. To pay the costs of the reference;
3. To satisfy and cancel of record the several liens in their order of priority, by payment of the sums due and to become due; the amount due to be verified by affidavit at the time of payment;
4. The residue among the owners of the property sold, according to their respective shares therein.

Legislation § 771. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 283, which had (1) the word "the" after "sale of," and (2) "must" instead of "shall."

§ 772. Party holding other securities may be required first to exhaust them. Whenever any party to an action, who holds a lien upon the property, or any part thereof, has other securities for the payment of the amount of such lien, the court may, in its discretion, order such securities to be exhausted before a distribution of the proceeds of sale, or may order a just deduction to be made from the amount of the lien on the property, on account thereof.

Legislation § 772. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 284.

§ 773. Proceeds of sale, disposition of. The proceeds of sale and the securities taken by the referees, or any part thereof, must be distributed by them to the persons entitled thereto, whenever the court so directs. But in case no direction be given, all of such proceeds and securities must be paid into court, or deposited therein, or as directed by the court.

Deposit in court. Ante, §§ 572–574.

Legislation § 773. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 285, which had (1) "shall" instead of "must" in both instances, and (2) "all such" instead of "all of such."

Referee is custodian, not bailee, of fund. A referee in a partition suit, with respect to the proceeds of a sale of lands involved in the action, is the custodian of funds held by him for the use of the co-owners, according to their interests, to be paid when the precise amounts due shall be determined: he is not, as to the proceeds of the sale of lands involved in the action, a mere bailee of a special fund, or the custodian of earmarked money belonging to the co-owners of the land. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

Assignment of claim against referee. A claim against a referee in partition, for the proceeds of a sale of lands involved in the suit, is a pure chose in action, and if such chose in action is assigned, it becomes the duty of the assignee to notify the debtor. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

Liability of transferee of fund. Where the referee in partition, being the custodian of the proceeds of a sale of lands involved in the action, transfers the fund without an order of court, the transferee, having knowledge of its source and character, and of the duty of its possessor to pay it over to the persons entitled, becomes liable to pay to the persons entitled. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

Form of action against referee. Where the referee in partition has received the proceeds of a sale of lands involved in the proceeding, the only appropriate action that one of the co-owners, or his agents, can maintain against him, or his successor, for the recovery of his share of the money when due, is either an action of debt, or for money had and received to the use of the plaintiff in the action. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

Conclusiveness of order. An order confirming a sale in partition is appealable by the purchaser, who becomes a quasi party to the suit, and is conclusive upon him, upon his failure to appeal therefrom. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607.

Deposit in court. See notes ante, §§ 572–574, and note post, § 2104.

§ 774. When paid into court, cause may be continued for determination of claims of parties. When the proceeds of the sale of any share or parcel belonging to persons who are parties to the action, whether known or unknown, are paid into courts, the action may be continued as between such parties, for the determination of their respective claims thereto, which must be ascertained and adjudged by the court. Further testimony may be taken in court, or by a referee, at the discretion of the court, and the court may, if necessary, require such parties to present the facts or law in controversy, by pleadings, as in an original action.

Legislation § 774. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 286, which had (1) in first line, the words "sales of any shares or parcels," instead of "the sale," etc., and (2) "shall" instead of "must."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 164; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 607, substituting (1) "whether known or unknown" for "and who are known," and (2) "courts" (sic) for

"court" after "paid into"; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'whether known or unknown' are substituted for 'and who are known,' to avoid the difficulty suggested in Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 433."

Construction of section. This section and § 759, ante, are to be construed, in determining title as between hostile claimants to any share or parcel, or to the proceeds of the sale thereof, as limited to the determination of issues over which the court in which the partition proceedings are pending has jurisdiction. Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 427; 58 Am. St. Rep. 188; 48 Pac. 481.

Liability of custodian of fund. Where a fund, arising from the sale of land in a partition suit, is not paid into court in such suit, and the action is not continued for its disposition, as provided in this section, the custodian of the fund is not protected by an ex parte order of court for its payment, where he makes payment to a person not entitled. Widenmann v. Weniger, 164 Cal. 667; 130 Pac. 421.

§ 775. Sales by referees may be public or private. All sales of real property made by referees under this chapter must be made at public auction to the highest bidder, upon notice given in the manner required for the sale of real property on execution unless in the opinion of the court it would be more beneficial to the parties interested to sell the whole or some part thereof at private sale; the court may order or direct such real property, or any part thereof, to be sold at either public auction or private sale as the referee shall judge to be most beneficial to all parties interested. If sold at public auction the notice must state the terms of sale and if the property or any part thereof is to be sold subject to a prior estate, charge or lien, that must be stated in the notice. If the sale is ordered made at either public auction or private sale, the sale at private sale shall be conducted in the manner required in private sales of real property of estates of deceased persons.

Terms, distinct lots. Post, § 782.
Notice of execution sales. Ante, §§ 692, 693.
Proceedings. Ante, §§ 694 et seq.

Legislation § 775. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 287, which had (1) "shall" instead of "must," in the three instances, and (2) "by" instead of "at" before "public auction." When enacted in 1872, § 775 read: "All sales of real property, made by referees, under this chapter, must be made at public auction to the highest bidder, upon notice published in the manner required for the sale of real property on execution. The notice must state the terms of sale, and if the property or any part of it is to be sold subject to a prior estate, charge, or lien, that must be stated in the notice."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 164; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 608, substituting "given" for "published" after "notice"; the code commissioner saying, "'Published' is changed to 'given,' thus requiring the notice of a sale in partition to be the same as when under execution."

4. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 1001.

§ 776. Court must direct terms of sale or credit. The court must, in the order for sale, direct the terms of credit which may be allowed for the purchase-money of any portion of the premises of which it may direct a sale on credit, and for that portion of which the purchase-money is required, by the provisions hereinafter contained, to be invested for the benefit of unknown owners, infants, or parties out of the state.

Legislation § 776. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 288, which had the word "shall" instead of "must."

§ 777. Referees may take securities for purchase-money. The referees may take separate mortgages and other securities for the whole, or convenient portions of the purchase-money, of such parts of the property as are directed by the court to be sold on credit, for the shares of any known owner of full age, in the name of such owner; and for the shares of an infant, in the name of the guardian of such infant; and for other shares, in the name of the clerk of the county and his successors in office.

Legislation § 777. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 289, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 64, Kerr ed. p. 90.

§ 778. Tenant whose estate has been sold shall receive compensation. The person entitled to a tenancy for life, or years, whose estate has been sold, is entitled to receive such sum as may be deemed a reasonable satisfaction for such estate, and which the person so entitled may consent to accept instead thereof, by an instrument in writing, filed with the clerk of the court. Upon the filing of such consent, the clerk must enter the same in the minutes of the court.

Legislation § 778. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 290), substituting (1) "has" for "shall have" before "been sold," (2) "is" for "shall be" before "entitled," and (3) "must" for "shall" after "clerk."

Right to partition of property subject to lease for term of years. See note 9 Ann. Cas. 1029.

§ 779. Court may fix such compensation. If such consent be not given, filed, and entered as provided in the last section, at or before a judgment of sale is rendered, the court must ascertain and determine what proportion of the proceeds of the sale, after deducting expenses, will be a just and reasonable sum to be allowed on account of such estate, and must order the same to be paid to such party, or deposited in court for him, as the case may require.

Legislation § 779. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 291), substituting "must" for "shall," in both instances.

§ 780. Court must protect tenants unknown. If the persons entitled to such estate for life or years be unknown, the court must provide for the protection of their rights in the same manner, as far as may be, as if they were known and had appeared.

Legislation § 780. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 292), substituting "must" for "shall."

§ 781. Court must ascertain and secure the value of future contingent or vested interests. In all cases of sales, when it appears that any person has a vested or contingent future right or estate in any of the property sold, the court must ascertain and settle the proportional value of such contingent or vested right or estate, and must direct such proportion of the proceeds of the sale to be invested, secured, or paid over, in such manner as to protect the rights and interests of the parties.

Legislation § 781. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 293), substituting "must" for "shall," in both instances.

§ 782. Terms of sale must be made known at the time. Lots must be sold separately. In all cases of sales of property the terms must be made known at the time; and if the premises consist of distinct farms or lots, they must be sold separately.

Legislation § 782. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 294), substituting "must" for "shall," in both instances.

§ 783. Who may not be purchasers. Neither of the referees, nor any person for the benefit of either of them, can be interested in any purchase; nor can a guardian of an infant party be interested in the purchase of any real property, being the subject of the action, except for the benefit of the infant. All sales contrary to the provisions of this section are void.

Legislation § 783. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 295), (1) substituting "can" for "shall," in both instances, and (2) "are" for "shall be."

§ 784. Referees must make report of sale to court. Confirmation or rejection of sale. After completing a sale of property, or any part thereof ordered to be sold, the referees must report the same to the court, with a description of the different parcels of land sold to each purchaser; the name of the purchaser; the price paid or secured; the terms and conditions of the sale, and the securities, if any, taken. The report must be filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which the action is brought. Thereafter any purchaser, or any party to the action, may, upon ten days' notice to the other parties who have appeared therein, and also to the purchaser if he be not the moving party, move the court to confirm or set aside any sale or sales so reported. Upon the hearing, the court must examine the return and report and witnesses in relation to the same, and if the proceedings were unfair, or the sum bid disproportionate to the value, and if it appears that a sum exceeding such bid at least ten per cent, exclusive of a new sale may be obtained, the court may vacate the sale and direct another to be had, of which notice must be given, and the sale conducted in all respects as if no previous sale had taken place. If an offer of ten per cent more in amount than that named in the return be made to the court, in writing, by a responsible person, it is in the discretion of the court to accept such offer and confirm the sale to such person, or to order a new sale.

Legislation § 784. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 296, which had the word "shall" instead of "must," in both instances, the section then containing only the first two sentences. When enacted in 1872, § 784 read: "After completing a sale of the property, or any part thereof ordered to be sold, the referees must report the same to the court, with a description of the different parcels of land sold to each purchaser; the name of the purchaser; the price paid or secured; the terms and conditions of the sale, and the securities, if any, taken. The report must be filed in the office of the clerk of the county where the property is situated."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 608, adding the sentence of the 1909 amendment, beginning "Thereafter"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment adds the last sentence, providing that the purchaser at a partition sale or any party to the suit may move to confirm or vacate it, and the notice to be given of the motion."

4. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 1002.

Purchaser's refusal to pay amount of his bid. The purchaser is not bound to accept an imperfect title; but where, without cause or excuse, he refuses to take the property after the sale in partition, and deliberately intends to suffer all the legal consequences of such refusal, a resale cannot be either a just or a legal mode of ascertaining his liability, unless made upon the same terms and conditions as those under which he purchased the property. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607. Where the purchaser refuses to pay the price bid and take a deed, and a resale is made at a less price, the first purchaser is liable for the difference. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 Cal. 51; 69 Pac. 847. Where, without a resale, the referee brings suit against the defendant to recover the unpaid purchase-money, the action can be sustained, because the order confirming the sale, not being appealed from, absolutely fixes the defendant's liability as a purchaser; but he is not concluded, by his failure to appeal, from showing that the terms of the first sale were different from those of the second sale. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607.

Unfairness in making sale, refusal of court to confirm. Where the referee, in making the sale in an action of partition, makes any error, irregularity, or misrepresentation, whether intentional or not, whereby the purchaser is misled to his prejudice to such an extent as to make it unconscionable that his contract of purchase should be enforced against him, the sale will not be confirmed. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607.

Resale for inadequacy of price. There is not an entire agreement by appellate tribunals as to when mere inadequacy of price will justify an order of resale, although the weight of authority seems to hold to the rule, that there must be something more than mere inadequacy, that is, that the inadequacy must be such as to justify the inference of fraud, or is so gross as to shock the conscience. The court must look to the value of the property at the time of the sale, and not to the time when the question of confirmation is before the court, unless these periods so nearly coincide as to justify the presumption that no change in values has taken place. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 Cal. 51; 69 Pac. 847.

Discretion of court. The court, doubtless, has power to confirm or to refuse to confirm the sale; but this is not an arbitrary power: it is neither more nor less than a sound judicial discretion, and must be exercised with a just regard to the rights of all concerned. Dunn v. Dunn, 137 Cal. 51; 69 Pac. 847.

Confirmation of resale. Where a larger price was bid upon an original sale, owing to the terms of sale expressly providing for a perfect and valid title, and the price bid upon a resale, which was confirmed, was much less, owing to the terms of sale being expressly at the purchaser's risk, and no fact or circumstance, other than the differing conditions of sale, tends to account for the difference in price, it must be presumed that all the difference between the two bids was induced by the terms of the second sale; and where the owners did not object to the confirmation of the second sale, upon the ground that the price obtained was inadequate, they are estopped from denying the adequacy of the price obtained under the conditions of sale; nor can the referee making the sales deny the terms and conditions of the contract made by him with such purchaser. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607.

§ 785. If sale confirmed, order must be made to execute conveyances. If the sale is confirmed by the court, an order must be entered, directing the referees to execute conveyances and take securities pursuant to such sale, which they are hereby authorized to do. Such order may also give directions to them respecting the disposition of the proceeds of the sale. If the purchaser, after the confirmation of the sale, refuses to pay the amount of his bid, the referees may again sell the property at any time to the highest bidder, and if any loss is occasioned thereby the referees may recover the amount of such loss and the cost from the bidder so refusing, or the referees, without making a resale, may maintain an action against the purchaser for the amount of his bid.

Legislation § 785. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 297), substituting "must" for "shall," the section then having only the first two sentences.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 608, (1) changing "be" to "is," in first line, and (2) adding the last sentence; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment adds the last sentence, giving referees who have sold property in partition the right to sue for the amount of the bid, or to make a resale and recover the amount of deficiency, if any."

No sale valid until confirmed. No sale in partition is valid until reported to and confirmed by the court. Schoonover v. Birnbaum, 150 Cal. 734; 89 Pac. 1108.

Correction of referee's mistake. Where, by reason of the mistake of the referee in using the wrong map in making a partition, land not included in the complaint, which is adversely possessed by one who is not a party to the action, is set off and confirmed to one of the parties, the final decree may be set aside, as to such property, by a suit in equity. Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 664; 50 Pac. 777.

Purchaser's refusal to pay amount of his bid. See note ante, § 783.

Applicability of rule of caveat emptor to partition sales. See note 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 409.

§ 786. Proceeding if a lienholder becomes a purchaser. When a party entitled to a share of the property, or an encumbrancer entitled to have his lien paid out of the sale, becomes a purchaser, the referees may take his receipt for so much of the proceeds of the sale as belongs to him.

Legislation § 786. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 298.

§ 787. Conveyances must be recorded, and will be a bar against parties. The conveyances must be recorded in the county where the premises are situated, and shall be a bar against all persons interested in the property in any way who shall have been named as parties in the action, and against all such parties and persons as were unknown, if the summons was served by publication, and against all persons claiming under them, or either of them, and against all persons having unrecorded deeds or liens at the commencement of the action.

Legislation § 787. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 299), (1) in first line, changing "shall" to "must," (2) changing "have been" to "was" after "summons," and (3) changing "from" to "under" after "claiming"; the section then ending with the words "or either of them."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 326, adding the last clause, beginning "and against all."

§ 788. Proceeds of sale belonging to parties unknown must be invested for their benefit. When there are proceeds of a sale belonging to an unknown owner, or to a person without the state, who has no legal representative within it, the same must be invested in bonds of this state or of the United States, for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto.

Legislation § 788. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 300, which had (1) the word "shall" instead of "must," and (2) instead of "bonds of this state or of the United States," the words "securities on interest."

§ 789. Investment must be made in the name of the clerk of the county. When the security of the proceeds of sale is taken, or when an investment of any such proceeds is made, it must be done, except as herein otherwise provided, in the name of the clerk of the county where the papers are filed, and his successors in office, who must hold the same for the use and benefit of the parties interested, subject to the order of the court.

Legislation § 789. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 301), substituting "must" for "shall," in both instances.

§ 790. When the interests of the parties are ascertained, securities must be taken in their names. When security is taken by the referees on a sale, and the parties interested in such security, by an instrument in writing, under their hands, delivered to the referees, agree upon the shares and proportions to which they are respectively entitled, or when shares and proportions have been previously adjudged by the court, such securities must be taken in the names of and payable to the parties respectively entitled thereto, and must be delivered to such parties upon their receipt therefor. Such agreement and receipt must be returned and filed with the clerk.

Legislation § 790. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 302), substituting "must" for "shall," in the three instances.

§ 791. Duties of the clerk making investments. The clerk in whose name a security is taken, or by whom an investment is made, and his successors in office, must receive the interest and principal as it becomes due, and apply and invest the same as the court may direct; and must deposit with the county treasurer all securities taken, and keep an account in a book provided and kept for that purpose, in the clerk's office, free for inspection by all persons, of investments and moneys received by him thereon, and the disposition thereof.

Deposit in court. Ante, §§ 572–574.

Legislation § 791. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 303), substituting (1) "must" for "shall" before "receive," and (2) "must deposit with the county treasurer" for "shall file in his office."

§ 792. When unequal partition is ordered, compensation may be adjudged in certain cases. When it appears that partition cannot be made equal between the parties, according to their respective rights, without prejudice to the rights and interests of some of them, and a partition be ordered, the court may adjudge compensation to be made by one party to another, on account of the inequality; but such compensation shall not be required to be made to others by owners unknown, nor by an infant, unless it appears that such infant has personal property sufficient for that purpose, and that his interest will be promoted thereby. And in all cases the court has power to make compensatory adjustment between the respective parties, according to the ordinary principles of equity.

Legislation § 792. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 304, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 706, substituting (1) "appears" for "shall appear," and (2) "has" for "shall have" before "power."

§ 793. The share of an infant may be paid to his guardian. When the share of an infant is sold, the proceeds of the sale may be paid by the referee making the sale to his general guardian, or the special guardian appointed for him in the action, upon giving the security required by law or directed by order of the court.

General guardian. Post, §§ 1747–1809.
Guardian ad litem, generally. Ante, §§ 372, 373.

Legislation § 793. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 305.

§ 794. The guardian of an insane person may receive the proceeds of such party's interest. The guardian who may be entitled to the custody and management of the estate of an insane person, or other person adjudged incapable of conducting his own affairs, whose interest in real property has been sold, may receive in behalf of such person his share of the proceeds of such real property from the referees, on executing with sufficient sureties an undertaking approved by a judge of the court, that he will faithfully discharge the trust reposed in him, and will render a true and just account to the person entitled or to his legal representative.

Legislation § 794. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 306), substituting "has" for "shall have."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 11, omitting "or by a county judge" after "judge of the court."

§ 795. [Provided that guardian could consent to partition without action, and execute releases. Repealed.]

Legislation § 795. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 307.

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Repealed by Stats. 1907, p. 608; the code commissioner saying, "Repealed, because it authorized guardians of infants and insane persons to consent to partitions without any action, and did not provide for any notice of the proceedings to be given either to the persons or their relatives, or otherwise."

Consent to partition. It is provided by this section that the general guardian of an infant may consent to a partition without action; and as such guardian has also authority to appear for the minor in an action for a partition, it would seem that, in the action, the guardian might consent to a mere course of procedure authorized by statute, and coming within the purview of the action itself. Richardson v. Loupe, 80 Cal. 490; 22 Pac. 227.

§ 796. Costs of partition a lien upon shares of parceners. The costs of partition, including reasonable counsel fees, expended by the plaintiff or either of the defendants, for the common benefit, fees of referees, and other disbursements, must be paid by the parties respectively entitled to share in the lands divided, in proportion to their respective interests therein, and may be included and specified in the judgment. In that case they shall be a lien on the several shares, and the judgment may be enforced by execution against such shares, and against other property held by the respective parties. When, however, litigation arises between some of the parties only, the court may require the expense of such litigation to be paid by the parties thereto, or any of them.

Referees' fees, etc. Ante, § 768; post, § 1028.

Legislation § 796. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 308, which, as amended by Stats. 1871–72, p. 230, read: "The costs of partition, including fees of referees, and such attorneys' fees expended for the common benefit, both for plaintiffs and defendants, as the court shall deem just and proper, and other disbursements, shall be paid by the parties respectively entitled to share in the lands divided in proportion to their respective interests therein, and may be included and specified in the judgment. In that case they shall be a lien on the several shares, and the judgment may be enforced by execution against such shares, and against other property held by the respective parties. When, however, a litigation arises between some of the parties only, the court may require the expense of such litigation to be paid by the parties thereto, or any of them." The original Practice Act section did not contain the words "and such attorneys' fees expended for the common benefit, both for plaintiff and defendants, as the court shall deem just and proper." When enacted in 1872, § 795 read as at present, except for the amendments of 1874.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 326, (1) inserting "or either of the defendants" after "plaintiff," and (2) omitting "a" before "litigation."

Construction of section. The lien referred to in this section is one that takes effect by relation at the time of the filing of the notice of lis pendens, and without docketing the judgment; and the express provision, that such lien may be acquired in a particular mode, negatives the right to acquire it in any other mode. Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1046. It is contemplated by this section that costs may or may not become a lien upon the several shares of the parties, as the parties to whom they are due may elect, and the solution of the question as to whether they become a lien depends upon whether they are specified and included in the judgment of partition; the statute does not say that the costs shall in all cases become a lien, but that "in that case," that is, when they are "included and specified in the judgment," they become a lien. Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1046.

Liability for costs. The right of the plaintiff, in an action for partition, to the proceeds arising from the sale, must be limited by the extent of the interest he acquires in the premises under his conveyance, and from this his proportionate share of the costs and expenses of the action and the subsequent proceedings must be deducted. Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461; 76 Am. Dec. 540. Where plaintiff conveys his interest to defendants, pending an action for partition, the defendants, being the only parties entitled to share in the lands divided, are liable for costs. Wickersham v. Denman, 68 Cal. 383; 9 Pac. 723.

Counsel fees. The amount of an attorney's fee to be allowed in an action for partition is a question of fact, to be determined by the trial court from the evidence, and its findings will not be disturbed, where there is a substantial conflict in the evidence, if there is sufficient evidence to support the allowance, and there is no clear abuse of discretion. Watson v. Sutro, 103 Cal. 169; 37 Pac. 201.

Costs allowed when and how. Costs in partition cannot be allowed until the final judgment is entered. Harrington v. Goldsmith, 136 Cal. 168; 68 Pac. 594. In partition, where a share has been set off to co-tenants, the award of costs, as a general lien on the property, including the interests of all the owners therein, without segregation, does not render the judgment void or collaterally assailable for errors. Baldwin v. Foster, 157 Cal. 643; 108 Pac. 714.

Appeal. In partition, a defendant's consent to the allowance of attorneys' fees estops him, on appeal, from objecting to such allowance. Seale v. Carr, 155 Cal. 577; 102 Pac. 262.

Allowance of attorney's fees in partition. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 854.

§ 797. [Provided that court, by consent, could appoint single referee. Repealed.]

Referees. Ante, § 763.

Legislation § 797. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 309.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Repealed by Stats. 1907, p. 608; the code commissioner saying, "Repealed, because its provisions have been included in the amendment to § 763."

§ 798. Apportionment of expenses of litigation. If it appear that other actions or proceedings have been necessarily prosecuted or defended by any one of the tenants in common, for the protection, confirmation, or perfecting of the title, or setting the boundaries, or making a survey or surveys of the estate partitioned, the court shall allow to the parties to the action, who have paid the expense of such litigation or other proceedings, all the expenses necessarily incurred therein, except counsel fees, which shall have accrued to the common benefit of the other tenants in common, with interest thereon from the date of making the said expenditures, and in the same kind of money expended or paid, and the same must be pleaded and allowed by the court, and included in the final judgment, and shall be a lien upon the share of each tenant respectively, in proportion to his interest, and shall be enforced in the same manner as taxable costs of partition are taxed and collected.

Legislation § 798. 1. Enacted April 1, 1872, and then read: "If it appears to the court that other actions or proceedings have been prosecuted or defended by any of the tenants in common, for the protection, confirmation, or perfecting of the title, or settling the boundary, or making a survey or surveys of the estate partitioned, the court must allow to the parties who have paid the expense of such necessary litigation, or other proceedings, all the expenses necessarily so incurred therein, which shall have accrued to the common benefit of the other tenants in common, with interest thereon from the date of making the expenditures; and the same must be allowed and taxed, and included in the final judgment as costs are allowed, taxed, and included in the judgment."

2. Repealed by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 326.
3. Re-enacted and amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 98.

Costs of partition. See note ante, § 796.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872.

§ 799. Abstract of title in action for partition. When cost of, allowed. If it is necessary to have an abstract of title of the property to be partitioned, the plaintiff may procure one before commencing the action, and may, in his complaint, state that he has done so, and that the abstract is subject to the inspection and use of all the parties to the action, designating a place where it will be kept for such inspection. Otherwise the court may, upon application of any one of the parties, authorize him to procure an abstract, which, when made, shall be kept at some place designated by the court for the inspection and use of all parties, any of whom is entitled to make a copy thereof. The expense reasonably incurred in procuring such abstract must be allowed to the party incurring it, with interest thereon from the commencement of the action, if it had been procured before that time, otherwise from the time of payment.

Legislation § 799. 1. Enacted April 1, 1872, and then read: "If it appears to the court that it was necessary to have made an abstract of the title to the property to be partitioned, and such abstract shall have been procured by the plaintiff, or if the plaintiff shall have failed to have the same made before the commencement of the action, and any one of the defendants shall have had such abstract afterwards made, the cost of the abstract, with interest thereon from the time the same is subject to the inspection of the respective parties to the action, must be allowed and taxed. Whenever such abstract is produced by the plaintiff, before the commencement of the action, he must file with his complaint a notice that an abstract of the title has been made, and is subject to the inspection and use of all the parties to the action, designating therein where the abstract will be kept for inspection. But if the plaintiff shall have failed to procure such abstract before commencing the action, and any defendant shall procure the same to be made, he shall, as soon as he has directed it to be made, file a notice thereof in the action with the clerk of the court, stating who is making the same, and where it will be kept when finished. The court, or the judge thereof, may direct from time to time, during the progress of the action, who shall have the custody of the abstract."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 608; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment corrects an error by striking out the word 'produced' and inserting the word 'procured.'"

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872.

§ 800. Abstract, how made and verified. The abstract mentioned in the last preceding section may be made by any competent searcher of records, and need not be certified by the recorder or other officer, but instead thereof it must be verified by the affidavit of the person making it, to the effect that he believes it to be correct; but the same may be corrected from time to time if found incorrect, under the direction of the court.

Legislation § 800. Enacted April 1, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872.

§ 801. Interest allowed on disbursements made under direction of the court. Whenever, during the progress of the action for partition, any disbursements shall have been made, under the direction of the court or the judge thereof, by a party thereto, interest must be allowed thereon from the time of making such disbursements.

Legislation § 801. Enacted April 1, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was added by act of April 1, 1872.

§ 802. Sire facies [scire facias] abolished. The writ of sire facies [scire facias] is abolished.

Corporations, dissolution of. See Civ. Code, Legislation, § 399.

Receivers, upon dissolution of corporation. Ante, § 565.

Legislation § 802. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The writ of scire facias, the writ of quo warranto, and proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto, are abolished. The remedies obtainable in these forms may hereafter be obtained by civil actions, under the provisions of this chapter."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 11.

Writ of scire facias. Scire facias was the remedy by means of which a government patent for land might be attacked by a subsequent patentee of the same land, no collateral attack upon such patent being permissible. O'Connor v. Frasher, 56 Cal. 499. The writ of scire facias was formerly used by government as a mode to ascertain and to enforce the forfeiture of a corporate charter, in cases where there was a legal existing body capable of acting, but which had abused its power; it did not lie in case of a mere de facto corporation; it was necessary that the government should be a party to the suit, for the judgment was, that the parties be ousted and the franchise seized into the hands of the government. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277.

§ 803. Action may be brought against any party usurping, etc., any office or franchise. An action may be brought by the attorney-general, in the name of the people of this state, upon his own information, or upon a complaint of a private party, against any person who usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any public office, civil or military, or any franchise, or against any corporation, either de jure or de facto, which usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any franchise, within this state. And the attorney-general must bring the action, whenever he has reason to believe that any such office or franchise has been usurped, intruded into, or unlawfully held or exercised by any person, or when he is directed to do so by the governor.

Complaint. Post, § 804.

Security by relator. Post, § 810.

Co-operative business association, attorney-general may inquire into right of, to do business. See Civ. Code, § 653k.

Franchise. Civ. Code, § 358.

Dissolution of corporations. Civ. Code, §§ 399, 400.

Quo warranto, what court may issue. Ante, § 76, subd. 5.

Office, title to. Contest. Post, §§ 1111–1127.

Mandamus to compel admission to office. Post, § 1085.

Legislation § 803. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 310), (1) in the last sentence, (a) omitting the words "it shall be the duty of" after "and," and (b) changing "to" to "must" before "bring."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 165; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 600, (1) in first sentence, (a) changing "the" to "a" before "complaint," (b) omitting, after "franchise," the words "within this state," and adding, in lieu thereof, the clause beginning "or against" and ending "this state"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment suggested by the commissioner simply added to the original section as it was enacted March 11, 1872, the following sentence: 'And if it is claimed that a corporation, either de jure or de facto, is exercising a franchise which it is not authorized to exercise, or is exercising corporate functions when not authorized to do so, such corporation must be made a party defendant.' This was struck out on the floor of the senate, January 31, 1907, and the following inserted after the word 'franchise,' where it first appears: 'or against any corporation, either de jure or de facto, which usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any franchise.' "

Constitutionality of section. Whether § 5 of article VI of the constitution of 1879, and the amendment to § 76, ante, in 1880, reviving the writ of quo warranto, abolished by § 802 on the adoption of the codes in 1872, have or have not had the effect of repealing this section, can make but little difference, as the power under a writ of quo warranto is quite as broad as under the statute, and an information or complaint sufficient under this chapter will be sustained as in support of a writ of quo warranto, if the proper parties are before the court. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. The statute embodied in this chapter is constitutional; first, it may be considered as a mode of procedure for the exercise of the jurisdiction in quo warranto conferred by the constitution; and second, it is an action, and the legislature is not prohibited by the constitution from providing for such an action. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693; People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277.

Construction of section. A proceeding under this chapter is substantially equivalent to that by quo warranto; it is the same as quo warranto, with something added. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. Proceedings in the nature of quo warranto furnish an appropriate and adequate remedy for the usurpation of an office or franchise. Barendt v. McCarthy, 160 Cal. 680; 118 Pac. 228; People v. Sacramento Drainage District, 155 Cal. 373; 103 Pac. 207; People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; 50 Pac. 668; People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277; Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039; People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423; People v. Henshaw, 76 Cal. 436; 18 Pac. 413; Kelly v. Edwards, 69 Cal. 460; 11 Pac. 1; People v. Lawley, 17 Cal. App. 331; 119 Pac. 1089. This section provides for an action against one who unlawfully exercises any public office or any franchise. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. This chapter, relating to actions for usurpation of an office or a franchise, provides, in effect, for an information in the nature of quo warranto, the remedy or proceeding being extended to usurpations of or intrusions into any office or franchise, and is constitutional. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. Proceedings under this chapter were maintained in the following cases to question the validity of the election, appointment, or right to hold office or to exercise a franchise, but no ruling as to the character of the franchise was made. People v. Brenham, 3 Cal. 477; People v. Hoge, 55 Cal. 612; People v. Pfister, 57 Cal. 532; People v. Newman, 96 Cal. 605; 31 Pac. 564; People v. Hecht, 105 Cal. 621; 45 Am. St. Rep. 96; 27 L. R. A. 203; 38 Pac. 911; People v. Knight, 116 Cal. 108; 47 Pac. 925; People v. Shaver, 127 Cal. 317; 59 Pac. 784; People v. Williamson, 135 Cal. 415; 67 Pac. 504; People v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257; 60 Pac. 865. The action under this section is in the form of a civil action, and, as to the procedure therein, follows the rules prescribed for civil cases, but the judgment rendered therein, adjudging the defendant guilty of usurping the franchise, and imposing a fine therefor, is penal in its nature. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 129 Cal. 545; 79 Am. St. Rep. 137; 62 Pac. 104.

Quo warranto. The definition of the process of quo warranto is, that it is in the nature of a writ of right of the public against him who usurps any office, franchise, or liberty, to inquire by what authority he supports his claim, in order to determine the right. People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43. Quo warranto, at common law, was a writ which issued to bring the defendant before the court to show by what authority he claimed an office or franchise, and was applicable alike to cases where the defendant never had a right, or where, having a right or franchise, he had forfeited it by neglect or abuse. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. Quo warranto was a case at law; it afforded the legal remedy for the usurpation of an office. Buckner v. Veuve, 63 Cal. 304; People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423; People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039; Wheeler v. Donnell, 110 Cal. 655; 43 Pac. 1. A proceeding by quo warranto is, in form, a criminal proceeding, though, in substance, a civil one in most cases; it seems to be, and generally is, a mixed action for the double purpose of vindicating public policy and enforcing a private remedy. People v. Gillespie, 1 Cal. 342. Proceedings by quo warranto, like writs of mandamus and other prerogative writs, rest in the discretion of the court; the exercise of the power is had only in cases where the public convenience and welfare requires it; the writ is the state's right, and is only to be issued for the state's benefit. Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117.

Information in nature of quo warranto. Informations in the nature of quo warranto existed at common law; in England, they were filed by the attorney-general, or by the king's coroner, of his own authority; afterwards, by the king's coroner, under the direction of the court of king's bench, and still later, in certain cases, by leave of the court; the latter, which was under the statute of Anne, introduced a more convenient mode of proceeding to inquire into a usurpation of or an intrusion into certain enumerated offices and franchises. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. The office of a writ issued upon an information in the nature of quo warranto is to prevent the usurpation of any office, franchise, or liberty, as also to afford a remedy against corporations for a violation of their charters tending to a forfeiture thereof. Ex parte Attorney-General, 1 Cal. 85. An information in the nature of quo warranto, which has succeeded the writ of that name, was originally, in form, a criminal proceeding to punish the usurpation of a franchise by a fine, as well as to seize the franchise; and this information has now become, in substance, a civil proceeding to try the mere right to the franchise or office. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277.

Attorney-general may bring action. An action may be brought by the attorney-general for the usurpation of an office or a franchise. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. The attempt of a municipal corporation to govern and tax the inhabitants of territory annexed to that described in its charter, and outside of its charter limits, is the usurpation of a franchise, for which the attorney-general is authorized to bring an action in the name of the people. People v. Oakland, 92 Cal. 611; 28 Pac. 807. A city has no power to institute an action to secure a forfeiture of a street-railway franchise: that power is vested in the attorney-general. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736.

Action upon complaint of private party. The attorney-general has control of an action of quo warranto, although it is brought upon the relation of a private party. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. It is in no legal sense under the control of the relator; and a stipulation made by the relator or his counsel is not binding on the state. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. Where the term of office of an incumbent has expired, quo warranto lies in the name of the people, upon relation of one claiming to have been elected as his successor, to remove him from an unlawful holding over; it cannot concern the defendant whether the relator is entitled to the office, as against an intervening claimant, nor whether the court, in the contest between the relator and the other claimant, erred in its decision in favor of the relator. People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11; 70 Pac. 918. The relator need not be shown to be entitled to the office usurped (People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383); and the proceeding is not properly by relation, unless the relator has an interest in the proceeding. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. The fact that the attorney-general has unnecessarily added the name of a relator in an action to forfeit a franchise, does not convert the proceeding into a private action. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. Assuming that the courts have power to control the discretion of the attorney-general in refusing leave to a private person to sue under this section, that power should be exercised only where the abuse of discretion by the attorney-general, in refusing such leave, is extreme and clearly indefensible; otherwise the order of the court is an abuse of its own discretion. Lamb v. Webb, 151 Cal. 451; 91 Pac. 102.

Subject-matter of action. The dissolution of a corporation, at the instance of the state, or the forfeiture of its franchise, can only be accomplished by quo warranto proceedings. Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co., 3 Cal. App. 668; 87 Pac. 27. The proper remedy to question the validity of the action of a board of supervisors, in declaring territory described in its order to be duly incorporated under a specified name as a municipal corporation, is by a proceeding in quo warranto. Beaumont v. Samson, 5 Cal. App. 491; 90 Pac. 839. Drainage, irrigation, and reclamation districts are public corporations, and the proper remedy to question their acts is by a proceeding in quo warranto, whether corporations de jure or de factor. Keech v. Joplin, 157 Cal. 1; 106 Pac. 222; Reclamation District No. 765 v. McPhee, 13 Cal. App. 382; 109 Pac. 1106. Whether or not the petition for the annexation of territory to a city was signed by the requisite number of electors, cannot be inquired into by the court in an action of quo warranto, where the determination whether it was so signed was a question of fact, submitted by the statute to the decision of the city council. People v. Los Angeles, 133 Cal. 338; 65 Pac. 749. The result of an election may be tested by a proceeding upon an information in the nature of quo warranto. Stone v. Elkins, 24 Cal. 125. A proceeding for the confirmation of the organization of an irrigation district, under the act of March 16, 1889, is in rem, and the decree of confirmation is conclusive upon the state, as well as upon others, that all of the steps necessary for the proper organization of the district had been taken, and the contrary cannot be shown in an action of quo warranto. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399.

Public officers, who are. A pilot in the port of San Francisco was an officer, under the act of 1854, as amended in 1858. People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43. The physician of a county hospital is an officer, where the law authorizing the appointment of such physician fixes his term of office, provides for his salary, and prescribes his duties. People v. Harrington, 63 Cal. 257; and see Wall v. Board of Directors, 145 Cal. 468; 78 Pac. 951. A graduate of medicine, appointed by a board of supervisors as a county physician, or hospital physician, under the County Government Act of 1897 (§ 25, subd. 5), to attend upon the indigent sick and dependent poor of the county, is not a public officer, but a mere employee of the board, and hence is not subject to proceedings in quo warranto upon relation of the attorney-general. People v. Wheeler, 136 Cal. 652; 69 Pac. 435. A member of the board of health of the city and county of San Francisco is an officer, within the meaning of the constitution. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423. A director in a private corporation cannot be said to hold a public office. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Usurper, who is. When the question as to who is the legal successor of an officer is in litigation upon a point of law, the incumbent is bound to know who his successor is, and if his legal successor qualifies and demands the office, and the incumbent refuses to deliver it up upon the termination of the litigation, he becomes a usurper ab initio. People v. Smyth, 28 Cal. 21. An office becomes vacant, ipso facto, upon the incumbent ceasing to be an inhabitant of the district for which he was elected; and one appointed to fill such vacancy is not a usurper, merely because the office had not previously been declared vacant. People v. Brite, 55 Cal. 79.

Franchise, what is. A franchise is a particular privilege conferred by a grant from the government and vested in individuals. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110; People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85. Franchises are special privileges conferred by government upon individuals, and which do not belong to the citizens of the country generally, of common right; the common right refers to the right of citizens generally at common law, the investiture of which is not to be looked for in any special law, whether established by the constitution or by an act of the legislature; and although a right, such as a right to lay down pipes in the streets of a city, and to collect rates for water furnished, may be granted by the constitution to every person, yet it does not follow that such right is not a franchise; they are vested by a grant of the sovereign power, and not by the common law, and the generality of the grant does not deprive them of the character of franchises. Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69. The right to collect tolls on roads and bridges is a franchise, the character of which may be defined as a certain privilege of a public nature, conferred by grant from the government and vested in individuals; it makes no difference whether the grant is made directly by the legislature, or by a subordinate body to whom the power is delegated; it is still a grant emanating from the sovereign authority of the state; a grant of such a franchise by a board of supervisors has the same standing, in respect to its validity, the presumptions in its favor, and the mode in which it may be attacked, as a grant of any other right, privilege, or thing made by any department of the government, under the authority of law. Truckee etc. Turnpike Road Co. v. Campbell, 44 Cal. 89; Bartram v. Central Turnpike Co., 25 Cal. 284; Volcano Cañon Road Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 88 Cal. 634; 26 Pac. 513. The right to be a corporation is, in itself, a franchise. People v. Selfridge, 52 Cal. 331; People v. Montecito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276; 33 Am. St. Rep. 172; 32 Pac. 236. The very existence of a corporation, as such, is a franchise, and it exercises its franchise in every act which it performs as a corporation; but a corporation, whose existence is a franchise, may possess powers and privileges which, in themselves, are not franchises, such as the right to bank, or the right to buy and sell property, real and personal, but it usually owns, with such privileges, some that are franchises, but, whether the powers are entirely of the kind which are franchises or not, its existence and right to employ its corporate powers is a franchise. Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69. The right of laying down and maintaining pipes in the streets of a city, by which water or gas is conveyed, and to collect rates for water or gas, is a franchise. San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614; Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69. An office is of the nature of a franchise, in that it can be derived only from the sovereign. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. The right and power claimed by a municipal corporation to govern and tax the inhabitants of a territory annexed to that described in its charter, is a franchise, in addition to and distinct from that of being a corporation. People v. Oakland, 92 Cal. 611; 28 Pac. 807.

Title to public office tried how. There are two separate and distinct methods provided in this code for testing the title to an office: the first is by proceedings under this chapter (§§ 802–810), in the nature of quo warranto, against any person who usurps or intrudes into a public office; and the second is by contesting the election under §§ 1111–1127, post. Powers v. Hitchcock, 129 Cal. 325; 61 Pac. 1076; and see Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 314. The act conferring upon any elector the right to contest the election of any person who has been declared duly elected to a public office, does not deprive the people, in their sovereign capacity, on complaint made, of their right to inquire into the authority by which any person assumes to exercise the functions of a public office or franchise, or to remove him therefrom if it is shown that he is a usurper having no legal title thereto; the two remedies are distinct, the one belonging to the elector in his individual capacity, as a power granted, and the other to the people, in the right of their sovereignty. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. An information in the nature of quo warranto is not collateral, but is a direct proceeding to try the title to an office, and to inquire into all the facts upon which the title rests; such information is the direct and appropriate remedy for a review. People v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 432. The actual incumbent of an office may maintain a summary proceeding, by petition, to recover the books and papers pertaining to the office; his right to the office can only be called in question by an information against him in the nature of quo warranto, and such right cannot be questioned on review by certiorari. Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 174; and see Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319. The contest of the right of an actual incumbent in possession under color of right can be originated only by a proceeding by information in the nature of quo warranto against him as incumbent. People v. Olds, 3 Cal. 167; 58 Am. Dec. 398; Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 174. One in possession of an office to which he was not duly elected, but who holds a certificate of election, proper in form, from the board of election canvassers, has not the real title, but only the color of title given by the certificate, and he is an intruder or usurper, or one who unlawfully holds and exercises office, and an action may be maintained against him, under this section. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50. The forfeiture of the right to office, by failure of the appointee to qualify under the commission of appointment within the time provided by law, may be determined in an action under this chapter. People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509; 26 Pac. 245. Under this section, claims to the office of a member of a municipal board of health may be determined. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423. One holding over after the expiration of his term of office, and who is entitled to retain office until the appointment of his successor, cannot be ousted by a new appointee, who does not possess the qualifications prescribed by law: in such case there is not a ground for a judgment that he wrongfully usurps or holds the office. People v. King, 127 Cal. 570; 60 Pac. 35.

Public officers, removal of for malfeasance. The act of March 30, 1874 (Stats. 1873–74, p. 911), providing for the removal of certain officers for malfeasance in office, was repealed by the constitution of 1879, and its place supplied by §§ 55, 184, of the County Government Act of 1883. Fraser v. Alexander, 75 Cal. 147; 16 Pac. 757. A proceeding, by accusation, for misdemeanor in office, under § 772 of the Penal Code, is in no sense a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto, title to office not being in dispute. Wheeler v. Donnell, 110 Cal. 655; 43 Pac. 1.

De facto officers, validity of acts of. The acts of a de facto sheriff, who participated in the drawing of a jury, in a criminal case, are good. People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 214. One who assumes office under color of election is an officer de facto, and holds a vested right to act as such until his right is questioned in a proper proceeding for that purpose. People v. Hammond, 109 Cal. 384; 42 Pac. 36. Although the action of a de facto officer to hold an existing office cannot be questioned collaterally, yet this principle does not apply when the office does not exist: there cannot be a de facto judge of a court that has no legal existence. People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 333; 24 Pac. 603.

Surrender of office, effect of. Where an officer surrenders his office upon the apparent election of his successor, he cannot thereafter resume his functions, upon the ground that the election of his successor was declared void and annulled on the ground of his ineligibility, after he had entered upon the duties of the office. People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; 50 Pac. 668.

Collateral attack on public officer. The validity of an election, or the right to take and hold office, cannot be inquired into in a collateral action or proceeding (Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 314; Shores v Scott River Water Co., 17 Cal. 626; People v. Sassovich, 29 Cal. 480; Susanville v. Long, 144 Cal. 362; 77 Pac. 987); nor can the right of a de facto justice of the peace to exercise the functions of his office be questioned in a collateral proceeding. People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503; 48 Pac. 495; People v. Provines, 34 Cal. 520; and see People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

Perversion and usurpation of franchise, and action therefor. Cases of forfeiture are said to be divided into two great classes: 1. Cases of perversion, as where a corporation does an act inconsistent with the nature, and destructive of the ends and purposes, of the grant, in which cases, unless the perversion is such as to amount to an injury to the public, who are interested in the franchise, it will not work a forfeiture; 2. Cases of usurpation, as where a corporation exercises a power it has no right to exercise, in which case the question of forfeiture is not dependent, as in the former, upon any interest of or injury to the public. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277; People v. Rosenstein-Cohn Cigar Co., 131 Cal. 153; 63 Pac. 163. Corporations are creatures of the law; and when they fail to perform the duties for which they were incorporated, and in which duties the public have an interest, or when they do acts they are not authorized or are forbidden to do, the state may forfeit their franchises, and dissolve them by an information in the nature of quo warranto. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. The principle of a forfeiture is, that the franchise is a trust, and the terms of the charter are conditions of the trust; and the violation of such conditions works a forfeiture of the charter. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277; Havemeyer v. Superior Court,

84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; People v. Rosenstein-Cohn Cigar Co., 131 Cal. 153; 63 Pac. 163. Information in the nature of quo warranto lies against a legally existing corporation for abuse of its franchises: scire facias, which seems to have been the more usual proceeding where a legally existing body had abused the powers and franchises intrusted to it, is abolished. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85. Where the articles of incorporation declared the purpose of the company to be to transport freight and passengers, and upon this representation the court condemned land, under the right of eminent domain, for the railway, and such railway, when constructed, was operated exclusively for the transportation of coal, the proceedings in condemnation amounted to an imposition on the court, and the misuse of the corporate authority will be inquired into by the state, in order to correct the abuse. People v. Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 53 Cal. 694. An information in the nature of quo warranto does not lie to enforce the dissolution of a corporation organized merely "to promote the cause of temperance," on the ground that it has disregarded its corporate trust and violated its charter by perversion and misapplication of its funds from the object for which it was formed, and from the use for which the funds were given and received, by dividing the same among its members, for the reason that the perversion of the funds is not an injury to the public. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. An individual or a corporation assuming, without grant, to exercise powers which are prerogatives of the government, and such as can be exercised by a private person only when granted by the government, should be adjudged to be unlawfully exercising such powers. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. The articles of incorporation of a manufacturing company, formed to own and run a sawmill, and to manufacture lumber and articles made of wood, are not vitiated by including therein power to operate, construct, maintain, and deal in railroads, tramways, and rights of way, as part of the manufacturing plant; and an information in the nature of quo warranto, seeking to have it adjudged that such manufacturing corporation is exercising the corporate functions of a railroad company without right, not being constituted as the code requires of every railroad corporation, does not state a cause of action. People v. Mount Shasta Mfg. Co., 107 Cal. 256; 40 Pac. 391. Where the incorporators of a railroad company fail to subscribe the amount of capital stock required by law, and to pay the prescribed percentage thereof in cash, their acts of attempted incorporation and organization are invalid, and an action may be maintained, upon an information in the nature of quo warranto, to prevent the incorporators from usurping the functions of a railroad company without being duly incorporated as such. People v. Chambers, 42 Cal. 201. Where the officers of a corporation, organized under a particular name, in the exercise of its franchises use an abbreviation of that name, there is not a usurpation, and a proceeding by quo warranto, upon the part of the people, cannot be maintained to oust them from the enjoyment of those franchises. People v. Bogart, 45 Cal. 73; and see People v. Sierra Buttes etc. Mining Co., 39 Cal. 514. The continued exercise of a franchise, without right, is a continuously renewed usurpation, on which a new cause of action arises each day; and the sovereign power has at all times the right to inquire into the matter of the user of a franchise or the title by which it is held. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; People v. Reclamation District, 121 Cal. 522; 50 Pac. 1068; People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704. The action may be for the forfeiture of a particular franchise or of the whole charter. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. The state acquires no lien on the property of a corporation by an action against it for the forfeiture of its charter, and cannot attack a sale thereof, made pendente lite; up to the time of dissolution, the corporation has the same power of disposing of its property, honestly and in good faith, that any corporation has: what is forfeited to the state, and all that is forfeited, is the charter,—the right to be a corporation,—and this is taken back by the state, solely upon the ground that the condition upon which it was granted has been violated. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The actual use of the franchise by the defendant is not, in all cases, necessary, in order to authorize an action for the usurpation of such franchise; as, where the forfeiture of a franchise to maintain a street-railway on certain streets is sought because of the failure of the company to comply with the conditions upon which the franchise was granted. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. The willful acts and neglects of the officers or agents of a corporation are regarded as the acts and neglects of the corporation, and render it liable to a judgment or decree of dissolution; but where the officers or agents have departed from their duties as prescribed by the corporation, or violated their instructions in the performance of the acts complained of and relied upon as a basis for forfeiture, no such forfeiture will be declared. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. Acts sufficient to cause a forfeiture do not, per se, produce a forfeiture: the corporation continues to exist until the sovereignty which created it shall, by proper proceedings in a proper court, procure an adjudication of forfeiture and enforce it. People v. Los Angeles Electric Ry. Co., 91 Cal. 338; 27 Pac. 673.

Who may attack franchise. A grant of a turnpike franchise is not liable to attack by a private person, nor in a collateral proceeding, for mere error in the exercise of the authority to make the grant (Truckee etc. Turnpike Road Co. v. Campbell, 44 Cal. 89); nor can the franchise of a turnpike-road company to maintain a toll-road, or its title and right to possess such road, be inquired into by a mere intruder or trespasser. Stockton etc. Gravel Road Co. v. Stockton etc. R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 680.

Prerequisites to exercise of corporate powers. The general rule is, that the existence of a corporation may be proved by producing its charter, and showing acts of user under it; but this rule has no application to a corporation formed under the provisions of a general statute requiring certain acts to be performed before the corporation can be considered in esse or its transactions possess any validity: the existence of a corporation thus formed must be proved by showing at least a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute; but there is a broad and obvious distinction between such acts as are declared to be necessary in the process of incorporation, and those required of the individuals seeking to become incorporated, but which are not made prerequisites to the assumption of corporate powers; in respect to the former, any material omission is fatal to the existence of the corporation, and may be taken advantage of collaterally, in any form in which the fact of incorporation can properly be called in question; and in respect to the latter, the corporation is responsible only to the government, and in a direct proceeding to forfeit its charter; the right to be considered a corporation, and to exercise corporate powers, depends upon the fact of the performance of the particular acts named in the statute as essential to its corporate existence. Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424; 73 Am. Dec. 658; Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124. The right to be a corporation is, in itself, a franchise; and although, to acquire a franchise under a general law, the prescribed statutory conditions must be complied with, yet a substantial rather than a literal compliance will suffice; but it does not follow from this, that any positive statutory requirement can be omitted on the ground that it is unimportant; none of the conditions precedent to acquiring a statutory right can be dispensed with by the court. People v. Selfridge, 52 Cal. 331; People v. Montecito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276; 33 Am. St. Rep. 172; 32 Pac. 236.

Jurisdiction. Quo warranto proceedings are within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423. The supreme court is strictly an appellate tribunal, and has no original jurisdiction, except in cases of habeas corpus; hence, it is not empowered to issue a writ of quo warranto to determine the right to an office, or the existence of the office. Ex parte Attorney-General, 1 Cal. 85; and see Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389; Miliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166; People v. Harvey, 62 Cal. 508. The former district court had jurisdiction of an action to determine the result of an election to office. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. The superior court has power, under § 5 of article VI of the constitution, to issue writs of quo warranto, and, in an action in the nature of quo warranto, brought under this section and § 809, post, it has authority to oust a person from office, and recover a penalty of five thousand dollars for unlawfully holding such office. People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039. The jurisdiction of the superior court to issue writs of quo warranto, given by the constitution of 1879, is not exclusive of their jurisdiction over a regular action to declare the forfeiture of a franchise. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. The jurisdiction of the superior court to try the question of usurpation of an office, and incidentally the existence of the office, is not derived from any act relating to a particular office, but from its constitutional grant of general jurisdiction in civil cases, the exercise of which, so far as respects actions of this character, is regulated by this chapter. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. An action brought by the attorney-general to oust a person from the office of supervisor of the city and county of San Francisco, and to recover the statutory penalty for usurpation of office, is in the nature of quo warranto, and within the constitutional grant of jurisdiction to the superior court, and this jurisdiction, being conferred by the constitution, cannot be abridged or taken away by the legislature; hence, the provision of the consolidation act, that the board of supervisors shall be the judge of election returns and qualifications of its own members, was superseded by the present constitution, at least so far as it could be held to confer exclusive jurisdiction upon the supervisors. People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039; and see People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423. That a corporation has entered into an illegal trust for the purpose of creating a monopoly will not confer upon the court, in quo warranto proceedings, the right to appoint a receiver of the assets of the corporation. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The superior court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the property of a corporation in a quo warranto proceeding, upon judgment of forfeiture of its corporate charter, unless a new suit is commenced by a creditor or stockholder of the corporation for that purpose. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; and see Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 146; 76 Am. Dec. 508; People v. Union Building etc. Ass'n, 127 Cal. 400; 59 Pac. 692; Murray v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 628; 62 Pac. 191. The jurisdiction of the superior court to decree a dissolution of a corporation exists only by virtue of statutory authority; the court does not possess this authority by virtue of its inherent general jurisdiction in equity, either at the suit of an individual or at the suit of the state, and, as its jurisdiction is derived from the statute, it is limited by the provisions of the statute, both as to the conditions under which it may be invoked and the extent of the judgment which it may make in the exercise of this jurisdiction. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549. The provisions of the constitution relative to the jurisdiction of courts do not disable the legislature, in creating municipal corporations, from providing that the city council shall be the final and exclusive judge of the election of all municipal officers; and prohibition will lie to the superior court to prevent the hearing of a contest for a municipal office, of which the city council is given exclusive jurisdiction under its charter. Carter v. Superior Court, 138 Cal. 150; 70 Pac. 1067. Where the charter of a city provides that the common council shall judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members, such council possesses exclusive authority to pass on the subject, and courts have no jurisdiction to inquire into the qualifications, elections, or returns of the members of the council. People v. Metzger, 47 Cal. 524.

Parties defendant. Quo warranto does not lie against a mere temporary employment, like that of the jury; it lies only against the holder of a public office having a fixed and permanent tenure. Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239; 28 Pac. 341. The stockholders of a corporation are, in a certain sense, parties to an action to forfeit its franchise, but they are not parties in any other sense than that they are bound by the consequences of such judgment as the court, in that action, has power to give; and if the court goes outside of the issues in the action, and renders a judgment or makes an order embracing matters entirely foreign to such issues, the stockholders are not bound by such judgment or order. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. In an action to have it determined that certain persons are unlawfully claiming to be, and are exercising the functions of, a private corporation, which never had an existence, the persons usurping the franchise are the only proper defendants; if the corporation is made a defendant as such, its corporate existence is admitted. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. Where it is claimed that a corporation is usurping privileges and powers not belonging to it, the corporation is the proper, and the only proper, party. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 114; 48 Pac. 1016. Where the action is for the forfeiture of the franchise of the corporation for abuse and misuse of its powers, the corporation is a proper party defendant. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. In an action brought to determine and restrain the usurpation of a corporate franchise, the alleged usurping corporation is a necessary party defendant. People v. Flint, 64 Cal. 49; 28 Pac. 495; People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. In a proceeding by the state, in the nature of a quo warranto, to deprive a corporation de facto of its corporate charter and procure its dissolution on the ground of a want of substantial compliance with the statutory requirements in its formation, the corporation de facto is a necessary party, and making it such, with the averment that it is a corporation de facto, but not de jure, does not estop the state from questioning its corporate character. People v. Monteeito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276; 33 Am. St. Rep. 172; 32 Pac. 236. Whenever a proceeding is such as that it must test and determine the validity of a municipal charter as such, the municipality, real or pretended, must be made a party. People v. Gunn, 85 Cal. 238; 24 Pac. 718.

Joinder of parties defendant. In an action of quo warranto to determine the validity of an election for school trustees, all the defendants claiming to be elected are properly joined as defendants, under § 808, post; and there is no improper joinder of several causes of action against them. People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7; 56 Pac. 619. The statutory action for the usurpation of a municipal franchise may be maintained against the defendant in its assumed corporate name without joining the trustees; their liability is for a usurpation of office, and not of a franchise. People v. Riverside, 66 Cal. 288; 5 Pac. 350.

Joinder of causes of action. An information in the nature of quo warranto, against the three trustees of a school district, to determine their right to office, all three claiming to be elected, is not open to the objection that three causes of action are improperly united. People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7; 56 Pac. 619. To allege that the defendant unlawfully exercises and wrongfully claims the right to exercise a franchise, and that it claims the right to lay tracks and make switches, is not to unite two causes of action. People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736.

Complaint, allegations of. It was a peculiarity of both the quo warranto, and an information in the nature of a quo warranto, that the ordinary rule of pleading was reversed, and the state was bound to show nothing, and the defendant was required to show his right to the franchise or office in question; and if he failed to show authority, judgment went against him; the practice has, however, now become quite general for the information to set forth the facts relied upon to show the intrusion, misuser, or nonuser complained of. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. An averment that the defendants held, used, exercised, and enjoyed the office in question, without a license for that purpose, is sufficient: these are the facts constituting the cause of action, and the only facts necessary to be stated. People v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 359. Although the complaint need not state the facts constituting the usurpation or illegal exercise of the office by the defendant, and is sufficient where it merely alleges that he is unlawfully exercising the office, leaving his right to such exercise to be pleaded in his defense, yet such allegation, being material, and relevant to the issue, must be denied, or the fact thus alleged must be held to be admitted by the defendant. People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. A complaint in quo warranto, showing that the plaintiff is in the exercise of the office, but not alleging nor suggesting that the defendant has usurped or intruded into the office, does not state a cause of action. Powers v. Hitchcock, 129 Cal. 325; 61 Pac. 1076. A complaint in quo warranto, to determine the validity of an election, which merely alleges that copies of an old great register were used at the polls, instead of copies of a new one required by law, but which does not aver that the names of all the voters were not on the new register, does not state a cause of action. People v. Worswick, 142 Cal. 71; 75 Pac. 663. It is sufficient, in an action against individuals, charging that they are wrongfully claiming to act as a corporation, to allege, in general terms, that there never was such a corporation: such allegation covers the whole ground. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. A complaint alleging that by reason of the acts and omissions of the defendant company, if the said company ever had, as a corporation, "any legal existence, right, privilege, or franchise, . . . the same became forfeited," but not alleging that the company once had a legal existence as a corporation, fails to state a cause of action: there can be no resumption or forfeiture, by the state, of a franchise never granted. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. The complaint in an action to forfeit the franchise of a street-railway company to maintain tracks upon a certain street is not open to the objection that it does not state a cause of action, because it avers that the defendant has not, at any time, operated a railway upon the tracks constructed by it, where the complaint does state that the franchise was granted upon certain conditions as to the operation, which had not been complied with, and that the defendant merely pretended to operate the same by running over the track one car every day, not with an intention to accommodate the public, but merely for the purpose of maintaining the franchise. People v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736. In an action of quo warranto, the state may either charge the corporation defendant with the usurpation of a franchise in general terms, and thus throw the burden upon the defendant, or it may allege the specific grounds or defects relied upon to show a usurpation, in which case the facts pleaded, if admitted, must be sufficient to sustain the charge of usurpation, and if denied, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff. People v. Los Angeles, 133 Cal. 338; 65 Pac. 749. Where the claim is, that the corporation is acting as such, but the proceedings under which it is acting are defective, the facts showing that it is so claiming to act, and the defects claimed to exist, should be set out specifically. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. A complaint showing that the defendant is exercising the franchise of a municipal corporation, without being incorporated according to law, states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. People v. Riverside, 66 Cal. 288; 5 Pac. 350; People v. Flint, 64 Cal. 49; 28 Pac. 495. Where no relief is asked in favor of the relator, allegations of the complaint, setting forth his right to the office, are superfluous and immaterial; and if the allegations are insufficient to authorize a determination of the rights of the relator, the proper course is to disregard them. People v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 359. Where the complaint alleges that the defendant has usurped the office, erroneous allegations as to the statutory origin of the office may be disregarded as surplusage: it will then be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction to decide the question of usurpation. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. A complaint in quo warranto against a toll-road company, alleging "that for more than six months last past the defendant has had no franchise or right to demand or take toll, etc.," does not admit that the defendant ever had a toll-road franchise. People v. Volcano Cañon Toll-road Co., 100 Cal. 87; 34 Pac. 522.

Demurrer, general and special. A general demurrer to a complaint in quo warranto does not raise any question as to the sufficiency of the allegations relating to the right of the relator to the office (People v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 359); nor raise the question as to whether the relator's bond was properly approved. People v. Shorb, 100 Cal. 537; 38 Am. St. Rep. 310; 35 Pac. 163. An allegation in a complaint in quo warranto, that the defendant is in possession of the office without lawful authority, is a sufficient allegation of intrusion and usurpation; if the complaint is defective in this particular, the defect must be reached by special demurrer. People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43.

Answer. The defendant in an action in the nature of quo warranto is at liberty to set forth, in his answer, as many defenses as he may have (People v. Stratton, 28 Cal. 382); and in an action for the usurpation of a corporate franchise, the answer must show that the corporation was organized in the manner required by the general laws. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. An answer denying that the individual defendants are unlawfully claiming to be and are exercising the functions of a private corporation, together with a similar general denial of other material allegations of the complaint, is sufficient, where they rest their defense on the denial that they are making such claim and exercising the rights and privileges alleged. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85. Where a verified complaint sets up facts showing the illegality of the charter of the corporation, a general answer, or one which merely denies the conclusions of law stated in the complaint, or sets up affirmatively conclusions of law, is insufficient. People v. Lowden, 2 Cal. Unrep. 537; 8 Pac. 66. Where the existence of a corporation is expressly averred or is admitted, it is not sufficient to allege that it has ceased to exist: the facts showing that its existence has terminated must be set forth. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693; and see People v. Volcano Cañon Toll-road Co., 100 Cal. 87; 34 Pac. 522. The proper course for the defendant is, either to disclaim or to justify: if he seeks to justify, he must set out his title specially and distinctly. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383.

Intervention and defense. The holders of the bonds of an irrigation district, which is charged with the usurpation and unlawful exercise of the powers and franchise of a legally organized irrigation district, may intervene and join in defending the action, and may avail themselves of all the procedure and remedies to which the defendant district would be entitled, for the purpose of defeating the action or resisting the claim of the plaintiff. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399.

Prima facie evidence. Testimony tending to show that a company is a corporation de facto dispenses with strict proof of the corporate character, and precludes the party offering it from afterwards inquiring into or disputing the company's right to act as a corporation; such inquiry can only be had at the suit of the state, on information by the attorney-general. Rondell v. Fay, 32 Cal. 354. A certificate of election is not necessary to enable a party, claiming to have been elected, to bring his action by quo warranto: such certificate is merely prima facie evidence of title to the office, and not conclusive; nor is it the only evidence by which the title may be established; it is the fact of election which gives title, and this fact may not only be established without the evidence of the certificate, but also against it. Magee v. Board of Supervisors, 10 Cal. 376.

Presumptions. Where it is shown that the claimant of the office in controversy is performing the duties of such office, that fact, taken in connection with proof of the loss of the certificate of election, raises the presumption that he had executed his bond and taken the oath of office. People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389; Hull v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 174. The presumption of law is, that ballots are all returned to the county clerk, and that they have not been mutilated; if such is not the case, it should be shown by evidence. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. The positive testimony of the county clerk, that the documents or records relating to the election are not in his office, raises the legal presumption that he had searched for them, unless it appears from his testimony that such was not the fact. People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389. As against the state, there is no presumption that citizens exercising a franchise are exercising it rightfully. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693.

Best evidence. In an action brought to try the right to an office, the list of ballots cast in any precinct, and returned with the poll-list and tally-paper to the county clerk, is better evidence of the number of votes cast at the precinct, and for whom cast, than the tally-list made from them by the officers of the election. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

Parol evidence. The loss or destruction of a certificate of election may be shown and the fact of election established by parol evidence. People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389.

Admissions. A principal is not concluded by the admissions of his deputies, made in an action prosecuted against them, under this chapter, to which he was not a party. People v. Shorb, 100 Cal. 537; 38 Am. St. Rep. 310; 35 Pac. 163.

Admissibility of evidence. Where the defendant is exercising the functions of the office as the same are defined in the act creating the office, and is called on by the state to show by what authority he is acting, he cannot defend his conduct by proving that no one else has the power to exercise such functions. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110.

Burden of proof. In an action by one claiming to have been elected to an office, against his predecessor, to recover possession of the books and papers of the office, the plaintiff must show prima facie that a vacancy existed in the office, and that he was elected to fill it. Doane v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 393; People v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 432. In an action for the usurpation of a franchise, where the defendants admit, or do not deny, that they are exercising the rights and privileges alleged, and they attempt to establish their right to do so, they must show affirmatively by what right they are exercising the franchise. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; People v. Volcano Cañon Toll-road Co., 100 Cal. 87; 34 Pac. 522; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. The burden of proof is on the defendants to show that the corporation was legally formed, and that its existence has been legally extended, where it is alleged that the charter has expired. People v. Lowden, 2 Cal. Unrep. 537; 8 Pac. 66.

Findings. Allegations of the complaint, that, at a general election, the relator was, by the greatest number of votes cast, elected to the office, and the answer denying that the relator was elected, and the finding of the court that such election was held, and that the relator received the greatest number of votes cast, are sufficient to sustain judgment for the relator. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50.

Injunction against removal of street-railroad tracks. Although the right of a street-railroad company to lay tracks along certain streets can be inquired into only in a proceeding by the state, yet if the grant of a right to lay such tracks is void, and another company possesses a valid right to do so, the latter company may remove the tracks laid by the former company, as an obstruction or impediment to the prosecution of their work, and the former company cannot enjoin them from making such removal. Omnibus R. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 57 Cal. 160.

Pendency of quo warranto against corporation as defense to mandamus. Pendency of proceeding in quo warranto, against persons claiming to compose a corporation, is no defense to a proceeding by mandamus, by such corporation, to compel a county to subscribe to its capital stock and to issue its bonds therefor. Oroville etc. R. R. Co. v. Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

Collateral attack on franchise. The provision of the statute, that the due incorporation of a company claiming in good faith to be a corporation under the laws of this state, and doing business as such, shall not be inquired into collaterally, does not preclude a private person from denying the existence, de jure or de facto, of an alleged corporation: to say that the due incorporation cannot be inquired into collaterally does not mean that no inquiry can be made as to whether it is a corporation; many of the acts required to be performed, in order to make a complete organization of the corporation, may have been irregularly performed, or some of them may have been entirely omitted, and the rule of the statute is, that such irregular or defective performance shall not defeat the incorporation when drawn into question collaterally; and a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute is sufficient to show a corporation de jure, in an action between the corporation and a private person. Oroville etc. R. R. Co. v. Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434; Dannebroge etc. Mining Co. v. Allment, 26 Cal. 286; People v. Frank, 28 Cal. 507; Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406; Bakersfield Town Hall Ass'n v. Chester, 55 Cal. 98; Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 379; 14 Pac. 37; Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Crane, 80 Cal. 181; 22 Pac. 76; Golden Gate etc. Mining Co. v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works, 82 Cal. 184; 23 Pac. 45; First Baptist Church v. Branham, 90 Cal. 22; 27 Pac. 60. The rule that the right to a franchise is not subject to attack in a collateral proceeding does not, in an action brought by a turnpike-road company to enforce the payment of tolls, prevent the defendant from denying the right of the plaintiff to a franchise to collect such tolls, where it affirmatively appears, on the plaintiff's own showing, that no toll-gate had been legally established or located upon the road, and where, under the law, the board of supervisors was without jurisdiction to grant the franchise to collect such tolls until after it had established such toll-gates. Waterloo Turnpike Road Co. v. Cole, 51 Cal. 381. In an action by a corporation, the defendant cannot put the due incorporation of the plaintiff, or its right to exercise corporate powers, in issue, if the plaintiff claims in good faith to be a corporation under the laws of the state, and to be doing business as such. Pacific Bank v. De Ro, 37 Cal. 538. A proceeding, in pursuance of the act of March 16, 1889, to procure the confirmation of proceedings for the issue and sale of the bonds of an irrigation district, is not one in which the question of the due incorporation of the corporation arises collaterally: in such case, the corporation itself comes into court and challenges an examination of the regularity of its organization, and asks the court to examine each and all of the proceedings for the organization of the district; and in such proceeding it is necessary for the corporation to establish such regularity, and to give evidence of each step therein, as fully as if its acts were under investigation upon a writ of review, or as if the state were, by quo warranto, questioning its right to exercise the franchise of a corporation. In re Madera Irrigation Dist., 92 Cal. 296; 27 Am. St. Rep. 106; 14 L. R. A. 755; 28 Pac. 272; People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399.

Prohibition. Prohibition lies to restrain the superior court from proceeding, in quo warranto, with the receivership of property of a dissolved corporation. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477.

Abatement of action for usurpation of public office. Where a proceeding is instituted during the term in which the usurpation is alleged to exist, the action does not abate, merely by reason of a failure to bring it to a judgment before the expiration of such term; neither will it abate by reason of the fact that the office involved had ceased to exist by reason of an amendment to the charter of the city, under which the office existed. People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; 50 Pac. 668.

Waiver of forfeiture of franchise. Although, under § 7 of article IX of the constitution, the legislature cannot remit the forfeiture of any franchise, yet it may waive the forfeiture, even after proceedings in the nature of quo warranto have been commenced to have it determined that the defendant has forfeited such right. People v. Los Angeles Electric Ry. Co., 91 Cal. 338; 27 Pac. 673.

Validity of appointment of receiver of corporation. The appearance of creditors, for their own safety, in actions against a de facto receiver appointed in quo warranto proceedings, who has assets of the corporation in his possession, which are about to be disposed of in the actions, is not a concession of the validity of the appointment of the receiver, nor a ratification thereof, and they are not in a position to attack the validity of his appointment until brought into a hostile attitude to him by the levy of execution. Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477.

Effect of judgment against corporation. In order to dissolve a corporation, there must be an averment of the usurpation of the franchise of being a corporation, and a judgment excluding the defendant from exercising the franchise, that is, from assuming to be a corporation; hence, where a complaint merely avers that the corporation has been illegally exercising certain enumerated franchises, a judgment merely declaring that the defendant is guilty of usurping rights and franchises, "as charged and alleged in the complaint," and adjudging that the defendant be excluded from "such rights, privileges, and franchises," does not have the effect of dissolving the corporation. Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431; 41 Pac. 477.

Estoppel and bar. One who has unlawfully assumed and is exercising the public functions of an office, as the same were defined in a repealed statute, is estopped, in an action brought against him for the usurpation, to deny the existence of the office; and where he continues to exercise the functions of such office, after being adjudged a usurper thereof, he is guilty of contempt. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. The state is not estopped by the judgment in a former action between an elector and the defendant, to contest the election of the defendant, nor would such judgment estop the state, even though such elector were the relator in an action prosecuted by the state. People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; 50 Pac. 668. The state is not estopped from maintaining an action to have it determined that a corporation never acquired the franchise to build and operate a street-railroad within the limits of a municipal corporation, from the mere fact that in a prior action, brought against the corporation as such, in which the existence of the corporation was not put in issue, it obtained a judgment requiring the corporation to abate a portion of its road on the ground that it was a public nuisance. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693. A proceeding under the confirmatory act of 1889, supplemental to the Wright irrigation act, taken in the superior court, in which was confirmed the validity of the organization of an irrigation district, and of the bonds issued thereby, under the provisions of the Wright act, is a proceeding in rem, the judgment in which is res adjudicata, and binds the whole world, including the state, and is a bar to a subsequent proceeding by the state, in quo warranto, assailing the validity of the organization of the irrigation district. People v. Linda Vista Irrigation Dist., 128 Cal. 477; 61 Pac. 86. An action commenced by the state to restrain the usurpation of a franchise is not barred by any prior act of the informant. People v. Lowden, 2 Cal. Unrep. 537; 8 Pac. 66. If the proceeding is simply one in which a forfeiture is sought by reason of misuser or nonuser of its powers by the corporation, the statute of limitations may be pleaded in bar. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693.

Dismissal. An information in the nature of quo warranto may be dismissed for want of prosecution, in the same manner as any other action. People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296; 58 Pac. 704.

New trial. A new trial of an action brought under the authority of this section is permissible. People v. Oakland, 123 Cal. 145; 55 Pac. 772; People v. Sutter Street Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 604; 49 Pac. 736; People v. Rodgers, 118 Cal. 393; 46 Pac. 740; People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399.

Appeal. Where the words "township" and "precinct" are used synonymously in the complaint, answer, and finding, and in stating the facts concerning an election in said precinct, and no objection was taken by demurrer or otherwise on this ground, and the statute requires that there shall be an election precinct in each township, the defendant cannot, on appeal, for the first time, object that the complaint does not allege nor the judge find that said place was a precinct at which the election would have been held. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50.

Terms defined. A drainage district is not a municipal corporation. People v. Sacramento Drainage District, 155 Cal. 373; 103 Pac. 207. A municipal corporation is a "person," within the meaning of this section. People v. Oakland, 92 Cal. 611; 28 Pac. 807; and see People v. Nevada Township, 6 Cal. 143. In the abstract, the word "office" signifies a place of trust; in the legal sense, an office is an entity, and may exist in fact, though it is without an incumbent, and in the latter sense the word "office" is used, in a number of instances, both in the constitution and in the statutes; it is also defined as a right to exercise a public function or employment, and to take the fees and emoluments belonging to it. People v. Stratton, 28 Cal. 382; Miller v. Board of Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93; People v. Harrington, 63 Cal. 257.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Object of the action is to prevent the usurpation of an office, franchise, or liberty. Ex parte Attorney-General, 1 Cal. 87; People v. Olds, 3 Cal. 175; 58 Am. Dec. 398.

2. When it can be maintained. To try title to an office. People v. Scannel, 7 Cal. 439. To test the right of an appointee of the board of pilot commissioners. People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43. Against one in possession of an office to which he has not been duly elected, but who holds a certificate of election. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50.

3. Certificate of election. One holding a certificate, without the legal title to the office, is an intruder, within the meaning of this section; for the right to the office comes from the will of the voters as expressed at the election. If the office was, in fact, given by the voters to another, the possession by the defendant of the certificate affords him, at most, but a color of title, and does not invest him with the right which belongs to another. People v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50. A certificate is not necessary to enable a party, claiming to have been elected, to bring his action; it is only prima facie evidence of title to the office, not conclusive. Nor is it the only evidence by which the title may be established. It is the fact of election which gives title to the office, and this fact may be established, not only without, but against the evidence of the certificate. Magee v. Board of Supervisors, 10 Cal. 376. The issuance of a certificate to a person elected to office is a ministerial act. Conger v. Gilmer, 32 Cal. 75.

4. Generally. The use of an abbreviated corporate name, by the officers of a corporation, is not a usurpation, nor will it support a proceeding by quo warranto to oust them from the enjoyment of the franchise. People v. Bogart, 45 Cal. 73; People v. Sierra Buttes Quartz Mining Co., 39 Cal. 514. The pendency of proceedings in quo warranto, against the persons claiming to compose a corporation, is no defense to an action by the corporation. Oroville etc. R. R. Co. v. Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

§ 804. Name of person entitled to office may be set forth in the complaint. If fees have been received by the usurper, he may be arrested. Whenever such action is brought, the attorney-general, in addition to the statement of the cause of action, may also set forth in the complaint the name of the person rightly entitled to the office, with a statement of his right thereto; and in such case, upon proof by affidavit that the defendant has received fees or emoluments belonging to the office, and by means of his usurpation thereof, an order may be granted by a justice of the supreme court, or a judge of the superior court, for the arrest of such defendant and holding him to bail; and thereupon he may be arrested and held to bail in the same manner and with the same effect and subject to the same rights and liabilities as in other civil actions where the defendant is subject to arrest.

Action, where several claimants. Post, § 808.
Arrest and bail. Ante, §§ 478 et seq.

Legislation § 804. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 311), changing "judge" to "justice" before "of the supreme court."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 11, changing "district judge" to "judge" of the superior court."

Proper parties defendant in quo warranto proceedings against corporation. See note Ann. Cas. 1913A, 570.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. An allegation that the defendant is in possession of the office without authority, is a sufficient allegation of intrusion or usurpation. Any defects in the complaint in this respect must be reached by demurrer. People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43. In an action for the usurpation of the office of pilot for the port of San Francisco, the complaint averred that defendants hold, use, exercise, usurp, and enjoy the office without a license, and also contained certain allegations as to the right of relator to the office. It was held: that the allegation as to relator's rights could not be reached by general demurrer, the complaint being good as against the defendants; that they are not interested in the question as to the right of relator, but only in the determination of their own right to the office. Flynn v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 258. In a proceeding to contest the election of district judge, the ineligibility of the candidate receiving the highest number of votes, the defendant being next on the list, is no defense. The fact that the candidate receiving the highest number of votes at an election by the people is ineligible, does not give the office to the next highest on the list. Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145.

§ 805. Judgment may determine the rights of both incumbent and claimant. In every such action judgment may be rendered upon the right of the defendant, and also upon the right of the party so alleged to be entitled, or only upon the right of the defendant, as justice may require.

Judgment. Post, § 809.

Legislation § 805. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 312), changing (1) "case" to "action" and (2) "shall" to "may."

Forms of judgment. In information of quo warranto, there are two forms of judgment: when against an officer or individual, the judgment is ouster, and there being no franchise forfeited, there is nothing to seize; and when against a corporation by its corporate name, the judgment is ouster and seizure; there being a franchise, consequently the franchise is seized. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277. The usurpation of an office is one thing, and the usurpation of a franchise is another and quite a different thing: in the former case, the judgment should be, that the defendant be excluded from the office, and in the latter, from the franchise. People v. Riverside, 66 Cal. 288; 5 Pac. 350. There may be a judgment of ouster of a particular franchise, and not of the whole charter. People v. Dashaway Association, 84 Cal. 114; 12 L. R. A. 117; 24 Pac. 277.

Judgment against incumbent. A judgment ousting the defendant does not rest upon the relator's right to the office. People v. Shorb, 100 Cal. 537; 38 Am. St. Rep. 310; 35 Pac. 163. The judgment in an election contest cannot properly adjudge that the defendant is unlawfully holding the office. Day v. Gunning, 125 Cal. 527; 58 Pac. 172.

Judgment determining right of claimant. Where the relator claims the office as against the incumbent, the court may not only determine the right of the defendant, but that of the relator also; and if it determines in favor of the relator, it may render judgment that the defendant forthwith deliver up to the relator the office. People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470; Kelly v. Edwards, 69 Cal. 460; 11 Pac. 1. If the defendant is rightfully in the exercise of the office, the relator can have no right thereto; and if the defendant has no right to the office, it is immaterial to him whether the office is vacant or is to be held by the relator; and although the court may determine the right of the relator to the office, it is not required to do so. People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383.

Contempt of court. Where one continues to exercise the functions of a public office after being adjudged a usurper thereof, he is guilty of contempt of court. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110.

Proceedings after judgment against corporation. After a final judgment that a de facto corporation has no legal existence, proceedings should be had for winding up and settling its affairs by trustees. People v. Flint, 64 Cal. 49; 28 Pac. 495.

Jurisdiction. The supreme court has jurisdiction of an appeal taken in proceedings under this chapter. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; 21 Pac. 423; People v. Superior Court, 114 Cal. 466; 46 Pac. 383. The jurisdiction of the superior court to decree a dissolution of any corporation exists only by virtue of statutory authority; and its jurisdiction is limited by the provisions of the statute, both as to the conditions under which it may be invoked and the extent of the judgment which it may make in the exercise of this jurisdiction. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549.

Collateral attack on judgment. The court has jurisdiction to try the question of usurpation of an office, and incidentally the question of the existence of the office, and its finding upon that issue cannot be assailed collaterally, though it should be conceded that the finding was erroneous, or though, in determining the issue, the court may erroneously have believed and assumed that a statute was not repealed. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110.

Appeal. The judgment in an action under this chapter, adjudging the defendants guilty of usurping a franchise to collect tolls upon a public road, and involving the right of the defendants to possess the lands claimed to constitute the toll-road, is appealable. People v. Horsley, 65 Cal. 381; 4 Pac. 384. The intervener may prosecute an appeal from a judgment dissolving the corporation, notwithstanding the defendant, against whom the judgment was rendered, does not appeal. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399. Where the only demurrer interposed in an action to determine the right to an office, was as to the cause of action, and none was interposed to the right of the relator, who claimed title to the office upon the regular returns made to the board of canvassers, his title is not involved upon appeal from a judgment rendered upon the sustaining of the demurrer. People v. Stewart, 132 Cal. 283; 64 Pac. 285. Upon appeal by the intervener from the judgment upon the contest between him and the relator in an action to determine the title to office, where a recount of votes was necessary, the court is not limited to a consideration of the exceptions taken by the appellant, but is entitled to consider like exceptions taken by the relator, in order to determine whether errors urged by the appellant are not counterbalanced so as to be rendered harmless by similar rulings against the relator. People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11; 70 Pac. 918.

Suspension of proceedings on appeal. The giving of a sufficient undertaking upon appeal to stay the execution of a judgment declaring the forfeiture of a corporate charter, suspends all proceedings upon the judgment. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121; State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549. The provision of § 949, post, which provides that an appeal does not stay proceedings where the judgment adjudges the defendant guilty of usurping or intruding into, or unlawfully holding office, applies only to a judgment in an action of quo warranto or for the usurpation of office, and not to any judgment proper to be entered in an election contest. Day v. Gunning, 125 Cal. 527; 58 Pac. 172.

Reversal of judgment on appeal. In an action brought to try the right to an office, if the record shows in any manner that all the election returns were given in evidence, the judgment will not be reversed by the appellate court, even though there is no formal statement in the record that such returns were all in evidence. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123. In an action to have it determined that certain persons are unlawfully claiming to be and are exercising the functions of a private corporation, which never had an existence, a judgment decreeing that the plaintiff recover the powers and franchise exercised and claimed by the defendants, and enjoining them from exercising the same, will be reversed, where the question of the non-existence of the corporation is left wholly undetermined. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360; 2 L. R. A. 92; 18 Pac. 85; 19 Pac. 693.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In an action to determine the right to an office where the relator claims the office as against the incumbent, the court may not only determine the right of the defendant, but of the relator also; and if it determine in favor of the relator, may render judgment that the defendant deliver to the relator the office. People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470.

§ 806. When rendered in favor of applicant. If the judgment be rendered upon the right of the person so alleged to be entitled, and the same be in favor of such person, he will be entitled, after taking the oath of office and executing such official bond as may be required by law, to take upon himself the execution of the office.

Legislation § 806. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 313), changing "shall" to "will."

Judgment is sufficient evidence of title to office. The entry of judgment in favor of the person alleged to be entitled supersedes the necessity of any other certificate or commission: it is, of itself, evidence of title to the office. Bledsoe v. Colgan, 138 Cal. 34; 70 Pac. 924.

§ 807. Damages may be recovered by successful applicant. If judgment be rendered upon the right of the person so alleged to be entitled, in favor of such person, he may recover, by action, the damages which he may have sustained by reason of the usurpation of the office by the defendant.

Costs and fine. Post, § 809.

Legislation § 807. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 314), changing "shall" to "will."

Judgment is not a "commission of office." A judgment in plaintiff's favor, in quo warranto proceedings, is not "a commission of office," as that phrase is used in § 936 of the Political Code. Bledsoe v. Colgan, 138 Cal. 34; 70 Cal. 924.

Salary, who entitled to. The solution of the question as to who is entitled to the salary of an office, pending an appeal from a judgment in quo warranto proceedings, is dependent upon the construction to be given to § 936 of the Political Code. Bledsoe v. Colgan, 138 Cal. 34; 70 Pac. 924. The successful contestant for a public office is not authorized to recover, as damages, from the incumbent, who held the certificate of election and discharged the duties of the office pending the contest, the amount of the salary or compensation received by him pending the contest: the incumbent is entitled to it. Chubbuck v. Wilson, 151 Cal. 162; 12 Ann. Cas. 888; 90 Pac. 524.

Whether fine or judgment for damages may be imposed in quo warranto proceedings. See note Ann. Cas. 1913D, 942.

§ 808. When several persons claim the same office, their rights may be determined by a single action. When several persons claim to be entitled to the same office or franchise, one action may be brought against all such persons, in order to try their respective rights to such office or franchise.

Legislation § 808. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 315.

Joinder of parties defendant. All claimants and intruders may be made parties to an action to oust defendants from the office of justice of the peace. People v. Rea, 2 Cal. App. 109; 83 Pac. 165. In quo warranto, to oust persons as school trustees, all the defendants who claim to have been elected are properly joined as defendants. People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7; 56 Pac. 619.

§ 809. If defendant found guilty, what judgment to be rendered against him. When a defendant, against whom such action has been brought, is adjudged guilty of usurping or intruding into, or unlawfully holding any office, franchise, or privilege, judgment must be rendered that such defendant be excluded from the office, franchise, or privilege, and that he pay the costs of the action. The court may also, in its discretion, impose upon the defendant a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, which fine, when collected, must be paid into the treasury of the state.

Legislation § 809. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 316), changing "shall" to "must," in both instances.

Costs. Where judgment was rendered in favor of the relator, and against the intervener, the relator is entitled to recover costs against him, whether the proceeding between them be considered as an action or as a special proceeding to determine the right to the office. People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11; 70 Pac. 918.

Nature of judgment imposing a fine. Where a fine is imposed upon the defendant for the usurpation of a franchise, it is not for the purpose of compensating the state, but solely for the purpose of punishment; the judgment of fine is not based on any evidence of loss or damage, but rests, within the limit prescribed by the statute, solely within the discretion of the court; it is more properly a sentence or judgment imposed on the defendant, than a judgment recovered against him. People v. Sutter Street R. R. Co., 129 Cal. 545; 79 Am. St. Rep. 137; 62 Pac. 104.

Fine payable to state. The recovery of the fine is for the benefit of the state, and must be paid into the state treasury, no matter who is the relator. People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238; 22 Pac. 1039.

No interest on judgment imposing a fine. A judgment adjudging the defendant guilty of usurping a franchise, and imposing a fine pursuant to this section, is penal in its nature; and the same rule as to interest on the fine imposed in such action should govern as applies to a judgment for a fine in any criminal case, and no interest can be allowed thereupon; such judgment does not come within the terms of §§ 1915, 1920, of the Civil Code. People v. Sutter Street R. R. Co., 129 Cal. 545; 79 Am. St. Rep. 137; 62 Pac. 104.

Receiver, how appointed after judgment. The rendition of the judgment authorized by this section ends the proceeding, so far as the superior court is concerned; and no receiver of corporate property can be appointed, unless a new and distinct proceeding is commenced by a creditor or stockholder of the corporation. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121.

§ 810. Actions on information. Undertaking. When the action is brought upon the information or application of a private party, the attorney-general may require such party to enter into an undertaking, with sureties to be approved by the attorney-general, conditioned that such party or the sureties will pay any judgment for costs or damages recovered against the plaintiff, and all the costs and expenses incurred in the prosecution of the action.

Legislation § 810. Added by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 327.

CHAPTER VI.

ACTIONS AGAINST STEAMERS, VESSELS, AND BOATS.

§ 813. When vessels, etc., are liable. Their liabilities constitute liens.
§ 814. Actions, how brought.
§ 815. Complaint must be verified.
§ 816. Summons may be served on owners, etc., of vessels.
§ 817. Plaintiff may have such vessel, etc., attached.
§ 818. The clerk must issue the writ of attachment.
§ 819. Such writ must be directed to the sheriff.
§ 820. Sheriff must execute such writ without delay.
§ 821. The owner, master, etc., may appear and defend such vessel.
§ 822. Discharge of attachment.
§ 823. After appearance, attachment may, on motion, be discharged.
§ 824. When not discharged, such vessel, etc., may be sold at public auction. Application of proceeds.
§ 825. Mariners and others may assert their claim for wages, notwithstanding prior attachment.
§ 826. Proof of the claims of mariners and others.
§ 827. Sheriff's notice of sale to contain measurement, tonnage, etc.

§ 813. When vessels, etc., are liable. Their liabilities constitute liens. All steamers, vessels, and boats are liable:

1. For services rendered on board at the request of, or on contract with, their respective owners, masters, agents, or consignees.

2. For supplies furnished in this state for their use, at the request of their respective owners, masters, agents, or consignees.

3. For work done or materials furnished in this state for their construction, repair, or equipment.

4. For their wharfage and anchorage within this state.

5. For non-performance, or malperformance, of any contract for the transportation of persons or property between places within this state, made by their respective owners, masters, agents, or consignees.

6. For injuries committed by them to persons or property, in this state.

Demands for these several causes constitute liens upon all steamers, vessels, and boats, and have priority in their order herein enumerated, and have preference over all other demands; but such liens only continue in force for the period of one year from the time the cause of action accrued.

Seamen's wages, jurisdiction of actions. Ante, § 114.
Salvage. Civ. Code, § 2079.
Preference over all other demands, as to labor claims. Post, §§ 1204–1206.
Lien, defined. Post, § 1180.

Legislation § 813. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 317, as amended by Stats. 1860, p. 304), (1) in introductory paragraph, changed "shall be" to "are"; (2) omitted subd. 5, which read the same as the present subd. 5, except that it did not contain the words "between places within this state"; (3) subd. 6 was renumbered subd. 5, the Practice Act subd. 6 reading, "Sixth. For injuries committed by them to persons or property. The said several causes of action shall constitute liens upon all steamers, vessels, and boats, and have priority in their order herein enumerated, and shall have preference over all other demands; provided, such lien shall only continue in force for the period of one year from the time the cause of action accrued," and when renumbered subd. 5 in 1872, a paragraph was made, beginning with the words "The several," in which (a) "said" was omitted before "several," (b) "shall" was omitted before "constitute" and before "have preference," (c) "provided" was changed to "but," and (d) "lien shall only" was changed to "liens only."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 327, (1) in subd. 2, adding the words "in this state"; (2) in subd. 3, adding (a) "work done or" and (b) "in this state"; (3) restoring Practice Act subd. 5, and adding therein the words "between places within this state"; (4) restoring the first sentence of Practice Act subd. 6 (original code subd. 5) as subd. 6, and adding at end the words "in this state"; (5) changing the final paragraph of original code section, beginning "The several," to the present final paragraph, beginning "Demands."

Construction of section. This section, and § 3060 of the Civil Code, providing for a lien on vessels, are, under § 4480 of the Political Code, to be construed together, as though they had been passed at the same time, and were parts of the same statute. Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553.

Constitutionality of section. The statute, so far as it attempts to authorize proceedings in rem for causes of action cognizable in admiralty, is unconstitutional; but, so far as it may be made applicable to causes of action which are not cognizable in courts of admiralty jurisdiction, it is constitutional; and there is no objection to the law, merely because it authorizes a suit against a vessel itself, except so far as the suit is upon a maritime contract. Crawford v. Bark Caroline Reed, 42 Cal. 469. The provisions of this chapter are not invalid, although a suit may be brought under them, of which the courts of the state have no jurisdiction. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032.

Jurisdiction of state courts. The state courts have concurrent jurisdiction of causes of action cognizable in admiralty, where only a common-law remedy is sought (Bohannan v. Hammond, 42 Cal. 227); and they have jurisdiction of an action for wages, brought by a seaman against the master of a British vessel, both subjects of the United Kingdom, for services rendered on such vessel, where the seaman was discharged by the master in a port of the United States, without any fault on the part of the seaman (Pugh v. Gillam, 1 Cal 485); and also of actions to recover from the owners the value of supplies sold and delivered, at the request of the master, for the use of a vessel engaged in navigating the high seas (Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235); and also of actions to enforce liens for work done in construction and for services rendered by members of the crew on board a steamer which has never been in commission, nor used in navigation; the action against the owner personally to enforce the liens against his vessel by judgment, and the order of sale thereunder, is in personam, and is not the action in rem used in courts of admiralty. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032. The state courts have jurisdiction also of an action for breach of contract for the transportation of a passenger from a port in this state to a port in another state. Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 370. The court does not acquire jurisdiction by reason of a bond being given for the release of the vessel, where jurisdiction does not otherwise attach, by reason of the vessel not being within the class designated by the act. McQueen v. Ship Russell, 1 Cal. 165.

Jurisdiction of admiralty courts. There is no jurisdiction in admiralty over a vessel not engaged in maritime trade and navigation, though on her voyages she may touch, at one terminus, upon tide-water, her employment being substantially on other waters. Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162. Admiralty jurisdiction does not extend to ships, merely because they are ships, but to commerce and navigation; and to ships, only because they are, and while they are, used in commerce and navigation; a ship, while building, is not an instrument of commerce, nor is she such while out of commission, and being cared for to preserve her for possible future use; a ship, injured by use, and only temporarily laid up for repairs, or being refitted that she may resume her voyage, is considered as still engaged in commerce. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032. Where materials for equipment and repair, and also supplies, are furnished a domestic vessel at her home port, under a contract with the master of the vessel, the United States courts have exclusive original jurisdiction of proceedings in rem to enforce a lien against the vessel for the same. Crawford v. Bark Caroline Reed, 42 Cal. 469. The act conferring admiralty and maritime jurisdiction on the United States district court expressly saves "to suitors in all cases the right of a common-law remedy, where the common law is competent to give it." Crescent City Wharf etc. Co. v. Simpson, 77 Cal. 286; 19 Pac. 426; Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032.

Maritime contracts, what are. An action against a steamer for damages for malperformance of a contract to carry the plaintiff from a port in this state to a port in another state, and for injuries suffered through the wrongful acts of the agents of the defendant during the voyage, is an action on a maritime contract. Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697. Maritime contracts have reference to navigation upon the sea, and to vessels actually used in commerce, or in navigation: a contract for work on a vessel which was never in commission, and never used in navigation, is not a maritime contract. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032; Bennett v. Beadle, 142 Cal. 239; 75 Pac. 843.

Boats used in navigating the waters of this state, what are. A vessel whose home port is in another state, and intended for use between that port and a foreign one, and never otherwise used in navigating the waters of this state than by sailing into a harbor in this state, is not, within the meaning of the statute of April 10, 1850, a boat or vessel used in navigating the waters of this state. Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162; McQueen v. Ship Russell, 1 Cal. 165; Tucker v. Bark Sacramento, 1 Cal. 403; Ray v. Bark Henry Harbeck, 1 Cal. 451.

Common-law and statutory remedies. The remedy given by the act of April 10, 1850, against boats and vessels, was strictly a statutory remedy, and of a character not recognized by the common law. Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162. A proceeding in rem is not a common-law remedy. Crawford v. Bark Caroline Reed, 42 Cal. 469. The idea that the practice in this class of cases should be assimilated to that prevailing in courts of admiralty has no foundation in the statute; and in all cases where the statute is silent, the common law furnishes the rule of decision. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193; and see Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

Work or materials for construction, etc., lien for. For the original construction of vessels, a lien is given, irrespective of the amount of the debt. Jensen v. Dorr, 159 Cal. 742; 116 Pac. 553. This section must be construed as in pari materia with the mechanic's lien law, in determining the liability of a vessel for a lien for materials furnished in this state for its construction, repair, or equipment; and the materials must be actually furnished to the vessel and used thereon, and the vessel must be in this state when the materials are so furnished and used, in order to create the lien; no lien can be enforced, in this state, upon a vessel wholly constructed in another state, for materials furnished by residents of this state to shipbuilders engaged in construction in such other state; the statute not providing for the creation of a lien by the act of the vessel coming into the state, no lien is enforceable for materials furnished out of the state when the vessel comes within its jurisdiction. Bennett v. Beadle, 142 Cal. 239; 75 Pac. 843.

Wharfage, etc., recovery of. The state board of harbor commissioners are entitled to avail themselves of the remedy provided by this section, for the recovery of tolls and wharfage, against a vessel. People v. Steamer America, 34 Cal. 676.

Breach of contract, and injuries, liability for. A steamer is liable to the full extent of injuries, either in an action ex contractu for the breach of a contract made with the defendant for transportation, or in an action in the nature of one in tort for injuries inflicted, where the defendant fraudulently induced the plaintiff to enter into the contract, and the plaintiff was subjected to hardships and abandoned without protection in an unhealthy climate. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193. Before the amendment of this section in 1873–74, it was held that a contract for the transportation of passengers from a port in this state to a port in another state, was an entirety, whether the entire voyage was to be performed in one vessel or not, and a breach of such contract at any point, such as leaving a passenger at the Isthmus of Panama, rendered the vessel liable. Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 370. In an action under this section, by a husband and wife, against a steamship, for injuries inflicted upon the wife, disbursements or expenditures made by the husband cannot be recovered: for these he must sue alone. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193.

When lien attaches. Under the Practice Act, as there was nothing in the statute expressly creating a lien, the lien attached only when service was had in the suit. Fisher v. White, 8 Cal. 419. In actions against vessels, the service of process in the manner prescribed by statute is equivalent to an actual seizure: it is not necessary that the vessel shall be attached, in order to acquire a lien as against subsequent purchasers. Meiggs v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 406; Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

Lien continues for one year. Where credit is given for supplies and materials furnished a vessel, the lien of the person furnishing the same continues on the vessel for one year from the time for which credit is given expires. Edgerly v. Schooner San Lorenzo, 29 Cal. 418; Fisher v. White, 8 Cal. 419.

Relation between attachment lien and lien under this section. An ordinary attachment, irregularly issued under §§ 537 and 538, ante, for services rendered and material furnished in the construction of a yacht, cannot be dissolved on the ground that the plaintiff's demand was secured by a lien upon the vessel antecedent to and independent of any seizure, and that the affidavit falsely stated that the debt was not secured. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

Nature of proceedings. Attachment proceedings against vessels are entirely distinct from the ordinary attachment described in § 537, ante. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320. Proceedings to foreclose liens on vessels are not in rem, but in personam, with the right to attach the interest of the defendant in the vessel: they are said to be quasi in rem, which phrase has become quite common since Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. Ed. 565, where it is said that they are not strictly in rem, because they are not against the thing as debtor. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032.

When right of action accrues. A party furnishing supplies for a vessel cannot maintain an action therefor until the term of credit fixed by the contract has expired. Edgerly v. Schooner San Lorenzo, 29 Cal. 418.

Agents, liability for acts of. The acts of agents, masters, or captains are binding on steamers and their owners. Oakland Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Jennings, 46 Cal. 176; 13 Am. Rep. 209; Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235; Trabing v. California Navigation etc. Co., 121 Cal. 137; 53 Pac. 644; Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., 121 Cal. 564; 66 Am. St. Rep. 65; 54 Pac. 89. Where supplies for a vessel are purchased at the home port, by the captain, with the knowledge and consent of the ship's husband, the owner is prima facie liable for the same. Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235. Where the acts constituting the alleged wrongs and injuries done to the plaintiff were done and performed on the defendant's steamboat, in its operation as a common carrier, by the captain in charge thereof, in the line of his employment, the defendant is liable in damages for all that the captain wrongfully did to the plaintiff in the execution, or attempted execution, of his authority, even though the captain acted from wanton or malicious motives, or resorted to unlawful means in executing it; and that the injuries were willfully or wantonly inflicted does not relieve the defendant from liability. Trabing v. California Navigation etc. Co., 121 Cal. 137; 53 Pac. 644. The agent has the right to bind the vessel for the entire contract for the transportation of passengers from a port in this state to a port in another state. Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 370. The master of a vessel is presumed, even at a home port, to have authority to contract for such articles for the use of the vessel as come under the general appellation of ship's stores, and the owner of the vessel is liable for the value of the same, unless he shows that the master had not such power. Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235.

Liability of ship-owners. The act of Congress of June 26, 1884 (Supp. U. S. Rev. Stats. 1874–91, p. 443), which limits the liability of a ship-owner to his proportionate share of all the debts and liabilities, is confined to the liability imposed on the part-owners by law, in consequence of their ownership of the vessel, and does not prohibit part-owners from so contracting as to become liable for the entire damage for breach of the contract. Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., 121 Cal. 564; 66 Am. St. Rep. 65; 54 Pac. 89. Where a vessel is chartered in the usual way, either for a particular voyage or for a period of time, the charterer having authority to appoint the master, and undertaking to victual, man, and navigate her at his own expense, he will be deemed the owner pro hac vice, and the general owner will not be personally liable on contracts of affreightment or for supplies. Oakland Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Jennings, 46 Cal. 175; 13 Am. Rep. 209; Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., 121 Cal. 564; 66 Am. St. Rep. 65; 54 Pac. 89. Where the owner lets out to charter the hold of his vessel, but appoints her master and sails her at his own expense, he is liable on contracts of affreightment made by the master with shippers who have no notice of the charter-party. Oakland Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Jennings, 46 Cal. 175; 13 Am. Rep. 209; Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., 121 Cal. 564; 66 Am. St. Rep. 65; 54 Pac. 89.

Admissibility of evidence of ownership. The ship's register is admissible in evidence, in favor of the person claiming to be the owner, in connection with other evidence tending to establish ownership. Brooks v. Minturn, 1 Cal. 481. Where the master of the vessel is in possession, and the record does not disclose any other owner, the admissions of the master are admissible in evidence, with the same effect as if the suit were against the master himself. Bailey v. Steamer New World, 2 Cal. 370. A copy of the decree in a libel of a vessel in admiralty is not admissible to prove part-ownership in a person not appearing and asserting ownership; and evidence that one of the partners in the plaintiff's firm paid, individually, for a share in the corporation, does not tend to show that the firm or other partner was in any manner interested in the vessel. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026.

Prima facie evidence of ownership. The question of the ownership of a vessel forms no exception to the rule of law, that the possession of property is prima facie evidence of ownership. Bailey v. Steamer New World, 2 Cal. 370. The entry, in the custom-house books, of the register or transfer of a vessel, is not even prima facie evidence of ownership, as against one not claiming to be an owner therein, unless such entry is shown to have been made by his authority. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026.

Ownership as question for jury. In an action for materials furnished for the construction of a vessel, the question of ownership is one of fact for the jury; and where there is a shadow of conflict with respect to such fact, it is error for the court to withdraw such question from the jury. Dean v. Ross, 105 Cal. 227; 38 Pac. 912.

Adjudication of ownership. A libel of a vessel in admiralty, where the proceeding is in rem, is only a conclusive adjudication of ownership as against persons actually interested in the vessel; and no one can be adjudged to be a part-owner of the vessel, who has not appeared and asserted ownership or other interest therein. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026.

Admissions. The master of a vessel has no authority to make an admission of culpability for the owners of the ship, after an accident; but a remark, made before the accident, showing that the master knew of the defects causing such accident, stands upon a different basis. Silveira v. Iverson, 128 Cal. 187; 60 Pac. 687.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Constitutionality. Section 317 of the Practice Act contained six subdivisions, the fifth of which read as follows:

"5th. For non-performance or malperformance of any contract for the transportation of persons or property made by their respective owners, masters, agents, or consignees."

This subdivision was omitted by the commissioners because, in the case of The Moses Taylor v. Hammons, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411, 18 L. Ed. 397, it had been held unconstitutional, as being an attempt to confer upon state courts the power to administer a remedy for marine torts and contracts. See also The Hine v. Trevor, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 555; 18 L. Ed. 451. The remaining portions of the section and of the chapter were retained, never having been expressly held invalid. In People v. Steamer America, 34 Cal. 676, in which the constitutionality of the whole section was challenged, upon the authority, among others, of the cases of The Hine v. Trevor, and The Moses Taylor v. Hammons, supra, Mr. Justice Rhodes, in delivering the opinion of the court, says:

"The defendant's counsel presents the point that the statute under which the section is brought (§ 2 of Water Front Act of 1864, Stats. 1863–64, p. 139) is unconstitutional. The ground taken is, that this is a case of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and that 'as the Judiciary Act of 1789, passed in pursuance of § 2 of article III of the constitution of the United States, provides that the district courts . . . shall have exclusive original cognizance of all civil cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction,' etc., the legislature of this state was without power to confer upon its own courts jurisdiction of such cases. Before this point can be reached, it must be determined that this is a case of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. It is said by Mr. Conkling (1 Conkling on Admiralty, p. 19) that 'the admiralty jurisdiction, in cases of contract, depends primarily upon the nature of the contract, and is limited to contracts, claims, and service purely maritime, and touching rights and duties appertaining to commerce and navigation.' See De Lovio v. Boit, 2 Gall. 398; Fed. Cas. No. 3776; The Thomas Jefferson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 428; 6 L. Ed. 358, and other cases cited. A cause of action, to be cognizable in admiralty, whether arising out of a contract, claim, service, or obligation, or liability of any kind, must relate to the business of commerce and navigation.

"The defendant's counsel, in stating the facts of the case, says that 'the action is brought to recover wharfage while the steamer was engaged in navigating the high seas, and conveying passengers and freight to and from this port and ports in Central America.' But it does not appear from the complaint that the steamer was engaged in commerce and navigation. This fact, or one of similar import, must be stated in the pleadings, in order to make a case falling within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. The court cannot take judicial notice that a vessel found at a wharf is engaged in navigating the high seas, or the navigable inland waters of the state, or is employed in trade, commerce, or navigation, of any sort or in any manner. That is a fact of jurisdictional consequence, and must be expressly alleged or be necessarily inferable from the other facts alleged. The precedents of libels in admiralty, although 'there is no special custom extant' with respect to their form, state this fact, that it is very generally found in all the reported cases. This fact not appearing in the case, the question presented by the defendant's counsel does not arise.

"It is objected that the harbor commissioners have no authority to institute actions in rem in the name of the people. Section 2 of the act of 1863–64 provides that 'the said commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered, in the name of the people of the state of California, to institute actions at law and in equity for the possession of any wharf . . . or for the recovery of the tolls, dockage, rents, and wharfage thereof.' The words are comprehensive enough to include all the remedies that a private person could have under the same circumstances, and there are no words in the act, and nothing in the nature of the cause of action, indicative of a restriction to certain remedies to the exclusion of others provided by law. We see no ground for holding that the commissioners are not entitled to avail themselves of the remedy against the steamer provided by § 317 of the Practice Act. The proceeding is similar to that adopted in The Hine v. Trevor, 4 Wall. 555, 18 L. Ed. 451, which, it was said, was 'a remedy partaking of all the essential features of an admiralty proceeding in rem.' In that case one question was, whether the remedy adopted was one falling within the clause of the ninth section of the Judiciary Act of 1789, which 'saves to suitors in all cases the right of a common-law remedy.' It was not held that the form of the remedy adopted would make a case within the admiralty jurisdiction; but the court having determined, from the facts of the case, that it was one of admiralty cognizance, considered that the remedy was not within the saving clause of that section. In cases not within the jurisdiction of the admiralty courts, there can be no question that the legislature may devise or adopt any form of remedy." See also subds. 14, 15, 16, 17, of note to § 33, ante.

2. Generally. Persons engaged in navigating our rivers with boats must take every reasonable precaution to protect the property of others. Carelessness in either particular, resulting in the injury of an innocent party, will make person liable. He is bound to temper their care according to circumstances of the danger. Gerke v. California Steam Nav. Co., 9 Cal. 251; 70 Am. Dec. 650. A British seaman on a British vessel, of which a British subject is master, may, when discharged by the master in a port of the United States, without any fault on the part of the seaman, sue for and recover his wages in a state court. Pugh v. Gillam, 1 Cal. 485. If credit is given for supplies and materials furnished a vessel, the lien for the price thereof continues on the vessel for the period of one year from the time the demand becomes due. Edgerly v. Schooner San Lorenzo, 29 Cal. 418. Part-owners have no lien for advances or disbursements. Sterling v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 480.

§ 814. Actions, how brought. Actions for any of the causes specified in the preceding section must be brought against the owners by name, if known, but if not known, that fact shall be stated in the complaint, and the defendants shall be designated as unknown owners. Other persons having a lien upon the vessel may be made defendants to the action, the nature and amount of such lien being stated in the complaint.

Unknown owners, fictitious designation of. Ante, § 474.

Parties, generally. Ante, §§ 367 et seq.

Legislation § 814. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 318, which read: "Actions for demands arising upon any of the grounds specified in the preceding section, may be brought directly against such steamers, vessels, or boats." When § 814 was enacted in 1872, "demands" was changed to "damages."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 328,

Actions in rem and in personam. Under the statute of April 10, 1850, the plaintiff could, at his option, instead of proceeding against the master, agent, owner, or consignee, institute suit against the boat or vessel by name. Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162; Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24. Where, in an action to recover damages for grievances committed against the passengers of a vessel, the master of the vessel, who was a part-owner, answered in his own behalf, but there was no answer on the part of the vessel, nor on the part of the other owners, and there was no service of summons upon any of them but the master, nor publication of notice requiring them to appear, the action was held to be one in personam, and not in rem, and the judgment bound only the interest of the master. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24.

Joint action on contract. Husband and wife cannot recover jointly in an action by them ex contractu for the breach of a contract for transportation; but if no demurrer is interposed, and if the facts stated show that the plaintiffs are entitled to relief for fraud practiced by the defendant, or for personal injury to the wife, the action is maintainable, and relief will not be denied on the ground that the same facts would support an action on the contract in which the husband alone can recover. Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526; 79 Am. Dec. 193; and see Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697; Matthew v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 63 Cal. 450.

§ 815. Complaint must be verified. The complaint must designate the steamer, vessel, or boat by name, and must be verified by the oath of the plaintiff, or some one on his behalf.

Verification of pleadings. Ante, § 446.

Legislation § 815. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 319), changing "shall" to "must," in both instances.

Allegations of complaint. The court cannot take judicial notice that a vessel found at a wharf is engaged in navigating the high seas, or the navigable inland waters of the state, or is engaged in commerce or navigation of any sort or in any manner: that is a fact of jurisdictional consequence, and must be expressly alleged, or be necessarily inferable from the other facts alleged; hence, if the complaint in an action for the collection of wharfage does not disclose the fact that the vessel was engaged in commerce and navigation, the case cannot, on demurrer, be considered one falling within admiralty or maritime jurisdiction. People v. Steamer America, 34 Cal. 676. A complaint alleging an assigned claim for services of members of the crew on board a steamship, does not necessarily imply that the vessel was engaged in commerce, but the allegation may be applied to a force put on board the vessel to care for it before it was put in commission; and where the findings show the latter case in fact, the defendant could not be injured, even if the court improperly refused to sustain a special demurrer for the ambiguity. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032.

§ 816. Summons may be served on owners, etc., of vessels. The summons and copy of the complaint must be served on the owners if they can be found; otherwise, they may be served on the master, mate, or person having charge of the steamer, vessel, or boat.

Service of summons, generally. Ante, §§ 410 et seq.

Legislation § 816. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 320), omitting "any" before "person having"; the section then reading, "The summons, attached to a certified copy of the complaint, may be served on the master, mate, or person having charge of the steamer, vessel, or boat against which the action is brought."

2. Amended by Code Amdts 1873–74, p. 328, (1) changing "may" to "must" before "be served"; (2) adding the words "owners, if they can be found; otherwise, it may be served on the," before "master"; (3) and omitting, at end, after "boat," the words "against which the action is brought."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 12.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The rule, requiring a seizure of the thing to give jurisdiction in actions in rem, is altered by our statute. Service on a person, standing in a particular relation to the thing, confers jurisdiction. Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308; Meiggs v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 405; Fisher v. White, 8 Cal. 422. The rule of law, that possession of personal property is primary evidence of ownership, is uniform in its application. The question of the ownership of a vessel forms no exception to the rule. Bailey v. The New World, 2 Cal. 370.

§ 817. Plaintiff may have such vessel, etc., attached. The plaintiff, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time afterwards, may have the steamer, vessel, or boat, with its tackle, apparel, and furniture, attached as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered in the action.

Attachment, generally. Ante, §§ 537 et seq.

Legislation § 817. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 321.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 328, (1) striking out "against which the action is brought," after "or boat," and (2) changing, at end, "therein" to "in the action."

Lien presupposed. An attachment under this section presupposes the existence of a lien. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

Necessity for attachment. It is not necessary to attach a vessel, in order to acquire a lien against subsequent purchasers. Meiggs v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 406.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In this action the lien attaches, only when service is had in the suit. Fisher v. White, 8 Cal. 418. As soon as a vessel is seized, a lien attaches in favor of the party at whose instance the seizure is made. If it was the intention of the legislature to provide that a lien should only be acquired by attachment, this would virtually be denying a right to creditors for small sums. It would be almost impossible for a merchant or mechanic of small capital or credit, who had a claim of a few hundred dollars against one of our large steamers, or some sea-going vessel, to give the necessary bonds to detain her until his suit could be determined, and in the mean time she might be run off and sold, free of all such debts or encumbrances. Meiggs v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 405.

§ 818. The clerk must issue the writ of attachment. The clerk of the court must issue a writ of attachment, on the application of the plaintiff, upon receiving a written undertaking on behalf of the plaintiff, executed by two or more sufficient sureties, to the effect that if the judgment be rendered in favor of the owner of the steamer, vessel, or boat, as the case may be, he will pay all costs and damages that may be awarded against him, and all damages that may be sustained by him from the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, which shall in no case be less than five hundred dollars.

Attachment bond, generally. Compare ante, § 539.

Qualifications of sureties. Post, § 1057.

Legislation § 818. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 322, which had (1) in first line, the word "shall" instead of "must"; (2) "which" instead of "that" after "all damages"; and, at end, after "five hundred dollars," the section reading, "when the attachment is issued against a steamer or vessel, or less than two hundred dollars when issued against a boat. The undertaking shall be accompanied by an affidavit of each of the sureties, that he is a resident and freeholder or householder of the county, and worth double the amount specified in the undertaking over and above all his just debts and liabilities. The clerk shall file the undertaking and affidavits." When § 818 was enacted in 1872, (1) the word "the" was added before "judgment be rendered," and (b) the last two sentences of the Practice Act section were omitted, beginning "The undertaking shall" and ending "affidavits."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 328, (1) adding the words "owner of the" after "in favor of the," (2) after "sustained by," substituting "him" for "such steamer, vessel, or boat," and (3) omitting, at end, the words of the Practice Act and original code section, after "five hundred dollars," beginning "when the attachment" and ending "against a boat."

§ 819. Such writ must be directed to the sheriff. The writ must be directed to the sheriff of the county within which the steamer, vessel, or boat lies, and direct him to attach such steamer, vessel, or boat, with its tackle, apparel, and furniture, and keep the same in his custody until discharged in due course of law.

Legislation § 819. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 323, which had (1) in first line, the word "shall" instead of "must," (2) the word "by" instead of "in," after "discharged," and (3) a limitation, after the words "due course of law" (the end of the present section), reading, "unless the owner, master, agent, or consignee thereof, give him security by the undertaking of at least two sufficient sureties, in an amount sufficient to satisfy the demand in suit, which shall be specified in the writ, besides costs; in which case, to take such undertaking." When § 819 was enacted in 1872, (1) "shall" was changed to "must," (2) "by" was changed to "in," and (3) in the limitation, "besides costs" was substituted for "which shall be specified in the writ, besides costs."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 329.

Specific writ necessary. In an action to enforce a lien against a particular vessel, a specific writ of attachment must be issued: such special writ gives authority to seize specific property only. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

What constitutes appurtenances of ship. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 652.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. McQueen v. The Russell, 1 Cal. 165.

§ 820. Sheriff must execute such writ without delay. The sheriff to whom the writ is directed and delivered must execute it without delay, and must attach and keep in his custody the steamer, vessel, or boat named therein, with its tackle, apparel, and furniture, until discharged in due course of law; but the sheriff is not authorized by any such writ to interfere with the discharge of any merchandise on board of such steamer, vessel, or boat, or with the removal of any trunks or other property of passengers, or of the captain, mate, seamen, steward, cook, or other persons employed on board.

Legislation § 820. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 324), changing (1) "shall" to "must," in both instances; (2) "the same" to "it" after "execute"; (3) "be" to "is" after "last section"; (4) "by" to "in" before "due course"; (5) "shall not be" to "is" before "not authorized"; (6) "nor will" (sic) to "or with" after "or boat"; and (7) "seaman" to "seamen."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 329, omitting, before "attach and keep," the words "unless the undertaking mentioned in the last section is given."

§ 821. The owner, master, etc., may appear and defend such vessel. The owner, or the master, agent, or consignee of the steamer, vessel, or boat, may, on behalf of the owner, appear and answer, or plead to the action; and may except to the sufficiency of the sureties on the undertaking filed on behalf of the plaintiff, and may require sureties to justify, as upon bail on arrest.

Appearance. Post, § 1014.
Answer. Ante, § 437.
Justification of sureties. Ante, § 495.

Legislation § 821. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 325.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 329, (1) inserting "or the" before "master"; (2) omitting "against which the action is brought" after "boat"; (3) inserting "on behalf of the owner" before "appear and answer"; (4) omitting "the" after "filed on"; (5) omitting "in actions against individuals" before "upon bail on arrest."

§ 822. Discharge of attachment. After the attachment is levied, the owner, or the master, agent, or consignee of the steamer, vessel, or boat, may, in behalf of the owner, have the attachment discharged, upon giving to the sheriff an undertaking of at least two sufficient sureties in an amount sufficient to satisfy the demand in suit, besides costs, or depositing that amount with the sheriff. Upon receiving such undertaking or amount, the sheriff must restore to the owner, or the master, agent, or consignee of the owner, the steamer, vessel, or boat attached.

Compare ante, § 540. See also ante, §§ 554–558.

Legislation § 822. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 326), changing "shall" to "must," the section then reading, "All proceedings in actions under the provisions of this chapter must be conducted in the same manner as in actions against individuals, except as otherwise herein provided; and in all proceedings subsequent to the complaint, the steamer, vessel, or boat may be designated as defendant."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 330.

§ 823. After appearance, attachment may, on motion, be discharged. After the appearance in the action of the owner, the attachment may, on motion, also be discharged in the same manner, and on like terms and conditions, as attachments in other cases, subject to the provisions of section eight hundred and twenty-five.

Discharge of attachment. Ante, §§ 554–558.

Legislation § 823. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 327, which had (1) in first line, "to" instead of "in," and (2) at end, instead of the present section number, "section 329" (of the Practice Act). When § 823 was enacted in 1872, the changes supra were made, but it contained the words of the Practice Act, after "owner," "master, agent, or consignee."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 330, (1) omitting "master, agent, or consignee" after "owner," and (2) adding "also" before "be discharged."

Attachment discharged without reference to levy. Under this section, involving §§ 556 and 558, ante, a writ of attachment against a vessel may be discharged on motion, if wrongfully issued, without reference to any levy made thereunder. Jensen v. Dorr, 157 Cal. 437; 108 Pac. 320.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

§ 824. When not discharged, such vessel, etc., may be sold at public auction. Application of proceeds. If the attachment be not discharged, and a judgment be recovered in the action in favor of the plaintiff, and an execution be issued thereon, the sheriff must sell at public auction, after publication of notice of such sale for ten days, the steamer, vessel, or boat, with its tackle, apparel, and furniture, or such interest therein as may be necessary, and must apply the proceeds of the sale as follows:

1. When the action is brought for demands other than the wages of mariners, boatmen, and others employed in the service of the steamer, vessel, or boat sold, to the payment of the amount of such wages, as specified in the execution.

2. To the payment of the judgment and costs, including his fees.

3. He must pay any balance remaining to the owner, or to the master, agent, or consignee who may have appeared on behalf of the owner, or if there be no appearance, then into court, subject to the claim of any party or parties legally entitled thereto.

Sale on execution, generally. Ante, §§ 694 et seq.

Payment into court. Ante, §§ 572–574.

Legislation § 824. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 328), (1) in first paragraph, (a) changing "shall" to "must," in both instances, and (b) adding "the" after "proceeds of"; (2) in subd. 2, omitting "and" at end of paragraph; (3) in subd. 3, changing "shall" to "must."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 330, (1) in subd. 3, (a) adding "or to the" before "master," and (2) substituting "on behalf of the owner" for "in the action."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 166; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Nature of judgment. A judgment against the owners of a vessel, foreclosing liens against the vessel, and providing for the sale thereof, with her engines, tackle, etc., is not a judgment directing the payment of money, within the meaning of § 942, post, and a stay bond given under that section, in twice the amount found due, is without consideration, and void. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656.

Judgment erroneous when. Where, in an action for the breach of a contract for the transportation of a passenger, the contract alleged in the complaint is not denied in the answer, a judgment of nonsuit, on the ground that the contract was not proven as set out in the complaint, is erroneous. Ord v. Steamer Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 370.

Findings. Where it was stipulated, in an action to enforce a lien upon a vessel, that, at the commencement of the action, the vessel was seized under the provisions of this chapter, and that it was released upon a bond being given, on the part of the defendant, as therein required, a finding in regard to the insufficiency of the undertaking, which is outside of any issue presented in the case, cannot be considered; and a finding of a conclusion of law, that the plaintiff, at the commencement of the action, had no lien upon the vessel, is erroneous. Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212; 71 Am. St. Rep. 46; 56 Pac. 1026.

Nature and effect of sale. Where the judgment is against the owner, the sale of the property, if one is had, is like an ordinary sale under execution. Olsen v. Birch, 133 Cal. 479; 85 Am. St. Rep. 215; 65 Pac. 1032. Where the master of a vessel was a part-owner, and all his right, title, and interest in the vessel had been sold under execution against him, the purchaser of his interest is not entitled to supersede him in the command of the vessel, nor deprive him of the possession thereof. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24.

§ 825. Mariners and others may assert their claim for wages, notwithstanding prior attachment. Any mariner, boatman, or other person employed in the service of the steamer, vessel, or boat attached, who may wish to assert his claim for wages against the same, the attachments being issued for other demands than such wages, may file an affidavit of his claim, setting forth the amount and the particular service rendered, with the clerk of the court; and thereafter no attachment can be discharged upon filing an undertaking, unless the amount of such claim, or the amount determined as provided in the next section, be covered thereby, in addition to the other requirements; and any execution issued against such steamer, vessel, or boat, upon judgment recovered thereafter, must direct the application of the proceeds of any sale:

1. To the payment of the amount of such claims filed, or the amount determined, as provided in the next section, which amount the clerk must insert in the writ;

2. To the payment of the judgment and costs, and sheriff's fees, and must direct the payment of any balance to the owner, master, or consignee, who may have appeared in the action; but if no appearance by them be made therein, it must direct a deposit of the balance in court.

Preferred claims, for wages, etc. Post, §§ 1204–1207.

Deposit in court. Ante, §§ 572 et seq.

Legislation § 825. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 329), (1) in first paragraph, changing (a) "shall" to "may" before "file," (b) "shall" to "can" after "attachment," and (c) "shall" to "must" before "direct"; (2) making a paragraph of subd. 1, and (a) adding "amount" before "the clerk," (b) changing "shall" to "must," and (c) omitting "and" at end of paragraph; (3) making a paragraph of subd. 2, and (a) changing "shall" to "must" in both instances, and (b) omitting the word "agent" after "master," the omission of the word "agent" being evidently an oversight of the code commissioners, as the omission is listed in the "Errata" of the Practice Act.

Construction of section. This section is intended to provide a summary mode of determining claims of a particular class, which have not been adjudicated by competent tribunal; but where such claims have neither been presented to nor filed with the court according to the requirements of the section, nor any suits instituted thereon to enforce them, but the claims were filed and suits instituted thereon in the court of another district or county, the court whose mesne or final process has made the first actual seizure of the thing must have exclusive power over its disposal, and the distribution of the fund arising therefrom; the judgments of other courts, when properly authenticated, and filed in the court having custody of the fund, must be regarded as a complete adjudication of the subject-matter of the litigation which they disclosed, and entitled to distribution according to their respective merits. Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

§ 826. Proof of the claims of mariners and others. If the claim of the mariner, boatman, or other person filed with the clerk of the court, as provided in the last section, be not contested within five days after notice of the filing thereof by the owner, master, agent, or consignee of the steamer, vessel, or boat against which the claim is filed, or by any creditor, it shall be deemed admitted; but if contested, the clerk must indorse upon the affidavit thereof a statement that it is contested, and the grounds of the contest, and must immediately thereafter order the matter to a single referee for his determination, or he may hear the proofs and determine the matter himself. The judgment of the clerk or referee may be reviewed by a court in which the action is pending or a judge thereof immediately after the same is given, and the judgment of the court or judge shall be final. On the review the court or judge may use the minutes of the proofs taken by the clerk or referee, or may take the proofs anew.

Legislation § 826. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 330), changing (1) "shall be" to "is" before "deemed admitted," (2) "shall" to "must" before "indorse" and before "immediately thereafter," (3) "received" (sic) to "reviewed" after "referee may be," and (4) "shall be" to "is" before "final."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 331, (1) adding "or by any creditor" after "is filed"; (2) changing "is" to "shall be" before "deemed admitted"; (3) substituting for "county judge" the words "court in which the action is pending, or a judge thereof"; (4) substituting for "county judge is final" the words "court or judge shall be final"; and (5) changing "county judge" to "court or."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 12, in sentence beginning "The judgment," (1) changing "the" to "a" before "court in which," and (2) omitting, after "a judge thereof," the words "either in term or vacation."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The admissions of a master in possession of a vessel (the record not disclosing any other owner), held admissible in evidence, with the same effect as though the suit had been against the master. Bailey v. The New World, 2 Cal. 370.

§ 827. Sheriff's notice of sale to contain measurement, tonnage, etc. The notice of sale published by the sheriff must contain a statement of the measurement and tonnage of the steamer, vessel, or boat, and a general description of her condition.

Legislation § 827. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 331), changing "shall" to "must."

2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 166; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

PLACE OF TRIAL OF ACTIONS IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 832. Actions, where must be commenced.
§ 833. Place of trial may be changed in certain cases.
§ 834. Limitation on the right to change.
§ 835. To what court transferred.
§ 836. Proceedings after order changing place of trial.

§ 832. Actions, where must be commenced. Actions in justices' courts must be commenced, and, subject to the right to change the place of trial, as in this chapter provided, must be tried:

1. If there is no justices' court for the township or city in which the defendant resides—in any city or township of the county [in which] he resides;

2. When two or more persons are jointly, or jointly and severally, bound in any debt or contract, or otherwise jointly liable in the same action, and reside in different townships or different cities of the same county, or in different counties—in the township or city in which any of the persons liable may reside;

3. In cases of injury to the person or property—in the township or city where the injury was committed, or where the defendant resides;

4. If for the recovery of personal property, or the value thereof, or damages for taking or detaining the same—in the township or city in which the property may be found, or in which the property was taken, or in which the defendant resides;

8. When the parties voluntarily appear and plead without summons—in any township or city in the state;

9. In all other cases—in the township or city in which the defendant resides.

Jurisdiction of justice's court. Ante, §§ 112–115; post, § 925.

Legislation § 832. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 535, as amended by Stats. 1867–68, p. 551, which read: "No person shall be held to answer to any summons issued against him from a justice's court, in a civil action, in any township or city other than the one in which he shall reside, except in the cases following: First. When there shall be no justice's court for the township or city in which the defendant may reside, or no justice competent to act on the case. Second. When two or more persons shall be jointly or jointly and severally bound in any debt or contract, or otherwise jointly liable in the same action, and reside in different townships or different cities of the same county, or in different counties, the plaintiff may prosecute his action in a justice's court of the township or city in which any of the debtors or other persons liable may reside. Third. In cases of injury to the person, or to real or personal property, the plaintiff may prosecute his action in the township or city where the injury was committed. Fourth. Where personal property, unjustly taken or detained, is claimed, or damages therefor are claimed, the plaintiff may bring his action in any township or city in which the property may be found, or in which the property was taken. Fifth. When the defendant is a non-resident of the county, he may be sued in any township or city wherein he may be found. Sixth. When a person has contracted to perform any obligation at a particular place, and resides in another county or in a township or city of the same county, he may be sued in the township or city in which such obligation is to be performed or in which he resides; and for the purpose of justices' courts' jurisdiction under this clause, the township or city in which the obligation is incurred shall be deemed to be the township or city in which it is to be performed, unless there is a special contract to the contrary. Seventh. When the foreclosure of a mortgage or the enforcement of a lien upon personal property is sought by the action, the plaintiff may sue in the township or city where the property is situated. Eighth. Any person or persons residing in the city of San Francisco may be held to answer to any summons issued against him or them from the court of a justice for any township within the corporate limits of the city of San Francisco, in any action or proceeding whereof justices of the peace of the city or county of San Francisco have or may have jurisdiction by law; provided, nothing herein contained shall be construed to allow any justice of said city or county to hold a court in any other township than the one for which he shall have been elected." When § 832 was enacted in 1872, it read the same as at present, except for the amendments of 1873–74 and 1907.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 333, (1) in subd. 3, adding, at end, after "committed," the words "or where the defendant resides"; (2) in subd. 4, adding, at end, after "taken," the words "or in which the defendant resides"; (3) in subd. 7, adding the last clause, then reading, "and the township or city in which the obligation is incurred shall be deemed to be the township or city in which it is to be performed, unless there is a special contract to the contrary."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 166; unconstitutional. See note ante. § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 878, (1) in subd. 1, (a) changing "be" to "is" after "If there," and (b) omitting (sic) the words "in which" before "he resides"; (2) in subd. 7, in the clause added in 1873–74, (a) changing "shall be" to "is" before "deemed," and (b) adding the words "in writing"; the code commissioner saying, "Amendment simply changes the verb to the transitive mood, present tense, where it occurs otherwise in the original section."

Construction of section. There is no repugnancy between the provisions of the seventh subdivision of this section and § 106, ante, and § 848, post. Cole v. Fisher, 66 Cal. 441; 5 Pac. 915. The jurisdiction conferred by § 806 of the Municipal Corporation Act of 1883 on recorders' courts of cities of the sixth class is concurrent with that conferred by this chapter as to all matters ordinarily cognizable in justices' courts, within the corporate limits of such cities. Prince v. Fresno, 88 Cal. 407; 26 Pac. 606. This section is to be construed in connection with § 890, post, which provides for a mode of waiving objection to the jurisdiction, fully as effective as a voluntary appearance without summons. McGorray v. Superior Court, 141 Cal. 266; 74 Pac. 853.

Jurisdiction. It is essential to the validity of a judgment, that the court rendering it has jurisdiction: a justice of the peace can try a defendant only in a justice's court, and no validity can attach to his judgment rendered in another forum; and the designation of the court as a police court, and of the justice as a police judge, cannot be disregarded, nor can the proceedings be regarded as having taken place in a justice's court, before a justice of the peace. Ex parte Giambonini, 117 Cal. 573; 49 Pac. 732.

Action for breach of contract. An action, in a justice's court, to recover damages for the breach of a contract, may be brought either in the township or city where the contract is to be performed or where the defendant resides; if brought in the former place, prior to the amendment in 1907 of the second subdivision of § 848, post, whether the contract sued on was or was not in writing, the summons could be served in the county in which the defendant resided. Cole v. Fisher, 66 Cal. 441; 5 Pac. 915; and see Allen v. Napa County, 82 Cal. 187; 23 Pac. 43.

Summons served where. Where a complaint in a justice's court shows jurisdiction of the subject-matter, but fails to allege that the contract sued on was in writing, service of summons cannot be had outside of the county in which the action is brought. Olcese v. Justice's Court, 156 Cal. 82; 103 Pac. 317.

Defendant's residence proved how. The fact of the defendant's residence is jurisdictional; but the statute does not require that its existence shall be recorded in the docket of the justice, or be made to appear in any written evidence of the proceedings in the action, nor does it provide in what manner such facts as are not required to be entered in the docket or other written proceeding shall be made to appear or be proved; and it is error for the court to reject parol evidence that the defendant, at the time the action was commenced, resided in the township where it was commenced. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321.

Record of proceedings must show what. The record of the proceedings in a justice's court, in which judgment is rendered, must affirmatively show that the suit was brought in the proper township, or the proceedings are coram non judice and void; and the failure of the defendant, after summons served, to appear and object that suit was brought in the wrong township, is no waiver of the objection. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296.

Defendant sued under fictitious name. A person sued and served under a fictitious name must come in and set up the misnomer and whatever defense he may have, or he is concluded by the judgment. Brum v. Ivins, 154 Cal. 17; 129 Am. St. Rep. 137; 96 Pac. 876.

Equity cases. The foreclosure of a mortgage, and the sale of the mortgaged property for the payment of the debt thereby secured, is a case of purely equitable cognizance. Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Subdivisions 6 and 8 of this section (§ 832) are new provisions. The statutes of 1867–68, p. 552, provided, however, that "nothing in this act should be construed to preclude the bringing of actions in justices' courts of this state against any parties residing out the state." Section 535 of the Practice Act contained the following subdivision:

"7th. When the foreclosure of a mortgage, or the enforcement of a lien, upon personal property, is aought by the action, the plaintiff may sue in the township or city where the property is situated."

But the foreclosure of mortgage and the sale of the property for the payment of the debt secured thereby are matters of purely equitable cognizance; and the constitution provides that the district court shall have jurisdiction in all cases of equity. See Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 499. The subdivision was therefore omitted from this section. No intendments can be indulged in favor of the jurisdiction of justices' courts; but their jurisdiction must affirmatively appear, or their judgments will be void. The record must show that the suit was brought in the proper township. It is not necessary, if the suit is not brought in the proper place, for the defendant to appear and object to the jurisdiction. A constable cannot serve summons out of his township. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 301; Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; see also note to § 911, post; see also § 114, ante, and notes.

§ 833. Place of trial may be changed in certain cases. The court may, at any time before the trial, on motion, change the place of trial in the following cases:

1. When it appears to the satisfaction of the justice before whom the action is pending, by affidavit of either party, that such justice is a material witness for either party;

2. When either party makes and files an affidavit that he believes that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial before such justice, by reason of the interest, prejudice, or bias of the justice;

3. When a jury has been demanded, and either party makes and files an affidavit that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial, on account of the bias or prejudice of the citizens of the township or city against him;

4. When, from any cause, the justice is disqualified from acting;

5. When the justice is sick or unable to act.

Change of venue, generally. Ante, §§ 397 et seq.

Legislation § 833. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 582, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 502, which read: "If, at any time before the trial, it appear to the satisfaction of the justice before whom the action is brought, by affidavit of either party, that such justice is a material witness for either party, or if either party make affidavit that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial before such justice, by reason of the interest, prejudice, or bias of the justice, the action may be transferred to some other justice of the same or neighboring township; and in case a jury be demanded, and affidavit of either party is made that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial, on account of the bias or prejudice of the citizens of the township against him, the action may be transferred to some other justice of the peace in the county; but only one transfer shall be allowed to either party. The justice to whom an action may be transferred by the provisions of this section, shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction over the action as if it had been originally commenced before him. The justice ordering the transfer of the action to another justice, shall immediately transmit to the latter, on payment by the party applying of all the costs that have accrued, all the papers in the action, together with a certified transcript from his docket of the proceedings therein. The justice to whom the case is transferred shall issue a notice, stating the time and place when and where the trial will take place, which notice shall be served upon the parties by any officer authorized to serve process in a justice's court, or by any person specially deputed by the justice for that purpose, at least one day before the trial."

Construction of section. An action commenced before a justice of the city of San Diego, under § 12 of the act reincorporating that city, to recover a fine for a violation of a city ordinance, may be transferred for trial to a justice having his office outside the city, but in the same county: there is nothing in the reincorporating act to show that this section and § 836, post, are not applicable to the case, as to change of place of trial. Palmer v. Snyder, 67 Cal. 105; 7 Pac. 196. The statute does not provide a right to have a change of the place of trial of an action pending in a justice's court, upon the ground of residence. Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308. It seems to have been contemplated by the legislature, in framing the second subdivision of this section, that the justice shall be relieved from the very delicate and trying duty of deciding upon the question of his own disqualification, and that the mere fact that a suitor in his court makes affidavit of his belief that the justice is biased against him renders it imperative upon the justice to transfer the case to some disinterested officer. People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403; 56 Pac. 44. This section is not to be given the same construction as § 1431 of the Penal Code, under which the court has a discretion to refuse a change. Miles v. Justices' Court, 13 Cal. App. 454; 110 Pac. 349; Ex parte Wright, 119 Cal. 401; 54 Pac. 639. Before the enactment of § 834, post, the fact that a case had been transferred once could make no difference, the object of law being to provide the parties with a disinterested, unprejudiced, and unbiased tribunal to adjudicate their cause. People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34. A proceeding for the transfer of a cause from a state to a Federal court is not a proceeding for a change of venue. Ritzman v. Burnham, 114 Cal. 522; 46 Pac. 379.

Refusal to allow change of venue, effect of. The refusal of a justice of the peace to allow a change of venue, on the ground of the interest, prejudice, and bias of the justice, though erroneous, does not render subsequent proceedings before the justice without jurisdiction, nor invalidate the judgment rendered by him. Ritzman v. Burnham, 114 Cal. 522; 46 Pac. 379.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If the justice is interested in the result of the action, the place of trial should be changed. Larue v. Gaskins, 5 Cal. 507. If the place of trial has been changed from one justice's court to another, it may again be changed if it appear that good cause for such change exists. People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34.

§ 834. Limitation on the right to change. The place of trial cannot be changed, on motion of the same party, more than once, upon any or all the grounds specified in the first, second, and third subdivisions of the preceding section.

Legislation § 834. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 835. To what court transferred. When the court orders the place of trial to be changed, the action must be transferred for trial to a court the parties may agree upon; and if they do not so agree, then to another justice's court in the same county.

Legislation § 835. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 836. Proceedings after order changing place of trial. After an order has been made, transferring the action for trial to another court, the following proceedings must be had:

1. The justice ordering the transfer must immediately transmit to the justice of the court to which it is transferred, on payment by the party applying of all the costs that have accrued, all the papers in the action, together with a certified transcript from his docket of the proceedings therein;

2. Upon the receipt by him of such papers, the justice to whom the case is transferred has thereafter the same jurisdiction over the action as though it had been commenced in his court.

Legislation § 836. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, the introductory paragraph and subd. 1 reading as at present, subd. 2 then reading, "2. Upon the receipt by him of such papers, the justice of the court to which the case is transferred must issue a notice, stating when and where the trial will take place, which notice must be served upon the parties at least one day before the time fixed for trial."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 166; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 879, changing subd. 2 to read as now printed; the code commissioner saying, in relation to §§ 836, 837, "The amendment incorporates into § 836 the matters in former § 837, and repeals § 837, thus avoiding the conflict previously existing between these two sections." See Legislation § 837.

Application of section. This section, as to change of place of trial, is applicable to an action to recover a fine for a violation of a city ordinance. Palmer v. Snyder, 67 Cal. 105; 7 Pac. 196.

Necessity of filing papers in superior court. The superior court to which the action is transferred has, upon the failure of the moving party to pay the costs of filing the papers anew therein, the power to deal with the matter, although the papers have not actually been filed there. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355.

§ 837. [Effect of an order changing place of trial. Repealed.]

Legislation § 837. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.
2. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 167; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Repealed by Stats. 1907, p. 879. See ante, Legislation, § 836.

Construction of sections. There is no substantial difference between this section and § 399, ante, respecting the transfer of cases, and both sections should be given such a construction as shall make them harmonize. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355.

Effect of transfer. The transfer of a case puts an end to the jurisdiction of the justice by whom the order was made. Hatch v. Galvin, 50 Cal. 441.

§ 838. Transfer of cases to the superior court. The parties to an action in a justice's court cannot give evidence upon any question which involves the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine; nor can any issue presenting such question be tried by such court; and if it appear, from the answer of the defendant, verified by his oath, that the determination of the action will necessarily involve the question of title or possession to real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, the justice must suspend all further proceedings in the action and certify the pleadings, and, if any of the pleadings are oral, a transcript of the same, from his docket to the clerk of the superior court of the county; and from the time of filing such pleadings or transcript with the clerk, the superior court shall have over the action the same jurisdiction as if it had been commenced therein; provided, that in cases of forcible entry and detainer, of which justices' courts have jurisdiction, any evidence, otherwise competent, may be given, and any question properly involved therein may be determined.

Certifying to superior court, from justices' courts, in cities and counties. Ante, § 92.
Title or possession of realty involved. Ante, § 112, subd. 2.
Legality of tax, etc., involved. Ante, § 112, subd. 4.
Forcible entry and detainer, jurisdiction of. Ante, § 113, subd. 1.

Legislation § 838. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 581, as amended by Stats. 1863–64, p. 117), (1) changing the first words of the section from "The parties shall not be at liberty to give evidence"; (2) changing "shall" to "can" before "any issue"; (3) changing "said justice" to "such court"; (4) omitting, after "and if it appear," the words "from the plaintiff's own showing on the trial, or"; (5) changing "shall" to "must" before "suspend," and changing "or if the pleadings be oral" to "and, if any of the pleadings are oral"; (6) adding "clerk of the" before "district court" ("superior court" of the present section); (7) omitting "county" after "with the," before "clerk"; (8) changing (a) "shall have" to "has" before "over," and (b) "were" to "had been" before "commenced therein"; these last words then ending the section.
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 18, (1) substituting "superior" for "district" before "court," in both instances; (2) restoring "shall have" of the Practice Act from "has," before "over the action"; and (3) adding the proviso.

Construction of section. The supreme court say, that it is conceivable that the author of this section was of the opinion that the title to or the right to the possession of the real estate was not involved unless an issue to be tried was raised; but they held, in view of their own decisions, that that view cannot be maintained, and it seemed to them that the defendant could not make such an issue, save by a verified pleading. Boyd v. Southern California Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 571; 58 Pac. 1046. The purpose of this section is to secure to the superior court the right to hear and determine the causes that are, by the constitution, placed within its jurisdiction. Dungan v. Clark, 159 Cal. 30; 112 Pac. 718.

Evidence not allowed in justice's court. The language of this section is clear and explicit, to the effect that the parties are not allowed to give evidence on any question which involves the title to or the possession of real property. O'Meara v. Hables, 163 Cal. 240; 124 Pac. 1003; King v. Kutner-Goldstein Co., 135 Cal. 65; 67 Pac. 10. The opinion of a witness as to the title to real property is not evidence of title. Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737.

Verified answer as prerequisite to admission of evidence or to transfer. Where any question is raised concerning the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, in a case originating in a justice's court, it must be by answer verified by the oath of the defendant, and unless so raised, no evidence as to such legality can be received, either in the justice's court, or on appeal in the superior court. Williams v. Mecartney, 69 Cal. 556; 11 Pac. 186. A justice of the peace has no authority, under this section, to certify the pleadings to the superior court, nor does the superior court obtain jurisdiction by his certifying them to it, unless the defendant has presented in the justice's court a verified answer, that a question mentioned in this section is necessarily involved in the action. Raisch v. Sausalito Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 215; 63 Pac. 346. The fact that the defendant filed an unverified answer is immaterial, where the complaint is unverified, as in such case an unverified answer raises every issue that a verified answer would raise. King v. Kutner-Goldstein Co., 135 Cal. 65; 67 Pac. 10. Where the complaint itself shows that the question of the title to or the right to the possession of real property is necessarily involved in an action brought before a justice of the peace, there is no propriety in requiring a verified answer before the case can be transferred to the superior court. Boyd v. Southern California Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 571; 58 Pac. 1046. It is an elementary principle, that the facts, and not the verified answer, constitute the final test of jurisdiction upon any cause of action inaugurated in a justice's court. King v. Kutner-Goldstein Co., 135 Cal. 65; 67 Pac. 10. The mere allegation, in an unverified answer, that title to real estate will be brought into issue, is insufficient to authorize the justice to certify the case to the superior court: facts should be stated from which such conclusion would follow. McAllister v. Tindal, 1 Cal. App. 236; 81 Pac. 1117.

Power and duty of justice to transfer cases. While a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to pass upon any question of fact or of law involved in the trial of an issue properly before him, so that his judgment will be binding upon the parties in the absence of any appeal or review, yet he cannot divest himself of jurisdiction which he possesses, nor transfer it to the superior court, which does not possess it. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54. It is proper for a justice of the peace to transfer an action brought in his court, where the answer filed alleges that the determination of the action necessarily involves the question of title to or the possession of real property. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 516; 58 Pac. 1055. Where it appears from the verified answer of the defendant in a justice's court, that the determination of the action necessarily involves the legality of a license tax sued for, the justice should suspend the proceedings and certify the pleadings to the superior court. Monterey County v. Abbott, 77 Cal. 541; 18 Pac. 113.

Superior court acquires jurisdiction how. The superior court cannot exercise jurisdiction until it has acquired it in the mode prescribed by statute; and the mere certifying to the county clerk, by a justice of the peace, of the pleadings in a case pending before the justice, does not confer upon the superior court jurisdiction of a matter, the jurisdiction of which has not been conferred upon it by the constitution, nor does it acquire jurisdiction of the parties to the cause by thereafter determining that it has jurisdiction, and by proceeding in the trial of the cause and rendering judgment therein. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54. Where the action of the justice in certifying the case is unauthorized, the case is not legally before the superior court, and, having no jurisdiction thereof, there is no error in denying a motion to change the place of trial. McAllister v. Tindal, 1 Cal. App. 236; 81 Pac. 1117.

Original and appellate jurisdiction of the superior court. The jurisdiction of the superior court in causes transferred to it under this section is original, and not appellate (Raisch v. Sausalito Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 215; 63 Pac. 346); and if it would have had no jurisdiction if the action had been commenced therein, it can have none by the filing of pleadings certified by a justice of the peace; it cannot exercise original jurisdiction in those matters in which its jurisdiction is only appellate. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54. The superior court has original jurisdiction in matters involving the legality of a tax, and over an action to recover a tax, the legality of which is put in issue; and where the parties proceed to trial upon the merits in such an action, appealed from the police court to the superior court, over which the superior court has no appellate jurisdiction, its original jurisdiction is not affected by the irregular way in which it acquires the jurisdiction over the parties, the consent of the parties to the trial upon the merits being a waiver of the irregularity of procedure. Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378; 30 Pac. 562.

Jurisdiction of superior court where title to or possession of real property is involved. The superior court has original jurisdiction of all questions pertaining to the title to or the possession of real property; and where an appeal is taken upon questions of law and fact, without a statement of the case, or anything in the record to show that the justice's court exceeds its jurisdiction, it is not the duty of the superior court to reverse the judgment of the justice's court, and remand the case, with instructions to certify a transcript thereof back to the superior court, but it is proper for it to try the cause de novo. Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132; 37 Pac. 196. Where a plaintiff alleges that the title to land, agreed to be purchased by him, is invalid, and he seeks a return of the purchase-deposit upon the ground of such invalidity, the title to land is necessarily involved, and jurisdiction is in the superior court, not in the justice's court. Bates v. Ferrier, 19 Cal. App. 79; 124 Pac. 889. Where the issue of title or possession is so involved that it must be decided in order to determine the case, the superior court has original, and the supreme court appellate, jurisdiction, whether the involution may be said to be incidental or not. Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132; 37 Pac. 196; Dungan v. Clark, 159 Cal. 30; 112 Pac. 718. Where the case is certified to the superior court, under this section, and the amended complaint therein shows upon its face that the title to or the possession of real property is necessarily involved, the jurisdiction of the superior court is not affected. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604. The jurisdiction of the superior court may be invoked by a plaintiff, when the title to or the right to the possession of real estate is involved, irrespective of the amount of his money demand, by alleging that fact in his complaint and setting forth the matters out of which the question arises; but when his demand is for less than three hundred dollars, and he brings an action therefor in a justice's court, without showing that such question is involved, the defendant, if he would invoke the jurisdiction of the superior court, must comply with the procedure authorized therefor. Raisch v. Sausalito Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 215; 63 Pac. 346. Where the title to or the possession of real property is only incidentally brought into the action, or is only collaterally in question, it cannot be said that the case involves the title or the possession. Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 181; 18 Pac. 256.

Justice's court has jurisdiction in what cases. In an action to recover a deposit made by a vendor under an executory contract for the sale of land, the jurisdiction of the justice's court is not ousted by the fact that the title to the land is incidentally called in question on the trial: to occasion a loss of jurisdiction, the title or right of possession must be directly involved. Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737. Possession of land may be shown in a justice's court, where the fact of possession is a mere incident, and not the basis of the action: to constitute a case which involves the possession of real property, the right of possession must be involved in the action. Fisch v. Nice, 12 Cal. App. 60; 106 Pac. 598; Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 683. A justice's court has jurisdiction of an action to recover a deposit made by a vendor under an executory contract for the sale of land, by which he agreed to purchase the land if the title was good, and in which it was stipulated that if the title was not good, the deposit was to be returned. Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737. Where the consideration of a note sued upon in a justice's court, by a private corporation, to which the note was executed, is assailed upon the ground that it was given for an illegal assessment upon the stock of the corporation plaintiff, the justice's court, having jurisdiction of the amount of the note, has full jurisdiction to determine all questions relating to the assessment, and has no authority to certify the pleadings to the superior court. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54.

Civil jurisdiction of justices of the peace. See note ante, § 112.

Jurisdiction of police court. The police court cannot try an action to recover a license tax, where the answer denies the legality of the tax: it must transfer it to the superior court. Santa Barbara v. Stearns, 51 Cal. 499; Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378; 30 Pac. 562. Where an action is brought in the police court to recover city taxes assessed against property, and the answer discloses facts which require a transfer of the cause to the superior court, the police court, from the time of the filing of such answer, is ousted of its jurisdiction to proceed further upon the merits presented by the pleadings, and a judgment rendered therein is void, and the superior court has no appellate jurisdiction to try the case. Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378; 30 Pac. 562.

Jurisdiction of district court. The jurisdiction of the district court, under this section, was special, and that court could hear and determine a cause transferred to it, only after the pleadings before the justice were filed with its clerk; that court had jurisdiction of such action, only because the pleadings had before the justice, and filed with its clerk, presented the issue of the legality or validity of a tax or impost, and it could then take jurisdiction only for the purpose of trying such issue; and where the amount was less than three hundred dollars, the justice's court had jurisdiction to pass upon every other issue; and such action had to be tried and determined in the district court upon the pleadings in the justice's court. Santa Cruz v. Santa Cruz R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 143.

Jurisdiction must appear in record. The jurisdiction of a court over any subject-matter that is not included within its general jurisdiction must appear upon the record of its proceedings. Raisch v. Sausalito Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 215; 63 Pac. 346. The jurisdiction of the superior court must appear on the face of the pleadings certified to it by the justice of the peace, and any amendment of the pleadings which show that the justice had jurisdiction to try the case justifies the court in remanding it. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604.

Unlawful detainer cases. Where a justice's court has jurisdiction of an action of unlawful detainer, it is improper to certify it to the superior court as involving a question of title, where the decisive question in the case is, Are the parties to the action landlord and tenant, respectively? Richmond v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 62; 98 Pac. 57.

Change of venue. Where an action, commenced in a justice's court, is, on motion of the defendant, transferred for trial to the superior court of the county in which it was brought, because the answer shows that its determination necessarily involves a question as to the legality of a tax, the superior court has no power to change the place of trial to the county in which the defendant resides, there having been no demand for a change made in the justice's court at the time of answering. Powell v. Sutro, 80 Cal. 559; 22 Pac. 308.

Amendments to pleadings allowed when. The superior court, in an action transferred from a justice's court under this section, has jurisdiction to allow an amendment to the complaint, when the amended complaint, as well as the original, shows upon its face that the title or possession of real estate is involved in the action; and such amendment may be allowed in other respects, to the same extent as if the action had been commenced in the superior court. Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 114 Cal. 501; 46 Pac. 604.

Terms defined. The term "possession," as used in this section, means such a possession of real property as has relation to title, or is necessary to the enforcement or defeat of the cause of action asserted. O'Meara v. Hables, 163 Cal. 240; 124 Pac. 1003. A license charge or fee for the transaction of business is a "tax." Santa Barbara v. Stearns, 51 Cal. 499. The term "assessment," as used in § 5 of article VI of the constitution, refers to such assessments as are authorized in relation to revenue and taxation, and such as may be made under the authority of a municipal or other public corporation to meet the cost or expense of a public improvement, and does not include assessments made under § 331 of the Civil Code, by a private corporation upon its stockholders, pursuant to contract, express or implied; therefore a justice's court has jurisdiction to determine all questions relating to an assessment upon corporate stock that may be presented upon the trial of a cause, where the amount is within its jurisdiction. Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47; 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; 28 Pac. 54.

Appeal. There is nothing before the superior court, upon appeal from a justice's court, until the undertaking is filed: until the sureties justify, the cause remains in the justice's court. Lane v. Superior Court, 5 Cal. App. 762; 91 Pac. 405. The refusal of a justice to certify the pleadings to the superior court, when in duty bound to do so, is, if followed by a judgment against the defendant, subject to review on appeal. Clark v. Minnis, 50 Cal. 509.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Parties to action in justice's court cannot give evidence upon any question which involves the title or possession of real property. Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 144; Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338; Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 684; Cullen v. Langridge, 17 Cal. 67; Cornett v. Bishop, 39 Cal. 319. See these cases, commented on and explained in note to § 115, ante; also notes 8 and 9 of § 114, ante; and see also, particularly, note 32 of § 57, ante. No question involving the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine can be raised in a justice's court. People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61; Bell v. Crippin, 28 Cal. 327. See these cases commented on in § 57, ante, note 33.

§ 839. Actions, how commenced. An action in a justice's court is commenced by filing a complaint.

Actions, in cities and counties, title, etc. Ante, § 89.
Commencement of action. Ante, §§ 350, 405.
Action, when pending. Post, § 1049.
Complaint, generally. Ante, § 426.
Fees payable in advance. Ante, § 91.

Legislation § 839. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 538, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 637, q v., post, Legislation § 840. When § 839 was enacted in 1872, it had, at the end of the section, the words "and issuing a summons thereon, or by the voluntary appearance and pleading of the parties."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 98.

§ 840. Summons may issue within a year. The court must indorse on the complaint the date upon which it was filed, and at any time within one year thereafter the plaintiff may have summons issued.

Issuance of summons, generally. Ante, § 406.
Payment of fees, in cities and counties. Ante, § 91.

Legislation § 840. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 538, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 637, which read: "Actions in justices' courts shall be commenced by filing a copy of the account, note, bill, bond or instrument upon which the action is brought, or a concise statement, in writing, of the cause of action, and the issuance of a summons thereon, within one year after the filing of the same, or by the voluntary appearance and pleadings of the parties without summons; in the latter case, the action shall be deemed commenced at the time of appearance."

§ 841. Defendant may waive summons. At any time after the complaint is filed the defendant may, in writing, or by appearing and pleading, waive the issuing of summons.

Waiver. Compare ante, § 406.

Legislation § 841. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Special appearance is not waiver. Where the service of summons is defective, the justice's court does not acquire jurisdiction to proceed against a defendant by reason of his special appearance for the purpose of moving to set aside the service. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471. Where, in an action before a justice of the peace, the defendant appears for the purpose of taking advantage of irregular summons by a motion to dismiss, this does not amount to a waiver of his rights so as to cure the defect. Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339.

Service of process. The legal service of summons in a justice's court includes, as a necessary part of such service, service of the complaint. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471.

§ 842. Parties may appear in person or by attorney. Parties in justices' courts may appear and act in person or by attorney; and any person, except the constable by whom the summons or jury process was served, may act as attorney.

Justice's court practitioners. Ante, § 96.
Attorneys, generally. Ante, §§ 275 et seq.

Legislation § 842. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 534, which read: "Parties in justices' courts may prosecute or defend in person, or by attorney; and any person, on the request of a party, may act as his attorney, except that the constable by whom the summons or jury process was served, shall not appear or act on the trial in behalf of either party."

Notice of appeal, who may sign. A notice of appeal from a justice's court need not be signed by the attorney of record of appellant in that court: if signed by the appellant personally, or by any one he may select personally for that purpose, it is sufficient. Totton v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 37; 13 Pac. 72

§ 843. When guardian necessary, how appointed. When an infant, insane, or incompetent person is a party, he must appear either by his general guardian, if he have one, or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the justice. When a guardian ad litem is appointed by the justice, he must be appointed as follows:

1. If the infant, insane, or incompetent person, be plaintiff, the appointment must be made before the summons is issued, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years; if under that age, or if insane or incompetent, upon the application of a relative or friend.

2. If the infant, insane, or incompetent person, be defendant, the appointment must be made at the time the summons is returned, or before the answer, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years and apply at or before the summons is returned; if he be under the age of fourteen, or be insane or incompetent, or neglect so to apply, then upon the application of a relative or friend, or any other party to the action, or by the justice on his own motion.

Guardians. Compare ante, §§ 372, 373.

Legislation § 843. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 539, which read: "When a guardian is necessary, he shall be appointed by the justice as follows: 1st. If the infant be plaintiff, the appointment shall be made before the summons is issued, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years or upwards; if under that age, upon the application of some relative or friend. The consent in writing of the guardian to be appointed, and to be responsible for costs, if he fail in the action, shall be first filed with the justice. 2d. If the infant be defendant, the guardian shall be appointed at the time the summons is returned, or before the pleadings. It shall be the right of the infant to nominate his own guardian, if the infant be over fourteen years of age, and the proposed guardian be present and consent in writing to be appointed. Otherwise, the justice may appoint any suitable person who gives such consent." When § 843 was enacted in 1872, (1) in introductory paragraph, "shall" was changed to "must"; (2) in subd. 1, (a) "be" was changed to "is," before "plaintiff" and before "of the age," (b) "shall" was changed to "must," in both instances, and (c) in last sentence the words "to act as such" were added; (3) in subd. 2, (a) "be" was changed to "is" before "defendant," before "over," and before "present," and (b) "shall be" was changed to "is" before "the right."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 333, to read: "When an infant is a party, he must appear either by his general guardian, if he have one, or by a guardian appointed by the justice as follows: One. If the infant be plaintiff, the appointment must be made before the summons is issued, upon the application of the infant, if he be of the age of fourteen years; if under that age, upon the application of a relative or friend. Two. If the infant be defendant, the guardian must be appointed at the time the summons is returned, or before the answer. It is the right of the infant to nominate his own guardian, if the infant be over fourteen years of age; otherwise the justice must make the appointment."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 18.

§ 844. Summons, how issued, directed, and what to contain. The summons must be directed to the defendant, signed by the justice, and must contain:

1. The title of the court, name of the county, city and county, or township in which the action is brought, and the names of the parties thereto;

2. A direction that the defendant appear and answer before the justice, at his office, as specified in section eight hundred and forty-five of this code;

3. A notice that unless the defendant so appear and answer, the plaintiff will take judgment for any money or damages demanded in the complaint, as arising upon contract, or will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint. If the plaintiff appears by attorney, the name of the attorney must be indorsed upon the summons.

Contents of summons. Compare ante, § 407.

Legislation § 844. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 540, which read: "The summons shall be addressed to the defendant by name, or if his name be unknown, by a fictitious name; and shall summon him to appear before the justice at his office, naming its township or city, and at a time specified therein, to answer the complaint of the plaintiff, for a cause of action therein described in general terms, sufficient to apprise the defendant of the nature of the claim against him; and in action for money or damages, shall state the amount for which the plaintiff will take judgment, if the defendant fail to appear and answer. It shall be subscribed by the justice before whom it is returnable." When enacted in 1872, § 844 read: "The summons must be directed to the defendant and signed by the justice, and must contain: 1. The title of the court, name of the county and city, or township, in which the action is commenced, and the names of the parties thereto; 2. A sufficient statement of the cause of action, in general terms, to apprise the defendant of the nature of the claim against him; 3. A direction that the defendant appear and answer before the justice, at his office, at a time specified in the summons; 4. In an action arising on a contract, for the recovery of money or damages only, a notice that unless the defendant so appears and answers the plaintiff will take judgment for the sum claimed by him (stating it); 5. In other actions, a notice that unless defendant so appears and answers the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded. If the plaintiff has appeared by attorney, the name of the attorney must be indorsed on the summons."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 98, (1) substituting "as specified in section eight hundred and forty-five" for "at a time specified in the summons," in the third subdivision, (2) in subds. 4 and 5, changing "appears" to "appear" and "answers" to "answer," and (3) changing "on" to "upon" in subd. 5.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 19, adding "of this code" at end of subd. 3.

4. Amended by Stats. 1899, p. 100, and became a law, under constitutional provision, without governor's approval.

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 167; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Issuance of summons. The justices' clerk of the city and county of San Francisco may issue a summons upon the order of the presiding justice. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100.

Mistake in name. A mistake in a summons, as to the name of the particular person who was at the time presiding justice of the justices' court, does not present, in any way, a jurisdictional question. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100.

Summons, who may sign. The rule declared in this section, regarding the proper party to sign a summons in the justice's court of the city and county of San Francisco, is modified by § 91, ante. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100.

Name of plaintiff in summons. A summons, in an action under this section, which does not contain the name of the plaintiff, is fatally defective. Tucker v. Justice's Court, 120 Cal. 512; 52 Pac. 808.

Notice to defendant in summons. The summons in cases arising in superior courts is, in substance, the same as those issued from justices' courts: each is required to contain the same notice to the defendant; viz., in cases arising on contract for the recovery of money or damages only, that, if the defendant fail to answer, judgment will be taken against him for the sum claimed, stating it; in other actions, that, unless the defendant so appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 397; 7 Pac. 838.

Surplusage in summons, effect of. Only those recitals in the summons which the law requires to be recited therein, are evidence of their truth; recitals of matters of mere surplusage prove nothing; recitals of matters which are not subject to the statutory requirements are not conclusive as to the facts recited. Helms v. Dunne, 107 Cal. 117; 40 Pac. 100.

Service of summons. Jurisdiction of the person of the defendant is gained, both in superior courts and in justices' courts, by service of summons. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838. Where summons was issued from a justice of the peace against defendants by a firm name, and the return showed service on a party not shown by the record to be in any way connected with the defendants, and no appearance was made for them on the return-day, a judgment rendered against them is void. Adams & Co. v. Town, 3 Cal. 247. Where, in an action in the justice's court, the complaint was filed against a company, but a part of the name of such company was omitted therefrom, and the service, as shown by the return, was on a member of the company, with the name therein conforming to that in the complaint, and the summons was addressed to and a default judgment was rendered against the company by its correct business name, the court did not acquire jurisdiction of the company, and its judgment was void. King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318.

§ 845. Time for appearance of defendant. The time specified in the summons for the appearance of the defendant must be as follows:

1. If an order of arrest is indorsed upon the summons, forthwith;

2. In all other cases, within five days, if the summons is served in the city and county, township, or city, in which the action is brought; within ten days, if served out of the township or city, but in the county in which the action is brought; and within twenty days, if served elsewhere.

Legislation § 845. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 541, as amended by Stats. 1867–68, p. 551, which read: "The time in which the summons shall require the defendant to appear and answer the complaint shall be as follows: First. If the plaintiff and defendant reside within the township when the action is brought, within ten days after the service thereof. Second. If the plaintiff and defendant reside out of the township but within the county where the action is brought, within five days after the service thereof. Third. If the plaintiff reside out of the township where the action is brought and the defendant resides in said township, within three days after the service thereof. Fourth. If the defendant reside out of the county or township in which the action is brought and the plaintiff resides in said township, within fifteen days after the service thereof. The defendant may appear in the action by demurrer or answer at any time after service of summons upon him, and shall notify the plaintiff, by written notice, of such appearance. If any of the defendants shall fail to answer or appear in the action within the time prescribed in the summons, such default shall be entered by the justice in his docket. If all of the defendants shall fail to appear or answer within the time prescribed in the summons, the justice shall thereupon enter judgment against them for the amount demanded in the summons, where the action is brought upon a contract for the direct payment of money; and in all other cases shall hear the proofs, and give judgment in accordance with the pleadings and proofs. Where all the defendants served with process shall have appeared, or some of them have appeared and the remaining defendants have made default, the justice may proceed to try the cause, or, upon good cause shown by either party, may fix the day for trial on any subsequent day not more than ten days thereafter." When enacted in 1872, § 845 read: "The time specified in the summons for the appearance of the defendant must be as follows: 1. If an order of arrest is indorsed upon the summons, forthwith; 2. In all other cases, not less than three nor more than twelve days from its date."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 407, (1) adding a new subd. 2, reading, "Second. If the defendant is not a resident of the county in which the action is brought, not less than twenty nor more than thirty days from its date"; and (2) subd. 2 renumbered subd. 3.

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 99, (1) in subd. 1, changing "is" to "be" and "upon" to "on," and (2) adding a new subd. 2, which replaced subds. 2 and 3, and reading, "In all other cases the summons must contain a direction that the defendant must appear and answer the complaint within five days, if the summons be served in the township in which the action is brought; within ten days, if served out of the township, but in the county in which the action is brought; and within twenty days, if served elsewhere."

4. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 19, (1) in subd. 1, changing "on" to "upon," and (2) in subd. 2, (a) adding "city and county" after "served in the," and (b) adding "or city" after "township," in both instances.

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 168; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

6. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 879; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in striking out the words 'the summons must contain a direction that the defendant must appear and answer the complaint,' formerly in subd. 2."

Time for appearance. Where the summons is served where the action is brought, the defendant has five days in which to appear and answer. Hall v. Justice's Court, 5 Cal. App. 133; 89 Pac. 870.

Return-day of summons. Under the Practice Act, the summons could not be made returnable more than ten days from its date, unless publication was required. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. The justice cannot make the summons returnable in eleven days from its date; if he could, he could make it returnable in eleven months; the defendant, as well as the plaintiff, has an interest in a speedy trial. Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641.

Appearance as waiver of rights. Where the defendant appears for the purpose of making a proper motion to dismiss the case because the summons was dated, issued, and served more than ten days before the return thereof, he does not thereby waive his rights. Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339.

Time for appearance in justice's court. See note 40 Am. Dec. 177.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This substitutes a plain and simple rule as to the return-day of the summons. Under the old practice, the rules relating thereto were exceedingly difficult of application. The justice may, within the limits fixed by the rule, determine, from the peculiar circumstances attending each case, the proper return-day. For decisions rendered under the old practice, as to service of summons, see Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339; Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. See §§ 412, 413, ante, and notes. Sections 405 to 416, inclusive, and the notes thereto, are applicable to justices' courts, so far as relates to the service and return of the summons.

§ 846. Alias summons. If the summons is returned without being served upon any or all of the defendants, the justice, upon the demand of the plaintiff, may issue an alias summons, in the same form as the original, except that he may fix the time for the appearance of the defendant at a period not to exceed ninety days from its date.

Alias summons, generally. Ante, § 408.

Legislation § 846. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Collateral attack on alias summons. An objection to the regularity of the issuance of an alias summons, in an action in a justice's court, is not jurisdictional, and cannot be taken advantage of in a collateral attack; and a judgment, in such court, rendered by default after a personal service of summons, is not void, although the summons fails to state definitely the nature of the cause of action, and does not notify the defendant to appear and answer at the office of the justice. Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232; 1 Am. St. Rep. 48; 13 Pac. 621.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The main object of this section is to enable service to be made by publication, in the mode and manner provided for in title V, part II, of this code. See note to § 845.

§ 847. Same. The justice may, within a year from the date of the filing of the complaint, issue as many alias summons as may be demanded by the plaintiff.

Alias summons. Ante, § 408.

Legislation § 847. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 845.

§ 848. Service of summons outside of county. The summons cannot be served out of the county wherein the action is brought, except in the following cases:

1. When the action is upon the joint contract or obligation of two or more persons, one of whom resides within the county;

2. When the action is brought against a party who has contracted in writing to perform an obligation at a particular place, and resides in a different county, in which case the summons may be served in the county where he resides;

3. When the action is for injury to person or property, and the defendant resides in a different county, in which case summons may be served in the county wherein he may be found;

4. In all cases where the defendant was a resident of the county when the action was brought, or when the obligation was incurred, and thereafter departed therefrom, in which event he may be served wherever he may be found;

5. In actions of forcible entry and detainer, or to enforce and foreclose liens on, or to recover possession of, personal property situate within the county.

Process of justices' courts, extent of. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 848. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The summons cannot be served within two days of the time fixed therein for the appearance of the defendant."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 333, to read: "The summons cannot be served out of the county of the justice before whom the action is brought, except where the action is brought upon a joint contract or obligation of two or more persons who reside in different counties, and the summons has been served upon the defendant resident of the county, in which case the summons may be served upon the other defendants out of the county, and except also when an action is brought against a party who has contracted to perform an obligation at a particular place, and resides in a different county, in which case summons may be served in the county where he resides. When the defendant resides in the county, the summons cannot be served within two days of the time fixed for the appearance of the defendant: when he resides out of the county, and the summons is served out of the county, the summons cannot be served within twenty days of such time."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 99, (1) changing "where" to "when" before "the action is brought"; (2) changing "defendants" to "defendant" before "out of the county"; and (3) striking out the sentence beginning "When the defendant," and adding a third exception, reading, "and except, also, where an action is brought for injury to person or property, and the defendant resides in a different county, in which case summons may be served in the county where the defendant resides."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 168; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 879; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment consists in recasting the form of the section, and changing the matter covered by subd. 2, so as to substitute for the words 'the county where he resides,' the words 'any county wherein he may be found.' The matter covered by subds. 4 and 5 in the new form of section is entirely new matter."

6. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 355, in subd. 4 adding the words "or when the obligation was incurred," this being the only change.

Construction of section. This section contains exceptions to the general rule, that a summons cannot be served out of the county of the justice before whom the action is brought; there is no repugnancy between the first exception in this section, and § 106, ante, and the seventh subdivision of § 832, ante; repeals by implication are not favored, and there is nothing to support the implication that this section and § 849, post, were repealed by the amendment of § 106, ante, in 1880. Cole v. Fisher, 66 Cal. 441; 5 Pac. 915.

Contract in writing, service of summons. The summons from a justice's court cannot be served outside of the county in which the action is brought, where the complaint shows jurisdiction of the subject-matter, but fails to allege that the contract sued on is in writing. Olcese v. Justice's Court, 156 Cal. 82; 103 Pac. 317. Service of summons outside of the county can be made only in an action based upon a written contract. Newman v. Barnet, 165 Cal. 423; 132 Pac. 588.

Burden of proving improper service of summons. A justice of the peace has jurisdiction to entertain a motion of a defendant to set aside the service of a summons attempted to be made upon him in a county other than that in which the action was pending, and the motion is properly made upon affidavits showing the grounds of the motion; and, upon such motion, the fact that an unverified complaint was filed in the action, alleging that the contract sued upon was to be performed by the defendant therein in the county in which the action was brought, does not foreclose all inquiry as to the fact, nor deprive the justice of jurisdiction to pass upon the truth of the allegation; the burden of proving improper service of summons in such action is on the defendant, and he is required to present a clear case. History Co. v. Light, 97 Cal. 56; 31 Pac. 627.

Waiver of objection to want of jurisdiction. Where the defendants, in an action in a justice's court, which is personal in its nature, move for a dismissal on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction to try the cause, their subsequent withdrawal of the motion and consent to trial on the merits is a waiver of the objection to the want of jurisdiction. Luco v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 555; 12 Pac. 677.

Motion to quash service. Where improper issue of summons, or improper service thereof, appears, the remedy is by motion to quash the service. Burge v. Justice's Court, 11 Cal. App. 213; 104 Pac. 581.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 845.

§ 849. Summons, by whom and how served and returned. The summons may be served by a sheriff or constable of any of the counties of this state or by any other person of the age of eighteen years or over not a party to the action. When a summons issued by a justice of peace is to be served out of the county in which it is issued the summons must have attached to it a certificate under seal by the county clerk of such county to the effect that the person issuing the same was an acting justice of the peace at the date of the summons and must be served and returned as provided in title five, part two of the code, or it may be served by publication and sections four hundred and thirteen and four hundred and twelve so far as they relate to the publication of summons are made applicable to justices courts, the word justice being substituted for the word judge wherever the latter word occurs.

Act superseded. Act of Stats. 1875–76, p. 855, relating to the service of summons in justice's court in San Francisco, superseded by this section.

Publication, service by. Ante, §§ 412, 413.

Legislation § 849. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 542, § 613 as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 467, and § 614), and then read: "The summons may be served by a sheriff or constable of the county, or by any male resident of the county over twenty-one years of age, not a party to the suit, and must be served and returned as prescribed in Title V, Part II, of this code; or it may be served by publication; and sections 413 and 412, so far as they relate to the publication of summons, are made applicable to justices' courts, the word 'justice' being substituted for the word 'judge,' wherever the latter word occurs."

2. Amended by Code Admts. 1873–74, p. 407, to read: "The summons may be served by a sheriff or constable of any of the counties of this state; provided, that when a summons, issued by a justice of the peace, is to be served out of the county in which it was issued, the summons shall have attached to it a certificate under seal by the county clerk of such county, to the effect that the person issuing the same was an acting justice of the peace at the date of the summons, or the summons may be served by any male resident, over the age of twenty-one years, not a party to the suit, within the county where the action is brought, and must be served and returned, as provided in Title Five, Part Two, of this code, or it may be served by publication; and sections four hundred and thirteen and four hundred and twelve, so far as they relate to the publication of summons, are made applicable to justices' courts, the word 'justice' being substituted for the word 'judge,' whenever the latter word occurs."

3. Amended by Stats. 1891, p. 51, changing (1) "twenty-one" to "eighteen" after "age of," (2) "justices' " to "justice's," and (3) "whenever" to "wherever" in last line.

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 168; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 27.

Service of summons includes service of complaint. Jurisdiction of the person of a sole defendant in a justice's court is obtained by service of the summons and a copy of the complaint; the legal service of the summons includes, as a necessary part of such service, service of the complaint. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471.

Proof of service of summons sufficient when. While justices' courts are inferior courts of limited jurisdiction, and their jurisdiction must affirmatively appear, or their judgments will be absolutely void, and while no intendments can be indulged in favor of the jurisdiction of such courts, yet, within these rules, the return of service of summons and complaint on the defendant is proved, and sustains the judgment, where the officer certifies that he "served the within summons by delivering a copy thereof, together with a true copy of the complaint, personally," giving the name of the township and county, and the date, with the signature of the officer, although failing to state upon whom the summons was served or to whom the copies were delivered, or that the copy of the complaint delivered was a copy of that in the action, or that the service was personal. Cardwell v. Sabichi, 59 Cal. 490.

County clerk's certificate necessary. Without the county clerk's certificate, no valid service of the summons can be made out of the county. Ferguson v. Basin Consolidated Mines, 152 Cal. 712; 93 Pac. 867.

Publication of summons. To entitle the plaintiff in a justice's court to have the summons served by publication, he must make and file with the justice the affidavit required by law, which must show that a cause of action exists in his favor, against the defendant. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. A summons in a justice's court, where it is required to be published, may be made returnable more than ten days from its date. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85; Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641. An order of publication of summons, made by a justice, need not state that the paper designated is the one "most likely to give notice to the person to be served." Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

Proof of service by publication. The publication of summons issued by a notice may be proved by the affidavit of the principal clerk of the publishers of the newspaper, and the fact that a copy of the summons had been duly deposited in the post-office, properly directed, may be proved by the affidavit of a competent witness: a return of such facts, indorsed upon the summons by a constable or the sheriff, is not necessary. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Constables may appoint deputies. Taylor v. Brown, 4 Cal. 188; 60 Am. Dec. 604. See note to § 845, ante.

§ 850. Notice of hearing. Form. Service. Service by mail. Docket entries. When all the parties served with process shall have appeared, or some of them have appeared, and the remaining defendants have made default, the justice must fix the day for the trial of said cause, whether the issue is one of law or fact, and give notice thereof to the parties to the action who have appeared, but in case any of the parties are represented by an attorney, then to such attorney. Such notice shall be in writing, signed by the justice, and substantially in the following form (filling blanks according to the facts):

In the justice court, —— township (or city, or city and county), county, or city and county of —— state of California —— plaintiff, vs. —— defendant.

To ——, plaintiff, or —— attorney for plaintiff, and to —— defendant, or, —— attorney for defendant.

You and each of you will please take notice that the undersigned justice of the peace before whom the above-entitled cause is pending, has set for hearing the demurrer of ——, filed in said cause (or has set the said cause for trial, as the case may be), before me at my office in said township (or city, or city and county), at —— o'clock — m., on the —— day of ——, 19—.

Dated this —— day of ——, 19—.

(Signed) —— Justice of the peace.

Said notice shall be served by mail or personally. When served by mail the justice of the peace shall deposit copies thereof in a sealed envelope in the post-office at least ten days before the trial or hearing addressed to each of the persons on whom it is to be served at their place of residence and the postage prepaid thereon; provided, that such notice shall be served by mail only when the person on whom service is to be made, resides out of the county in which said justice's court is situated, or is absent therefrom. When personally served said notice shall be served at least five days before the trial or hearing on the persons on whom it is to be served by any person competent and qualified to serve a summons in a justice's court, and when personally served it shall be served, returned and filed in like manner as a summons. When a party has appeared by attorney the notice may be served in the manner prescribed by subdivision one of section one thousand and eleven of this code. The justice shall enter on his docket the date of trial or hearing; and when such notice shall have been served by mail the justice shall enter on his docket the date of mailing such notice, of trial or hearing and such entry shall be prima facie evidence of the fact of such service. The parties are entitled to one hour in which to appear after the time fixed in said notice, but are not bound to remain longer than that time unless both parties have appeared and the justice being present is engaged in the trial of another cause.

Time of trial. Post, §§ 873 et seq.

Legislation § 850. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "§ 850. The parties are entitled to one hour in which to appear after the time fixed in the summons, but are not bound to remain longer than that time, unless both parties have appeared, and the justice being present is engaged in the trial of another cause."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 99, (1) adding a new sentence at beginning of section, reading, "When all the parties served with process shall have appeared, or some of them have appeared, and the remaining defendants have made default, the justice must fix a day for the trial of said cause, and notify the plaintiff, and the defendants who have appeared, thereof"; and (2) substituting "said notice" for "summons."

3. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 598, (1) the first sentence then reading, "When all the parties served with process shall have appeared, or some of them have appeared, and the remaining defendants have made default, the justice must fix the day for the trial of said cause, whether the issue is one of law or fact, and give notice thereof to the plaintiff and the defendants who have appeared, but in case any of the parties are represented by an attorney, then to such attorney. Such notice shall be in writing, signed by the justice, and substantially in the following form (filling blanks according to the facts)"; (2) the blank form reading the same as the present amendment (1913); (3) the first sentence of the final paragraph then reading, "Said notice shall be served by any person competent and qualified to serve a summons in a justice's court, and shall be served, returned, and filed in like manner as a summons; and the justice shall enter on his docket the date of giving notice of trial or hearing, and date of trial or hearing, and the time of its return, and by whom and how served"; (4) the final paragraph then having only two sentences, the second being exactly the same as the final sentence of the present amendment (1913).

4. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 33, (1) in first sentence, (a) after the section number, adding a section title, "Notice of hearing," and (b) substituting "parties to the action" for "plaintiff and the defendants"; (2) changing the first part of the final paragraph to read: "Said notice shall be served by mail or personally. When served by mail the justice of the peace shall deposit copies thereof in a sealed envelope in the post-office at least ten days before the trial or hearing addressed to each of the persons on whom it is to be served at their place of residence and the postpage prepaid thereon; provided that such notice shall be served by mail only when the attorney [sic] on whom service is to be made, resides out of the county in which said justice's court is situated. When personally served said notice shall be served at least five days before the trial or hearing on the persons on whom it is to be served by any person competent and qualified to serve a summons in a justice's court and when personally served it shall be served, returned and filed in like manner as a summons"; (3) the final sentence of this paragraph not being changed.

5. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 968, (1) in first sentence, striking out the section title inserted in 1905; (2) in the proviso in the final paragraph, (a) substituting "person" for "attorney," and (b) at the end of the proviso, adding "or is absent therefrom."

6. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 234, adding a new sentence in the final paragraph, beginning "When a party has appeared."

Trial of issue of law or fact. The provisions of this section have reference only to such trial as is authorized by the nature of the appearance; and if, by such appearance, only an issue of law is presented, there can be a trial of only such issue, and a trial of fact cannot be had, unless an issue of fact is presented after the trial and disposition of the issue of law. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

Fixing day for trial. Where the defendant files a demurrer to the complaint, and the justice fixes the following day for the hearing upon the demurrer, there is no occasion to fix any day for the trial, other than that already fixed, there being no issue of fact to be tried. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

Notice of trial necessary. When the party served with process has appeared, he is entitled to notice of the time fixed by the justice for the trial of the cause; such notice is imperative, and is as essential to the authority of the justice to proceed upon the trial of the case as is the summons and return of the service thereof to his entering judgment by default. Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022; Green v. Rogers, 18 Cal. App. 572; 123 Pac. 974; Los Angeles v. Young, 118 Cal. 295; 62 Am. St. Rep. 234; 50 Pac. 534; Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575. The judgment of a justice, rendered upon an issue of fact raised, without giving notice of the trial, is void. Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31.

Notice must be in writing. The notice of the day fixed for the trial of an action in a justice's court, required by this section to be given to the parties who have appeared, must be in writing and form a part of the record, and there must be an entry thereof, and of the mode in which it is given, in the justice's docket, in order to authorize him to proceed upon the trial of the case and render a judgment therein. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022. The notice of trial cannot be verbal, and cannot be waived by a conversation over the telephone, in which the attorney for the defendant consented to the setting of the case. Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022.

Notice to attorney sufficient. Where a defendant has been served with summons and has appeared by his attorney, he is sufficiently notified by the justice, of the time and place of trial, under this section, where the attorney receives the notice as such, and he notifies the defendant. Grant v. Justice's Court, 1 Cal. App. 383; 82 Pac. 263.

Proof of notice. While it is not necessary that the justice shall personally serve the notice of the day fixed for trial, he ought not to accept the verbal statement of the plaintiff that notice has been served upon the defendant. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022. A mere entry in the justice's docket, that the plaintiff's attorney filed affidavits of service of notice of trial is not evidence that they contained proper proof that the notice had been given to the defendant. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575.

Waiver of notice. Notice of trial may be waived by appearance, not by a conversation over the telephone. Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022. Where a demurrer is filed after default, without first having the default vacated, it confers no right, and does not prevent the justice from setting the case for trial, and trying it without notice to the defendant, as he, being in default, is not entitled to notice. Green v. Rogers, 18 Cal. App. 572; 123 Pac. 974.

Review or certiorari. This section, providing that a justice of the peace must give notice of the day fixed for trial, is imperative, and a judgment, entered without such notice having been first given to the parties, will be set aside, upon a writ of review. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; Elder v. Justice's Court, 136 Cal. 364; 68 Pac. 1022. Certiorari goes only to the jurisdiction or power of the court to act, and cannot be substituted for an appeal to review an erroneous judgment of a justice's court. Armantage v. Superior Court, 1 Cal. App. 130; 81 Pac. 1033. If the requirement of this section, that the justice must fix a day for the trial of the case, and notify the parties who have appeared, is jurisdictional, and the time for appeal has expired before the defendant had notice that the case had been so set, and trial is had and judgment entered against him, it would be a harsh rule which would preclude him from showing, upon certiorari, that he had never had any notice of the trial; because the justice is not required to enter in his docket any minute of the service of notice of the time of trial, nor is he required to file any proof of such service. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849.

Default, what constitutes. A default occurs when the defendant fails to answer or demur as prescribed in this section and § 871, post. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 314; 15 Pac. 849.

CHAPTER III.

PLEADINGS IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 851. Form of pleadings.
§ 852. Pleadings in justices' courts.
§ 853. Complaint defined.
§ 854. When demurrer to complaint may be put in.
§ 855. Answer, what to contain.
§ 856. If the defendant omit to set up counter-claim.
§ 857. When plaintiff may demur to answer.
§ 858. Proceedings on demurrer.
§ 859. Amendment of pleadings.
§ 860. Answer or demurrer to amended pleadings.

§ 851. Form of pleadings. Pleadings in justices' courts—

1. Are not required to be in any particular form, but must be such as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended;
2. May, except the complaint, be oral or in writing;
3. Must not be verified, unless otherwise provided in this title;
4. If in writing, must be filed with the justice;
5. If oral, an entry of their substance must be made in the docket.

Subd. 3. Verified answer. Ante, § 112, subd. 2, § 838.

Legislation § 851. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, §§ 571, 572, which read: "§ 571. The pleadings shall be in writing, and verified by the oath of the party, his agent or attorney, when the action is: 1st. For the foreclosure of any mortgage or the enforcement of any lien on personal property: 2d. For a forcible or unlawful entry upon, or a forcible or unlawful detention of lands, tenements, or other possessions: 3d. To recover possession of a 'mining claim.' In other cases the pleadings may be oral or in writing." "§ 572. When the pleadings are oral, the substance of them shall be entered by the justice in his docket; when in writing they shall be filed in his office, and a reference to them made in the docket. Pleadings shall not be required to be in any particular form, but shall be such as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended."

Form of pleadings sufficient when. A pleading in a justice's court is not required to be in any particular form: it is sufficient if it shows the value of the claim asserted by the plaintiff against the defendant, in such a way as that a person of common understanding may know what was intended. Aucker v. McCoy, 56 Cal. 524.

Construction of pleadings. In construing the pleadings in a justice's court upon a collateral attack upon the judgment, or upon the judgment upon appeal therefrom, the rule excluding conclusions of law as no part of the pleading does not apply; and the court, having jurisdiction of the action, has power to construe the pleadings and determine what facts are put in issue, and its findings and adjudications therein, even if erroneous, cannot be questioned collaterally. Koehler v. Holt Mfg. Co., 146 Cal. 335; 80 Pac. 73.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It is not the policy of the law to confine parties to any nice strictness in pleading before justices of the peace; thus, if a party does not demur to some matter of form, but, instead thereof, goes to trial, it must be considered as cured by the verdict. Cronise v. Carghill, 4 Cal. 120. Pleading in justices' courts must be construed with great liberality; and if the facts stated are sufficient to show the nature of the claim or defense relied upon, nothing further is required. Where it is unnecessary (as in this case) that pleadings should be in writing, it is difficult to lay down any rule for determining their sufficiency. To authorize the reversal of a judgment, the defects complained of should be such as were calculated to mislead the adverse party. Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 374; 76 Am. Dec. 538; Liening v. Gould, 13 Cal. 599. Where an offense is created by statute and a penalty inflicted, it is necessary that the party seeking a recovery should, in general, refer to such statute; but this rule does not apply to pleadings in justices' courts, which are usually without regard to form. O'Callaghan v. Booth, 6 Cal. 66; affirmed in Hart v. Moon, 6 Cal. 162. If the complaint states a good cause of action, but, in addition thereto, contains averments and prays for relief as to matters not within the jurisdiction of the justice, the action should not be dismissed for that reason, but the court should order an amendment and disregard the objectionable matter. Howard v. Valentine, 20 Cal. 282. The pleadings, except the complaint, may be oral or in writing. See § 853, post.

§ 852. Pleadings in justices' courts. The pleadings are:

1. The complaint by the plaintiff;
2. The demurrer to the complaint;
3. The answer by the defendant;
4. The demurrer to the answer.

List of pleadings, generally. Ante, § 422.

Legislation § 852. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 570, which read: "The pleadings in justices' courts shall be: 1st. The complaint by the plaintiff, stating the cause of action: 2d. The answer by the defendant, stating the ground of the defense."

Sufficiency of pleadings. Pleadings in justices' courts are not held to much strictness (Liening v. Gould, 13 Cal. 598); and must be construed with great liberality: if the facts stated are sufficient to show the nature of the claim or defense relied upon, nothing further is required (Stuart v. Lander, 16 Cal. 372; 76 Am. Dec. 538); but, however liberal the rules of pleading may be in such courts, the complaint must state the cause of action relied upon; and in that court, as in every other, the allegations and proof must correspond, and the judgment must be upon the demand and within the pleadings. Terry v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 85; 42 Pac. 464.

Cross-complaint not authorized. In a justice's court, the only pleadings available to a defendant are a demurrer, or an answer to the complaint: a cross-complaint is not authorized. Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31.

§ 853. Complaint defined. The complaint in justices' courts is a concise statement, in writing, of the facts constituting the plaintiff's cause of action; or a copy of the account, note, bill, bond, or instrument upon which the action is based.

Complaint, generally. Ante, § 426.

Legislation § 853. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 573, which read: "The complaint shall state in a plain and direct manner the facts constituting the cause of action."

Copy of account as complaint. A complaint, filed with a justice, purporting to be a copy of an account for money borrowed, is sufficient, under this section, in the absence of a demurrer. Montgomery v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 407; 9 Pac. 720.

Note, or copy thereof, as complaint. A note, with the proper indorsements thereon, filed with a justice, is sufficient as a complaint. Hamilton v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 128. In an action by a bank, in a justice's court, a copy of the note sued on is sufficient; and if the bank is a corporation, in the absence of objection to its want of capacity to sue, by demurrer or answer, all objection thereto is waived. McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' etc. Ass'n, 122 Cal. 468; 68 Am. St. Rep. 47; 55 Pac. 253.

Value of claim stated how. A complaint in a justice's court is sufficient if it shows the value of the claim asserted, in such a way as that a person of common understanding may know what is intended. Aucker v. McCoy, 56 Cal. 524.

Subscription to complaint unnecessary. The complaint, in an action in a justice's court, need not be subscribed by the plaintiff or his attorney. Montgomery v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 407; 9 Pac. 720.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In action for payment of a note, the complaint may consist simply of the note, with the proper indorsement thereon, filed with the justice. Hamilton v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 128.

§ 854. When demurrer to complaint may be put in. The defendant may, at any time before answering, demur to the complaint.

Demurrer, generally. Ante, § 430.

Legislation § 854. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 855. Answer, what to contain. The answer may contain a denial of any or all of the material facts stated in the complaint, which the defendant believes to be untrue, and also a statement, in a plain and direct manner, of any other facts constituting a defense or counterclaim, upon which an action might be brought by the defendant against the plaintiff, or his assignor, in a justice's court.

Answer, generally. Ante, § 437.

Legislation § 855. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 574), (1) adding "or all" after "of any," (2) omitting "a" before "counterclaim," and (3) changing "justices'" to "justice's."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 168; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 880; the code commissioner saying, "The words 'or his assignor' are inserted after the word 'plaintiff.'"

Counterclaim. A pleading that sets up new matter by way of counterclaim is simply an answer. Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31. The defendant in an action in a justice's court cannot set up a counterclaim for a sum exceeding three hundred dollars. Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61; Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259; 42 Pac. 820.

Sufficiency of answer. An answer denying generally the allegations of the complaint conforms substantially to the requirements of the statute (Sullivan v. Cary, 17 Cal. 80); and an answer denying the material allegations of the complaint either generally or specifically, is sufficient. Minturn v. Burr, 20 Cal. 48.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. An answer is sufficient, which denies generally the allegations of the complaint. Sullivan v. Cary, 17 Cal. 80. Even the answer to a verified complaint, in an action in a justice's court, need not controvert specifically the material allegations of such complaint. It is sufficient if the answer deny the material allegations, either generally or specifically. Minturn v. Burr, 20 Cal. 49. The appearance of a defendant, for the purpose of making a motion to dismiss the case on account of a defective summons, does not waive his rights. Had he answered without any objection, then he could not have complained. Deidesheimer v. Brown, 8 Cal. 339. But his rights are not waived by the filing of an answer after he has moved to dismiss and the motion has been overruled. Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 569. A counterclaim, which exceeds three hundred dollars, cannot be set up in answer. Maxfield v.

Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Malson v. Vaughn, 23 Cal. 61. The objection to the jurisdiction of the justice, on the ground of the excess in value of the subject of the controversy, was held to be properly made by the answer, and that objection should be first determined before the justice proceeds to hear the merits of the case. Small v. Gwinn, 6 Cal. 449.

§ 856. If the defendant omit to set up counterclaim. If the defendant omit to set up a counterclaim in the cases mentioned in the last section, neither he nor his assignee can afterwards maintain an action against the plaintiff therefor.

Counterclaim waived, generally. Ante, § 439.
Legislation § 856. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 857. When plaintiff may demur to answer. When the answer contains new matter in avoidance, or constituting a defense or a counterclaim, the plaintiff may, at any time before the trial, demur to the same for insufficiency, stating therein the grounds of such demurrer.

Demurrer to answer, generally. Ante, § 443.
Legislation § 857. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 858. Proceedings on demurrer. The proceedings on demurrer are as follows:

1. If the demurrer to the complaint is sustained, the plaintiff may, within such time, not exceeding two days, as the court allows, amend his complaint;

2. If the demurrer to a complaint is overruled, the defendant may answer forthwith;

3. If the demurrer to an answer is sustained, the defendant may amend his answer within such time, not exceeding two days, as the court may allow;

4. If the demurrer to an answer is overruled, the action must proceed as if no demurrer had been interposed.

Proceedings on demurrer. Compare ante, §§ 472, 636.
Legislation § 858. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of section. This section is controlled by § 874, post, which is general in its terms, in relation to the subject-matter of its provisions. Hall v. Kerrigan, 135 Cal. 4; 66 Pac. 868.

Time allowed for answer. Although the pleadings in a justice's court may be oral, yet they are not required to be so; and there are many instances in which a defense can be better presented by a written pleading; and, as a defendant cannot know in advance whether his demurrer will be sustained or overruled, he ought not to be required to prepare his answer in advance of the hearing upon the demurrer, unless the statute so demands; whether, in any particular case, the court should allow time for the preparation of the answer, after the order upon the demurrer, as well as the time which it will allow, must depend upon the facts of that case, but, so long as it has power to make such an order, its action cannot be disregarded; and as § 874, post, forbids the postponement of the trial for more than two days for this purpose, there cannot, ordinarily, be any abuse of this power. Hall v. Kerrigan, 135 Cal. 4; 66 Pac. 868. Where a demurrer is filed to a complaint in a justice's court, and a day for the hearing thereof is fixed by the justice, and notice is served upon the defendant, as required by § 850, ante, the court has jurisdiction, under this section and § 872, post, upon the failure of the defendant to appear at the hearing, to overrule the demurrer and require the defendant to answer at once, and upon a failure so to answer, to render judgment by default in favor of the plaintiff. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

§ 859. Amendment of pleadings. Either party may, at any time before the conclusion of the trial, amend any pleading; but if the amendment is made after the issue, and it appears to the satisfaction of the court, by oath, that an adjournment is necessary to the adverse party in consequence of such amendment, an adjournment must be granted. The court may also, in its discretion, when an adjournment will by the amendment be rendered necessary, require as a condition to the allowance of such amendment, made after issue joined, the payment of costs to the adverse party, to be fixed by the court, not exceeding twenty dollars. The court may also, on such terms as may be just, and on payment of costs, relieve a party from a judgment by default taken against him by his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, but the application for such relief must be made within ten days after notice of the entry of the judgment and upon an affidavit showing good cause therefor.

Amendment.
1. Generally. Ante, § 473.
2. Adjournment because of. Post, § 874, subd. 2.
Relief from judgments, generally. See ante, § 473.

Legislation § 859. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 580.
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 169; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 254, inserting "notice of" before "the entry."

Construction of sections. Proceedings in superior courts are dealt with in § 473, ante; but this section is a special provision, applicable to justices' courts, and prevails in dealing with the subject of vacating judgments in justices' courts. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Amendment of pleadings. Amendments should be readily allowed, whenever they tend to the furtherance of justice; and the greatest liberality, in this respect, should be extended to pleadings in justices' courts. Butler v. King, 10 Cal. 342.

Application for relief against default judgments. Application for relief against a judgment by default must be by motion, and the mere making of a written application is not sufficient: the attention of the court must be called to it, and the court moved to grant it, or some present action requested, upon notice to the opposite party, before the expiration of the time limited. Spencer v. Branham, 109 Cal. 336; 41 Pac. 1095. The court does not lose jurisdiction to set aside a default by continuing the hearing for further argument. Townsend v. Parker, 21 Cal. App. 317; 131 Pac. 766. Where a default judgment is rendered against the defendant, his motion to set it aside, made more than ten days after notice of the entry of the judgment, is properly denied, although the summons in the action does not name the plaintiff in the action, but another name is inserted therein as plaintiff. Tucker v. Justice's Court, 120 Cal. 512; 52 Pac. 808. Where notice of entry of a default judgment expires on Sunday, the defendant has all of the next day within which to apply for a release from a judgment, on the ground of mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect. Townsend v. Parker, 21 Cal. App. 317; 131 Pac. 766.

Jurisdiction to set aside default judgment. The power given to justices' courts, by this section, to relieve from judgments by default, taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, is expressly confined to judgments by default (Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849; Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; American Type Founders Co. v. Justice's Court, 133 Cal. 319; 65 Pac. 742); and the time is limited to ten days after the entry of such judgments. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849; Simon v. Justice's Court, 127 Cal. 45; 59 Pac. 296; Fast v. Young, 19 Cal. App. 577; 126 Pac. 854. Justices' courts have no power, under this section, to set aside a judgment rendered after a regular trial. Heinlen v. Phillips, 88 Cal. 557; 26 Pac. 366. Where a motion is made, within the time limited, to set aside a default, the court may continue the hearing for argument or further evidence, without loss of jurisdiction. Spencer v. Branham, 109 Cal. 336; 41 Pac. 1095. A judgment entered after a demurrer to the complaint has been overruled and the defendant has failed to answer, may be set aside as a default judgment. Fast v. Young, 19 Cal. App. 577; 126 Pac. 854.

Default judgment voidable when. Where the summons, in an action in a justice's court, is defective, a judgment by default, rendered after personal service on the defendant, is voidable only, and cannot be collaterally attacked. Keybers v. McComber, 67 Cal. 395; 7 Pac. 838. A judgment entered against the defendant by default, before the time for answering has expired, is voidable. Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888.

Collateral attack upon judgment. A judgment of a justice of the peace, against a person who was not served with summons, and did not appear in the action, is in fact void; but if the record shows that the defendant was served and appeared, and the judgment is regular on its face, it cannot be collaterally attacked. Harnish v. Bramer, 71 Cal. 155; 11 Pac. 888.

Equitable relief against judgment. Where legal and equitable relief is dispensed in different tribunals, a court of equity will not grant relief against a judgment, when the same relief can be obtained by the aid of the court that rendered the judgment; but, under the system of procedure in this state, where the various kinds of relief are administered by the same tribunal, and where there is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of civil rights, a party who presents a complaint showing his right to the relief asked is not to be denied that relief because he might have sought it under a different form of action. Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108. Where a motion, in a justice's court, to open a judgment procured by fraud was granted, but, on the following day, the justice, without notice to the plaintiff or his attorney, vacated the order, such subsequent action is equivalent to a denial of the motion, and from this order there was no appeal to the superior court, and equity will relieve against the judgment: the rule under which a court of equity declines to interfere until after an application for relief has been made to the court in which the judgment was rendered has no application when relief has been sought and denied in that court. Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403; 45 Am. St. Rep. 50; 30 L. R. A. 786; 38 Pac. 1108. Where a money judgment was recovered in a justice's court, but the causes of action set out in the case were barred by limitation before the commencement of an action for relief against such judgment, and there is nothing to show that the plaintiff in the justice's court case was guilty of any fraud in the procurement of the judgment, it would be inequitable to set aside the judgment without a showing that there was a good defense to the justice's court action. Burbridge v. Rauer, 146 Cal. 21; 79 Pac. 526. A complaint for an injunction to restrain the enforcement of a judgment in a justice's court, from which it appears that the grounds therefor were known to the plaintiff within a week after the verdict against him, and that he negligently failed to avail himself of the remedy therefor by appeal within the time limited by law, does not state a cause of action for the interference of a court of equity. Hollenbeck v. McCoy, 127 Cal. 21; 59 Pac. 201. An injunction does not lie to restrain the enforcement of an execution issued on a judgment by default, rendered in a justice's court, which is void on its face for the reason that the court never acquired jurisdiction of the person of the defendant: in such case, there is an adequate remedy at law, by motion in the justice's court to set aside the execution. Luco v. Brown, 73 Cal. 3; 2 Am. St. Rep. 772; 14 Pac. 366. The enforcement of a judgment by default, rendered in a justice's court, will not be restrained in equity on the ground that the same was taken through the inadvertence and excusable neglect of the judgment debtor, after a motion made by him in the justice's court, under this section, to be relieved from the judgment, on such ground, has been denied. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 230; 17 Pac. 198.

Certiorari. Where a motion is made, under this section, before the expiration of ten days, to set aside a judgment by default, and for leave to answer, and the motion is denied, the order denying the motion will not be reviewed on certiorari, although erroneous, where the justice had jurisdiction. Reagan v. Justice's Court, 75 Cal. 253; 17 Pac. 195. Under this section, a justice's court has no power to vacate its judgments, other than judgments by default, and an order attempting so to do, not being appealable, will be annulled on certiorari. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849. On certiorari to annul an order vacating a default judgment entered by a justice, the superior court, if satisfied that the justice had power to make the order, should affirm it, instead of dismissing the proceedings. Fast v. Young, 19 Cal. App. 577; 126 Pac. 854.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This section was amended so as to read as published in the text, by act of April 1, 1872. Amendments should be readily allowed, and the greatest liberality in this respect should be extended to pleadings in justices' courts. Butler v. King, 10 Cal. 343. And this, whether the defect be the statement of jurisdictional or any other fact. Amendments in all respects should be allowed, so that the case may be determined on its merits. Linhart v. Buiff, 11 Cal. 280.

§ 860. Answer or demurrer to amended pleadings. When a pleading is amended, the adverse party may answer or demur to it within such time, not exceeding two days, as the court may allow.

Time to plead. Compare ante, § 432.

Legislation § 860. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CHAPTER IV.

PROVISIONAL REMEDIES IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

Article I. Arrest and Bail. §§ 861–865.
II. Attachment. §§ 866–869.
III. Claim and Delivery of Personal Property. § 870.

ARTICLE I.

ARREST AND BAIL.

§ 861. Order of arrest, and arrest of defendant.
§ 862. Affidavit and undertaking for order of arrest.
§ 863. A defendant arrested must be taken before the justice immediately.
§ 864. The officer must give notice to the plaintiff of arrest.
§ 865. The officer must detain the defendant.

§ 861. Order of arrest, and arrest of defendant. An order to arrest the defendant may be indorsed on a summons issued by the justice, and the defendant may be arrested thereon by the sheriff or constable, at the time of serving the summons, and brought before the justice, and there detained until duly discharged, in the following cases:

1. In an action for the recovery of money or damages on a cause of action arising upon contract, express or implied, when the defendant is about to depart from the state, with intent to defraud his creditors;

2. In an action for a fine or penalty, or for money or property embezzled or fraudulently misapplied, or converted to his own use by one who received it in a fiduciary capacity;

3. When the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt or incurring the obligation for which the action is brought;

4. When the defendant has removed, concealed, or disposed of his property, or is about to do so, with intent to defraud his creditors.

But no female can be arrested in any action.

Arrest and bail. Ante, §§ 478 et seq.

Mesne and final process of justices' courts may be issued to any part of the county. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 861. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 544), (1) omitting, in introductory paragraph, "arising after the passage of this act," after "following cases"; (2) omitting from end of subd. 1, "or where the action is for a willful injury to the person, or for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property"; (3) in subd. 2, substituting "one who received it" for "an attorney, factor, broker, agent, or clerk, in the course of his employment as such, or by any other person"; (4) in subd. 4, substituting "can" for "shall" before "be arrested."

Proof necessary before order. Before an order of arrest can be made by a justice of the peace, in an action to recover a debt, it must be proved that a cause of action exists upon a contract, express or implied, and that a case of fraud exists, within the terms of the statute. In re Vinich, 86 Cal. 70; 26 Pac. 528. An order of arrest in a civil action may be issued by a justice of the peace, upon the facts necessary to authorize the order. Application of La Due, 161 Cal. 632; 120 Pac. 13. The proof required, before an order of arrest can be made by a justice of the peace, in an action to recover a debt, is jurisdictional. In re Vinich, 86 Cal. 70; 26 Pac. 528.

Female cannot be arrested. A woman cannot be arrested upon process issued in a civil action. Nelson v. Kellogg, 162 Cal. 621; Ann. Cas. 1913D, 759; 123 Pac. 1115.

§ 862. Affidavit and undertaking for order of arrest. Before an order for an arrest can be made, the party applying must prove to the satisfaction of the justice by the affidavit of himself, or some other person, the facts upon which the application is founded. The plaintiff must also execute and deliver to the justice a written undertaking in the sum of three hundred dollars, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be adjudged to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, if the same be wrongful, or without sufficient cause, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking.

Affidavit and undertaking for arrest. Compare ante, §§ 481, 482.

Qualification of sureties. Post, § 1057.

Legislation § 862. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 545, which read: "Before an order for an arrest shall be made, the party applying shall prove to the satisfaction of the justice, by the affidavit of himself or some other person, the facts on which the application is founded. The plaintiff shall also execute and deliver to the justice a written undertaking, with two or more sureties, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, the plaintiff will pay to him all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the arrest, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking, which shall be at least two hundred dollars." When § 862 was enacted in 1872, (1) "can" was substituted for "shall" after "arrest," and "must" for "shall" after "applying" and after "plaintiff"; (2) "in the sum of three hundred dollars" was inserted after "undertaking," and (3) "which shall be at least two hundred dollars" was omitted at end of section.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 334, (1) substituting "sufficient sureties" for "two or more sureties," (2) omitting "if the defendant recover judgment" before "the plaintiff," (3) substituting "adjudge" for "awarded," and (4) inserting, after "by reason of the arrest," "if the same be wrongful or without sufficient cause."

Affidavit must state what. The affidavit for an order of arrest must state the facts constituting the fraud charged, by way of direct averment, and not upon information and belief. In re Vinich, 86 Cal. 70; 26 Pac. 528.

Want of jurisdiction to make order of arrest. An affidavit showing that an action has been begun for the recovery of an "alleged" indebtedness, but containing no averment that such indebtedness or any cause of action exists, is fundamentally defective, and leaves the court without jurisdiction to make an order of arrest, for want of proof of the cause of action. In re Vinich, 86 Cal. 70; 26 Pac. 528.

§ 863. A defendant arrested must be taken before the justice immediately. The defendant immediately upon being arrested, must be taken to the office of the justice who made the order, and if he is absent or unable to try the action, or if it appears to him by the affidavit of the defendant that he is a material witness in the action, the officer must immediately take the defendant before another justice of the township or city, if there is another, and if not, then before the justice of an adjoining township, who must take jurisdiction of the action, and proceed thereon, as if the summons had been issued and the order of arrest made by him.

Legislation § 863. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 546), substituting (1) "must" for "shall" after "arrested," (2) "is" for "be" after "absent," (3) "be made to appear" for "appears," (4) "must" for "shall" after "officer," (5) "another" for "the next" after "justice," (6) "township or city, if there is another and if not, then before the justice of an adjoining township, who must take jurisdiction of the action," for "city or township, who shall take cognizance of the action."

§ 864. The officer must give notice to the plaintiff of arrest. The officer making the arrest must immediately give notice thereof to the plaintiff, or his attorney or agent, and indorse on the summons, and subscribe a certificate, stating the time of serving the same, the time of the arrest, and of his giving notice to the plaintiff.

Legislation § 864. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 547), changing "must" from "shall."

§ 865. The officer must detain the defendant. The officer making the arrest must keep the defendant in custody until he is discharged by order of the justice.

Legislation § 865. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 548), changing (1) "the" from "an" before "arrest," (2) "must" from "shall," and (3) "he is" from "duly" before "discharged."

ARTICLE II.

ATTACHMENT.

§ 866. Issue of writ of attachment.
§ 867. Attachment, undertaking on. Exceptions to sureties.
§ 868. Writ of attachment, substance of. Officer may take an undertaking instead of levying.
§ 869. Certain provisions apply to all attachments in justices' courts.

§ 866. Issue of writ of attachment. A writ to attach the property of the defendant must be issued by the justice at the time of, or after issuing summons in actions in which the sum claimed exclusive of interest exceeds ten dollars, on receiving an affidavit by or on behalf of the plaintiff, showing the same facts as are required to be shown by the affidavit specified in section five hundred and thirty-eight.

Attachment, generally. Ante, §§ 537 et seq.

Mesne and final process of justices' courts may be issued to any part of the county. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 866. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 552, as amended by Stats. 1858, p. 154, which read: "§ 552. A writ to attach the property of the defendant shall be issued by the justice, on receiving an affidavit by or on behalf of the plaintiff, showing the same facts as are required to be shown by the affidavit specified in section one hundred and twenty-one of this act." When § 866 was enacted in 1872, (1) "must" was substituted for "shall," (2) "at the time of, or after issuing summons and before answer," was inserted after "justice," and (3) "538 of this code" was substituted for "one hundred and twenty-one of this act."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 169; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 880; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment omits 'and before answer' after the word 'summons,' to bring the section into harmony with § 537."

4. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 399, (1) striking out the commas after the words "after" and "summons," and (2) after the latter word, adding the phrase, "in actions in which the sum claimed exclusive of interest exceeds ten dollars."

Validity of attachment. Where the defendant absents himself so that summons cannot be served on him before return-day thereof, and it is returned not served, the attachment is not vitiated. Seaver v. Fitzgerald, 23 Cal. 85. Where the summons is unauthorized and void, an attachment issued in the cause is also void. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641.

Application of section to trespassing animals. All the provisions of this code relating to attachment process apply to actions against the owner to recover damages for injuries caused by trespassing animals, subject only to the modification, that, instead of filing the affidavit required by this section and § 538, ante, the plaintiff is entitled to the issuance of a writ of attachment against the property of the defendant upon filing his complaint stating a cause of action, verified according to law. Wigmore v. Buell, 122 Cal. 144; 54 Pac. 600.

Lien as affecting attachment. Under the act of March 7, 1878, a plaintiff who seeks to recover for injuries caused by trespassing animals is not deprived of his remedy by attachment thereafter, upon the ground that he has a continuing lien upon the animals. Wigmore v. Buell, 122 Cal. 144; 54 Pac. 600.

§ 867. Attachment, undertaking on. Exceptions to sureties. Before issuing the writ, the justice must require a written undertaking on the part of the plaintiff, with two or more sufficient sureties, in a sum not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars, to the effect that if the defendant recovers judgment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking. At any time after the issuing of the attachment, but not later than five days after notice of its levy, the defendant may except to the sufficiency of the sureties. If he fails to do so, he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When excepted to they must justify in the manner and within the time provided in section five hundred and thirty-nine, otherwise the justice must order the writ of attachment vacated.

Undertaking on attachment, generally. Ante, § 539.

Legislation § 867. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 553, as amended by Stats. 1871–72, p. 75.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 169; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 880, (1) substituting "recovers" for "recover" before "judgment," and (2) adding the last three sentences; the code commissioner saying, "The last sentence is added, to provide for the exception to, and justification by, sureties or undertakings in attachments in justice's courts."

Undertaking is necessary. The attachment is unauthorized and void, unless issued in substantial conformity with the provisions of the statute, including the undertaking required to be given. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 641.

Validity of undertaking. The attachment bond is the antecedent of the attachment, and accompanies, in point of time, the affidavit, which must be made before the writ is issued; the bond depends for its legal effect upon the writ, and if no writ is issued, the bond is null and void; it can have no effect, except as connected with the attachment, and they must exist together; hence, an attachment bond, executed after the writ has been levied, and the attachment dismissed, is void. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332. Where a justice issues an attachment, and takes a bond in a suit for a sum exceeding his jurisdiction, the proceedings are void, and no action lies on the bond. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 251; 56 Am. Dec. 332.

Appeal bond. An undertaking on attachment, given months prior to the appeal, and securing damages and costs on appeal, is not the bond required by statute for costs on appeal. Stimpson Computing Scale Co. v. Superior Court, 12 Cal. App. 536; 107 Pac. 1013.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The provision that the justice must require two or more securities, in a sum not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars, is new. If a justice order the issuance of an attachment, and takes bond in an action for a sum in excess of his jurisdiction, the proceedings are void, and no suit can be maintained upon the bond. Benedict v. Bray, 2 Cal. 254; 56 Am. Dec. 332. Under § 553 of the old Practice Act, which did not fix the amount of the bond nor contain the words "not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking," it was held that the undertaking was required to be to the effect that the plaintiff would pay costs and all damages, etc., without any limitation whatever as to amount; and if the undertaking had been conditioned to pay all damages not exceeding a certain sum, it would have been therefore unauthorized and void, as not conforming to the statute. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 646. The addition of the words, "not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking," of course modify this decision. An attachment is unauthorized and void, unless issued in substantial conformity with the provisions of the statute. Hisler v. Carr, 34 Cal. 646; Homan v. Brinckerhoff, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 184; Davis v. Marshall, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 96.

§ 868. Writ of attachment, substance of. Officer may take an undertaking instead of levying. The writ may be directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county in which such justice court is situate, and must require him to attach and safely keep all the property of the defendant within his county, not exempt from execution, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's demand, the amount of which must be stated in conformity with the complaint, unless the defendant give him security, by the undertaking of two sufficient sureties, in an amount sufficient to satisfy such demand, besides costs; in which case, to take such undertaking.

Several writs may be issued at the same time to the sheriffs or constables of different counties; provided, that where a writ of attachment issued by a justice of the peace is to be served out of the county in which it was issued, the writ of attachment shall have attached to it a certificate under seal, by the county clerk of such county, to the effect that the person issuing the same was an acting justice of the peace of said county, at the date of the writ.

Contents of writ. Compare ante, § 540.

Legislation § 868. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 554. Compare infra.

2. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 208, (1) in first clause, substituting "in which such justice court is situate" for "or the sheriff of any other county"; (2) adding the second sentence.

3. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 112, (1) making a paragraph of second sentence, and (2) inserting therein "or constables," after "sheriffs."

§ 869. Certain provisions apply to all attachments in justices' courts. The sections of this code from section five hundred and forty-one to section five hundred and fifty-nine, both inclusive, are applicable to attachments issued in justices' courts, the word "constable" being substituted for the word "sheriff," whenever the writ is directed to a constable, and the word "justice" being substituted for the word "judge."

12. Effect of judgment for defendant. § 553.
13. Discharge of attachment. §§ 554–558.
14. Sheriff's return. § 559.
15. Releasing attachment. §§ 559, 560.

Legislation § 869. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 555), substituting (1) "code" for "act," (2) "541 to section 559" for "one hundred and twenty-four to section one hundred and forty-one," and (3) "are" for "shall be" before "applicable."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See notes to §§ 541–559, ante, inclusive.

ARTICLE III.

CLAIM AND DELIVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

§ 870. How claim and delivery enforced.

§ 870. How claim and delivery enforced. In an action to recover possession of personal property, the plaintiff may, at the time of issuing summons or at any time thereafter before answer, claim the delivery of such property to him; and the sections of this code from section five hundred and ten to section five hundred and twenty-one, both inclusive, are applicable to such claim when made in justices' courts, the powers therein given and duties imposed on sheriffs being extended to constables, and the word "justice" substituted for "judge."

Claim and delivery of personalty in superior court.

1. Affidavit for claim and delivery. § 510.
2. Requisition to sheriff to take property claimed. § 511.
3. Undertaking by plaintiff. § 512.
4. Exception to sureties by defendant. § 513.
5. Defendant claiming redelivery. § 514.

9. Property, how kept. § 518.
10. Claim by third person. § 519.
11. Sheriff to file notice, affidavit, etc. § 520.
12. Actions on undertaking. § 521 (repealed by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 306).

Legislation § 870. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CHAPTER V.

JUDGMENT BY DEFAULT IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 871. Judgment when defendant fails to appear. § 872. Judgment against defendant on demurrer.

§ 871. Judgment when defendant fails to appear. If the defendant fail to appear, and to answer or demur within the time specified in the summons, then, upon proof of service of summons, the following proceedings must be had:

1. If the action is based upon a contract, and is for the recovery of money, or damages only, the court must render judgment in favor of plaintiff for the sum specified in the summons.

2. In all other actions the court must hear the evidence offered by the plaintiff, and must render judgment in his favor for such sum (not exceeding the amount stated in the summons), as appears by such evidence to be just.

Default judgment, generally. Ante, § 585.

Legislation § 871. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, (1) the introductory paragraph then reading, "When the defendant fails to appear and answer or demur, at the time specified in the summons, or within one hour thereafter, then, upon proof of service of the summons, the following proceedings must be had," and (2) subds. 1 and 2 reading as at present, except that subd. 2 had the article "a" before the word "sum."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 100, (1) changing the introductory paragraph to read, "If the defendant fails to appear and answer, or demurs at the time specified in the summons, then, upon proof of service of summons, the following proceedings must be had," and (2) in subd. 2, omitting "a" before "sum."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 113.

Construction of section. This section is controlled by § 874, post, which is general in its terms. Hall v. Kerrigan, 135 Cal. 4; 66 Pac. 868.

Default is made when. A default is made when the defendant fails to answer or demur, as described in § 850, ante, and in this chapter. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849.

Right to judgment by default. Upon a sufficient statement of his cause of action, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment for the amount demanded, where the defendant fails to appear and answer the complaint. Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636; 6 Pac. 737. Where the return affords some evidence that the copy of the complaint served was a copy of the complaint in the action, the court will not say that the proof in this regard was not sufficient to authorize the justice to render a judgment by default. Cardwell v. Sabichi, 59 Cal. 490.

Default judgment after eight years. This section does not require a judgment by default to be entered within any prescribed time: the justice may enter a default judgment after a delay of eight years from the return of service of summons. Hall v. Justice's Court, 5 Cal. App. 133; 87 Pac. 870.

Entry of non-appearance in docket. See notes post, §§ 911, 912.

Default judgment rendered by justice of the peace on process served less than required time as void or voidable. See note 8 Ann. Cas. 1142.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 890, post; O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 316.

§ 872. Judgment against defendant on demurrer. In the following cases the same proceedings must be had, and judgment must be rendered in like manner, as if the defendant had failed to appear and answer or demur:

1. If the complaint has been amended, and the defendant fails to answer it as amended, within the time allowed by the court;

2. If the demurrer to the complaint is overruled, and the defendant fails to answer at once;

3. If the demurrer to the answer is sustained, and the defendant fails to amend the answer within the time allowed by the court.

Compare ante, § 858.

Legislation § 872. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Defendant must answer at once. Under this section, and § 858, ante, the defendant may answer forthwith, upon the overruling of his demurrer; but if he fails to answer "at once," the justice is authorized, if no issue of fact is presented for trial, to render judgment by default in favor of the plaintiff. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

Defendant cannot claim time to answer. There is no provision in the code requiring a justice of the peace to allow the defendant any time within which to answer the complaint, where his demurrer is overruled, or to give to him any notice of that fact. Stewart v. Justice's Court, 109 Cal. 616; 42 Pac. 158.

Effect of default judgment as to one defendant. In an action in a justice's court against a number of stockholders of a corporation to enforce their individual liability for the indebtedness of the corporation to the plaintiff, there may possibly be as many diverse issues made, and as many trials had, resulting in several judgments, as there are several defendants; and proof made and judgment rendered against a defaulting defendant cannot operate as a dismissal of the action against answering defendants, nor affect the jurisdiction of the court to try the cause as to them. Grimwood v. Barry, 118 Cal. 274; 50 Pac. 430.

Default judgment, what constitutes. A judgment entered after a demurrer to the complaint has been overruled and the defendant has failed to answer, may be treated as a default judgment. Fast v. Young, 19 Cal. App. 577; 126 Pac. 854.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 851–860, inclusive, ante, and notes.

CHAPTER VI.

TIME OF TRIAL AND POSTPONEMENTS IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 873. Time when trial must be commenced.
§ 874. When court may, of its own motion, postpone trial.
§ 875. Postponement by consent.
§ 876. Postponement upon application of a party.
§ 877. No continuance for more than ten days to be granted, unless upon filing of undertaking.

§ 873. Time when trial must be commenced. Unless postponed, as provided in this chapter, or unless transferred to another court, the trial of the action must commence at the expiration of one hour from the time specified in the notice mentioned in section eight hundred and fifty, and the trial must be continued, without adjournment for more than twenty-four hours at any one time, until all the issues therein are disposed of.

Legislation § 873. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1875–76, p. 100, substituting "notice mentioned in section eight hundred and fifty" for "summons for the appearance of defendant."

Notice of hearing. The provision in this section, that the trial must commence one hour from the time specified in the notice referred to, implies that such notice should be given in writing and form part of the record, and that there should be an entry thereof, and also of the mode in which it is given, in the justice's docket, so that there may be affirmative evidence of his authority to render a judgment. Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575.

Mandamus to compel justice to proceed with trial. If a justice of the peace should refuse to proceed with the trial of a case as required by this section, the remedy would be, to obtain a writ of mandate compelling him forthwith to proceed with such trial; but upon the service of such a writ he would still have a right to entertain a motion for a further continuance, and if sufficient cause were shown therefor in accordance with the provisions of the code, he would be justified in granting it. Whaley v. King, 92 Cal. 431; 28 Pac. 579.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 833, 859, 876, ante.

§ 874. When court may, of its own motion, postpone trial. The court may, of its own motion, postpone the trial—

1. For not exceeding one day, if, at the time fixed by law or by an order of the court for the trial, the court is engaged in the trial of another action;

2. For not exceeding two days, if, by an amendment of the pleadings, or the allowance of time to make such amendment or to plead, a postponement is rendered necessary;

3. For not exceeding three days, if the trial is upon issues of fact, and a jury has been demanded.

Amendment of pleadings, etc. Ante, §§ 858, 859.

Legislation § 874. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of section. The provision in this section, by which the court may postpone the trial if postponement is necessary by reason of allowance of time "to plead," must have been intended to have some effect, and must refer to a pleading that has not yet been made or filed; and it implies that the court may allow a party time, not to exceed two days, within which to file an original pleading, when he has no such pleading on file; being general in its terms, this section controls the provisions of §§ 858, 871, 872, ante. Hall v. Kerrigan, 135 Cal. 4; 66 Pac. 868.

Divestiture of jurisdiction. The granting, by a justice's court, of a continuance for a few hours, at the defendant's request, the plaintiff being ready and desirous to proceed with the trial, if it be an error against the plaintiff, cannot operate as a discontinuance of the action to the plaintiff's prejudice; nor can any error in refusing a further continuance upon the affidavit of the defendant divest the court of jurisdiction. Disque v. Herrington, 139 Cal. 1; 72 Pac. 336.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 833, 859, 876, ante.

§ 875. Postponement by consent. The court may, by consent of the parties, given in writing or in open court, postpone the trial to a time agreed upon by the parties.

Legislation § 875. Enacted March 11, 1872.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 833, 859, 876, ante.

§ 876. Postponement upon application of a party. The trial may be postponed upon the application of either party, for a period not exceeding four months:

1. The party making the application must prove, by his own oath or otherwise, that he cannot, for want of material testimony, which he expects to procure, safely proceed to trial, and must show in what respect the testimony expected is material, and that he has used due diligence to procure it, and has been unable to do so;

2. If the application is on the part of the plaintiff, and the defendant is under arrest, a postponement for more than three hours discharges the defendant from custody, but the action may proceed notwithstanding, and the defendant is subject to arrest on execution, in the same manner as if he had not been discharged;

3. If the application is on the part of a defendant under arrest, before it can be granted he must execute an undertaking, with two or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by, and in a sum to be fixed by, the justice, to the effect that he will render himself amenable to the process of the court during the pendency of the action, and to such as may be issued to enforce the judgment therein; or that the sureties will pay to the plaintiff the amount of any judgment which he may recover in the action, not exceeding the amount specified in the undertaking. On filing the undertaking specified in this subdivision, the justice must order the defendant to be discharged from custody;

4. The party making the application must, if required by the adverse party, consent that the testimony of any witness of such adverse party, who is in attendance, may be then taken by deposition before the justice, and that the testimony so taken may be read on the trial, with the same effect, and subject to the same objections, as if the witness was produced;

—But the court may require the party making the application to state, upon affidavit, the evidence which he expects to obtain; and if the adverse party thereupon admits that such evidence would be given, and that it be considered as actually given on the trial, or offered and overruled as improper, the trial must not be postponed.

Postponement.
1. Generally. Ante, § 595.
2. Costs of. Post, § 1029.
Arrest and bail. Ante, §§ 478 et seq.

Legislation § 876. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Practice before justice for obtaining of continuance for illness of party. See note 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 669.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 833, 859, ante.

§ 877. No continuance for more than ten days to be granted, unless upon filing of undertaking. No adjournment must, unless by consent, be granted for a period longer than ten days, upon the application of either party, except upon condition that such party file an undertaking, in an amount fixed by the justice, with two sureties, to be approved by the justice, to the effect that they will pay to the opposite party the amount of any judgment which may be recovered against the party applying, not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking.

Legislation § 877. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 585), (1) substituting "must, unless by consent" for "shall," (2) inserting "in an amount fixed by the justice" after "undertaking," (3) inserting "two" before "sureties," and (4) adding at end of section "not exceeding the sum specified in the undertaking."

TRIALS IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 878. Issue defined, and the different kinds.
§ 879. Issue of law, how raised.
§ 880. Issue of fact, how raised.
§ 881. Issue of law, how tried.
§ 882. Issue of fact, how tried.

§ 885. Challenges to jurors.
§ 886. Manner of pleading a written instrument.
§ 887. Complaint, when accompanying instrument deemed genuine.

§ 878. Issue defined, and the different kinds. Issues arise upon the pleadings when a fact or conclusion of law is maintained by the one party and is controverted by the other. They are of two kinds:

1. Of law; and,
2. Of fact.

Compare §§ 878–880 with §§ 588–590, ante.
Legislation § 878. Enacted March 11, 1872.
Title to land is involved when. See note post, § 976.
Issue of fact arises when. When the answer is filed, an issue of fact arises as to all allegations in the complaint controverted by the answer, and "upon any new matter in the answer." Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31.

§ 879. Issue of law, how raised. An issue of law arises upon a demurrer to the complaint or answer, or to some part thereof.

Identical statute. Ante, § 589.
Legislation § 879. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 880. Issue of fact, how raised. An issue of fact arises—

1. Upon a material allegation in the complaint controverted by the answer; and,

2. Upon new matter in the answer, except an issue of law is joined thereon.

Identical statute. Ante, § 590.
Legislation § 880. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 881. Issue of law, how tried. An issue of law must be tried by the court.

Compare ante, § 591.
Legislation § 881. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 882. Issue of fact, how tried. An issue of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a jury is waived, in which case it must be tried by the court.

Compare ante, § 592.
Legislation § 882. Enacted March 11, 1872.
Number of jurors necessary to verdict in justice's court. See note 43 L. R. A. 51.

§ 883. Jury, how waived. A jury may be waived—

1. By consent of parties, entered in the docket;

2. By a failure of either party to demand a jury before the commencement of the trial of an issue of fact;

3. By the failure of either party to appear at the time fixed for the trial of an issue of fact.

Waiver of jury. Compare ante, § 631.
Legislation § 883. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 884. Either party failing to appear, trial may proceed at request of other party. If either party fails to appear at the time fixed for trial, the trial may proceed at the request of the adverse party.

Compare ante, § 594.
Legislation § 884. Enacted March 11, 1872.
Evidence necessary. Where the defendant fails to appear at the trial, the justice may proceed at the request of the plaintiff, but he should not, without any evidence, render a judgment in favor of plaintiff if the answer denies the averments of the complaint: such judgment would be erroneous. Curtis v. Superior Court, 63 Cal. 435.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to § 871, ante.

§ 885. Challenges to jurors. The challenges are either peremptory or for cause. Each party is entitled to three peremptory challenges. Either party may challenge for cause on any grounds set forth in section six hundred and two. Challenges for cause must be tried by the justice.

Challenges. Compare ante, §§ 601, 602.
Legislation § 885. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 590, which read: "Either party may challenge the jurors. The challenges shall be either peremptory, or for cause. Each party shall be entitled to three peremptory challenges. Either party may challenge for cause, on any grounds set forth in section one hundred and sixty-two. Challenges for cause shall be tried by the justice in a summary manner, who may examine the juror challenged, and witnesses."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The manner of summoning and impaneling juries in justices' courts is provided for in §§ 230, 231, 232, 251, of this code.

§ 886. Manner of pleading a written instrument. When the cause of action or counterclaim arises upon an account or instrument for the payment of money only, the court, at any time before the trial, may, by an order under his hand, require the original to be exhibited to the inspection of, and a copy to be furnished to, the adverse party, at such time as may be fixed in the order; or, if such order is not obeyed, the account or instrument cannot be given in evidence.

Order for inspection. Post, § 1000.
Delivering copy of account. See ante, § 454.

Legislation § 886. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 576, which read: "When the cause of action or counterclaim arises upon an account or instrument for the payment of money only, it shall be sufficient for the party to deliver a copy of the account or instrument to the court, and to state that there is due to him thereupon, from the adverse party, a specified sum, which he claims to recover or set off. The court may, at the time of the pleading, require that the original account or instrument be exhibited to the inspection of the adverse party, and a copy to be furnished; or if it be not so exhibited and a copy furnished, may prohibit its being afterwards given in evidence."

§ 887. Complaint, when accompanying instrument deemed genuine. If the complaint of the plaintiff, or the answer of the defendant, contains a copy, or consists of the original of the written obligation upon which the action is brought or the defense founded, the genuineness and due execution of such instrument are deemed admitted, unless the answer denying the same is verified, or unless the plaintiff, within two days after the service on him of such answer, files with the justice an affidavit denying the same, and serves a copy thereof on the defendant.

Compare ante, §§ 447, 448, 853.
Written instrument, denial of, under oath. See ante, §§ 447, 448.

Legislation § 887. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 577, as amended by Stats. 1854, p. 68 [96], which read: "If the plaintiff annex to his complaint or file with the justice at the time of issuing the summons, a copy of the promissory note, bill of exchange, or other written obligation for the payment of money upon which the action is brought, the defendant shall be deemed to admit the genuineness of the signatures of the makers, indorsers, or assignors thereof, unless he specifically deny the same in his answer, and verifying [sic] the answer by his oath." When § 887 was enacted in 1872, (1) "the original or" was inserted before "a copy," (2) "is" was substituted for "shall be" before "deemed," and (3) "verify" was substituted for "verifying."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 169; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 880; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment requires the same proceeding to deny the genuineness of a written instrument when made part of an answer as when part of a complaint in a justice's court."

CHAPTER VIII.

JUDGMENTS (OTHER THAN BY DEFAULT) IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 889. Judgment by confession.
§ 890. Judgment of dismissal entered in certain cases without prejndice.
§ 891. Judgment upon verdict.
§ 892. Entry of judgment in thirty days.
§ 893. Judgment. Form. What must state, where defendant subject to arrest. Service and entry.
§ 894. If the sum found due exceeds the jurisdiction of the justice, the excess may be remitted.
§ 895. Offer to compromise before trial.
§ 896. Costs may be included in the judgment.
§ 897. Abstract of judgment.
§ 898. Abstract may be filed and docketed in superior court.
§ 899. Effect of docketing.
§ 900. Judgment no lien unless recorded.

§ 889. Judgment by confession. Judgments upon confession may be entered up in any justice's court specified in the confession.

Confession of judgment.
1. Generally. Post, §§ 1132–1135.
2. Jurisdiction. Ante, § 112, subd. 6.

Legislation § 889. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 536), (1) substituting "judgments" for "judgment," and (2) omitting "in the state" before "specified."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. It was held that a judgment upon confession cannot be entered up for three hundred dollars or more, as justices have no jurisdiction where the amount in controversy exceeds that amount, and consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction. Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 77. The jurisdiction of the justice's court is determined by the amount in controversy, and not by the amount of the judgment. In addition to the amount in controversy, costs and interest may be included in the judgment, and it seems that the judgment will not for that reason be void, and in such cases may exceed the sum of three hundred dollars. See Bradley v. Kent, 22 Cal. 171; and particularly Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 628; and Will v. Sinkwitz, 39 Cal. 570. In Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 633, where a judgment was rendered by a justice of the peace for the principal and interest due on a note, and also a further sum of fifty per cent on the amount of such principal and interest, in pursuance of a stipulation contained in a note authorizing the allowance of the fifty per cent additional, which latter sum, when added to the principal and interest, exceeded in amount the sum of three hundred dollars, and such judgment was held void, as exceeding the jurisdiction of the justice, the fifty per cent additional was not in the nature of interest, and hence could not be added to the judgment. Reed v. Bernal, 40 Cal. 633. See, as to these matters of jurisdiction, § 44, ante, note 6; also § 86, ante, note 4, and § 114, note 7, where the phrase "amount in controversy" is defined, and the amounts for which judgments may be entered by justices' and county courts is discussed.

§ 890. Judgment of dismissal entered in certain cases without prejudice. Judgment that the action be dismissed, without prejudice to a new action, may be entered with costs, in the following cases:

1. When the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses the action before it is finally submitted; or fails to prosecute the action to judgment with reasonable diligence; provided a counterclaim has not been made, or affirmative relief sought by the cross-complaint or answer of the defendant; if a provisional remedy has been allowed, the undertaking must thereupon be delivered by the justice of the peace to the defendant who may have his action thereon;

2. When he fails to appear at the time specified in the summons, or at the time to which the action has been postponed, or within one hour thereafter;

3. When, after a demurrer to the complaint has been sustained, the plaintiff fails to amend it within the time allowed by the court;

4. When the action is brought in the wrong county, or township, or city.

Dismissal. Compare ante, § 581.

Legislation § 890. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 591, (1) the introductory paragraph reading as at present; (2) subd. 1 ended with the words "finally submitted"; (3) subd. 2 read, "When he fails to appear at the time specified in the summons, or upon adjournment, or within one hour thereafter"; (4) subd. 3 (the present subd. 4) read, "When it is objected at the trial, and appears by the evidence, that the action is brought in the wrong county, or township, or city; but if the objection be taken and overruled, it shall be cause only of reversal on appeal, and shall not otherwise invalidate the judgment; if not taken at the trial, it shall be deemed waived, and shall not be cause of reversal," the Practice Act section ending with these words. When § 890 was enacted in 1872, (1) subd. 2 was changed to read as at present; (2) the present subd. 3 was added; (3) Practice Act subd. 3 was renumbered subd. 4, and (a) "be" changed to "is" before "taken," (b) "shall be" changed to "is" before "cause," (c) "shall be deemed" changed to "does" before "not otherwise," and (d) after "the trial," the words "it is waived" substituted as the final words.

2. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 44.

Construction of section. This section must be considered in connection with § 832, ante; and it provides for a mode of waiving objection to the jurisdiction, fully as effective as a voluntary appearance without summons. McGorray v. Superior Court, 141 Cal. 266; 74 Pac. 853. It limits the causes for which a judgment of dismissal may be entered; and the plaintiff's failure to establish his case by satisfactory evidence is not one of those causes. Peacock v. Superior Court, 163 Cal. 701; 126 Pac. 976. The provision of § 581, ante, for the dismissal of an action for failure to serve and return the summons within three years, does not apply to justices' courts. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Decision sustaining demurrer to complaint. The action of a justice of the peace in sustaining a demurrer to the complaint does not constitute a judgment of the court; and where there is no trial upon the merits, such action is but an order in regard to the sufficiency of the complaint, and not a judgment: an order upon a demurrer is only a decision upon the correctness or sufficiency of practice in seeking to obtain a judgment, and is not itself a judgment; but if a judgment is afterwards entered upon such order, it must be that the action be dismissed without prejudice to a new action; hence, the decision sustaining the demurrer is not a bar to a subsequent action in the superior court. Sivers v. Sivers, 97 Cal. 518; 32 Pac. 571.

Jurisdiction, waiver of objection to. Under the terms of the fourth subdivision of this section, the objection that the action has not been commenced in the proper township is waived, if not taken at the trial. McGorray v. Superior Court, 141 Cal. 266; 74 Pac. 853. Under this section, it is not essential that the defendant appear specially and move to dismiss the action, but the objection may be taken by answer and urged upon the trial; but "if not taken at the trial, it is waived." Holbrook v. Superior Court, 106 Cal. 589; 39 Pac. 936. Where the action is in its nature personal, and the defendant withdraws his motion to dismiss, and goes to trial upon the merits, there is a waiver of the question of jurisdiction. Luco v. Superior Court, 71 Cal. 555; 12 Pac. 677.

Trial after dismissal refused. A motion to dismiss, under this section, is addressed to the discretion of the justice's court, which has jurisdiction to try the action after such a motion has been denied. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Nonsuit. A justice's court cannot grant a nonsuit. Peacock v. Superior Court, 163 Cal. 701; 126 Pac. 976. Where the justice grants a nonsuit, there has been no trial on the merits, and the superior court, upon reversal, may properly refuse to grant a trial de novo therein, and may remand the case for a new trial in the justice's court. Smith v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. App. 529; 84 Pac. 54.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A justice of the peace cannot vacate a judgment and reinstate the cause after a judgment of dismissal. When once properly dismissed, the case is out of court and the proceedings ended, and the justice has no further control over it. Sprague v. Shed, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 140; Hunt v. Wickwire, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 104; 25 Am. Dec. 545. In case of the dismissal of a suit for the non-appearance of a plaintiff, the judgment for the defendant ipso facto operates as a dissolution of the attachment. O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 316. Suit brought in justice's court for one township and service on defendant was made in another township by constable of the latter township; defendant appeared, and, before filing answer, moved to dismiss the action on the grounds: 1. That the court has no jurisdiction of the person of defendant; 2. That the return of the officer is insufficient to give jurisdiction. The motion was properly denied; because defendant could not thus defeat the whole case in limine upon the insufficiencies of the record, though the action might have been thus dismissed if the facts were shown to be such that the record could not be amended. Hamilton v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 128; see also Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296.

§ 891. Judgment upon verdict. When a trial by jury has been had, judgment must be entered by the justice at once, in conformity with the verdict.

Entry of judgment.
1. Generally. Ante, § 664.
2. As affecting appeals. Post, § 939.

Legislation § 891. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Duty to enter judgment. It is the justice's duty to enter the judgment promptly, but until he does so, there is no "rendition" of the judgment, in the sense of that word as used in § 974, post. Thomson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98.

How entered. The justice need not formulate a judgment with great particularity, but he must make some entry in his docket, showing that he has rendered judgment on the verdict. Thomson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98; June v. Superior Court, 16 Cal. App. 126; 116 Pac. 293.

Entry of judgment, what constitutes. The entry of the verdict of a jury by the justice, in his docket, is not the entry of the judgment. Thomson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98; June v. Superior Court, 16 Cal. App. 126; 116 Pac. 293.

Rendering judgment, what constitutes. A judgment is not "rendered" in a justice's court until it is "entered," or can legally be held to be "entered": there is no other way of "rendering" a judgment in such a court. Thomson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98; June v. Superior Court, 16 Cal. App. 126; 116 Pac. 293.

Result of failure to enter judgment. The formal entry of a judgment by a justice of the peace, upon the verdict of a jury, is a mere clerical duty, which he may be compelled to perform; and if he fails to do so, a motion to set aside an execution should be sustained; but an execution issued by a justice of the peace, which recites a judgment, is not void by reason of his failure to enter the judgment. Lynch v. Kelly, 41 Cal. 232. A justice, who refuses to enter judgment, may be compelled to act. Thomson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See next section.

§ 892. Entry of judgment in thirty days. When the trial is by the court, judgment must be entered within thirty days after the submission, and no justice of the peace who is paid a salary, shall draw or receive any monthly salary unless he shall make and subscribe an affidavit before an officer entitled to administer oaths, that no cause in his court remains pending and undecided, that has been submitted for decision for a period of thirty days.

Legislation § 892. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "§ 892. When a trial is by the court, judgment must be entered at the close of the trial."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 170; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 881, and then read: "§ 892. When the trial is by the court, judgment must be entered within ten days after the submission"; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment permits the judgment in justices' courts to be entered 'at any time within ten days after submission,' instead of 'at the close of the trial.' "

4. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 77, adding all the matter after the word "submission."

Construction of section. The provision of this section, prior to its amendment in 1907, that judgment must be entered at the close of the trial, was merely directory, and a judgment was not void because not rendered until six weeks after the submission of the case. Heinlen v. Phillips, 88 Cal. 557; 26 Pac. 366; Jones v. Justice's Court, 97 Cal. 523; 32 Pac. 575; American Type Founders Co. v. Justice's Court, 133 Cal. 319; 65 Pac. 742; and see Webster v. Hanna, 102 Cal. 177; 36 Pac. 421. No penalty is prescribed, or consequence attached, for a violation of this section; if the legislature intended that a delay of a day by the justice (for that would be a violation of the provision) should subject the parties to the expense of a retrial, it would have said so in express terms. Heinlen v. Phillips, 88 Cal. 557; 26 Pac. 366. A justice of the peace is not prohibited, by this section, from taking the case under advisement, and afterwards rendering judgment; and a judgment so rendered, several months after trial, is valid. American Type Founders Co. v. Justice's Court, 133 Cal. 319; 65 Pac. 742.

Action on judgment of sister state. In an action upon a judgment rendered in a justice's court of another state, the defendant cannot interpose a defense going to the merits of the action in which the justice's judgment was rendered. Banister v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 455; 71 Pac. 504.

Collateral attack upon judgment. The judgment of a justice of the peace, who has jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the action, and of the person of the defendant, cannot be collaterally attacked as void, merely because the complaint is insufficient to constitute a cause of action: the insufficiency of the complaint is not a conclusive test of the jurisdiction of the justice's court; it has jurisdiction to determine that question, whether his decision is right or wrong; and if error is committed, the only remedy is by appeal. Brush v. Smith, 141 Cal. 466; 75 Pac. 55.

"Entering" and "rendering" judgment. See note ante, § 891.

Time of rendition and entry of judgment by justice of the peace sitting without jury. See note 12 Ann. Cas. 1029.

§ 893. Judgment. Form. What must state, where defendant subject to arrest. Service and entry. The judgment of a justice of the peace must be entered substantially in the form required in section six hundred and sixty-seven, and where the defendant is subject to arrest and imprisonment thereon the fact must be stated in the judgment. No judgment shall have effect for any purpose until so entered. Notice of the rendition of judgment must be given to the parties to the action in writing signed by the justice. Where any of the parties are represented by an attorney, notice shall be given to the attorney. Said notice shall be served by mail or personally, and shall be substan[ti]ally in the form of the abstract of judgment required in section eight hundred and ninety-seven of this code. When served by mail the justice of the peace shall deposit copies thereof in a sealed envelope in the post-office not later than five days after the rendition of the judgment, addressed to each of the persons on whom notice is to be served at their place of residence, or place of business if on an attorney, and the postage prepaid thereon. When served personally said notice shall be served within five days after the rendition of the judgment. Entry of the date of mailing shall be made by the justice in his docket.

Final process, issued to any part of county. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 893. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 597), and then read: "893. When a judgment is rendered in a case where the defendant is subject to arrest and imprisonment thereon, the fact that the defendant is so subject, must be so stated in the judgment."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 334, adding a sentence at the beginning, reading, "The judgment in justices' courts must be entered substantially in the form required by section six hundred and sixty-seven of this code."

3. Amended by Stats. 1901, p. 170; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 881; the code commissioner saying, "The meaning of the section is not changed, but superfluous portions are omitted, and the last sentence is added."

5. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 1441, adding the final six sentences.

"Entering" and "rendering" judgment. See note ante, § 891.

What controls as between oral announcement of decision by justice of the peace and judgment actually entered of record. See note Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1283.

§ 894. If the sum found due exceeds the jurisdiction of the justice, the excess may be remitted. When the amount found due to either party exceeds the sum for which the justice is authorized to enter judgment, such party may remit the excess, and judgment may be rendered for the residue.

Limit, three hundred dollars. Ante, § 112.

Legislation § 894. Enacted March 11, 1872; re-enactment of Practice Act, § 595.

Test of jurisdiction. Sufficiency of complaint not conclusive test of jurisdiction. Brush v. Smith, 141 Cal. 466; 75 Pac. 55.

Jurisdiction determined how. A justice of the peace has jurisdiction to determine the question of his jurisdiction; and if error is committed, the remedy is by appeal. Brush v. Smith, 141 Cal. 466; 75 Pac. 55.

§ 895. Offer to compromise before trial. If the defendant, at any time before the trial, offers, in writing, to allow judgment to be taken against him for a specified sum, the plaintiff may immediately have judgment therefor, with the costs then accrued; but if he does not accept such offer before the trial, and fails to recover in the action a sum in excess of the offer, he cannot recover costs incurred after the offer, but costs must be adjudged against him, and, if he recovers, be deducted from his recovery. The offer and failure to accept it cannot be given in evidence nor affect the recovery, otherwise than as to costs.

Offer to compromise. Compare post, §§ 997, 2078.

Legislation § 895. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 596.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 103, substituting "in excess of the offer" for "equal to the offer."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 170, unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 881, inserting "incurred after the offer," after "costs"; the code commissioner saying, "Amended so as to allow plaintiff to recover costs up to the time defendant allows judgment to be taken."

§ 896. Costs may be included in the judgment. The justice must tax and include in the judgment the costs allowed by law to the prevailing party.

Legislation § 896. Enacted March 11, 1872.

§ 897. Abstract of judgment. The justice, on the demand of a party in whose favor judgment is rendered, must give him an abstract of the judgment in substantially the following form (filling blanks according to the facts): State of California, —— county (or city and county), ——, plaintiff, vs. ——, defendant. In justice's court, before ——, justice of the peace, —— township (or city, or city and county), ——, 18— (inserting date of abstract). Judgment entered for plaintiff (or defendant) for $——, on the —— day of ——. I certify that the foregoing is a correct abstract of a judgment rendered in said action in my court, ——, or (as the case may be) in the court of ——, justice of the peace, as appears by his docket, now in my possession, as his successor in office. ——, Justice of the Peace.

Legislation § 897. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 19, (1) inserting "substantially" before "the following form"; (2) inserting "(or city and county)" after "county," and inserting also, after "18—," "(inserting date of abstract)."

Filing abstract with auditor. The filing with the county auditor, of an abstract of the judgment, under this section, is insufficient to entitle the plaintiff to the benefits of § 710, ante, which requires the filing of a transcript of the judgment. Erkson v. Parker, 3 Cal. App. 98; 84 Pac. 437. The abstract of a judgment, as contemplated by this section and § 900, post, is not the same as the transcript of a judgment provided by § 710, ante. First Nat. Bank v. Tyler, 21 Cal. App. 791; 132 Pac. 1053.

Execution issued by whom. Under the Practice Act, before the filing and docketing of the transcript the justice alone could issue executions, but, after filing and docketing, it was the duty of the clerk to issue execution to be executed in another county. Kerns v. Graves, 26 Cal.156.

Judgment a lien on real property when. Under the Practice Act, a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace did not become a lien on the real estate of the judgment debtor until a copy of the judgment, certified by the justice was recorded in the office of the county recorder. Bagley v. Ward, 27 Cal. 369. Since the adoption of the codes, and under this section, in order that a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace shall become a lien on the property of the judgment debtor, an abstract of the judgment, and not a certified copy, must be filed in the office of the county recorder. Frazier v. Crowell, 52 Cal. 399.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 900, post.

§ 898. Abstract may be filed and docketed in superior court. The abstract may be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the judgment was rendered, and the judgment docketed in the judgment-docket of the superior court thereof. The time of the receipt of the abstract by the clerk must be noted by him thereon, and entered in the docket.

Docketing judgment, generally. Ante, § 671.
Recording transcript. Ante, § 674.

Legislation § 898. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 20, (1) omitting "and docketed" after "filed," (2) substituting "the judgment" for "must be," and (3) substituting "superior court thereof" for "county court."

Docketing of judgment by justice of the peace. See note 40 Am. Dec. 386.

Entry or record of judgment in justice's court. See note 28 L. R. A. 638.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See § 900, post.

§ 899. Effect of docketing. From the time of docketing in the county clerk's office, execution may be issued thereon by the county clerk to the sheriff of any county in the state, other than the county in which the judgment was rendered, in the same manner and with like effect as if issued on a judgment of the superior court.

Execution, generally. Ante, §§ 681 et seq.
Docketing judgment. Ante, § 671.
Recording transcript. Ante, § 674.

Legislation § 899. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872. 2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 20, substituting (1) "superior" for "county" before "court," and (2) "a judgment" for "judgments."

Effect of docketing. The docketing of a judgment neither gives it new vitality nor prolongs its existence: it simply enables an execution to be issued to another county. Kerns v. Graves, 26 Cal. 156. Under the statute providing that execution may be issued by the county clerk upon a judgment obtained before a justice of the peace, where the transcript is filed in the office of the county clerk, as upon a judgment recovered in the higher courts, execution can issue only within five years after the judgment is rendered by the justice of the peace, and execution is still upon and by virtue of the judgment rendered by the justice. McMann v. Superior Court, 74 Cal. 106; 15 Pac. 448.

Recording of abstract. No recording of the abstract is necessary for the county in which the judgment was rendered. Campbell v. Wickware, 19 Cal. 145.

Justice may recall execution and stay proceedings. A justice of the peace has power to recall an execution issued by him on a void judgment, and stay further proceedings, even if the judgment has been docketed in the office of the county clerk and execution issued by the clerk. Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266.

Effect of filing transcript of judgment in court of record on statute of limitations. See note 133 Am. St. Rep. 75.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See next section. No filing of such transcript with the recorder is necessary, except to procure execution against property situated in a different county. With reference to property in the same county, the provisions for the enforcement of an execution upon a judgment in a justice's court are the same as those relating to district courts. Execution may issue as to the real estate of the judgment debtor in the county where the judgment was rendered, whether the abstract of judgment is filed in the office of the recorder or not. Campbell v. Wickware, 19 Cal. 145.

§ 900. Judgment no lien unless recorded. A judgment rendered in a justice's court creates no lien upon any lands of the defendant, unless such an abstract is filed in the office of the recorder of the county in which the lands are situated. When so filed, and from the time of filing, the judgment becomes a lien upon all the real property of the judgment debtor, not exempt from execution, in such county, owned by him at the time, or which he may afterward, and before the lien expires, acquire. The lien continues for two years, unless the judgment be previously satisfied.

At any time before the expiration of two years from the time of filing such abstract of judgment, and while the judgment is yet in force or unsatisfied, a successive abstract of such judgment may be likewise filed, and it shall have the effect of continuing such lien for a further period of two years from the time of filing the subsequent abstract of judgment; provided, however, that no such lien shall continue or be in force after five years from the time of the rendition of such judgment.

Lien, extent and duration of. Compare ante, § 674.

Legislation § 900. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then consisted of only one paragraph, of two sentences, the first of which was in the exact words of the same sentence of the present amendment (1911); the other sentence reading, "When so filed and recorded, such a judgment is a lien upon the lands of the judgment debtor situated in that county."
2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 114, recasting the section after the first sentence, the entire section then being the first paragraph of the present amendment.
3. Amended by Stats. 1911, p. 398, adding the second paragraph.

Lien upon lands. There is but one mode of constituting a justice's judgment a lien upon the lands of the judgment debtor, and that is, by filing an abstract thereof in the office of the recorder of the county in which the land is situated. Beaton v.

Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167; Frazier v. Crowell, 52 Cal. 399.

Effect of execution. The execution neither creates a judgment lien nor extends a judgment lien once created. Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484; 44 Pac. 167.

Copy of judgment filed with auditor. A compliance with § 897, and with this section, to secure a lien on real estate, is not enough to obtain the relief authorized by § 710, ante: a certified copy of the judgment must be filed with the auditor, in order to obtain relief under the last-named section. Erkson v. Parker, 3 Cal. App. 98; 84 Pac. 437. The abstract of a judgment, as contemplated by this section and § 897, ante, is not the same as the transcript of a judgment provided by § 710, ante. First Nat. Bank v. Tyler, 21 Cal. App. 791; 132 Pac. 1053.

Recording abstract under Practice Act. See note ante, § 897.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. In order that the judgment of a justice's court may constitute a lien upon real estate, the abstract of the judgment as prescribed in §§ 897, 898, 899, and 890, must be filed in the county recorder's office. The filing and recording of copies of the justice's docket entries does not constitute the judgment a lien on the real estate. The judgment becomes a lien only after the filing of the abstract of judgment, as specified in the sections referred to. Bagley v. Ward, 27 Cal. 370; see also People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220; see note to § 899, ante.

CHAPTER IX.

EXECUTIONS FROM JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 901. Execution may issue at any time within five years.
§ 901a. Stay of execution of judgment.
§ 902. Execution, contents of.
§ 903. Renewal of execution.
§ 904. Duty of officer receiving execution.
§ 905. Proceedings supplementary to execution.

§ 901. Execution may issue at any time within five years. Execution for the enforcement of a judgment of a justice's court may be issued by the justice who entered the judgment, or his successor in office, on the application of the party entitled thereto, at any time within five years from the entry of judgment.

After five years, generally. Ante, § 685.
Execution, generally. Ante, §§ 681 et seq.
Final process, issued to any part of county. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 901. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 600, which read: "Execution for the enforcement of a judgment in a justice's court, may be issued on the application of the party entitled thereto, at any time within five years from the entry of judgment."

Who may issue execution. A justice of the peace, but not the superior court, is authorized to issue an execution, under this section. John Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Cal. App. 80; 84 Pac. 443.

Issuance of execution after five years. There is no provision allowing an execution to be issued by a justice of the peace after the lapse of five years: execution, not issued within that time, is void. White v. Clark, 8 Cal. 512. The provision that an execution may be issued upon a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, within five years from the time of its entry, amounts to a limitation, and negatives, by implication, the right to issue an execution after that period; the limitation applies alike to all executions authorized to be issued on such judgments, and applies not only to the justice, but also to the clerk, the section being general. Kerns v. Graves, 26 Cal. 156. The loss of the docket does not prevent the running of the time limited by this section. White v. Clark, 8 Cal. 512.

Recalling execution. An execution issuing from a justice's court, though issued by the county clerk, may be recalled by the justice rendering the judgment. Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Execution for the enforcement of a judgment in justice's court cannot issue after five years from the entry of judgment. The loss of the docket of the justice will not prevent the running of the time. White v. Clark, 8 Cal. 512. The filing and docketing of an abstract of a judgment rendered by a justice, in the office of the clerk of the county, will not empower the clerk of the court in which it is filed and docketed to issue an execution upon it after five years from the date when judgment was rendered. Kerns v. Graves, 26 Cal. 156.

§ 901a. Stay of execution of judgment. The court, or any justice thereof, may stay the execution of any judgment, including any judgment in a case of forcible entry or unlawful detainer, for a period not exceeding ten days.

Legislation § 901a. Added by Stats. 1906, p. 35.

§ 902. Execution, contents of. The execution must be directed to the sheriff or to a constable of the county, and must be subscribed by the justice and bear date the day of its delivery to the officer. It must intelligibly refer to the judgment, by stating the names of the parties, and the name of the justice before whom, and of the county and the township or city where, and the time when it was rendered; the amount of judgment, if it be for money; and, if less than the whole is due, the true amount due thereon. It must contain, in like cases, similar directions to the sheriff or constable, as are required by the provisions of title nine, part two, of this code, in an execution to the sheriff.

Compare ante, §§ 681 et seq.

Legislation § 902. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 601, the first sentence of which read, "The execution, when issued by a justice, shall be directed to the sheriff or to a constable of the county, and subscribed by the justice by whom the judgment was rendered, or by his successor in office, and shall bear date the day of its delivery to the officer to be executed," and had, in the other sentences, (1) "shall" instead of "must" in both instances, and (2) "title VII of this act" instead of "title nine, part two, of this code."

Constable's power outside of township or county. A constable may execute criminal process outside of his county: the construction which the phrase, "a constable of the county," in § 601 of the Practice Act, the original of this section, seems to have received was, that it meant any constable of the county, and that, consequently, the writ might be directed to a constable of a township other than that of the justice, or other than that where the property to be levied upon was situated; and by inference, that a constable could act outside of his township. Allen v. Napa County, 82 Cal. 187; 23 Pac. 43.

Blanks in writ. It is not necessary to the valid execution of the writ, that the blank after the word "defendant" shall be filled, but if it is necessary, it may be done by amendment, which would be by the court, and not "filled by another," in the sense of the code: the code provision was intended to prevent persons, other than the court, from making changes in the writ. Brann v. Blum, 138 Cal. 644; 72 Pac. 168.

Amendable errors in execution. Where the writ correctly gives the name of the justice who rendered the judgment, and the names of the parties thereto, and the county in which it was rendered, and states the name of the township in the title of the writ and in the indorsement thereupon, errors in stating the month in which it was dated, and in omitting to state the township in describing the judgment, and in omitting to fill the blank after the word "defendant" in the writ, do not vitiate the writ or the sale thereunder, but are amendable, and must be deemed amended. Brann v. Blum, 138 Cal. 644; 72 Pac. 168; and see Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372; 99 Am. Dec. 404; O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527; 82 Am. St. Rep. 389; 63 Pac. 847.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A constable can serve an execution out of his township. In this respect there is a difference between service of summons and service of execution. Lafontaine v. Greene, 17 Cal. 296.

§ 903. Renewal of execution. An execution may, at the request of the judgment creditor, be renewed before the expiration of the time fixed for its return, by the word "renewed" written thereon, with the date thereof, and subscribed by the justice. Such renewal has the effect of an original issue, and may be repeated as often as necessary. If an execution is returned unsatisfied, another may be afterwards issued.

Legislation § 903. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Mandamus to compel issuance of another execution. Where a recorder's court erroneously directs an execution to be returned unsatisfied, and such order is complied with, the recorder may be compelled by mandamus to issue another execution, his duty to do so being purely ministerial. Hayward v. Pimental, 107 Cal. 386; 40 Pac. 545.

§ 904. Duty of officer receiving execution. The sheriff or constable to whom the execution is directed must execute the same in the same manner as the sheriff is required by the provisions of title nine, part two, of this code, to proceed upon executions directed to him; and the constable, when the execution is directed to him, is vested for that purpose with all the powers of the sheriff.

Writ.

1. Execution of. Compare ante, §§ 691 et seq.
2. Generally. See ante, §§ 688 et seq.

Legislation § 904. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 602, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 69, Kerr ed. p. 98, which read: "The sheriff or constable to whom the execution is directed shall proceed to execute the same in the same manner as the sheriff is required by the provisions of title VII of this act to proceed upon executions directed to him; and the constable, when the execution is directed to him, shall be vested for that purpose with all the powers of the sheriff, and, after issuing an execution, and either before or after its return, (if the same be returned unsatisfied either in whole or in part,) the judgment creditor shall be entitled to an order from the justice requiring the judgment debtor to attend at a time to be designated in the order, and answer concerning his property before such justice, and the attendance of such debtor may be enforced by the justice on his attendance, such debtor may be examined under oath concerning his property, and any person alleged to have in his hands property, moneys, effects or credits of the judgment debtor may also be required to attend and be examined, and the justice may order any property in the hands of the judgment debtor or any other person not exempt from execution, belonging to such debtor, to be applied towards the satisfaction of the judgment; and the justice may enforce such order by imprisonment until complied with, but no judgment debtor or other person shall be required to attend before the justice out of the county in which he resides."

Service of execution outside of township. A constable may serve an execution outside of his township. Lafontaine v. Greene, 17 Cal. 294.

Constable's power outside of township or county. See note ante, § 902.

Recording transcript of judgment. Under § 602 of the Practice Act, the original of this section, where a judgment was rendered by a justice of the peace, a judgment debtor's real estate, situated in the county where judgment was rendered, could be sold on execution, whether a transcript of the judgment was filed in the office of the recorder of such county or not: no filing of such transcript with the recorder was necessary, except as to property situated in a different county. Campbell v. Wickware, 19 Cal. 145.

Claim by third person, liability of officer. Where property has been taken and detained under an attachment and execution, but is claimed by a third party, and a jury, called to try the right to the property under the claim, render a verdict against the claimant, such verdict is no protection to the officer in a subsequent suit brought against him by the claimant, nor is it admissible in evidence as a defense. Sheldon v. Loomis, 28 Cal. 122.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See §§ 681–721, ante, inclusive, and notes thereto.

§ 905. Proceedings supplementary to execution. The sections of this code, from seven hundred and fourteen to seven hundred and twenty-one, both inclusive, are applicable to justices' courts, the word "constable" being substituted, to that end, for the word "sheriff," whenever the writ is directed to a constable, and the word "justice" for "judge." If the judgment debtor does not reside in the county wherein the judgment was entered, an abstract of the judgment, in the form prescribed by section eight hundred and ninety-seven, may be filed in the office of the justice of any town, township, or city wherein the defendant resides, and such justice may issue execution on such judgment, and may take and exercise such jurisdiction in proceedings supplemental to execution, as if such judgment were originally entered in his court.

Proceedings supplementary to execution. Ante, §§ 714–721.

Legislation § 905. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and read: "The sections of this code, from 714 to 721, both inclusive, are applicable to justices' courts, the word 'constable' being substituted, to that end, for the word 'sheriff,' and the word 'justice' for the word 'judge.'"

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 170; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 881; the code commissioner saying, "The amendment inserts the words 'whenever the writ is directed to a constable,' and adds the last sentence, authorizing the filing of an abstract of the judgment in the office of the justice of any town, township, or city where the defendant resides, and the issuing of execution thereon."

Construction of section. This section provides that §§ 714–721, ante, shall be applicable to justices' courts: these sections relate to proceedings supplementary to execution, and define the steps to be pursued to compel the judgment debtor to disclose his property, and to secure its application toward the payment of execution. Ex parte Latimer, 47 Cal. 131; West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315; 85 Am. St. Rep. 171; 65 Pac. 622.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See notes to §§ 714–721, ante, inclusive.

CHAPTER X.

CONTEMPTS IN JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 906. Contempts a justice may punish for.
§ 907. Proceedings for contempts.
§ 908. Same.
§ 909. Punishments for contempts.
§ 910. The conviction must be entered in the docket.

§ 906. Contempts a justice may punish for. A justice may punish as for contempt, persons guilty of the following acts, and no other:

1. Disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior toward the justice while holding court, tending to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceedings;

2. A breach of the peace, boisterous conduct, or violent disturbance in the presence of the justice, or in the immediate vicinity of the court held by him, tending to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding;

3. Disobedience or resistance to the execution of a lawful order or process, made or issued by him;

4. Disobedience to a subpœna duly served, or refusing to be sworn or to answer as a witness;

5. Rescuing any person or property in the custody of an officer by virtue of an order or process of the court held by him;

6. Any of the acts specified in subdivisions four, eight, or eleven, of section twelve hundred and nine.

Contempts, generally. Post, §§ 1209 et seq.
Courts and judicial officers, powers of. Ante, §§ 128, 177–179.

Legislation § 906. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 616), in subd. 5, substituting "an" for "any" before "officer."
2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 170; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.
3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 881, (1) in subd. 1, inserting "the" between "holding" and "court," and (2) adding subd. 6.

Power of justices of the peace to punish contempts. See notes 117 Am. St. Rep. 953, 955; 9 Ann. Cas. 316; 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1135.

§ 907. Proceedings for contempts. When a contempt is committed in the immediate view and presence of the justice, it may be punished summarily; to that end an order must be made, reciting the facts as they occurred, and adjudging that the person proceeded against is thereby guilty of contempt, and that he be punished as therein prescribed.

Compare post, § 1211.

Legislation § 907. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 617, which read: "When a contempt is committed in the immediate view and presence of the justice, it may be punished summarily, for which an order shall be made reciting the facts, as occurring in such immediate view and presence, adjudging that the person proceeded against is thereby guilty of a contempt, and that he be punished as therein prescribed. When the contempt is not committed in the immediate view and presence of the justice, a warrant of arrest may be issued by such justice, on which the person so guilty may be arrested and brought before the justice immediately, when an opportunity to be heard in his defense or excuse shall be given. The justice may thereupon discharge him, or may convict him of the offense. A justice may punish for contempts, by fine or imprisonment, or both; such fine not to exceed in any case one hundred dollars, and such imprisonment one day."

§ 908. Same. When the contempt is not committed in the immediate view and presence of the justice, a warrant of arrest may be issued by such justice, on which the person so guilty may be arrested and brought before the justice immediately, when an opportunity to be heard in his defense or excuse must be given. The justice may, thereupon, discharge him, or may convict him of the offense.

Compare post, §§ 1212 et seq.
Legislation § 908. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 617. See ante, Legislation § 907.

§ 909. Punishments for contempts. A justice may punish for contempts, by fine or imprisonment, or both; such fine not to exceed, in any case, one hundred dollars, and such imprisonment one day.

Legislation § 909. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 617. See ante, Legislation § 907.

Construction of section. This section merely limits the power of the justice to punish for a contempt as such: it does not prevent him from adjudging, that, if the contempt be the omission to perform any act, the guilty person may be imprisoned until performance. Ex parte Latimer, 47 Cal. 131.

§ 910. The conviction must be entered in the docket. The conviction, specifying particularly the offense and the judgment thereon, must be entered by the justice in his docket.

Legislation § 910. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 618), substituting "must" for "shall."

CHAPTER XI.

DOCKETS OF JUSTICES.

§ 911. Docket, what to contain.
§ 912. Entries therein prima facie evidence of the fact.
§ 913. An index to the docket must be kept.
§ 914. Dockets must be delivered by justice to his successor, or to county clerk.
§ 915. Proceedings when office becomes vacant, and before a successor is appointed.
§ 916. A justice may issue execution or other process upon the docket of his predecessor.
§ 917. Successor of a justice, who shall be deemed.
§ 918. Two justices deemed successors, superior court shall designate one.

§ 911. Docket, what to contain. Every justice must keep a book, denominated a "docket," in which he must enter:

1. The title of every action or proceeding.

2. The object of the action or proceeding; and if a sum of money be claimed, the amount thereof.

3. The date of the summons, and the time of its return; and if an order to arrest the defendant be made, or a writ of attachment be issued, a statement of the fact.

4. The time when the parties, or either of them, appear, or their non-appearance, if default be made; a minute of the pleadings and motions; if in writing, referring to them; if not in writing, a concise statement of the material parts of the pleading.

5. Every adjournment, stating on whose application and to what time.

6. The demand for a trial by jury, when the same is made, and by whom made, the order for the jury, and the time appointed for the return of the jury and for the trial.

7. The names of the jurors who appear and are sworn, and the names of all witnesses sworn, and at whose request.

8. The verdict of the jury, and when received; if the jury disagree and are discharged, the fact of such disagreement and discharge.

9. The judgment of the court, specifying the costs included and the time when rendered.

10. The issuing of the execution, when issued and to whom; the renewals thereof, if any, and when made, and a statement of any money paid to the justice, when and by whom.

11. The receipt of a notice of appeal, if any be given, and of the appeal bond, if any be filed.

Docket in justices' court in cities and counties. Ante, § 93.

Legislation § 911. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 604), (1) in introductory paragraph, (a) substituting "must" for "shall" in both instances, and (b) transposing the article "a" outside of the quotation-marks; (2) in subd. 2, changing (a) "be" to "is" and (b) "of the demand" to "thereof"; (3) in subd 3, changing (a) "be" to "is" in both instances, and (b) "these facts" to "the fact"; (4) in subd. 4, (a) changing "be" to "is" after "default," (b) adding "and motions" after "pleadings," (c) changing, after "parts of the," the word "pleading" to "pleadings," and adding thereafter the words (which were stricken out in 1873–74), "and of all motions made during the trial by either party, and his decisions thereon"; (5) subd. 5 (no change being made from the Practice Act) having, after "application," the words "whether on oath, evidence, or consent"; (6) in subd. 6, changing "trial and return of the jury" (sic) to "return of the jury and for the trial"; (7) in subd. 7, (a) changing "jury" to "jurors" and (b) adding "and" before "the names"; (8) adding a subd. 10 (stricken out in 1873–74), reading "The motion for a new trial, when made, and how disposed of"; (9) subd. 10 renumbered subd. 11 (the present subd. 10), (a) adding "the" before "execution" and (b) omitting "and" after "justice"; (10) subd. 11 renumbered subd. 12 (the present subd. 11), adding, after "given," the words "and of the appeal bond, if any be filed."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 334.

Entry is ministerial duty. The entry of the non-appearance of the defendant is a ministerial duty: it is made by the clerk of the justices' court in the city and county of San Francisco. Hall v. Justice's Court, 5 Cal. App. 133; 89 Pac. 870.

Verdict and judgment must be entered. The justice is required, by this section, to enter in his docket, separately, "the verdict of the jury, and when received," and "the judgment of the court, specifying the costs," etc. Thompson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98.

What need not be entered in docket. The fact of the residence of the defendant is a jurisdictional fact, and it must exist; but the statute does not require that its existence shall be recorded in the docket of the justice, or that it shall be made to appear in the written evidence of the proceedings. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321. The justice is not required to enter in his docket any minute of the service of notice of the time of trial, nor to file any proof of such service, under this section. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849. The provision of this section relating to summons is, merely, that its date, and the time of its return, shall be stated in the docket; but neither this section nor § 912, post, requires the fact of service of summons to be entered in the docket. Fisk v. Mitchell, 124 Cal. 359; 57 Pac. 149; Ferguson v. Basin Consolidated Mines, 152 Cal. 712; 93 Pac. 867. Affidavits for attachments in a justice's court are not required to be noted in the docket of the justice, under this section. Banning v. Marleau, 133 Cal. 485; 65 Pac. 964.

Result of failure to make entry. The fourth subdivision of this section, and § 912, post, respecting the making of entries, provide merely for ministerial duties; and the failure to execute such duties in proper time does not divest the court of jurisdiction. Hall v. Justice's Court, 5 Cal. App. 133; 89 Pac. 870.

Dockets of justices of the peace. See note 87 Am. St. Rep. 672.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Subdivision 10, providing for entry in the justice's docket of all motions for new trials, etc., should have been omitted, since the justice, under the code, has now no power to grant a new trial. This provision can, however, do no harm. Its presence is simply an oversight.

Judgment will not be set aside, on appeal, because the justice failed to enter in his docket that the summons was returned "served." Service can be shown by the return of the officer on the summons. Denmark v. Liening, 10 Cal. 93. And if the justice's docket showed that the summons was "returned duly served," it does not prove service, and amounts to nothing, if the officer's return fails to show proper service. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 403. The record of an action in a justice's court must show affirmatively that the suit was brought in the proper township, or the judgment will be void. Objection is not waived because defendant failed to appear and object that the suit was commenced in the wrong township. Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296. The residence of defendant is a jurisdictional fact, but it is not required that the existence of this fact should be entered in the justice's docket, or appear in the written evidence of the proceedings; and to support a judgment of a justice, it is competent to admit parol evidence of residence, and such jurisdictional facts as are not required to be entered in the docket. Such evidence does not contradict the docket, but, on the contrary, it is entirely consistent with it, and is in support of the judgment. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 326; see also Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 50. The docket of the justice is primary evidence; its omissions may be supplied from other sources when it becomes necessary. Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 50.

§ 912. Entries therein prima facie evidence of the fact. The several particulars of the last section specified must be entered under the title of the action to which they relate, and (unless otherwise in this title provided) at the time when they occur. Such entries in a justice's docket, or a transcript thereof, certified by the justice, or his successor in office, are prima facie evidence of the facts so stated.

Prima facie evidence. Post, § 1833.

Legislation § 912. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 605, which read: "The several particulars of the last section specified shall be entered under the title of the action to which they relate, and at the time when they occur. Such entries in a justice's docket, or a transcript thereof, certified by the justice or his successor in office, shall be primary evidence to prove the facts so stated therein."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 20, substituting "prima facie" for "primary."

Entries prima facie evidence when. The entries required to be made in a justice's docket are prima facie evidence of the facts stated. Ferguson v. Basin Consolidated Mines, 152 Cal. 712; 93 Pac. 867. A justice's docket is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein: it is error to exclude it, when offered in evidence (Kriste v. International Savings etc. Bank, 17 Cal. App. 301; 119 Pac. 666); but it is not evidence of matters not required to be inserted therein, such as service of summons. Ferguson v. Basin Con. Mines, 152 Cal. 715; 93 Pac. 867. This section and § 911, ante, do not require the fact of service of summons to be entered in the justice's docket; hence, they do not impart to such entry, if made, the character of prima facie evidence. Fisk v. Mitchell, 124 Cal. 359; 57 Pac. 149. Where the docket-entries of a justice of the peace show a judgment for costs, apparently rendered on the day that the cause was tried, they are prima facie evidence that such was the truth, where they are not rebutted by anything else in the record. Rauer v. Justice's Court, 115 Cal. 84; 46 Pac. 870.

Sufficiency of entry as evidence. An entry in the docket of a justice of the peace, to the effect that the summons was returned served, does not show such a service as the law requires to give jurisdiction of the person. Kane v. Desmond, 63 Cal. 464. The justice's docket, containing a minute of the judgment, is sufficient evidence of the judgment. Beardsley v. Frame, 85 Cal. 134; 24 Pac. 721; Fisk v. Mitchell, 124 Cal. 359; 57 Pac. 149.

Admissibility of copy of entries in evidence. Where the papers in a criminal action, tried before a justice of the peace, were attached together, and include a copy of the docket-entries in the action, certified by the justice, and such copy being prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein, under this section, and the admission of the papers as evidence was objected to as a whole, and no particular paper was specified as being objected to, it is proper to admit in evidence all the papers so attached together. Shatto v. Crocker, 87 Cal. 629; 25 Pac. 921.

Contradiction of docket-entries by parol. Those jurisdictional facts in support of judgments in justices' courts which are not in writing, nor required to be in writing, nor in fact entered in the docket, may be proved by parol; but the rule is otherwise where the statute requires such facts to be entered in the docket, and they are so entered, or where they actually appear in the written files of the action, because parol evidence in such cases is not the best evidence, and such entries and writings may not be contradicted by parol evidence Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See note to last section. Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 326; Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 50.

§ 913. An index to the docket must be kept. A justice must keep an alphabetical index to his docket, in which must be entered the names of the parties to each judgment, with a reference to the page of entry. The names of the plaintiffs must be entered in the index, in the alphabetical order of the first letter of the family name.

Legislation § 913. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 606), substituting "must" for "shall."

§ 914. Dockets must be delivered by justice to his successor, or to county clerk. Every justice of the peace, upon the expiration of his term of office, must deposit with his successor his official dockets and all papers filed in his office, as well his own as those of his predecessors, or any other which may be in his custody to be kept as public records.

Legislation § 914. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 607, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 223, which read: "It shall be the duty of every justice of the peace, upon the expiration of his term of office, to deposit with his successor his official dockets and all papers filed in his office, as well his own as those of his predecessors, or any other which may be in his custody, to be kept as public records. If the office of a justice become vacant, by his death or removal from the township or city, or otherwise, before his successor is elected and qualified, the docket and papers in possession of such justice shall be deposited in the office of some other justice in the township, to be by him delivered to the successor of said justice; and while in his possession he may issue execution on a judgment, there entered and unsatisfied (may make all orders in proceedings supplemental to execution, and may file notices and undertakings on appeal, and may take the justification of the sureties, and on the filing of the undertaking on appeal, order stay of execution), in the same manner and with the same effect as the justice by whom the judgment was entered might have done. If there be no other justice in the township, then the docket and papers of such justice shall be deposited in the office of the county clerk of the county, to be by him delivered to the successor in office of the justice."

§ 915. Proceedings when office becomes vacant, and before a successor is appointed. If the office of a justice become vacant by his death or removal from the township or city, or otherwise, before his successor is elected and qualified, the docket and papers in possession of such justice must be deposited in the office of some other justice in the township, to be by him delivered to the successor of such justice. If there is no other justice in the township, then the docket and papers of such justice must be deposited in the office of the county clerk of the county, to be by him delivered to the successor in office of the justice.

Legislation § 915. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 607, as amended by Stats. 1869–70, p. 223. See ante, Legislation § 914.

§ 916. A justice may issue execution or other process upon the docket of his predecessor. Any justice with whom the docket of his predecessor, or of any other justice, is deposited, has and may exercise over all actions and proceedings entered in such docket, the same jurisdiction as if originally commenced before him. In case of the creation of a new county, or the change of the boundary between two counties, any justice into whose hands the docket of a justice formerly acting as such within the same territory may come, is, for the purposes of this section, considered the successor of such former justice.

Legislation § 916. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 608, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 232), (1) inserting "or of any other justice" after "predecessor," (2) substituting (a) "has and may" for "shall have and," (b) "such docket" for "the docket of his predecessor," (c) "is" for "shall" before "for the purposes of this section," (3) omitting "be" before "considered," and (4) substituting "such" for "said" before "former."

§ 917. Successor of a justice, who shall be deemed. The justice elected to fill a vacancy is the successor of the justice whose office became vacant before the expiration of a full term. When a full term expires, the same or another person elected to take office in the same township or city, from that time is the successor.

Legislation § 917. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 609), substituting "is" for "shall be deemed," in both instances.

§ 918. Two justices deemed successors, superior court shall designate one. When two or more justices are equally entitled, under the last section, to be deemed the successors in office of the justice, a judge of the superior court must, by a certificate subscribed by him and filed in the office of the county clerk, designate which justice is the successor of a justice going out of office, or whose office has become vacant.

Legislation § 918. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 610), substituting (1) "must" for "shall," and (2) "is" for "shall be" before "the successor."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 20, substituting "a judge of the superior court" for "the county judge."

CHAPTER XII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO JUSTICES' COURTS.

§ 919. Justices may issue subpœnas and final process to any part of the county.
§ 920. Blanks must be filled in all papers issued by a justice, except subpœnas.
§ 921. Justices to receive all moneys collected and pay same to parties.
§ 922. In case of disability of justice, another justice may attend on his behalf.
§ 923. Justices may require security for costs.
§ 924. Who entitled to costs. Attorney's fee.
§ 925. What provisions of code applicable to justices' courts.
§ 926. Deposit in lieu of undertaking.

§ 919. Justices may issue subpœnas and final process to any part of the county. Justices of the peace may issue subpœnas in any action or proceeding in the courts held by them, and final process on any judgment recovered therein, to any part of the county.

Final process, issued to any part of county. Ante, §§ 94, 106.

Legislation § 919. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 619, as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 496, which read: "Justices of the peace may issue subpœnas in any action or proceeding in the courts held by them, and final process, or [on] any judgment recovered therein, to any part of the county. A justice of the peace may issue summons to any person, a resident of the proper township, to appear before him, at his office, to act as interpreter in any action or proceeding in the courts held by him. Such summons shall be served and returned in like manner as a subpœna issued by a justice. Any person so summoned shall, for a failure to attend at the time and place named in the summons, be deemed guilty of a contempt, and may be punished accordingly."

§ 920. Blanks must be filled in all papers issued by a justice, except subpœnas. The summons, execution, and every other paper made or issued by a justice, except a subpœna, must be issued without a blank left to be filled by another, otherwise it is void.

Legislation § 920. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 611), substituting (1) "must be issued" for "shall be filed," and (2) "is" for "shall be" before "void."

Filling of blanks in execution. This section was intended to prevent persons, other than the court, from making changes in a writ of execution; but it is not necessary to the valid execution of the writ, that the blank after the word "defendant" shall be filled, but if it is necessary, it may be done by amendment, which would be by the court, and not "filled by another," in the sense of this section. Brann v. Blum, 138 Cal. 644; 72 Pac. 168.

§ 921. Justices to receive all moneys collected and pay same to parties. Justices of the peace must receive from the sheriff or constables of their county, all moneys collected on any process or order issued from their courts respectively, and must pay the same, and all moneys paid to them in their official capacity, over to the parties entitled or authorized to receive them, without delay.

Legislation § 921. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 633), (1) substituting (a) "must" for "shall" in both instances, and (b) "from" for "by" before "their courts"; and (2) omitting, after "delay," at end of section, the sentence, "For a violation of this section they may be removed from their office, and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 20, (1) inserting "and must pay the same" after "respectively," and (2) omitting "and must pay the same," after "official capacity."

§ 922. In case of disability of justice, another justice may attend on his behalf. In case of the sickness or other disability or necessary absence of a justice, another justice of the same county may, at his request, attend in his behalf, and thereupon is vested with the power and may perform all the duties and issue all the papers or process of the absent justice. In case of a trial the proper entry of the proceedings before the attending justice, subscribed by him, must be made in the docket of the justice before whom the summons was returnable. If the case is adjourned, the justice before whom the summons was returnable may resume jurisdiction.

Legislation § 922. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 612, which read, "In case of the sickness, other disability, or necessary absence of a justice on a return of a summons, or at the time appointed for a trial, another justice of the same township or city may, at his request, attend in his behalf, and shall thereupon become vested with the power, for the time being, of the justice before whom the summons was returnable. In that case the proper entry of the proceedings before the attending justice, subscribed by him, shall be made in the docket of the justice before whom the summons was returnable. If the case be adjourned, the justice before whom the summons was returnable, may resume jurisdiction." When § 922 was enacted in 1872, (1) "or" was added after "sickness"; (2) "thereupon is" was substituted for "shall thereupon become," (3) "must" for "shall" before "be made," and (4) "is" for "be" before "adjourned."

2. Amended by Stats. 1909, p. 328.

§ 923. Justices may require security for costs. Justices may in all cases require a deposit of money or an undertaking, as security for costs of court, before issuing a summons.

Prepayment of fees. Ante, § 91.

Legislation § 923. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 634), omitting "of the peace" after "justices."

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. This is optional with the justice. He may demand his fees in advance, or he may allow the party credit, at his election. Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 203. If the justice should fail to demand the deposit as security for his fees, he must nevertheless perform the duty just the same as if the deposit had been made. If he wished the deposit to be made in advance, he should have demanded it. Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 203.

§ 924. Who entitled to costs. Attorney's fee. The prevailing party in the justices' courts is entitled to costs of the action, and also of any proceedings taken by him in aid of an execution, issued upon any judgment recovered therein. In actions for the recovery of wages for labor performed, the court shall add, as part of the costs, in any judgment recovered by the plaintiff, an attorney's fee not exceeding twenty per cent of the amount recovered.

Costs, Ante, § 896.

Legislation § 924. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, and then read: "The prevailing party in justices' courts is entitled to costs."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 335, adding, at end of section, "of the action and also of any proceedings taken by him in aid of an execution, issued upon any judgment recovered therein."

3. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 69.

Constitutionality of statutes allowing attorney's fees to successful party. See note 79 Am. St. Rep. 178.

§ 925. What provisions of code applicable to justices' courts. Justices' courts being courts of peculiar and limited jurisdiction, only those provisions of this code which are, in their nature, applicable to the organization, powers, and course of proceedings in justices' courts, or which have been made applicable by special provisions in this title, are applicable to justices' courts and the proceedings therein.

Peculiar and limited jurisdiction. Ante, §§ 112–114.

Legislation § 925. Enacted March 11, 1872.

Construction of section. The necessary inference from the language used in this section is, that those provisions of this code which are in their nature "applicable to the organization, powers, and course of proceedings in justices' courts," are applicable to them. Ex parte Latimer, 47 Cal. 131. The language of this section is difficult of construction, and cases may well arise wherein it would be extremely doubtful whether or not certain acts of a justice's court would be justified by its provisions; the grant is somewhat in the shape of a parenthesis in a clause of limitation; if, therefore, that part of the code which expressly deals with proceedings in justices' courts prescribes the powers of those courts in relation to a general subject about which the powers of courts of record are expressly prescribed in another part, then the powers of the justices' courts with respect to that subject are to be determined by the provisions of the code expressly applicable to them, and not by the provisions expressly applicable to courts of record. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849; and see Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Character of jurisdiction of justices' courts. This section expressly preserves the notion of the "peculiar and limited" jurisdiction of justices' courts, and its general character is negative, rather than positive. Weimmer v. Sutherland, 74 Cal. 341; 15 Pac. 849; Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Sections applicable to superior courts. Proceedings in superior courts are dealt with in §§ 473, 581, ante. Hubbard v. Superior Court, 9 Cal. App. 166; 98 Pac. 394.

Pleadings allowed. This section cannot be extended to authorize other pleadings to be filed in justices' courts, than those specifically enumerated in § 852, ante, as being permitted in such courts. Purcell v. Richardson, 164 Cal. 150; 128 Pac. 31.

Nonsuit. A justice's court has no power to pass upon and grant a motion for a nonsuit. Peacock v. Superior Court, 163 Cal. 701; 126 Pac. 976.

Action on judgment. An independent action on a judgment of a justice's court, after the expiration of the five-year limitation prescribed in § 336, ante, is not authorized by this section. John Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Cal. App. 80; 84 Pac. 443.

§ 926. Deposit in lieu of undertaking. In all civil cases arising in justices' courts, wherein an undertaking is required as prescribed in this code, the plaintiff or defendant may deposit with said justice a sum of money in United States gold coin equal to the amount required by the said undertaking, which said sum of money shall be taken as security in place of said undertaking.

Legislation § 926. Added by Code Amdts. 1877–78, p. 103.

Section not repealed. This section was not repealed by implication by the amendment of § 978, post, in 1880, which made no change as to the bond on appeal, although the act by which it was amended concluded with a clause repealing all acts and parts of acts in conflict therewith. Swem v. Monroe, 148 Cal. 741; 83 Pac. 1074.

Appeal to superior court, deposit in lieu of undertaking. The provisions of this section, authorizing a deposit in lieu of an undertaking for costs on appeal to the superior court, are applicable to the undertaking for costs on appeal, required by the first clause of § 978, post. Laws v. Troutt, 147 Cal. 172; 81 Pac. 401. An appeal may be perfected by making a deposit of a hundred dollars with the justice, instead of giving an undertaking. Swem v. Monroe, 148 Cal. 741; 83 Pac. 1074. A deposit of the requisite amount of money, in lieu of an undertaking on appeal, gives the superior court jurisdiction of the appeal. Pacific Window Glass Co. v. Smith, 8 Cal. App. 762; 97 Pac. 898.

Undertaking on appeal in justices' courts. See note post, § 978.

TITLE XII.

PROCEEDINGS IN CIVIL ACTIONS IN POLICE COURTS.

§ 929. How commenced.
§ 930. Summons must issue on filing complaint.
§ 931. Defendant may plead orally or in writing.
§ 932. Trial by jury, when defendant is entitled to.
§ 933. Proceedings to be conducted as in justices' courts.

§ 929. How commenced. Civil actions in police courts are commenced by filing a complaint, setting forth the violation of the ordinance complained of, with such particulars of time, place, and manner of violation as to enable the defendant to understand distinctly the character of the violation complained of, and to answer the complaint. The ordinance may be referred to by its title. The complaint must be verified by the oath of the party complaining, or of his attorney or agent.

Jurisdiction of police court. See Pol. Code, §§ 4426, 4427. See also post, §§ 1068, 1085, 1103.

Provisions relating to police judges. See Pol. Code, §§ 4424–4432.

Legislation § 929. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 636), substituting (1) "police courts are" for "recorder's and mayor's courts shall be," and (2) "must" for "shall."

Jurisdiction and transfer of cause. An action to recover a fine, forfeiture, or penalty, imposed by an ordinance of a city, may perhaps be maintained in a police court as a civil action, where a certain and specific sum is imposed as a fine or penalty for the breach of an ordinance; but the jurisdiction of such actions is conferred on the police courts, and not on justices' courts; there is no provision of the law to authorize a transfer of an action from the police court to the district court (Santa Cruz v. Santa Cruz R. R. Co., 56 Cal. 143); but in Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378, 30 Pac. 562, it was held, that, in an action brought in a police court to recover taxes, where the answer raises an issue as to the legality of the tax sought to be recovered, it is the duty of the court to transfer the action to the superior court for trial, under the provisions of § 838, ante, which applies to police courts as well as to justices' courts.

§ 930. Summons must issue on filing complaint. Immediately after filing the complaint a summons must be issued, directed to the defendant, and returnable either immediately or at any time designated therein, not exceeding four days from the date of its issuing.

Legislation § 930. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 637), substituting (1) "must" for "shall" after "summons," and (2) "issuing" for "issuance."

§ 931. Defendant may plead orally or in writing. On the return of the summons, the defendant may answer the complaint. The answer may be oral or in writing, and immediately thereafter the case must be tried, unless, for good cause shown, an adjournment is granted.

Legislation § 931. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 638, which read: "On the return of the summons the defendant may plead to the complaint, or he may answer or deny the same. Such plea, answer, or denial, may be oral or in writing, and immediately thereafter the case shall be tried, unless for good cause shown an adjournment be granted."

§ 932. Trial by jury, when defendant is entitled to. In all actions for violation of an ordinance, where the fine, forfeiture, or penalty imposed by the ordinance is less than fifty dollars, the trial must be by the court. In actions where the fine, forfeiture, or penalty imposed by the ordinance is over fifty dollars, the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury.

Legislation § 932. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 639), substituting (1) "must" for "shall" after "trial," and (2) "is entitled to a trial by jury" for "shall be entitled, if demanded by him, to a jury of six persons."

§ 933. Proceedings to be conducted as in justices' courts. All proceedings in civil actions in police courts must, except as in this title otherwise provided, be conducted in the same manner as civil actions in justices' courts.

Civil proceedings in justices' courts. Ante, §§ 832–926.

Disqualification of police judge. Calling in of justice of the peace. See Pol. Code, § 4428.

Legislation § 933. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 641, which read: "All proceedings in civil actions in recorders' and mayors' courts, except as herein otherwise provided, shall be conducted in the same manner as in civil actions in justices' courts."

Jurisdiction where ordinance is violated. The police court has jurisdiction of all proceedings for the violation of any ordinance of a city. Santa Barbara v. Stearns, 51 Cal. 499.

Transfer to superior court. Where, in an action in a police court to recover a license tax for the transaction of business, the answer denies the legality of the tax, the police court cannot try the cause, but must transfer it to the superior court. Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378; 30 Pac. 562; Santa Barbara v. Stearns, 51 Cal. 499.

§ 953. Copies and undertakings, how certified.

§ 956. What may be reviewed on appeal from judgment.
§ 957. Remedial powers of an appellate court.
§ 958. On judgment on appeal, remittitur must be certified to the clerk of the court below.
§ 959. Provisions of this chapter not applicable to appeals to superior courts.

§ 936. Judgment and orders may be reviewed. A judgment or order, in a civil action, except when expressly made final by this code, may be reviewed as prescribed in this title, and not otherwise.

Judgments and orders, appeal from. Post, § 939.

Legislation § 936. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 333, as amended by Stats. 1854, Redding ed. p. 64, Kerr ed. p. 91), substituting (1) "code" for "act," and (2) "in" for "by" after "prescribed."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 171, changing the number to § 934; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Appeal lies when. When the conclusion of the court is unsupported by the facts found, the remedy is by appeal from the judgment. Cargnani v. Cargnani, 16 Cal. App. 96; 116 Pac. 306. An order based on conflicting affidavits will not be disturbed on appeal. Asiatic Club v. Biggy, 160 Cal. 713; 117 Pac. 912. Where the complainant's bill is wholly without equity, a judgment is properly rendered upon demurrer thereto, and an appeal therefrom will be treated as frivolous. Pacific Debenture Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Cal. 106; 81 Pac. 314.

Exclusiveness of right to appeal. A writ of error does not lie, where an appeal is authorized by the code (Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297; 68 Am. Dec. 323); and where a party has a right to appeal, he is not entitled to a writ of certiorari. Newman v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 545.

Loss of right to appeal. Where, in an action to enjoin the issuance of a tax deed, the plaintiff appeals from a judgment rendered against him, he thereby abandons his remedy by appeal by afterwards redeeming the property by paying the taxes and costs. Dehail v. Los Angeles, 5 Cal. Unrep. 866; 51 Pac. 27. The right to accept the fruits of a judgment, and the right of appeal therefrom, are not concurrent, but are totally inconsistent; hence, an election to accept either of such rights is a renunciation of the other. Estate of Shavers, 131 Cal. 219; 63 Pac. 340. Where a plaintiff accepts money ordered to be paid by the defendant, as for costs and expenses, as a condition of an order setting aside a judgment by default, he is deemed to have consented to the order, and to have waived the right to appeal. San Bernardino County v. Riverside County, 135 Cal. 618; 67 Pac. 1047. A party does not lose his right to appeal by payment of the judgment, unless the payment was by way of compromise, or with an agreement not to take or pursue the appeal. Warner Bros. Co. v. Freud, 131 Cal. 639; 82 Am. St. Rep. 400; 63 Pac. 1017. An enforcement of the judgment by the plaintiff does not deprive the defendant of his right to appeal. Ramsbottom v. Fitzgerald, 6 Cal. Unrep. 214; 55 Pac. 984. The plaintiff cannot deprive the defendant of his right to appeal, and to be restored to rights lost by reason of the judgment in case of reversal, by enforcing the judgment, and entering satisfaction of it, before the time to appeal has expired. Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. The satisfaction of the judgment by setting off against it a judgment in favor of the appellant does not cut off his right to appeal. Haskins v. Jordan, 123 Cal. 157; 55 Pac. 786. The fact that a creditor, who appealed from an adjudication of insolvency, made claim and proof of his debt in the superior court, does not estop him to pursue his appeal. In re Chope, 112 Cal. 630; 44 Pac. 1066; and see Stateler v. Superior Court, 107 Cal. 536; 40 Pac. 949.

Judgment of dismissal not consent judgment when. Where items in a complaint have been stricken out, so that less than the jurisdictional amount is left, the fact that both parties thereafter admit that the court has no jurisdiction of such residue, does not render a judgment of dismissal a consent judgment. Placer County v. Freeman, 149 Cal. 738; 87 Pac. 628.

Findings, absence of evidence to support. The entire absence of evidence in support of a finding necessary to sustain a judgment presents a question of law. Troy Laundry Machinery Co. v. Drivers' Independent Laundry Co., 14 Cal. App. 152; 111 Pac. 121.

Conclusiveness of recitals in judgment. A recital by the court, in the judgment appealed from, that findings of fact and conclusions of law were waived by the failure of the defendant to appear and participate in the trial, must, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, be regarded as conclusive. Kritzer v. Tracy Engineering Co., 16 Cal. App. 287; 116 Pac. 700.

Presumption in favor of judgment. All presumptions are in favor of the action of the court below. Estate of Voght, 154 Cal. 508; 98 Pac. 265; Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080; Union Lumber Co. v. Webster, 15 Cal. App. 165; 113 Pac. 891; Serpiglio v. Downing, 14 Cal. App. 683; 112 Pac. 905.

Jurisdiction of appellate court. The amount of money involved in an appeal from an order of the superior court, taxing costs, is not determinative of the jurisdiction of the appellate court. Meyer v. Perkins, 20 Cal. App. 661; 130 Pac. 206, 208.

Appeal taken how. A judgment or order in a civil proceeding, which is not expressly made final by the code, can be reviewed by the supreme court, only when it is brought up on an appeal pursuant to the code; hence, an appeal taken in any other than the prescribed mode is abortive, and leaves the case below undisturbed. Home for Inebriates v. Kaplan, 84 Cal. 486; 24 Pac. 119. An appeal in a probate or guardianship proceeding must be taken under § 1715, post. Estate of Dunphy, 158 Cal. 1; 109 Pac. 627. The rules of practice relating to appeals under the McEnerney Act are those applicable to other civil actions. Potrero Nuevo Land Co. v. All Persons, 155 Cal. 371; 101 Pac. 12.

Rules of appellate courts. The authority to make rules of practice in the courts of appeal is vested by the constitution in the supreme court. San Joaquin etc. Irrigation Co. v. Stevinson, 16 Cal. App. 235; 116 Pac. 378. The rules of the supreme court are a part of the system of appellate procedure. Reclamation District v. Sherman, 11 Cal. App. 399; 105 Pac. 277. The ruling against dismissal in this case, for serious nonconformity of the transcript to the seventh and eighth rules of the supreme court, is no guide as a precedent for any future case showing inexcusable breach of the rules of the court. Naylor v. Adams, 15 Cal. App. 548; 115 Pac. 335.

Briefs and argument on appeal. Counsel should file briefs to assist the court in the determination of cases. Harvey v. Meigs, 17 Cal. App. 360; 119 Pac. 941. The appellant should make the points on which he relies in his opening brief, and not reserve them for his reply; the court may properly consider them as waived unless so made. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Farnham, 153 Cal. 578; 126 Am. St. Rep. 129; 96 Pac. 9. Aid should be given the appellate court, in its examination of the record, in order to discover error: counsel should point out wherein error is claimed to exist. Carley v. Vallecita Mining Co., 16 Cal. App. 781; 117 Pac. 1037. Unless rulings complained of as erroneous are pointed out, and the reasons why they are so, with reference to authorities, they will not be deemed of sufficient importance to merit notice in an opinion. National Bank v. Mulford, 17 Cal. App. 551; 120 Pac. 446.

Hearing in bank, absence of justice. A purported order of the supreme court, granting a hearing in bank, after decision in a district court of appeal, concurred in by a justice who was absent from the state, and by only three justices present in the state, is void, and must be vacated. People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 576; 114 Pac. 48; Brown v. Northern California Power Co., 14 Cal. App. 661; 114 Pac. 74.

Appeal from orders concerning amendments, and giving or denying relief from judgments. See note ante, § 473.

Jurisdiction of appeal from order denying motion for a new trial of case tried on agreed statement of facts. See note ante, § 657.

When appeals may be prosecuted from satisfied judgments. See note 45 Am. St. Rep. 271.

Right of party to review judgment in his favor. See note 3 Ann. Cas. 510.

Right of plaintiff to appeal from voluntary judgment of nonsuit. See note 9 Ann. Cas. 631.

Right of party who recovers judgment for less than his demand to appeal after satisfaction of judgment. See note 16 Ann. Cas. 79.

Right to accept favorable part of a decree, judgment, or order and appeal from the rest. See 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. The remedy by appeal is exclusive. Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297; 68 Am. Dec. 323; see also Milliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 169; Nowland v. Vaughn, 9 Cal. 52; Sacramento etc. R. R. Co. v. Harlan, 24 Cal. 336; Middleton v. Gould, 5 Cal. 190. The right of appeal exists from a judgment by default. Hallock v. Jaudin, 34 Cal. 167; McGlynn v. Brodie, 31 Cal. 382. A judgment, from which an appeal is pending, is a final one, within the meaning of § 21 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. Merritt v. Glidden, 39 Cal. 559; 2 Am. Rep. 479.

§ 937. Orders made out of court, without notice, may be reviewed by the judge.

An order made out of court, without notice to the adverse party, may be vacated or modified, without notice, by the judge who made it; or may be vacated or modified on notice, in the manner in which other motions are made.

Orders, generally. Post, §§ 1003 et seq.

Legislation § 937. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872, in the exact language of Practice Act, § 334.

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 171, changing the number to § 935; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Construction of section. This section manifestly applies only to such orders as a court or judge has power or jurisdiction to make without notice. Boca etc. R. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 147; 88 Pac. 715.

Orders in probate. An allowance, by a judge, of a claim against the estate of a deceased person, made on an ex parte application, may subsequently be set aside by him without notice to the claimant. Estate of Sullenberger, 72 Cal. 549; 14 Pac. 513. A decree discharging an administrator, made inadvertently and ex parte, may be set aside by the court. Wiggin v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 398; 9 Pac. 646.

Order granting leave to file cross-complaint. An order granting leave to file a cross-complaint, made upon an ex parte application, without notice to the plaintiff, by the judge, and not by the court, may be set aside without notice. Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565; 79 Pac. 171; and see Coburn v. Pacific Lumber etc. Co., 46 Cal. 31.

Injunction vacated or modified how. It is competent for the judge to vacate or modify an injunction order without notice, but it is not the better practice, and should never be done, except when, from the urgency of the case, it is necessary to guard against serious loss, and except where the injunction has been improvidently granted upon a complaint disclosing no ground whatever for equitable relief. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440. An injunction, granted ex parte, is properly modified, without notice to the plaintiff, on application of the defendant. Fremont v. Merced Mining Co., 9 Cal. 18. This section does not apply where an injunction was granted ex parte, and the application to dissolve the injunction was based upon affidavits; notice, in such case, is required to be given, under § 532, ante: it is only when the application to dissolve the injunction is based on the showing made when it was granted that this section applies. Heffon v. Bowers, 72 Cal. 270; 13 Pac. 690. This section is not affected by the provision of § 532, ante, that if an injunction is granted without notice, the defendant can apply to the judge who granted the injunction, to dissolve or modify it: the latter action is in addition to the provisions of this section. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440.

Appeal. This section does not affect provisions allowing an appeal from an order granting an injunction: such right is a further remedy to that provided by this section. Sullivan v. Triunfo Gold etc. Mining Co., 33 Cal. 385.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. See subdivision 2 of note to § 532 of this code.

§ 938. Party aggrieved may appeal. Names of parties.

Any party aggrieved may appeal in the cases prescribed in this title. The party appealing is known as the appellant, and the adverse party as the respondent.

Death of party, effect of. Ante, § 385.

Legislation § 938. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 335), substituting "is" for "shall be."

2. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 171, changing the number to § 936; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Right of aggrieved party to appeal. A party aggrieved may appeal (Estate of Benner, 155 Cal. 153; 99 Pac. 715; Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843); but a party not aggrieved has no standing as an appellant. United Railroads v. Colgan, 153 Cal. 53; 94 Pac. 245; People v. Bank of San Luis Obispo, 152 Cal. 261; 92 Pac. 481; Estate of Piper, 147 Cal. 606; 82 Pac. 246; Delger v. Jacobs, 19 Cal. App. 197; 125 Pac. 258; Flannigan v. Towle, 8 Cal. App. 229; 96 Pac. 507. Where the plaintiffs appeal, but the defendants do not, the latter are in no position to attack the findings and conclusions of law. Garibaldi v. Grillo, 17 Cal. App. 540; 120 Pac. 425. Where a corporation has appealed, and is afterwards merged into another corporation, but both appear as appellants, an objection that the latter has no standing in the matter is immaterial, where all of its rights are fully protected by the appeal of the corporation first named. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 147 Cal. 663; 82 Pac. 319.

Aggrieved party, who is. Any person having an interest, recognized by law, in the subject-matter of the judgment, which interest is injuriously affected by the judgment, is a party aggrieved, and entitled to be heard upon appeal. Estate of Colton, 164 Cal. 1; 127 Pac. 643. The right of appeal is remedial in its character, and in doubtful cases the right should always be granted; and an appeal will be sustained where there is a reservation in the judgment, by which the appellant is necessarily aggrieved, and which, in effect, renders the judgment in his favor a nullity. Quint v. McMullen, 103 Cal. 381; 37 Pac. 381. As to a judgment dismissing an action, which provides that such dismissal is not a bar to another action, the defendant therein is an aggrieved party. Nevills v. Shortridge, 129 Cal. 575; 62 Pac. 120. The sureties on the replevin bond are parties aggrieved by a judgment rendered against their principal, since they are concluded thereby. Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742. A party not having a right to bring the suit, and not interested in the controversy, is not a party aggrieved by the judgment. Williams v. Savings and Loan Society, 133 Cal. 360; 65 Pac. 822. A defendant, against whom no judgment is rendered, is not a party aggrieved by an order granting a new trial as to a co-defendant. Rankin v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 73 Cal. 96; 15 Pac. 57. An appeal taken by a defendant whose name is omitted from the judgment as entered is a nullity: such defendant is not a party aggrieved by a judgment against a co-defendant. Spencer v. Troutt, 133 Cal. 605; 65 Pac. 1083. Where a pretermitted finding must necessarily be adverse to appellants, they are not aggrieved by the omission. Pinheiro v. Bettencourt, 17 Cal. App. 111; 118 Pac. 941. The question as to who are adversely affected is to be considered in connection with the merits of the case, and not on a motion to dismiss the appeal. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486; 1027.

Appellant must be a party of record. None but parties to the record can appeal. Elliott v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 501; 103 Am. St. Rep. 102; 77 Pac. 1109. A person shown by the record to be a party aggrieved may appeal, although he has not previously appeared in the case. Estate of Meade, 5 Cal. Unrep. 678; 49 Pac. 5. One not a party to the record cannot, as a rule, appeal in his own name; one not a party to the action or proceeding may sometimes appeal, but his interest must be made to appear in the record in some way, and he must be made a party to the ruling appealed from. Estate of Crooks, 125 Cal. 459; 58 Pac. 89. To entitle a person to an appeal under this section, he must have been a party to the action or proceeding in the court below; he need not have been an original party when the action was first instituted, but he must have made himself a party afterwards by some appropriate action, and the record must show that he was such party. Estate of McDermott, 127 Cal. 450; 59 Pac. 783; and see Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082.

Stranger to record. An appeal lies from an order denying the motion of one not a party to the record, to vacate or modify an order for a writ of possession; and he may insist upon the duty of the court to fix the amount of the undertaking necessary to stay the operation of the writ of possession, and the discharge of such duty may be compelled by writ of mandate. Green v. Hebbard, 95 Cal. 39; 30 Pac. 202. An order for a writ of assistance, made upon an ex parte application against the defendant, is not operative against any other person than the defendant; and appellants, who were not parties to the order, are not parties aggrieved, so as to be entitled to appeal. Miller v. Bate, 56 Cal. 135. Strangers to an action do not become parties of record thereto by being parties to a contract, though it is embodied in an order of the court, nor do they become parties to the action by intervention in a special proceeding during the time a person was acting as receiver, so as to entitle them to appeal from the judgment in such action. Elliott v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 501; 103 Am. St. Rep. 102; 77 Pac. 1109.

Interveners. The interveners in an action, where judgment has been rendered against the defendant, are entitled to appeal from such judgment, though the defendant did not appeal, since the court, by granting leave to intervene, determined that they had an interest in the matter in litigation. People v. Perris Irrigation Dist., 132 Cal. 289; 64 Pac. 399. One who is denied the right to intervene has an immediate right of appeal. Dollenmayer v. Pryor, 150 Cal. 1; 87 Pac. 616. A proceeding in the nature of an intervention is substantially an independent action, from the judgment in which any party aggrieved may appeal. De Forrest v. Coffey, 154 Cal. 444; 98 Pac. 27.

Sureties. A surety, merely as such, has no right of appeal from a judgment against his principal. Estate of McDermott, 127 Cal. 450; 59 Pac. 783. The sureties on a replevin bond, whose application to intervene in an action of replevin has been refused, and who have taken exception to such refusal, are parties to the record in a technical sense, so as to entitle them to prosecute an appeal from the judgment against their principal. Coburn v. Smart, 53 Cal. 742; and see People v. Grant, 45 Cal. 97. A petition in intervention by a surety, merely for the purpose of appeal from the order, and an allowance thereof by the court, does not render such surety a party to the action, so as to entitle him to appeal from the judgment against his principal. Estate of McDermott, 127 Cal. 450; 59 Pac. 783.

Trustees. Trustees who claim funds in the hands of an executor, adversely to the estate, who have not presented any claim against the estate, are not parties aggrieved by a decree distributing the funds to the heir. Estate of Burdick, 112 Cal. 387; 44 Pac. 734. Trustees under a will who have sued to obtain for their direction a construction of certain clauses of the will, are not parties aggrieved by an order of the court allowing the attorney and guardian ad litem for the minor heirs a fee for their services, to be paid by the trustees out of any funds in their hands belonging to the estate. Goldtree v. Thompson, 83 Cal. 420; 23 Pac. 383; and see Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 306; Bates v. Ryberg, 40 Cal. 465; Estate of Wright, 49 Cal. 550; Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 387.

Appeal does not lie from satisfied judgment. A board of supervisors, which levied taxes in pursuance of a judgment, cannot be said to be aggrieved, so as to be entitled thereafter to appeal from such judgment, which was satisfied and its force exhausted. San Diego School District v. Board of Supervisors, 97 Cal. 438; 32 Pac. 517.

Garnishment, judgment debtor. Where a fund claimed to be due to the judgment debtor has been garnished, but, before judgment, is assigned to another creditor, and the court improperly orders the garnishee to pay the fund into court, the assignee is the party adversely interested, and an appeal by the judgment debtor cannot be sustained, as he is not a party aggrieved. Schino v. Cinquini, 7 Cal. App. 244; 94 Pac. 83.

Foreclosure suit, lien claimant in. Where the defendant in an action to foreclose a mortgage, who claimed a judgment lien on the premises, fails to appear at the trial, and offers no proof, a finding that all the allegations of the answer are untrue shows that he has no interest in the action, and hence he is not an aggrieved party entitled to appeal. Foster v. Bowles, 138 Cal. 449; 71 Pac. 495.

Receivership, person interested in. Any person interested in a fund in the hands of a receiver may appeal from an order fixing the compensation of the receiver, and taxing it as costs in the action, and directing him to apply toward its payment the balance of the fund remaining in his hands. Grant v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 71; 47 Pac. 872. A person cannot become a party to the action, merely by consenting to an order settling the account of the receiver therein; nor where his assent to agreements in the action was not given for the purpose of placing himself and his interest in the property in controversy within the jurisdiction of the court, but merely to make the contract between the parties effective and binding only so far as it affected his interest in the property. Elliott v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 501; 103 Am. St. Rep. 102; 77 Pac. 1109. One who is a defendant in a suit, and is in possession of real estate sought to be recovered through the medium of a receiver, has a right to appeal from the order appointing the receiver. Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843.

Insolvency, creditors in. Creditors aggrieved by a judgment in insolvency proceedings may appeal. Kohlman v. Wright, 6 Cal. 230. A creditor of an insolvent estate of a deceased person is a party aggrieved by an order of family allowance erroneously made, and may appeal therefrom. Estate of Fretwell, 152 Cal. 573; 93 Pac. 283.

Judicial sales, purchasers at. The purchaser of land sold by an administratrix, though not an actual party to the proceedings in the court below, is a party aggrieved, and is entitled to appeal from an order directing the resale of the property. Estate of Boland, 55 Cal. 310. The purchaser of property of an estate, at the executor's sale thereof, has a right to file objections to a confirmation of the sale by the probate court, and is a party aggrieved by an order of the court confirming the sale, and is entitled to appeal therefrom. Estate of Pearsons, 98 Cal. 603; 33 Pac. 451. The purchaser at a sale under an interlocutory decree of partition is a party to the confirmation of the sale, and has the right of appeal from that part of the decree as to which he is a party aggrieved. Hammond v. Cailleaud, 111 Cal. 206; 52 Am. St. Rep. 167; 43 Pac. 607; Dunn v. Dunn, 137 Cal. 51; 69 Pac. 847. The purchaser of property at a judicial sale is entitled to appeal from an order refusing confirmation of the sale and refusing to hear evidence thereon. Estate of Leonis, 138 Cal. 194; 71 Pac. 171.

Suits to quiet title, claimants in. Where appellants admitted, at the trial, in a suit to quiet title, that their title was involved in only one of several tax deeds offered in evidence, they are not aggrieved parties, in so far as the judgment relates to the other tracts. Flannigan v. Towle, 8 Cal. App. 229; 96 Pac 507.

Estates of decedents, claimants to. The claimants to an estate, who have not controverted the finding that they were not kin to the deceased, are not parties aggrieved in a ruling respecting the rights of a person to whom the estate has been granted, or those of any other claimants. Blythe v. Ayres, 102 Cal. 254; 36 Pac. 522. Parties whose right to distribution of the estate of a decedent depends upon the character of the property, as community or otherwise, not having attached the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the finding that the property was the separate property of the deceased, are not parties aggrieved, so as to be entitled to appeal, making merely the point that the court was without jurisdiction to make the decree distributing the estate to the state. Estate of Piper, 147 Cal. 606; 82 Pac. 246. After the claim of a woman, as the widow of a deceased person, has been finally adjudicated adversely to her on appeal, in a proceeding to determine the heirship and right of succession in the estate of the deceased, she thereupon ceases to be a party interested in the estate, and cannot afterwards maintain an appeal from the decree distributing the estate. Estate of Blythe, 108 Cal. 124; 41 Pac. 33. The mortgagee of a deceased devisee, who is not a party to the decree of distribution, is not entitled to appeal therefrom. Estate of Crooks, 125 Cal. 459; 58 Pac. 89. The contestants of a will, who are not heirs at law of the testator, nor related to him, are not parties aggrieved, entitled to appeal from an order denying a new trial. Estate of Antoldi, 7 Cal. Unrep. 211; 81 Pac. 278.

Executors and administrators. The devisees under the will as well as the executors, are parties aggrieved by an order setting apart from the property of the deceased a homestead for the use of the surviving wife for and during the period of administration and until the final distribution of the estate. Estate of Levy, 141 Cal. 646; 99 Am. St. Rep. 92; 75 Pac. 301. The executrix of a deceased administrator, to whom the succeeding administrator had been directed to pay a certain sum as counsel fees for the services of an attorney rendered to him as administrator, is not a party aggrieved by an order directing the payment of such sum, without interest. Estate of Blythe, 103 Cal. 350; 37 Pac. 392. The executors of a deceased person are parties aggrieved by an order of the probate court, requiring them, in pursuance of the terms of the will, to redeem certain lands from a foreclosure sale, and, as such, are entitled to appeal from the order. Estate of Heydenfeldt, 117 Cal. 551; 49 Pac. 713. An executor is not an aggrieved party, and consequently cannot appeal from an order distributing the estate to the persons found entitled thereto, if jurisdiction of the proceedings for distribution has been properly acquired by the superior court before making the order. Estate of Williams, 122 Cal. 76; 54 Pac. 386. An executrix is a party aggrieved by an order for partial distribution to legatees under the will, where she presents for review an issue of law as to the sufficiency of the petition to show that there were sufficient assets to pay legacies without loss to the creditors. Estate of Murphy, 145 Cal. 464; 78 Pac. 960. Executors may appeal from any order that is embarrassing to the due administration of the estate. Estate of Colton, 164 Cal. 1; 127 Pac. 643. Where an estate is insolvent, and an order directing the payment of a preferred claim is made before the amount of the distributable estate is ascertained and the accounts of the administrator settled, the administrator is a party aggrieved by the premature order, and has a right of appeal therefrom. Estate of Smith, 117 Cal. 505; 49 Pac. 456. A special administrator is a party aggrieved by an order settling his account, and directing him to pay a balance in his hands to another special administrator. Estate of Heaton, 139 Cal. 237; 73 Pac. 186. Where an administrator files a petition to sell two parcels of land, the court's denial of the petition as to one parcel does not make him an aggrieved party, and he is not entitled to appeal therefrom. Estate of Steward, 1 Cal. App. 57; 81 Pac. 728. A public administrator, making or having no claim upon an estate beyond his commissions, and not filing the petition for distribution nor taking part at the hearing, is not an aggrieved party having the right to appeal. Estate of Jones, 118 Cal. 499; 62 Am. St. Rep. 251; 50 Pac. 766; and see Bates v. Ryberg, 40 Cal. 463; Estate of Wright, 49 Cal. 550; Estate of Marrey, 65 Cal. 287; 3 Pac. 896.

Person claiming right to administer. One who claims a prior right to administer upon the estate of a deceased person is, upon the denial of such right, a party aggrieved, and entitled to appeal from the order granting letters of administration to another. Estate of Damke, 133 Cal. 433; 65 Pac. 888.

Joint appeals. A plaintiff and a defendant, who are defendants in a cross-complaint filed by another defendant, may unite in an appeal from the judgment against them on the cross-complaint. Downing v. Rademacher, 136 Cal. 673; 69 Pac. 415. Joint appeals may be taken by parties who are aggrieved, and they may be supported by one undertaking. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486; 92 Pac. 1027.

Motion to dismiss appeal, inquiry as to merits. A motion to dismiss an appeal, on the ground that the appellant is not a party aggrieved by the order and decree appealed from, which involves an inquiry as to the merits, will be denied. Estate of Williams, 4 Cal. Unrep. 511; 36 Pac. 6. Whether the judgment is prejudicial to the rights of the appellant, or whether it is competent for the court to determine the effect of its judgment in any subsequent proceeding between the parties, are questions involving the merits, and cannot be determined on a motion to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the defendant was not an aggrieved party, because judgment was in his favor. Nevills v. Shortridge, 129 Cal. 575; 62 Pac. 120.

"Any party," defined. The term, "any party," in this section, means any person who is a party to the action. Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 637.

Who may appeal as an interested or injured party. See note 119 Am. St. Rep. 740.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Who may appeal. One not a party to a record may appeal, if aggrieved by the judgment. Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 306. Any heir, devisee, or legatee of an estate, party to proceedings for distribution, may appeal from the final order of distribution; but the executor of the estate cannot, upon the ground that the estate was improperly distributed. Bates v. Ryberg, 40 Cal. 463. The party aggrieved, within the meaning of § 335 of the Practice Act, is the one against whom an appealable order or judgment has been entered; and when an order is made directing an injunction upon condition that an undertaking be executed and filed, the party against whom the order is made may appeal at once. Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 250. A party made defendant in an action, if a decree is taken against him, may appeal, and the appeal cannot be dismissed upon the ground that he is not a party in interest. Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636. I. filed his complaint against T., alleging a partnership between them, and praying for an account of the partnership property. Subsequently I. filed a petition in the same court, setting forth the complaint, and also that L. T. B. and H. B. had obtained judgment against T., the defendant, and that execution had issued on the judgment, and was levied on the partnership property of the plaintiff and defendant, and that the sheriff was about to sell the property. The petition prayed that L. T. B. and H. B. might be made parties, and that an injunction might issue against L. T. B. and H. B. and the sheriff. It was held on appeal that it did not lie in the mouth of I. and T. to say that L. T. B. and H. B. were not parties to the suit, and had no right of appeal. Jones v. Thompson, 12 Cal. 191. That appellant has resided out of the state for several years, is not ground for denying his right to appeal. Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636.

2. Who may not appeal. See subdivision 1 of this note. A party not affected by a judgment cannot take an appeal. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Ordway, 38 Cal. 679. In an action against the husband alone, involving the homestead right, the judgment could not affect the question of homestead, and the husband has no right of appeal. Kraemer v. Revalk, 8 Cal. 74. A judgment in a suit against a corporation contained a direction for the sale of the interest of individuals not parties to the action; from it the corporation alone appealed. Held, that the corporation could not take advantage of the error in the judgment in embracing individuals. Dennis v. Table Mountain Water Co., 10 Cal. 369.

§ 939. Within what time appeal may be taken. An appeal may be taken from any judgment or order of a superior court from which an appeal lies under any provision of this code, or of any other code, or under any other statute, within sixty days from the entry of said judgment or order. No appeal, however, shall be dismissed on the ground that it was taken after the rendition of such judgment or order and before formal entry. If proceedings on motion for a new trial are pending, the time for appeal from the judgment shall not expire until thirty days after entry in the trial court of the order determining such motion for a new trial, or other termination in the trial court of the proceedings upon such motion.

Definition of judgment. Ante, § 577.
Exceptions, need of. Ante, § 646; post, § 956.

Legislation § 939. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 336, as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 706, which read: "An appeal may be taken: First. From a final judgment in an action or special proceeding commenced in the court in which the same is rendered, within one year after the rendition of the judgment. Second. From a judgment rendered on an appeal from an inferior court, within ninety days after the rendition of such judgment. Third. From an order granting or refusing a new trial; from an order granting or dissolving an injunction; from an order refusing to grant or dissolve an injunction; from an order dissolving or refusing to dissolve an attachment; from any special order made after final judgment, and from an interlocutory judgment in actions for partition of real property, within sixty days after the order or interlocutory judgment is made and entered in the minutes of the court." When § 939 was enacted in 1872, it read: "§ 939. An appeal may be taken: 1. From a final judgment in an action or special proceeding commenced in the court in which the same is rendered, within one year after the entry of judgment. But an exception to the decision or verdict, on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence, cannot be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, unless the appeal is taken within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment; 2. From a judgment rendered on an appeal from an inferior court, within ninety days after the entry of such judgment; 3. From an order granting or refusing a new trial; from an order granting or dissolving an injunction; from an order refusing to grant or dissolve an injunction; from an order dissolving or refusing to dissolve an attachment; from an order granting or refusing to grant a change of the place of trial; from any special order made after final judgment, and from an interlocutory judgment in actions for partition of real property, within sixty days after the order or interlocutory judgment is made and entered in the minutes of the court or filed with the clerk."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 61, (1) in subd. 3, adding, (a) after "real property," the words in the present subdivision, beginning "and from an order," and ending "sixty-three of this code," and (b) "(60)" after "sixty."

3. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 55, (1) in subd. 1, changing "one year" to "six months"; (2) in subd. 3, (a) adding, after "dissolve an injunction," the words "from an order appointing a receiver," and (b) omitting "and" before "from an interlocutory," "in the provisions" after "mentioned," and "(60)" after "sixty."

4. Amended by Stats. 1899, p. 7, (1) in subd. 3, (a) adding, after "final judgment," the words "from an interlocutory judgment, order, or decree hereafter made or entered in any action to redeem real or personal property from a mortgage thereof, or lien thereon, determining such right to redeem and ordering an accounting," and (b) changing before "interlocutory," at end of section, the word "or" to "of" (sic).

5. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 172, being a substitution of § 963, post, for this section, with amendments, the old § 963 being repealed; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

6. Amended by Stats. 1907, p. 60, the section then reading, "939. An appeal may be taken: 1. From a final judgment in an action, or special proceeding, commenced in the court in which the same is rendered, within six months after the entry of judgment. But an exception to the decision, or verdict, on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence, cannot be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, unless the appeal is taken within sixty days after the entry of the judgment; 2. From a judgment rendered on appeal from an inferior court, within ninety days after the entry of such judgment; 3. From an order granting or refusing a new trial; from an order granting or dissolving an injunction; from an order refusing to grant or dissolve an injunction; from an order appointing a receiver; from an order dissolving or refusing to dissolve an attachment; from an order granting or refusing to grant a change of the place of trial; from any special order made after final judgment; from an interlocutory judgment, order, or decree hereafter made or entered in any action for divorce or to redeem real or personal property from a mortgage thereof, or lien thereon, determining such right to redeem and ordering an accounting; from an interlocutory judgment in actions for partition of real property; and from an order confirming, changing, modifying, or setting aside the report, in whole or in part, of the referees in actions for partition of real property in the cases mentioned in section seven hundred and sixty-three of this code, within sixty days after the order or interlocutory judgment is made and entered in the minutes of the court, or filed with the clerk."

7. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 205, recasting the section.

Construction of code sections. The amendment to this section in 1897, reducing the time allowed for appeal from a judgment from one year to six months, is to be construed as not intended to operate retrospectively upon judgments entered before its passage, but as limited in its operation to judgments thereafter entered. Pignaz v. Burnett, 119 Cal. 157; 51 Pac. 48; Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234; 52 Pac. 491. Since the amendment to this section in 1897, allowing an appeal from an order appointing a receiver, and the amendment, at the same time, of § 943, post, providing for the staying of an order by an undertaking on appeal, there is afforded a remedy for prodigal, unwise, and unwarranted appointments of receivers; therefore prohibition will not lie to arrest proceedings under an order appointing a receiver. Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826; and see French Bank Case, 53 Cal. 495; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529; 2 Pac. 418. The first subdivision of this section is applicable to judgments in election contests; yet errors in the admission and rejection of ballots, excepted to at the trial, are not within that subdivision, and may be reviewed upon an appeal from the judgment, taken after the lapse of sixty days. McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323; 82 Pac. 243; and see Packard v. Craig, 114 Cal. 95; 45 Pac. 1033. The shortening of the time for appeal made by the amendment of 1897, did not affect the limitation of one year in which to invoke the remedy given by § 473, ante, as that is wholly independent of the remedy by appeal. Fox v. Townsend, 2 Cal. App. 193; 83 Pac. 272.

Requisites of valid appeal. Where the appellant gives notice of appeal under this section, he must also comply with the provisions of § 940, post, requiring the serving as well as the filing of his notice of appeal and the giving of an undertaking. Theisen v. Matthai, 165 Cal. 249; 131 Pac. 747.

Concerning the new method of appeal. See notes post, §§ 941a–941c, 953a–953c.

Final judgment. A final judgment is one that finally determines the rights of all the parties in relation to the matter in controversy. Nolan v. Smith, 137 Cal. 360; 70 Pac. 166; and see Stockton etc. Agricultural Works v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 98 Cal. 557; 33 Pac. 633; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Superior Court, 153 Cal. 753; 96 Pac. 803. Under the first subdivision of this section, prescribing the older method of taking appeals, an appeal from a final judgment must be taken, if at all, within six months after the entry of such judgment. Cook v. Suburban Realty Co., 20 Cal. App. 538; 129 Pac. 801. An order settling the account of a receiver, and directing the payment of his compensation by one of the parties, although made before there has been a final judgment in the action in which he was appointed, is a final determination of the rights of the parties in the matter then before the court, and an appeal therefrom, as from a final judgment, may be taken within six months after its entry. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 134 Cal. 121; 66 Pac. 198.

Appeal from final judgment. See note post, § 963.

Review of sufficiency of evidence to support finding or verdict. The word "decision," or the alternative word "verdict," as used in this section, refers to the written findings of facts and conclusions of law required by §§ 632, 633, ante, to the exclusion of the intermediate orders and decisions which may be reviewed upon appeal from a final judgment, and as to which no written findings are required. Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528; 24 Pac. 292. The ruling on a motion for a nonsuit is a decision, within the meaning of this section; hence, the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the decision will not be considered, unless the appeal is taken within sixty days. Miller v. Wade, 87 Cal. 410; 25 Pac. 487. Before the amendment of this section in 1907, changing "rendition" to "entry," the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the decision could be reviewed, where the appeal was taken within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Pease v. Fink, 3 Cal. App. 371; 85 Pac. 657. At the present time, the sufficiency of the evidence cannot be reviewed, where the appeal was taken more than sixty days after the "entry" of the judgment. In re College Hill Land Ass'n, 157 Cal. 596; 108 Pac. 681; First Nat. Bank v. Trognitz, 14 Cal. App. 176; 111 Pac. 402; Cordano v. Ferretti, 15 Cal. App. 670; 115 Pac. 657; Morcom v. Baiersky, 16 Cal. App. 480; 117 Pac. 560; Union Lumber Co. v. Sunset Road Oil Co., 17 Cal. App. 460; 120 Pac. 44; National Bank v. Mulford, 17 Cal. App. 551; 120 Pac. 446; and see also Clark v. Gridley, 49 Cal. 105. The provision of this section, that the evidence cannot be reviewed on appeal from the judgment unless the appeal is taken within sixty days after the rendition of judgment, does not change the time within which the appeal must be taken, but is only a limitation upon the matters that may be considered upon the appeal. McHugh v. Adkins, 117 Cal. 228; 49 Pac. 2. On an appeal from a judgment confirming the report of appraisers setting apart a homestead out of the estate of a decedent, the evidence could be reviewed, prior to 1907, if the appeal was taken within sixty days after the order was made. Estate of Crowey, 71 Cal. 300; 12 Pac. 230. An appeal from an order denying a motion to vacate a judgment, void on its face, must be taken within sixty days. Beaumont v. Midway Provident Oil Company, 21 Cal. App. 128; 131 Pac. 106. While the filing of the undertaking perfects the appeal, yet it is not a part of the taking of the appeal in the statutory sense; hence, the fact that it was not given within sixty days from the rendition of judgment did not prevent a consideration of the evidence. Perkins v. Cooper, 3 Cal. Unrep. 279; 24 Pac. 377. An order or decision striking out a complaint being an intermediate order or decision, the provisions of this section do not preclude a review of the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain such order or decision, on appeal taken more than sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528; 24 Pac. 292. An order settling the account of an administrator is not a judgment; hence, the evidence upon which the order was based can be reviewed, although the appeal was taken more than sixty days after the order was signed and filed with the clerk, but less than sixty days after it was entered in the minute-book of the clerk: the provisions of this section do not apply to an appeal from such an order. Estate of Levinson, 108 Cal. 450; 41 Pac. 483; 42 Pac. 479; Estate of Rose, 80 Cal. 166; 22 Pac. 86, reversing Estate of Rose, 3 Cal. Unrep. 50; 20 Pac. 712. The refusal to admit and to take into consideration certain proper evidence, and the taking into consideration of other evidence which should have been excluded, can be considered on appeal from the judgment, taken more than sixty days after the rendition thereof. McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323; 82 Pac. 243; and see Packard v. Craig, 114 Cal. 95; 45 Pac. 1033. Upon appeal from a judgment, taken more than sixty days after the rendition thereof, the case must be reviewed upon the judgment roll alone, without reference to the question whether the evidence was sufficient to support the findings and judgment or not. Reed v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 538; 59 Pac. 986. Where the judgment was not entered in time to allow an appeal therefrom to be taken within sixty days from its rendition, the evidence could be reviewed only upon motion for a new trial. Painter v. Painter, 113 Cal. 371; 45 Pac. 689.

Review of evidence on bill of exceptions. Evidence contained in a bill of exceptions could not be considered on an appeal taken more than sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Los Angeles Brewing Co. v. Klinge, 7 Cal. App. 550; 95 Pac. 44. The second sentence of the first subdivision of this section refers only to exceptions to a decision on an issue of fact: it does not apply to a bill of exceptions to the order of the trial court refusing to allow proposed amendments. Campbell-Kawannanakoa v. Campbell, 152 Cal. 201; 92 Pac. 184. An exception to the entry of judgment against executors, on the ground that no claim had been presented to them, and that the decision was against law, in giving judgment against them without proof of the presentation of the claim, is not, in effect, an objection to the decision on the ground that it was not sustained by the evidence, and may be reviewed on appeal, although not taken within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Falkner v. Hendy, 107 Cal. 49; 40 Pac. 21. A statement on motion for a new trial may be used for the purpose of determining the sufficiency of the evidence, where the appeal was taken within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 150 Cal. 764; 89 Pac. 1090. A bill of exceptions may be looked into to determine the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, on an appeal from the judgment, taken within sixty days after its rendition, even though there is no motion for a new trial. Perkins v. Cooper, 3 Cal. Unrep. 279; 24 Pac. 377; and see Balch v. Jones, 61 Cal. 234; Estate of Crowey, 71 Cal. 300; 12 Pac. 230. A bill of exceptions, which contains no specifications of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify the findings, and shows no errors of law, cannot be considered upon appeal from an order denying a new trial, nor upon an appeal from the judgment, taken more than sixty days after its entry. Sather Banking Co. v. Briggs, 138 Cal. 724; 72 Pac. 352. The insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings may be reviewed, under a proper bill of exceptions, if the appeal was taken within sixty days after the entry of the judgment. Russell v. Banks, 11 Cal. App. 450; 105 Pac. 261. A judgment of dismissal, without findings, and without an opportunity to the appellant to prepare a record, is not an exception to the decision or verdict. Rickey Land etc. Co. v. Glader, 153 Cal. 179; 94 Pac. 768.

Appeal must be taken within sixty days. The sufficiency of the evidence to support the decision, judgment, or verdict could not be reviewed prior to the amendment to this section in 1907, substituting "entry" for "rendition," where the appeal was taken more than sixty days after the rendition of the judgment (Bettis v. Townsend, 61 Cal. 333; Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202; 10 Pac. 510; Mogk v. Peterson, 75 Cal. 496; 17 Pac. 446; McGrath v. Hyde, 81 Cal. 38; 22 Pac. 293; Turner v. Reynolds, 81 Cal. 214; 22 Pac. 546; Miller v. Wade, 87 Cal. 410; 25 Pac. 487; Curran v. Kennedy, 89 Cal. 98; 26 Pac. 641; Forni v. Yoell, 99 Cal. 173; 33 Pac. 887; Nelmes v. Wilson, 4 Cal. Unrep. 267; 34 Pac. 341; Steen v. Hendy, 4 Cal. Unrep. 916; 38 Pac. 718; Secord v. Quigley, 106 Cal. 149; 39 Pac. 623; Brooks v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 173; 42 Pac. 570; Painter v. Painter, 113 Cal. 371; 45 Pac. 689; California Improvement Co. v. Baroteau, 116 Cal. 136; 47 Pac. 1018; Rhoads v. Gray, 5 Cal. Unrep. 664; 48 Pac. 971; Wood v. Etiwanda Water Co., 122 Cal. 152; 54 Pac. 726; McRae v. Argonaut Land etc. Co., 6 Cal. Unrep. 145; 54 Pac. 743; Wise v. Ballou, 129 Cal. 45; 61 Pac. 574; Coonan v. Loewenthal, 129 Cal. 197; 61 Pac. 940; Ryland v. Heney, 130 Cal. 426; 62 Pac. 616; McDonald v. Hayes, 132 Cal. 490; 64 Pac. 850; People v. Jones, 7 Cal. Unrep. 64; 70 Pac. 1063; Gilbert v. Kelly, 138 Cal. 689; 72 Pac. 344; Dodge v. Carter, 140 Cal. 663; 74 Pac. 292; Baum v. Roper, 145 Cal. 116; 78 Pac. 466; Hawley v. Harrington, 152 Cal. 188; 92 Pac. 177; Crandall v. Parks, 152 Cal. 772; 93 Pac. 1018; Andrews v. Wheeler, 10 Cal. App. 614; 103 Pac. 144; Carver v. San Joaquin Cigar Co., 16 Cal. App. 761; 118 Pac. 92; Layne v. Johnson, 19 Cal. App. 95; 124 Pac. 860), although the evidence and the specifications were set forth in the statement (Wall v. Mines, 128 Cal. 136; 60 Pac. 682), nor although the appeal was taken within sixty days after service of the notice of rendition: notice of the rendition of the judgment was not required (Fatjo v. Swasey, 111 Cal. 628; 44 Pac. 225); nor could such sufficiency be considered on an appeal taken within sixty days after the "entry" of the judgment, but not within sixty days after its "rendition." Schurtz v. Romer, 81 Cal. 244; 22 Pac. 657.

Orders respecting new trial. There is an immediate right of appeal from an order denying a new trial, as soon as it is entered in the minutes of the court. O'Rourke v. Finch, 8 Cal. App. 263; 96 Pac. 784. An appeal from an order denying a new trial must be taken within sixty days from the time the order is made and entered. Walbridge v. Cousins, 2 Cal. App. 302; 83 Pac. 462; Prine v. Duncan, 7 Cal. Unrep. 330; 90 Pac. 713. To render an appeal from an order denying a new trial valid, the undertaking on appeal must be given and the notice of appeal must be filed within sixty days after the order is made. Holcomb v. Sawyer, 51 Cal. 417. An appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, not taken within sixty days after the order is entered in the minutes of the court, will be dismissed. Esrey v. Southern Pacific Co., 4 Cal. Unrep. 402; 35 Pac. 310; McDonald v. Lee, 132 Cal. 252; 64 Pac. 250; and see Peck v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 207; Brown v. Green, 65 Cal. 221; 3 Pac. 811. An order striking a statement on motion for a new trial from the files is a special order, made after judgment, and if the appeal therefrom is not taken within sixty days from its date, it must be dismissed. Symons v. Bunnell, 101 Cal. 223; 35 Pac. 770. An appeal from an order granting a new trial operates to suspend the functions of the order, and leaves the judgment subsisting for the purposes of an appeal therefrom pending the order; and the time between the making of the order and the reversal thereof upon appeal cannot be excluded from the computation of time within which an appeal must be taken from the judgment. Henry v. Merguire, 111 Cal. 1; 43 Pac. 387. An appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial may be taken before the judgment is entered. Schroder v. Schmidt, 71 Cal. 399; 12 Pac. 302.

Motion for new trial after notice of entry of judgment. See note ante, § 659.

Order dissolving injunction. An appeal from an order dissolving an injunction must be taken within sixty days from the entry of the order. Barham v. Hostetter, 67 Cal. 272; 7 Pac. 689; and see McCourtney v. Fortune, 42 Cal. 387.

Order dissolving attachment. An appeal from an order dissolving an attachment may be taken, under this section, within sixty days from the date of the order, whether the appellant takes steps to preserve the lien of the attachment or not. Flagg v. Puterbaugh, 101 Cal. 583; 36 Pac. 95.

Order changing place of trial. An appeal must be taken within sixty days after the entry or filing of an order changing the place of trial. Chase v. Superior Court, 154 Cal. 789; 99 Pac. 355.

Order made after final judgment. An order discharging a judgment debtor from imprisonment is a special order made after final judgment, though made by the judge of another court, who was authorized to take jurisdiction of such proceedings, and an appeal must be taken within sixty days from the entry of the order. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Anthony, 35 Cal. 696. An order refusing to set aside and vacate a judgment must be appealed from within sixty days from the entry of the order. McCourtney v. Fortune, 42 Cal. 387. An appeal from an order refusing to vacate a judgment by default, being from an order made after final judgment, must be taken within sixty days from the date of such order. Doyle v. Republic Life Ins. Co., 125 Cal. 15; 57 Pac. 667; and see Harper v. Hildreth, 99 Cal. 265; 33 Pac. 1103. An order of sale of mortgaged premises, for the entire debt after its maturity, after judgment of foreclosure, is appealable only as an order made after judgment, and within sixty days from the entry thereof. Byrne v. Hoag, 126 Cal. 283; 58 Pac. 688. An order that money sold on execution, without delivery, be paid to the purchaser is appealable as a special order made after final judgment. Magee v. Superior Court, 10 Cal. App. 154; 101 Pac. 532.

Appeal from orders made after judgment. See note post, § 963.

Interlocutory judgment appealable when. No appeal can be taken from an interlocutory order, unless the order be designated by statute as one of those from which an appeal may be taken. Title Insurance etc. Co. v. California Development Co., 159 Cal. 484; 114 Pac. 838. No appeal, except as specified in this section, is authorized from an interlocutory judgment. Fay v. Fay, 165 Cal. 469; 132 Pac. 1040. An appeal from an interlocutory decree in partition must be taken within sixty days from the entry of the decree in the minutes of the court. Regan v. McMahon, 43 Cal. 625; Watson v. Sutro, 77 Cal. 609; 20 Pac. 88; Bartlett v. Mackey, 130 Cal. 181; 62 Pac. 482; Dore v. Klumpke, 140 Cal. 356; 73 Pac. 1064; Bloom v. Gordan, 150 Cal. 762; 90 Pac. 115. An interlocutory judgment which has become final, in an action for partition, and to enforce a trust in favor of other alleged heirs of a deceased person, against the distributee of his estate, adjudging that such alleged heirs had no interest in the land distributed, is conclusive upon all of the claimants, as to any trust of the distributee in their favor, when not appealed from within sixty days. Quirk v. Rooney, 130 Cal. 505; 62 Pac. 825; and see Lorenz v. Jacobs, 53 Cal. 24.

Order approving account of receiver. A notice of appeal from an order approving the account of a receiver, served more than sixty days after the entry of the order, is too late, even if such order is appealable. Illinois etc. Savings Bank v. Pacific Railway Co., 99 Cal. 407; 33 Pac. 1132; but see Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 134 Cal. 121, 67 Pac. 198, holding that an appeal from an order settling the account of a receiver, and directing the payment of his compensation by one of the parties, may be taken, as from a final judgment, within six months after its entry.

Probate orders and decrees. Appeals in probate proceedings are governed, so far as the time for taking an appeal is concerned, by § 1715, post. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486. An appeal from an order denying the revocation of the probate of a will, taken more than sixty days after its entry, must be dismissed. Estate of Nelson, 132 Cal. 182; 64 Pac. 294. An appeal from an order refusing the probate of a will is properly taken within sixty days from the entry of the order; the provisions of this section, in regard to the rendition of judgments, do not apply in such case. Estate of Fay, 145 Cal. 82; 104 Am. St. Rep. 17; 78 Pac. 340. An appeal from a decree of distribution, or from a decree of final discharge of an administrator, taken more than sixty days after its entry, must be dismissed. Estate of Campbell, 141 Cal. 72; 74 Pac. 550. An appeal from an amended judgment, in probate proceedings, may be taken within sixty days from the date of the amendment, though more than sixty days since the entry of the original judgment. Estate of Potter, 141 Cal. 350; 74 Pac. 986.

Time for appeal begins to run when. The time for appeal from a final judgment begins to run from the time of the actual entry of the judgment. Coon v. Grand Lodge, 76 Cal. 354; 18 Pac. 384; Moore v. Miller, 6 Cal. Unrep. 110; 54 Pac. 263; and see In re Fifteenth Avenue Extension, 54 Cal. 179. Where the minute-entry of the clerk is not sufficient to amount to a judgment of nonsuit, being a mere memorandum from which data for a judgment might be drawn, the time to appeal does not begin to run until the entry of a proper judgment of nonsuit; hence, an appeal taken within six months after the entry of such proper judgment is in time. Ferris v. Baker, 127 Cal. 520; 59 Pac. 937. Where a judgment is amended, the date of the amendment must be taken as the true date of the entry for the purpose of appeal; hence, an appeal from a judgment, taken within six months from the entry of the amended judgment, is in time, though taken more than six months after the entry of the original judgment. Hayes v. Silver Creek etc. Water Co., 136 Cal. 238; 68 Pac. 704. The entry of the interlocutory decree, and not the mere ministerial act of the clerk in compiling the judgment roll after such entry, sets the statute of limitations running for the purpose of appeal. Dore v. Klumpke, 140 Cal. 356; 73 Pac. 1064. Where no notice of the entry of the order or judgment has been given, the appeal must be taken within six months from the entry of judgment. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294. The time for appeal by interveners commences to run from the time the complaint in intervention is stricken out for want of interest, and not from the time of judgment between the original parties; hence, an appeal from an order dismissing a complaint in intervention for want of interest, taken more than one year after the rendition of such order, is not in time. More v. Miller, 6 Cal. Unrep. 78; 53 Pac. 1077. An appeal from a judgment in a court of record may not be taken until after the "entry" of the judgment; but the time for an appeal from a judgment in a justice's court begins to run upon its "rendition." Thompson v. Superior Court, 161 Cal. 329; 119 Pac. 98. The presumption is, that the judgment was entered before the judgment roll was made up; and an appeal from the judgment, taken within less than six months from such presumed entry, is in time. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294.

Time for appeal begins to run when. See also note post, § 941b.

Extension of time for taking appeal. Statutes limiting the time for taking an appeal are jurisdictional, and cannot be enlarged by stipulation of the parties or order of court. Land v. Johnston, 156 Cal. 253; 104 Pac. 449. The supreme court cannot enlarge the time fixed by statute for taking an appeal (Dooling v. Moore, 20 Cal. 142); the period fixed by the statute being an express and peremptory limitation of time within which the appeal must be taken, and not a flexible rule to be varied by extrinsic circumstances. Henry v. Merguire, 111 Cal. 1; 43 Pac. 387. The statutes limiting the time for appeal are jurisdictional and mandatory, and courts have no power, not given by statute, to extend the time limited for an appeal, or to relieve an appellant from the effect of misfortune, accident, surprise, or mistake. Williams v. Long, 130 Cal. 58; 80 Am. St. Rep. 68; 62 Pac. 264.

Appeal after time has expired, dismissal of. An appeal from a judgment, taken after the time to appeal has expired, cannot be considered, and must be dismissed. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416; Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126; Voll v. Hollis, 60 Cal. 569; Gray v. Winder, 77 Cal. 525; 20 Pac. 47; Mattingly v. Pennie, 105 Cal. 514; 45 Am. St. Rep. 87; 39 Pac. 200; Henry v. Merguire, 111 Cal. 1; 43 Pac. 387; Sutter County v. Tisdale, 128 Cal. 180; 60 Pac. 757; Moore v. Douglas, 132 Cal. 399; 64 Pac. 705; Hunter v. Milam, 133 Cal. 602; 65 Pac. 1079; Bunting v. Salz, 3 Cal. Unrep. 193; 22 Pac. 1132; Contra Costa County v. Soto, 138 Cal. 57; 70 Pac. 1019; Robinson v. Eberhart, 148 Cal. 495; 83 Pac. 452; Michaelson v. Fish, 1 Cal. App. 116; 81 Pac. 661; Walbridge v. Cousins, 2 Cal. App. 302; 83 Pac. 462; Prine v. Duncan, 7 Cal. Unrep. 330; 90 Pac. 713; Sheehan v. Lapique, 15 Cal. App. 517; 115 Pac. 965. Formerly, an appeal not taken within one year after the "entry" of judgment had to be dismissed (United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43; 47 Pac. 870; Cox v. Odell, 1 Cal. App. 682; 82 Pac. 1086); but now an appeal not taken within six months after the "entry" of judgment must be dismissed. Begbie v. Begbie, 128 Cal. 154; 49 L. R. A. 141; 60 Pac. 667; McGorray v. Stockton Sav. & L. Soc., 131 Cal. 321; 63 Pac. 479; McDonald v. Lee, 132 Cal. 252; 64 Pac. 250; Hellman v. Longley, 154 Cal. 78; 97 Pac. 17; Dundas v. Lankershim School District, 155 Cal. 692; 102 Pac. 925; Allen v. Allen, 159 Cal. 197; 113 Pac. 160; Calkins v. Howard, 2 Cal. App. 233; 83 Pac. 280; Houghton Co. v. Kennedy, 8 Cal. App. 777; 97 Pac. 905; Green v. Gavin, 10 Cal. App. 330; 101 Pac. 931; Bennett v. Potter, 16 Cal. App. 183; 116 Pac. 681; Breidenbach v. McCormick Co., 20 Cal. App. 184; 128 Pac. 423. Where an appeal from a judgment of a county court, rendered on appeal from a justice's court, was taken more than ninety days after the entry of judgment, the supreme court had no jurisdiction. Dooling v. Moore, 20 Cal. 142. That part of a final judgment which vacates a temporary injunction is not an "order," and an appeal therefrom will not be dismissed because not taken within sixty days. Bekins v. Dieterle, 5 Cal. App. 586; 91 Pac. 105. An appeal from an order denying a new trial, taken more than sixty days after entry of the order, will be dismissed. Hellman v. Longley, 154 Cal. 78; 97 Pac. 17; McDonald v. Lee, 132 Cal. 252; 64 Pac. 250. The fact that the respondent died only a short time before the expiration of the six months allowed for the appeal, and that not until after the expiration of such time was an administrator appointed, upon whom service of notice of appeal was made with due diligence, cannot operate to suspend the period of limitation, nor to preclude the dismissal of the appeal. Williams v. Long, 130 Cal. 58; 80 Am. St. Rep. 68; 62 Pac. 264. No appeal is instituted by the service of a notice of appeal after the time to appeal has expired; hence, an order will not be made dismissing such attempted appeal. Estate of Walkerly, 4 Cal. Unrep. 819; 37 Pac. 893.

Premature appeal, dismissal of. An appeal taken from a judgment, before the actual entry thereof, although after its rendition, is premature, and will be dismissed. Thomas v. Anderson, 55 Cal. 43; Schroder v. Schmidt, 71 Cal. 399; 12 Pac. 302; Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 72 Cal. 192; 13 Pac. 475; Home for Inebriates v. Kaplan, 84 Cal. 486; 24 Pac. 119; People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551; 5 Pac. 263; Kimple v. Conway, 69 Cal. 71; 10 Pac. 189; Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1; 27 Pac. 52; McHugh v. Adkins, 117 Cal. 228; 49 Pac. 2; Bell v. Staacke, 137 Cal. 307; 70 Pac. 171; Estate of More, 143 Cal. 493; 77 Pac. 407; McLaughlin v. Doherty, 54 Cal. 519; Wood v. Etiwanda Water Co., 122 Cal. 152; 54 Pac. 726; Wood v. Missouri Pacific Ry. Co., 152 Cal. 344; 92 Pac. 868. An appeal from a judgment, and from an order refusing to set aside a default judgment, taken by a party against whom no judgment has been rendered, is prematurely taken, and must be dismissed. Scotland v. East Branch Mining Co., 56 Cal. 625. Where the notice of appeal from the judgment was filed on the day on which the judgment was entered, the appeal is not premature, although the notice was served on the preceding day. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 72 Cal. 192; 13 Pac. 475. The rights of the parties in respect to an appeal are determined by the date of the actual entry of the judgment, and they cannot be affected by the entry of the judgment nunc pro tunc as of a prior date; hence, an appeal from a judgment, taken prior to the date of its actual entry, is premature, and will be dismissed. Coon v. Grand Lodge, 76 Cal. 354; 18 Pac. 384. A decree of distribution of the estate of a deceased person is not entered so as to authorize an appeal, until it is entered at length in the minute-book of the court; hence, an appeal taken before such entry is premature. Estate of Pearsons, 119 Cal. 27; 50 Pac. 929. An appeal from an order vacating a sale of the real estate of a deceased person, taken before the entry of the order in the minutes of the court, is premature. Estate of Devincenzi, 131 Cal. 452; 63 Pac. 723.

Certiorari after time for appeal has expired. A writ of certiorari will not be issued after the lapse of the period within which an appeal might have been taken, under this section, from the judgment or order sought to be reviewed, where no circumstances of any kind are made to appear to justify the delay in applying for the writ. Kimple v. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 136; 4 Pac. 1149.

Dismissal of appeal. See also note post, § 954.

"Rendition" and "entry" of judgment. A judgment is "rendered" when an order for a judgment is made by the court, and "entered" when it is actually entered in the judgment-book. Thomas v. Anderson, 55 Cal. 43; Shurtz v. Romer, 81 Cal. 244; 22 Pac. 657. The term "rendition of the judgment," in this section, means either the announcement from the bench entered in the minutes, or the filing of the findings, if there are findings, or both. Estate of Rose, 3 Cal. Unrep. 50; 20 Pac. 712; Wood v. Etiwanda Water Co., 122 Cal. 152; 54 Pac. 726. A judgment is rendered when the order therefor is made and entered, and the judgment is signed by the judge and filed in the cause, and nothing remains to be done but the mere ministerial duty of copying it into the record. Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416; Painter v. Painter, 113 Cal. 371; 45 Pac. 689; Peck v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 209; Genella v. Relyea, 32 Cal. 159; Waggenheim v. Hook, 35 Cal. 216; Wetherbee v. Dunn, 36 Cal. 249; Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423; McLaughlin v. Doherty, 54 Cal. 519. An amendment of the judgment as entered, nunc pro tunc, so as to include therein the name of an omitted defendant as of the date of its original entry, cannot operate to deprive such defendant of his right of appeal from the judgment then entered against him for the first time. Spencer v. Troutt, 133 Cal. 605; 65 Pac. 1083. A recital in the notice of appeal, that the judgment was entered on the date of its rendition, and acknowledgment of service thereon, and the use of the word "entered" in the bill of exceptions, do not constitute a stipulation that the decree has been entered, so as to authorize an appeal. Estate of More, 143 Cal. 493; 77 Pac. 407. Under the Practice Act, the appeal ran from "the rendition of the judgment," by which was meant its announcement by the court, and its entry upon the minutes of the clerk, or the filing of the findings and order for judgment. Wood v. Etiwanda Water Co., 122 Cal. 152; 54 Pac. 726. The amendment to this section in 1907 substituted "entry" for "rendition," in that part of the first subdivision which refers to a review of an exception to the decision or verdict. Boin v. Spreckels Sugar Co., 155 Cal. 612; 102 Pac. 937.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Subd. 1. Appeal from a judgment must be taken within a year. Waggenheim v. Hook, 35 Cal. 216. If the appeal is not taken within a year, it will be dismissed. Bornheimer v. Baldwin, 38 Cal. 671. The time within which an appeal from a judgment may be taken is not computed from the date of the entry of the judgment by the clerk in the judgment-book, but from the time the judgment is announced by the court and entered in the minutes. Wetherbee v. Dunn, 36 Cal. 249; Genella v. Relyea, 32 Cal. 159; Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 417; Peck v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 207. If a demurrer to an intervention is sustained, and judgment thereupon rendered against the intervener, he may appeal at once. Stich v. Goldner, 38 Cal. 608. The time for an appeal from a judgment on demurrer commences to run from its rendition, not from the time of the ruling on the demurrer. Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423. If the appeal is dismissed for want of an undertaking, and no final judgment has been rendered, a second appeal may be taken within the period allowed by law. Martinez v. Gallardo, 5 Cal. 155. An appeal from an order denying a new trial, although taken more than a year after rendition of a judgment, brings up the whole record. And if there was error in refusing a new trial, the appellate court will order a new trial, which, in effect, vacates the judgment. Walden v. Murdock, 23 Cal. 540; 83 Am. Dec. 135.

2. Subd. 2. Dooling v. Moore, 20 Cal. 141.

3. Subd. 3. An appeal from an order denying a new trial must be taken within sixty days. Waggenheim v. Hook, 35 Cal. 216; Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650; Brown v. Tolles, 7 Cal. 398; Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11; Peck v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 207. An appeal from an order refusing to vacate award of arbitrators must be taken within sixty days from date of order. Fairchild v. Daten, 38 Cal. 286. If an appeal from the judgment is dismissed, the dismissal is not a bar to an appeal from an order refusing a new trial. Fulton v. Cox, 40 Cal. 101; Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278; Waugenheim v. Graham, 39 Cal. 169. After appealing from a judgment, a party may appeal from an order overruling a motion for a new trial, if the latter appeal is taken in time. Marziou v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 522. Where an appeal is taken, both from a final judgment and an order refusing a new trial, after sixty days from the entry of the order for a new trial, the appeal, so far as the order is concerned, will, on motion, be dismissed. Lower v. Knox, 10 Cal. 480. An order made by the court on a motion is a final adjudication upon the subject-matter, unless appealed within the time allowed by law, nor can the time for appeal be extended by subsequent renewal of the motion, even if it be varied in its terms, provided it is substantially the same motion. Kittredge v. Stevens, 23 Cal. 283. See, generally, Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416.

§ 940. Appeal, how taken. An appeal is taken by filing with the clerk of the court in which the judgment or order appealed from is entered, a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof, and serving a similar notice on the adverse party, or his attorney. The order of service is immaterial, but the appeal is ineffectual for any purpose, unless within five days after service of the notice of appeal, an undertaking be filed, or a deposit of money be made with the clerk, as hereinafter provided, or the undertaking be waived by the adverse party in writing.

Legislation § 940. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 337, which read: "The appeal shall be made by filing with the clerk of the court, with whom the judgment or order appealed from is entered, a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof, and serving a copy of the notice upon the adverse party or his attorney." When enacted in 1872, § 940 read: "An appeal is taken by: 1. Filing with the clerk of the court in which the judgment or order appealed from is entered or filed a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof; 2. Filing, at the same time, an undertaking on appeal; and, 3. Serving a copy of the notice of appeal upon the adverse party or his attorney."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 336.

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 173; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

Method of appeal. Where a party takes an appeal under this section, instead of under §§ 941a, 941b, and 941c, post, he may support it either by a transcript prepared and filed under §§ 953a, 953b, and 953c, post, or by a transcript printed and filed as was customary previous to the enactment of those sections, and as directed by the rules of the supreme court. Lang v. Lilley & Thurston Co., 161 Cal. 295; 119 Pac. 100. An appeal may be taken under either this section or § 941b: if properly taken under either, the appellate court has jurisdiction, whether any transcript is filed to support it or not. Smith v. Jaccard, 20 Cal. App. 280; 128 Pac. 1026. An appeal, to be effective, must be perfected under either the new or the old method. Credit Clearance Bureau v. Weary & Alford Co., 18 Cal. App. 467; 123 Pac. 548.

Appeal deemed taken when. An appeal is taken, under this section, when the notice of appeal is served and filed, although the undertaking, which perfects the appeal, is not filed until afterwards. Perkins v. Cooper, 3 Cal. Unrep. 279; 24 Pac. 377. Where the notice is given under § 939, ante, it must be served and filed and the undertaking given as required by this section. Theisen v. Matthai, 165 Cal. 249; 131 Pac. 747.

Alternative method of perfecting appeal. See note post, § 953a.

Appeal from part of judgment or order. A party may appeal from the whole or from any specific part of a judgment. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. An appeal may be taken from a portion of an order, as well as from a portion of an judgment. Donnelly v. Gray Brothers, 3 Cal. App. 59; 84 Pac. 451. Where only part of a judgment is appealed from, that part not appealed from is, ordinarily, not affected, and is final. Whalen v. Smith, 163 Cal. 360; Ann. Cas. 1913E, 1319; 125 Pac. 904.

Probate appeals. This section, in its application to probate appeals, is limited. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486.

Necessary parties to appeal. All the parties to a final judgment in a partition suit must be made parties to an appeal from the whole of the judgment, either as appellants or respondents, or the appeal will prove ineffectual. Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 637. The fact that the judgment or order appealed from may be used as evidence in some collateral action or proceeding, or that its reversal may have a remote or consequential effect, to the prejudice of one not a party thereto, does not entitle such person to be made a party to the appeal. Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082. While the adverse party must necessarily be before the court on appeal, yet it is immaterial whether his presence is by a voluntary appearance or whether he has been brought there by a hostile notice from the appellant. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Lewis, 111 Cal. 519; 44 Pac. 175. Although the name of a person and his interest in the estate in controversy are disclosed upon the record, yet such person is not necessarily a party to the cause. Estate of McDougald, 143 Cal. 476; 77 Pac. 443. The parties to the motion for a new trial are the only necessary parties to the appeal from the order denying it. Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16; 56 Am. St. Rep. 82; 35 L. R. A. 318; 44 Pac. 660; and see Watson v. Sutro, 77 Cal. 609; 20 Pac. 88; Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082; Barnhart v. Edwards, 111 Cal. 428; 44 Pac. 160; Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 146 Cal. 571; 80 Pac. 719.

Necessity of giving notice. To take an appeal, notice of appeal must be given, under either this section or § 941b, post: a notice to the clerk to prepare a transcript is not a notice of appeal. Boling v. Alton, 162 Cal. 297; 122 Pac. 461.

Sufficiency of notice. The object of the notice of appeal is to impart to the opposite party the requisite information of his opponent's intention to appeal, and what specific judgment or order is appealed from; and where the notice is sufficiently explicit in these particulars, it is sufficient. Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202; 10 Pac. 510. In order to sustain a notice of appeal as an appeal from a judgment, the paper relied upon for that purpose should state, at least, that the appeal is taken from a judgment, or use other language which can be so construed. Meley v. Boulon, 104 Cal. 262; 37 Pac. 931. The notice of appeal, in form, must sufficiently indicate the order or judgment from which the appeal is taken. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. Where there is but one judgment in the action, a notice of appeal stating that the plaintiff appeals from the said judgment made and entered in said action, is not insufficient for uncertainty, in failing to give the date of the judgment or other identification. Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101; 63 Pac. 135. A notice of appeal reciting that it is taken from an order and decree made and entered on a certain day, directing letters of administration to issue to the public administrator, is sufficient, there having been only one order and decree made upon that day, or any other day, making such appointment. Estate of Damke, 133 Cal. 433; 65 Pac. 888. Where there is but one judgment in the case, a slight mistake, as of the date of entry, will not invalidate the notice of appeal. Swasey v. Adair, 83 Cal. 136; 23 Pac. 284. A notice of appeal, sufficient in other respects, will not be held insufficient, merely because it incorrectly states the date upon which the judgment and order appealed from were entered, if the record on appeal shows that there has been but one judgment or order of the kind appealed from entered in the cause. Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202; 10 Pac. 510. A mistake in the notice of appeal, as to the date of the order appealed from, does not invalidate the appeal, if the description of the order is sufficient to identify it. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294. It is not required that the notice of appeal shall be addressed to the persons who constitute the adverse party; and where the notice is addressed to the attorneys on whom it is properly to be served under the statute, this is sufficient: a mere mistake of the scrivener, which could not possibly mislead anybody, will be disregarded on appeal. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. A notice of appeal, addressed to one party, is not notice to another. Estate of Pendergast, 143 Cal. 135; 76 Pac. 962. One notice is sufficient for taking an appeal from a judgment, and from an order subsequent to a judgment. People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191. The inclusion of an additional notice of appeal from the judgment, in the notice of appeal from an order denying a new trial, has no effect, either as an original appeal or to impair the previous appeal pending. Woodside v. Hewel, 107 Cal. 141; 40 Pac. 103. A notice of appeal from an order directing the payment of alimony and counsel fees is not rendered ineffectual because a notice of appeal from the judgment is embraced in the same paper, nor because the appellant has inserted in the notice a statement that on the appeal from the judgment he would ask the court to review and set aside the order for alimony: such matter is mere surplusage, which does no injury. Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 326; 9 Pac. 187.

Construction of notice. Where a notice of appeal stated that the plaintiff appealed from an order overruling and denying his motion to set aside a judgment or order of nonsuit, and dissolving a preliminary injunction, and for granting a rehearing therein, the word "rehearing" is used in the sense of "new trial," and the appeal referred to in the notice is from the order denying a new trial. Kimple v. Conway, 69 Cal. 71; 10 Pac. 189. A notice of appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, and from an order denying a motion to set aside the decision and judgment, describing the judgment, and concluding with the words "and from the whole thereof," does not include a notice of appeal from the judgment: the concluding words refer to the orders previously mentioned, and indicate that the appeal is from the whole, and not from a part, of said orders. Meley v. Boulon, 104 Cal. 262; 37 Pac. 931.

Joint notice. A plaintiff and a defendant, who are joint defendants in a cross-complaint, may give joint notice of appeal. Downing v. Rademacher, 136 Cal. 673; 69 Pac. 415.

Necessity for filing notice. The filing of the notice of appeal, and the service of a copy thereof upon the opposite party or his attorney, are indispensable, in order to give the appellate court jurisdiction. Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 460.

County where notice should be filed. The notice of appeal from an order changing the place of trial to another county, and the undertaking on appeal, must each be filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which the order was made: if filed with the clerk of the county to which the transfer was made, the appeal is ineffectual, and will be dismissed. Mansfield v. O'Keefe, 133 Cal. 362; 65 Pac. 825.

Time of filing. As this section now stands, the rule previously in force respecting appeals has been changed, and the notice of appeal may now be filed with the clerk on a day subsequent to that upon which the service is made, and the undertaking may be filed before the notice of appeal is filed. Hewes v. Carville Mfg. Co., 62 Cal. 516; Robinson v. Templar Lodge, 114 Cal. 41; 45 Pac. 998; and see Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280. The statute does not prescribe any particular time after service of the notice of appeal within which such notice must be filed: it may be filed at any time before the expiration of the time for appeal. San Francisco etc. Collection Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047; and see Galloway v. Rouse, 63 Cal. 280; Noonan v. Nunan, 76 Cal. 44; 18 Pac. 98; Robinson v. Templar Lodge, 114 Cal. 41; 45 Pac. 998. Where the notice of appeal and the undertaking were filed within three days after the service of the notice, the appeal is effectual. Galloway v. Rouse, 63 Cal. 280. Where the notice of appeal was not filed until eleven days after the service thereof, but was filed within six months after the entry of the judgment, it is not too late. San Francisco etc. Collection Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047.

Effect of filing. The filing of a notice of appeal, under either this section or 941b, post, confers jurisdiction of the appeal, which is not ousted by the method of preparing or filing the transcript: that may be gotten up and filed under either method, as the appellant may choose. Lang v. Lilley & Thurston Co., 161 Cal. 295; 119 Pac. 100.

Waiver of filing. A waiver of the filing of the notice of appeal, by the stipulation of the parties, is not the equivalent of the filing of the notice: consent, though it may waive error, cannot confer jurisdiction. Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 460. The failure to serve and file a notice of appeal cannot be waived after the time for appealing has expired, so as to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court. Niles v. Gonzalez, 152 Cal. 90; 92 Pac. 74.

Relief from stipulation admitting filing. Where an attorney stipulates, under a mistake of fact, that a notice of appeal has been filed, when no notice has in fact been filed, the court below, upon a proper application, may relieve him from it, but the appellate court cannot. Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 460.

Time of serving notice. The clause in this section, "The order of service is immaterial," is the equivalent of "Whether the service precede or follow the filing of the notice, is immaterial." Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280. The serving of the notice of appeal may precede the filing. San Francisco etc. Collection Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047; Hewes v. Carville Mfg. Co., 62 Cal. 516; but see Aram v. Shallenberger, 42 Cal. 275. Service of a notice of appeal by mail is complete at the time of the deposit of a copy thereof in the post-office. Brown v. Green, 65 Cal. 221; 38 Pac. 811.

Service upon adverse party. The adverse party must be served with the notice of appeal. Brown v. Green, 65 Cal. 221; 3

Pac. 811; Lancaster v. Maxwell, 103 Cal. 67; 36 Pac. 951; Estate of Walkerley, 5 Cal. Unrep. 5; 40 Pac. 13; Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 152 Cal. 196; 92 Pac. 182. A notice of appeal must be served, within the time prescribed, upon all adverse parties, that is, upon those who are interested in the judgment, and who would be affected by its reversal. Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16; 56 Am. St. Rep. 82; 35 L. R. A. 318; 44 Pac. 660; Estate of Pendergast, 143 Cal. 135; 76 Pac. 962; Estate of Young, 149 Cal. 173; 85 Pac. 145; Mannix v. Tryon, 152 Cal. 31; 91 Pac. 983; Niles v. Gonzalez, 152 Cal. 90; 92 Pac. 74; Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225; Ford v. Cannon, 5 Cal. App. 185; 89 Pac. 1071. The adverse party upon whom the notice of appeal is to be served is the party who appears by the record to be adverse; and the record to be considered for that purpose is the record of the proceedings in which the appeal is taken. McKenzie v. Hill, 9 Cal. App. 78; 98 Pac. 55; Ford v. Cannon, 5 Cal. App. 185; 89 Pac. 1071. In proceedings under the McEnerney Act, before the adoption of the alternative method of taking appeals, a notice of appeal was required to be served only on the parties who appeared from the record to be adverse. Potrero Nuevo Land Co. v. All Persons, 155 Cal. 371; 101 Pac. 12. The notice of appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial need be served only on the parties who were adverse to the motion in the court below. Niles v. Gonzalez, 155 Cal. 359; 100 Pac. 1080; 152 Cal. 90; 92 Pac. 74. A notice of appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial need be served only on the parties to the motion in the court below. Watson v. Sutro, 77 Cal. 609; 20 Pac. 88. Service upon an adverse party personally, when he has appeared by attorney, is insufficient. Jones v. McGarvey, 6 Cal. Unrep. 277; 56 Pac. 896.

Adverse parties, who are. By the term "adverse party" is meant every party whose interest in the subject-matter of the appeal is adverse to or will be affected by the reversal or modification of the judgment or order from which the appeal is taken, irrespective of the question whether he appears upon the record in the attitude of plaintiff or defendant, or intervener. Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 637; Randall v. Hunter, 69 Cal. 80; 10 Pac. 130; Milliken v. Houghton, 75 Cal. 539; 17 Pac. 641; Harper v. Hildreth, 99 Cal. 265; 33 Pac. 1103; Lancaster v. Maxwell, 103 Cal. 67; 36 Pac. 951; Bullock v. Taylor, 112 Cal. 147; 44 Pac. 457; United States v. Vrooks, 116 Cal. 43; 47 Pac. 870; Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40; Vincent v. Collins, 122 Cal. 387; 55 Pac. 129; Mohr v. Byrne, 132 Cal. 250; 64 Pac. 257; Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 146 Cal. 571; 80 Pac. 719; Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204; Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225; Niles v. Gonzalez, 152 Cal. 90; 92 Pac. 74; Mannix v. Tryon, 152 Cal. 33; 91 Pac. 983; Jackson v. Superior Court, 20 Cal. App. 638; 129 Pac. 946; Ford v. Cannon, 5 Cal. App. 185; 89 Pac. 1071. An adverse party to an appeal is any party whose interest in relation to the subject of the appeal is in conflict with the reversal of the order or decree appealed from, or the modification sought by the appeal. Green v. Berge, 105 Cal. 52; 45 Am. St. Rep. 25; 38 Pac. 539. Persons sought to be substituted as parties defendant are adverse parties on an appeal from a judgment by default; the defendant claiming a reversal on the ground that the refusal to make the substitution was erroneous. Toy v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 75 Cal. 542; 17 Pac. 700. A mortgagor and his co-defendant, who constructed a building on the mortgaged premises, are adverse parties to an appeal by the mortgagee from a judgment giving mechanic's lien claimants priority over the mortgage lien, where the decree of foreclosure provided for a deficiency judgment: in such case the liability for the deficiency judgment might be affected by a reversal of the judgment. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 106 Cal. 224; 39 Pac. 758. Defaulting defendants are not adverse parties to other defendants, where there is no joint relation alleged between the defendants, and the judgment against each is several and independent. Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. In an action on a promissory note, alleged to have been executed by two defendants as partners, one of whom made default and trial was had as to the other, and judgment was entered against the one by default and against the other on the verdict, the defendant who made default is not an adverse party to the appeal of the defendant as to whom trial was had. Randall v. Hunter, 69 Cal. 80; 10 Pac. 130. Defendants who, by their default, have admitted that their claim to mortgaged premises was inferior to that of the plaintiff, are not adverse parties in an appeal by the mortgagor from a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, foreclosing the mortgage. Boob v. Hall, 107 Cal. 160; 40 Pac. 117. Defaulting defendants, in an action to quiet title, are not adverse parties to answering defendants, where the reversal of the judgment in favor of the plaintiff, quieting his title, and giving him the right of possession to the lands described, as against the defaulting defendants, could not injuriously affect their interests, on the appeal of the answering defendants. Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40. In an action to recover from one defendant the amount due upon a note, and asking that another defendant be directed to pay the said judgment out of certain moneys owing to the first defendant, such first defendant is not an adverse party to an appeal taken by an intervener from a judgment directing the second defendant to pay the amount of the judgment. Mohr v. Byrne, 132 Cal. 250; 64 Pac. 257. On appeal from an order against a garnishee in supplementary proceedings, the judgment debtor, if he was not a participant, is not an adverse party required to be served with notice of appeal. McKenzie v. Hill, 9 Cal. App. 78; 98 Pac. 55. A contractor, who cannot be injuriously affected by an appeal from a judgment of foreclosure, is not an adverse party who must be served with notice of appeal. Quist v. Sandman, 154 Cal. 748; 99 Pac. 204. The phrase, "adverse party," is also found in §§ 650, 659, ante.

Determination as to who are adverse parties. Whether a party to the action is adverse to the appellant, must be determined by their relative positions on the record and the averments in their pleadings, rather than from the manner in which they may manifest their wishes at the trial, or from any presumption to be drawn from their relation to each other, or to the subject-matter of the action, in matters outside of the action. Harper v. Hildreth, 99 Cal. 265; 33 Pac. 1103. The question as to who are adverse parties can be determined only from the record. O'Rourke v. Finch, 8 Cal. App. 263; 96 Pac. 784. An adverse party upon whom the notice of appeal is to be served is a party who appears by the record to be adverse; and the rule that the notice of appeal must be served upon all parties that would be affected by a reversal of the judgment appealed from, is to be construed with the other rule, that only the record can be examined for the purpose of determining who are adverse parties. Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082. The record to be considered for the purpose of determining who are adverse parties to be served with the notice of appeal, is the record of the proceedings in which the appeal is taken. Estate of Bullard, 114 Cal. 462; 46 Pac. 297. The record upon the appeal is the only record that can be examined for the purpose of ascertaining who are adverse parties to be served with the notice of appeal. Estate of Bullard, 114 Cal. 462; 46 Pac. 297; Kenney v. Parks, 120 Cal. 22; 52 Pac. 40; Mohr v. Byrne, 132 Cal. 250; 64 Pac. 257; and see Bullock v. Taylor, 112 Cal. 147; 44 Pac. 457.

Service on defendants. Where an execution, issued against all the parties to a judgment, is quashed upon the motion of a part of them, and an appeal from the order is taken by the judgment creditor, all the persons against whom the judgment was rendered are adverse parties, and should be served with notice of the appeal. Millikin v. Houghton, 75 Cal. 539; 17 Pac. 641. In an action to dissolve a partnership, and to determine the rights of the parties to certain land claimed by the defendant partner, where other defendants were made parties because of their claim of an interest in the land, the defendant partner is an adverse party to an appeal by the plaintiff from an order dismissing the action as against such other parties and as against the land, and he must be served with the notice of appeal. Harper v. Hildreth, 99 Cal. 265; 33 Pac. 1103. Where a defendant did not appear in the action, but was properly made a party thereto, the notice of appeal must be served on him, as an adverse party interested therein. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 146 Cal. 571; 80 Pac. 719. Fictitious defendants, who were not served with process, and who did not appear, need not be served with the notice of appeal. Benson v. Bunting, 127 Cal. 532; 78 Am. St. Rep. 81; 59 Pac. 991.

Service by defendant on co-defendants. A notice of appeal by one of several co-defendants should be served not only on the plaintiff, but also on non-appealing co-defendants: they have an interest in the judgment to be affected by a reversal. Millikin v. Houghton, 75 Cal. 539; 17 Pac. 641. Where an action is brought by a county for the condemnation of a strip of land for a highway, across lands owned by the respective defendants, and judgment is rendered for the plaintiff as prayed for, and one of the defendants appeals, the other defendants are adverse parties, and should be served with notice of the appeal. Butte County v. Boydstun, 68 Cal. 189; 8 Pac. 835. In an action against two persons, as partners, to have a deed executed by one of them declared a mortgage to secure a partnership indebtedness, in which the other partner was not served with summons and did not appear, and judgment was had between the parties, the absent partner is not an adverse party upon whom the notice of appeal from the judgment must be served. Merced Bank v. Rosenthal, 99 Cal. 39; 31 Pac. 849. A mortgagee, who, refusing to be a co-plaintiff, was made a co-defendant with an insurance company in an action upon the policy by the owner of a burned building, is an adverse party to the appeal by the insurance company from a judgment in favor of the owner for the full amount of the insurance, out of which judgment the amount due to the mortgagee was ordered to be paid, and such mortgagee must be served with the notice of appeal. Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 146 Cal. 571; 80 Pac. 719. In an action for breach of contract alleged to have been executed by the defendants as partners, on an appeal by the defendant against whom alone a recovery was had, his co-defendants, as to whom a nonsuit was granted, and to which he excepted, are adverse parties, and must be served with the notice of appeal from the order granting the nonsuit. Bullock v. Taylor, 112 Cal. 147; 44 Pac. 457. Defaulting defendants, whose interests would be injuriously affected by the appeal of other defaulting defendants, must be served with the notice of appeal. Bowering v. Adams, 126 Cal. 653; 59 Pac. 134. A co-defendant who makes default is not an adverse party, and notice of the appeal need not be served on him. Randall v. Hunter, 69 Cal. 80; 10 Pac. 130; McKeany v. Black, 46 Pac. 381; French v. McCarthy, 110 Cal. 12; 42 Pac. 302. Defaulting defendants are not adverse parties to other defendants, where there is no joint relation alleged between them, and a judgment against each is several and independent; a judgment under the McEnerney Act must be several and independent. Potrero Nuevo Land Co. v. All Persons, 155 Cal. 371; 101 Pac. 12. A co-defendant, in whose favor judgment has been rendered against the plaintiff for costs, is not an adverse party who must be served with the notice of appeal by the other defendant, on judgment against him in favor of the plaintiff. Green v. Berge, 105 Cal. 52; 45 Am. St. Rep. 25; 38 Pac. 539. Where, in an action against several defendants, the plaintiff filed a dismissal before the service of summons upon or appearance by any of the defendants, and afterwards two of the defendants filed an answer and cross-complaint, asking affirmative relief, and thereafter, upon motion of the plaintiff, the action was dismissed by the court, from which the cross-complainants appealed, the other defendants, not appealing, are not adverse parties, and notice of appeal need not be served upon them. Hinkel v. Donohue, 88 Cal. 597; 26 Pac. 374. Co-defendants, not served with summons, and not appearing in the action, need not be served with the notice of appeal. Merced Bank v. Rosenthal, 99 Cal. 39; 31 Pac. 849; Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176; Peck v. Agnew, 126 Cal. 607; 59 Pac. 125. Where an action was brought against two defendants, upon a contract of guaranty executed by them to the plaintiff, and was tried solely upon issues presented by the separate answer of one of them, and the record does not show that the co-defendant answered the complaint, it is not necessary, upon appeal from the judgment, to serve the notice of appeal upon such co-defendant. French v. McCarthy, 110 Cal. 12; 42 Pac. 302. The notice of appeal need not be served on a co-defendant who was not a party to the motion for a new trial. Barnhart v. Edwards, 111 Cal. 428; 44 Pac. 160; Johnson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 146 Cal. 571; 80 Pac. 719.

Service on intervener. When, after the foreclosure of a mortgage, and a sale under the decree, the decree is vacated, on motion of the plaintiff, to allow a grantee of the mortgagor to be made a party defendant, and the purchaser at the foreclosure sale also intervenes by leave of the court, the defendant, upon appealing from the order vacating the decree, must serve the notice of appeal upon the intervener. Miller v. Richards, 83 Cal. 563; 23 Pac. 936.

Service on substituted party. The service of notice of appeal upon parties substituted as respondents, after the lapse of time for appeal, can have no effect; and an attempted second appeal, after the expiration of such time, can be of no avail. Estate of Turner, 139 Cal. 85; 72 Pac. 718.

Service on attorney. The notice of appeal is not a process requiring personal service for the purpose of bringing the respondent before the court, but is the declaration of an intention to take further proceedings in a pending cause, and the statute requires it to be in writing, and to be served upon the attorney of the party, instead of on the party himself. Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. The service of the notice of appeal must be made upon the attorney of the adverse party, where such party has an attorney. Abrahms v. Stokes, 39 Cal. 150; Whittle v. Renner, 55 Cal. 395; Jones v. McGarvey, 6 Cal. Unrep. 277; 56 Pac. 896; Estate of Nelson, 128 Cal. 242; 60 Pac. 772. The attorney referred to in this section is the attorney of record: a notice of appeal served upon any other is void. Whittle v. Renner, 55 Cal. 395; Prescott v. Salthouse, 53 Cal. 221; Ellis v. Bennett, 2 Cal. Unrep. 302; 3 Pac. 801; Harrington v. Bolte, 8 Pac. 184. Where the notice of appeal was addressed only to heirs who were petitioners for a decree of distribution, and their attorney admits service as such, the fact that he is also attorney for all the other heirs cannot enlarge the notice so as to make them also parties to the appeal. Estate of Pendergast, 143 Cal. 135; 76 Pac. 962. The notice of appeal from an order refusing to set aside a default is properly served upon the defendant's attorney, in perfecting the appeal, if his appearance in the action was general, and not merely special. Thompson v. Alford, 128 Cal. 227; 60 Pac. 686. An affidavit stating that service of the notice of appeal was made by mail, and that the respondent's attorney had admitted receipt of the notice, is sufficient proof of service, as against a mere inference, in an affidavit of the respondent's attorney, that he had not received such notice. Brandenstein v. Johnson, 134 Cal. 102; 66 Pac. 86. Upon the death of a party to an action, the authority of his attorney to represent him ceases, and no notice of appeal can thereafter be effectively served upon his attorney (Pedler v. Stroud, 116 Cal. 461; 48 Pac. 371; Estate of Turner, 139 Cal. 85; 72 Pac. 718); and his acknowledgment of service of a notice of appeal cannot bind the representatives of the deceased, subsequently appointed; and if such representatives are substituted in the supreme court, the appeal will be dismissed as to them, if nothing further appears to estop them from moving to dismiss. Moyle v. Landers, 78 Cal. 99; 12 Am. St. Rep. 22; 20 Pac. 241. In partition proceedings, the notice of appeal may be served upon the attorney of record of another party, notwithstanding the death of such party prior to the appeal; and such notice may be served upon the original attorney of record, where there has been no substitution, notwithstanding another attorney may have appeared and signed an amended pleading for such party. Lacoste v. Eastland, 117 Cal. 673; 49 Pac. 1040.

Service on representative of deceased party. Upon appeal from an order denying a new trial, the representative of an adverse party who was served with notice of intention but died pending the motion, must be served with the notice of appeal. Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64; 94 Pac. 225.

Foreclosure of mortgage, service on whom. The administrator of a deceased mortgagor, who is required by the judgment foreclosing the mortgage to pay any deficiency over the amount derived from the sale of the mortgaged premises, and to whom the claim had been presented, is an adverse party, and must, on appeal from the judgment of foreclosure by the purchaser of the mortgaged premises, be served with notice of appeal. Barnhart v. Edwards, 111 Cal. 428; 44 Pac. 160. Upon an appeal by an insolvent mortgagor, from an order directing the sale of the mortgaged premises in one parcel, and from an order refusing to set aside the sale and to order the land resold in two parcels, the assignee in insolvency is an adverse party who must be served with notice of appeal. Vincent v. Collins, 122 Cal. 387; 55 Pac. 129.

Foreclosure of mechanic's lien, service on whom. In an action to foreclose mechanics' liens, where judgment was rendered for the sale of the property, and a judgment for any deficiency was directed to be docketed against the contractor, on appeal from the judgment the contractor is an adverse party who must be served with the notice of appeal. Lancaster v. Maxwell, 103 Cal. 67; 36 Pac. 951. A mechanic's lien claimant, in mortgage foreclosure proceedings, whose lien is directed to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale after the satisfaction of the plaintiff's mortgage, is an adverse party who must be served with the notice of appeal. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Lewis, 111 Cal. 519; 44 Pac. 175.

Consolidated actions, service on successful party. A stipulation in an action which had been consolidated with another, that the pleadings in such consolidated action shall be omitted in the transcript on appeal, and that the action shall be determined by the decision on the appeal, is an appearance to the appeal, rendering service of the notice of appeal on the successful party in the consolidated action unnecessary. Valley Lumber Co. v. Struck, 146 Cal. 266; 80 Cal. 405.

Proceedings supplementary to execution, service on debtor. In proceedings supplementary to execution, it is not necessary to serve the judgment debtor with notice of appeal: he is not an adverse party. McKenzie v. Hill, 9 Cal. App. 78; 98 Pac. 55.

Insolvency proceedings, service on whom. Upon an appeal by petitioning creditors from an order dismissing a proceeding in insolvency against a foreign corporation for want of jurisdiction, though the corporation made default, and the controversy is between the petitioning creditors and the attaching creditors of the corporation, who intervened to prevent an adjudication of insolvency against the corporation, the notice of appeal must be served upon the corporation as well as upon the attaching creditors, since the judgment was in favor of the corporation, and a reversal would affect its rights. In re Castle Dome Mining etc. Co., 79 Cal. 246; 21 Pac. 746. Upon an appeal by a creditor from an adjudication of insolvency upon the voluntary petition of the debtor, the notice of appeal need only be served upon the insolvent debtor, and is not required to be served upon the receiver, nor upon the other creditors, who had not filed proof of their claims when the appeal was taken. In re Chope, 112 Cal. 630; 44 Pac. 1066; and see Chinette v. Conklin, 105 Cal. 465; 38 Pac. 1107.

Probate proceedings, service on whom. Where the daughter of an alleged incompetent person petitions to be appointed guardian, but, upon the hearing, the court, by her consent, appoints other persons, upon an appeal by the alleged incompetent such other persons are the only persons to be served with the notice of appeal, the petitioner, by her consent to their appointment, ceasing to be a party. Estate of Sullivan, 143 Cal. 462; 77 Pac. 153. Where all the parties appearing at the contest of the probate of a will are served with the notice of appeal from the order admitting the will to probate, this is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of the appeal. Estate of Scott, 124 Cal. 671; 57 Pac. 654. A claimant against an estate, whose claim is contested by the appellant, and who was not a party to the proceedings in the trial court, need not be served with notice of appeal from the settlement of the account allowing such claim. Estate of Bullard, 114 Cal. 462; 46 Pac. 297. Legatees and devisees under a will are adverse parties who must be served with the notice of appeal from an order admitting the will to probate. Estate of Scott, 121 Cal. 671; 57 Pac. 654. Upon appeal from an order confirming an executor's sale, the purchaser of property at such sale is an adverse party to be served with the notice of appeal. Estate of Bell, 125 Cal. 539; 58 Pac. 153. Persons in whose favor an order for the payment of a dividend is made do not thereby become parties to the proceeding for the settlement of the account of an administrator, where they do not make any contest or objection to the account, and need not be served with the notice of appeal from such order. Estate of McDougald, 143 Cal. 476; 77 Pac. 443.

Waiver of service. A mere waiver of service of the notice of appeal by an adverse party cannot give the appellate court jurisdiction of the appeal, where the notice was not addressed to such party, and there was no appearance entered by him either in person or by attorney. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Lewis, 111 Cal. 519; 44 Pac. 175. Notice of appeal may be waived by appearance, or by stipulation. Burnett v. Piercy, 149 Cal. 178; 86 Pac. 603.

Admission of service. An admission of service of a notice of appeal, limited to one or more persons, does not bind those whose names are omitted from such admission; and a stipulation that "the appeal was duly perfected" is the admission of the due service of a properly addressed notice of appeal upon all the parties signing the stipulation. Burnett v. Piercy, 149 Cal. 182; 86 Pac. 603.

Duplicate notices and undertakings. Duplicate notices of appeal from the same judgment or order, given in time, and duplicate undertakings not designating either of the notices, also given in time, constitute, in substance, but one appeal. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486; 92 Pac. 1027.

Effect of failure to serve notice. A failure either to file or to serve a notice of appeal within the prescribed time is fatal to the taking of the appeal. Davey v. Mulroy, 7 Cal. App. 1; 93 Pac. 297. Where an adverse party was not served with the notice of appeal, the appellate court has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal as between the other parties. Estate of Scott, 124 Cal. 671; 57 Pac. 654. Where a decree may be modified without in any manner affecting a co-defendant of the appellant, failure to serve such co-defendant with the notice of appeal does not render the appeal defective. Latham v. Los Angeles, 83 Cal. 564; 23 Pac. 1116.

Dismissal for failure to serve. The merits of the case will not be gone into, on a motion to dismiss the appeal, for the purpose of determining whether a decision of the appeal would necessarily affect the interests of a co-defendant of the appellant, who was not served with the notice of appeal. Latham v. Los Angeles, 83 Cal. 564; 23 Pac. 1116. The failure to serve the notice of appeal upon one alleged to be an adverse party does not justify the dismissal of the appeal, where the determination of the motion to dismiss involves an examination of the entire record, and incidentally of the merits of the appeal, and the motion was not made until after the appellant had filed his points and authorities upon the appeal. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Behnke, 118 Cal. 498; 50 Pac. 666. A motion for the dismissal of an appeal, on the ground that the notice of appeal had not been served on all the adverse parties, is not precluded by the fact that the case had been previously submitted to the court for decision. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 106 Cal. 224; 39 Pac. 758. Where, in an action to enforce a street assessment, judgment was rendered against several defendants, if the effect of an appeal from the judgment is to establish that there was, in fact, no lien upon which the judgment could be rendered, a reversal of the judgment will not injuriously affect the other defendants, and therefore an appeal will not be dismissed for a failure to serve them with the notice of appeal. Warren v. Ferguson, 108 Cal. 535; 41 Pac. 417. An appeal from an order settling the account of an administrator, and from the decree of distribution, will not be dismissed for failure to serve the notice of appeal on one of the distributees, where the appeal from the order settling the account was served on the executor, as the reversal of such order would necessarily affect the decree of distribution. Estate of Delaney, 110 Cal. 563; 42 Pac. 981. Where, upon the question of the service of the notice of appeal, before or after the filing of the undertaking, the affidavits of the parties squarely contradict one another, a motion to dismiss the appeal will not be granted. Coonan v. Loewenthal, 122 Cal. 72; 54 Pac. 388. A motion to dismiss an appeal may be made by persons not parties to the record, upon whom the notice of appeal should have been served. Bullock v. Taylor, 112 Cal. 147; 44 Pac. 457.

Necessity for undertaking or deposit. An appeal is not perfected, unless an undertaking is filed or a deposit made within the prescribed time. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383; Shaw v. Randall, 15 Cal. 384; McAulay v. Tahoe Ice Co., 3 Cal. App. 642; 86 Pac. 912. The filing of the undertaking within the time fixed is essential to jurisdiction. Continental Building etc. Ass'n v. Beaver, 6 Cal. App. 116; 91 Pac. 666; Aram v. Shallenberger, 42 Cal. 275.

Necessity and essentials of undertaking. See note post, § 941.

Undertaking not necessary under new method of appeal. See note post, § 941b.

Undertaking on appeal from justice's court. See note post, § 978.

Kind of undertaking required. The undertaking on appeal which must be filed within five days after service of the notice of appeal, as required by this section, is the three-hundred-dollar undertaking mentioned in § 941, post. Hill v. Finnigan, 54 Cal. 493; and see Schacht v. Odell, 52 Cal. 447. The undertaking referred to in this section, and that in § 941, post, are obviously the same. McAulay v. Tahoe Ice Co., 3 Cal. App. 642; 86 Pac. 912. An undertaking in the form of and purporting to be an undertaking to stay execution, as provided in § 942, post, is not the undertaking on appeal required by this section and § 941, post. Duffy v. Greenebaum, 72 Cal. 157; 12 Pac. 74; 13 Pac. 323. One undertaking, in the sum of three hundred dollars, gives to the supreme court jurisdiction of an appeal, both from a judgment and from an order denying a motion for a new trial. Buchner v. Malloy, 152 Cal. 484; 92 Pac. 1029.

Contents of undertaking. Where two notices of appeal are given, and one undertaking is filed, which does not designate the particular appeal referred to, neither appeal is good if the notices are not identical. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486.

Time of executing. Where the undertaking was executed before the notice of appeal was given, the undertaking is not thereby rendered fatally defective. Stackpole v. Hermann, 126 Cal. 465; 58 Pac. 935. This section does not require that the undertaking shall not be signed by the sureties until after the appeal is taken, nor limit any time between the two acts, but merely requires that it shall be filed within five days after service of the notice of appeal; and it is not effective until it is filed. Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176.

Time of filing. Where an undertaking on appeal is not filed within five days after the notice of appeal is served, the appeal is ineffectual for any purpose. Buhman v. Nickels, 1 Cal. App. 266; 82 Pac. 85; Aram v. Shallenberger, 42 Cal. 275; Reay v. Butler, 25 Pac. 685; San Francisco etc. Collection Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047; Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176. Where the undertaking on appeal was filed before the notice of appeal, but within five days after the service of notice of appeal, the appeal is well taken. Hewes v. Carville, 62 Cal. 516. An undertaking on appeal, filed before service of the notice of appeal, is ineffectual for any purpose. Aram v. Shallenberger, 42 Cal. 275; Little v. Jacks, 68 Cal. 343; 8 Pac. 856. Service of the notice of appeal by mail is complete at the time of the deposit of a copy thereof in the post-office; and where the undertaking on appeal is not filed within five days from such deposit, the appeal is ineffectual. Brown v. Green, 65 Cal. 221; 38 Pac. 811. Where the fifth day after service of the notice of appeal falls upon a Sunday, the appellant has the whole of the following day in which to file the undertaking on appeal. Robinson v. Templar Lodge, 114 Cal. 41; 45 Pac. 998. The delivery of the undertaking upon appeal to a deputy clerk, at a place other than the clerk's office, after office hours, on the last day for filing, which he then marked as filed as of that day, but which did not reach the clerk's office and was not entered as filed until the following day, is not sufficiently filed to sustain the appeal. Hoyt v. Stark, 134 Cal. 178; 86 Am. St. Rep. 246; 66 Pac. 223.

Extension of time for filing. The time for filing an undertaking on appeal, as limited by this section, may be extended by the court or judge, under § 1054, post, not exceeding thirty days. Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 74 Cal. 104; 15 Pac. 447; Schloesser v. Owen, 134 Cal. 546; 66 Pac. 726; but see Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383, a decision rendered before the amendment to § 530 of the Practice Act (the original of § 1054, post). An order extending the time within which to file an undertaking on appeal is ineffectual, unless the same is filed in the office of the clerk within the time limited by this section for filing the undertaking. Rauer's Law etc. Co. v. Standley, 3 Cal. App. 44; 84 Pac. 214. Where the notice of appeal was served upon the attorneys of record of a respondent, more than five days before the filing of the undertaking on appeal, a second service, made personally upon such respondent, who had only appeared by his attorneys, is a mere nullity, and cannot avail to postpone the time required by law for the filing of the undertaking. Rose v. Mesmer, 134 Cal. 459; 66 Pac. 594.

Exemption from filing. A city is not required to file an undertaking on appeal (Meyer v. San Diego, 130 Cal. 60; 62 Pac. 211); nor is the state required to file an undertaking on appeal (San Francisco etc. Collection Co. v. State, 141 Cal. 354; 74 Pac. 1047); nor, where a county is the real party in interest, under § 1058, post, is a county officer required to give an undertaking on appeal, though no order is obtained dispensing with the undertaking under § 946, post. Lamberson v. Jefferds, 116 Cal. 492; 48 Pac. 485. The board of education of the city and county of San Francisco does not represent the city and county, and is not included in the exemption from filing an undertaking on appeal provided for in § 1058, post. Mitchell v. Board of Education, 137 Cal. 372; 70 Pac. 180.

Exemption from giving bonds or undertakings. See note post, § 1058.

Waiver of filing. The filing of an undertaking cannot be waived by a stipulation made after the right of appeal is lost (Niles v. Gonzalez, 152 Cal. 90; 92 Pac.

74); and a stipulation to the correctness of a transcript, that an undertaking on appeal was duly executed and filed, if proved and conceded to be untrue, and made without knowledge of the facts, is not binding, and does not constitute a valid waiver of the undertaking, there being no appeal pending when the stipulation was made. Perkins v. Cooper, 87 Cal. 241; 21 Pac. 411.

Failure of sureties to justify. The failure of the sureties to justify upon the undertaking on appeal from the judgment does not render the appeal ineffectual, nor take from the appellate court jurisdiction of the cause; and while an appeal is pending upon one notice and undertaking, a second appeal is unauthorized. Tompkins v. Montgomery, 116 Cal. 120; 47 Pac. 1006.

Effect of failure to file. Failure to file the undertaking on appeal within five days after the service of the notice of appeal renders the appeal ineffectual. Boyd v. Burrel, 60 Cal. 280; Biagi v. Howes, 63 Cal. 384; Estate of Skerrett, 80 Cal. 62; 22 Pac. 85; Reay v. Butler, 25 Pac. 685; Hoyt v. Stark, 134 Cal. 178; 86 Am. St. Rep. 246; 66 Pac. 223; Rose v. Mesmer, 134 Cal. 459; 66 Pac. 594; Buhman v. Nickels, 1 Cal. App. 266; 82 Pac. 85; Hoyt v. Stark, 134 Cal. 178; 86 Am. St. Rep. 246; 66 Pac. 223. Construing together §§ 337 and 348 of the Practice Act (this section, and § 941, post), failure to file the undertaking or make the deposit within five days after filing the notice of appeal is fatal to the appeal, and it must be dismissed. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383

Dismissal for want of undertaking. While, in a few cases, it has been held that an appeal will not be dismissed for a failure to file an undertaking on appeal within five days after the service of the notice of appeal, on the ground that the appeal is ineffectual for any purpose (Reed v. Kimball, 52 Cal. 325; Biagi v. Howes, 63 Cal. 384; Reay v. Butler, 25 Pac. 685; Bellegarde v. San Francisco Bridge Co., 80 Cal. 61; 22 Pac. 57), yet the rule seems to be, that an appeal will be dismissed, in such cases, by the appellate court. Winder v. Hendrick, 54 Cal. 275; Ellis v. Bennet, 2 Cal. Unrep. 302; 3 Pac. 801; Perkins v. Cooper, 87 Cal. 241; 25 Pac. 411; Robinson v. Templar, 114 Cal. 41; 45 Pac. 998; Meyer v. San Diego, 130 Cal. 60; 62 Pac. 211; Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Edgar, 132 Cal. 197; 64 Pac. 260; Zane v. De Onativia, 135 Cal. 440; 67 Pac. 685. Where the only undertaking filed is limited by its terms to an appeal from the judgment, an appeal from an order made after judgment, with reference to which no undertaking was filed, must be dismissed. Pignaz v. Burnett, 121 Cal. 292; 35 Pac. 633. Where a city and a water company jointly gave notice of their appeals, a motion to dismiss both appeals for want of an undertaking on appeal will be denied as to the city, which is not required to give an undertaking, and will be granted as to the water company. Meyer v. San Diego, 130 Cal. 60; 62 Pac. 211. Where the appeal is from a judgment, and from any order other than an order denying a new trial, or where the notice of appeal is from more than one order, a separate undertaking must be given upon each of such appeals; otherwise a motion to dismiss the appeal will be granted. Estate of Kasson, 135 Cal. 1; 66 Pac. 871. An undertaking on appeal, executed after the filing of a first notice of appeal, and prior to the filing of a second notice, reciting that the appellant has appealed, and that the sureties undertake in consideration of such appeal, refers only to the first appeal, and limits the liability of the sureties thereto; the fact that the undertaking was filed by the appellant's attorney subsequently to the second appeal does not constitute it an undertaking thereupon; and the second appeal must be dismissed for want of an undertaking. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. Freese, 127 Cal. 70; 59 Pac. 769. A failure to file any undertaking on appeal may be taken advantage of under a motion to dismiss the appeal on the ground of the insufficiency of the undertaking, where the undertaking filed is so defective as not to constitute an undertaking. Wadleigh v. Phelps, 147 Cal. 135; 81 Pac. 418. When a motion to dismiss the appeal is made on the ground of want of the undertaking upon appeal, the character or nature of the order appealed from is not involved, and the action of the court is limited to determining whether the steps taken for the appeal are in compliance with the statute prescribing the mode of taking the appeal. Estate of Kasson, 135 Cal. 1; 66 Pac. 871. The judgment roll on appeal from an order subsequent to judgment is entirely different from the judgment roll on appeal from the judgment; and if the undertaking and the transcript belonging to each are not filed in due time, the respondent is entitled to a dismissal of the appeal. People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191. The court or judge has power to extend the time allowed by statute in which to file the undertaking on appeal; and where the undertaking is filed within the time properly allowed by the order of the judge of the court, a motion to dismiss the appeal will be denied. Schloesser v. Owen, 134 Cal. 546; 66 Pac. 726.

Dismissal of appeal at request of appellant. An attorney signing a notice of appeal is presumed to have had authority from the appellant; and, unless the appellant himself objects to the prosecution of the appeal, it will not be dismissed, upon motion of the respondent, upon the ground that it is prosecuted against the will of the appellant; nor will the court pass upon the weight or sufficiency of conflicting affidavits for the purpose of determining whether the appellant desires the appeal to be dismissed. Woodbury v. Nevada etc. Ry. Co., 120 Cal. 367; 52 Pac. 650.

Dismissal as to some respondents, effect on appellant. In an appeal by the state from a decree of distribution, the dismissal of the appeal as to heirs not made parties to the notice cannot affect the right of appeal by the state as to the parties served: the right of each distributee is several, and independent of the rights of others as to the state. Estate of Pendergast, 143 Cal. 135; 76 Pac. 962.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Section 337 of the Practice Act of 1851 read as follows: "The appeal shall be made by filing with the clerk of the court, with whom the judgment or order appealed from is entered, a notice stating the appeal from the same, or some specific part thereof, and serving a copy of the notice upon the adverse party or his attorney." And § 348 as follows: "To render an appeal effectual for any purpose, in any case, a written undertaking shall be executed on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, to the effect that the appellant will pay all damages and costs which may be awarded against him on the appeal, not exceeding three hundred dollars; or that sum shall be deposited with the clerk with whom the judgment or order was entered, to abide the event of the appeal. Such undertaking shall be filed, or such deposit made, with the clerk within five days after the notice of appeal is filed." For these two sections, §§ 940 and 941 of this code have been substituted.

1. Substance of the notice. A notice of appeal from a judgment and all orders made in the case is only a notice of appeal from the judgment. Gates v. Walker, 35 Cal. 289. An appeal "from all orders and rulings occurring on the trial" is not an appeal from an order granting or denying a new trial. Day v. Callow, 39 Cal. 593. A notice stating that the appeal is from all orders made by the probate court on a certain day is sufficient to cover any appealable order made on the day specified. Estate of Pacheco, 29 Cal. 229. If there is sufficient in the notice to show that the notice and order contained in the transcript are the same intended to be appealed from, the appeal will not be dismissed, although the notice may contain mistakes as to the date of the order or judgment. Flateau v. Lubeck, 24 Cal. 364. If the notice is signed by an attorney of the court, the presumption is that he had authority to take such action. Ricketson v. Torres, 23 Cal. 636.

2. Filing notice of appeal. It was held, under § 337 of the Practice Act of 1851, that the filing must precede or be contemporaneous with service of notice. Buffendeau v. Edmondson, 24 Cal. 94; Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107; James v. Williams, 31 Cal. 211; Lynch v. Dunn, 34 Cal. 518; Foy v. Domec, 33 Cal. 317. And must precede the filing of the undertaking. Buckholder v. Byers, 10 Cal. 481; Dooling v. Moore, 19 Cal. 81; Carpentier v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 609; Buffendeau v. Edmondson, 24 Cal. 94. Filing and service of notice is indispensable. Bonds v. Hickman, 29 Cal. 460; Whipley v. Mills, 9 Cal. 641. In Hastings v. Halleck, 10 Cal. 31, it was held, that to constitute an appeal three things were necessary: 1. Filing of notice; 2. Service of the same; and 3. Filing the undertaking. All of these steps must be taken within the times limited by the statute; and if not so taken, there is no appeal perfected, and the supreme court has no jurisdiction of the case. It will be seen, by reference to § 940 of this code, that the order in which the necessary steps are to be taken has been changed. When the record shows that a notice of appeal was served the same day that it was filed by the clerk, and the indorsement of the filing precedes the indorsement of admission of service, the inference is that the filing preceded the service. Wright v. Ross, 26 Cal. 262. Or if the notice of appeal is served on respondent's attorney, and immediately afterwards filed by the clerk, the service and filing will be regarded as one act. Id. Affidavits will not be received in the appellate court to show that a notice of appeal was filed on a different day from that stated in the record. Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107; see also Lorenzana v. Camarillo, 45 Cal. 125. If one of several respondents dies before notice of appeal is filed, a motion to dismiss the appeal as to him must be granted. Shartzer v. Love, 40 Cal. 93. Where an appeal was taken and perfected after the death of the appellant, it was held that there was no authority for prosecuting the cause in the name of the deceased, but that all proceedings should have been stayed until the executor or administrator could, by suggestion, have been made a party. Sanchez v. Roach, 5 Cal. 248.

3. Service of notice. A party appealing must notify all other parties to the action who have appeared and are interested in opposing the relief sought by appeal. Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 637. The words "adverse party," used in relation to appeals, includes every party whose interest in the subject-matter is adverse to a reversal or modification of the judgment, without regard to the position as plaintiff or defendant of the party. Senter v. Bernal, 38 Cal. 637. Service on attorney is sufficient. Coulter v. Stark, 7 Cal. 244. It must affirmatively appear that the notice was served. Hildreth v. Gwindon, 10 Cal. 490. Proof of service, and supplying proof of service of notice. See Moore v. Besse, 35 Cal. 184; Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650; Doll v. Smith, 32 Cal. 475.

4. Waiver of defects in notice. James v. Williams, 31 Cal. 211.

5. Waiver of notice. McLeran v. Shartzer, 5 Cal. 70; 63 Am. Dec. 84; Moulton v. Ellmaker, 30 Cal. 527; Mokelumne Hill etc. Mining Co. v. Woodbury, 10 Cal. 185.

6. Filing undertaking. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383; Bradley v. Hall, 1 Cal. 199; Cummins v. Scott, 23 Cal. 526; Shaw v. Randall, 15 Cal. 384; Hastings v. Halleck, 10 Cal. 31; Carpentier v. Williamson, 24 Cal. 609. If no undertaking on appeal has been filed, one may be filed after the objection has been taken. Bornheimer v. Baldwin, 38 Cal. 671; see also § 954 of this code.

§ 941. Undertaking or deposit on appeal. The undertaking on appeal must be in writing, and must be executed on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, to the effect that the appellant will pay all damages and costs which may be awarded against him on the appeal, or on a dismissal thereof, not exceeding three hundred dollars; or that sum must be deposited with the clerk with whom the judgment or order was entered, to abide the event of the appeal.

Legislation § 941. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 348 (New York Code, § 334), which read: "To render an appeal effectual for any purpose, in any case, a written undertaking shall be executed on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, to the effect that the appellant will pay all damages and costs which may be awarded against him on the appeal, not exceeding three hundred dollars; or that sum shall be deposited with the clerk, with whom the judgment or order was entered, to abide the event of the appeal. Such undertaking shall be filed, or such deposit made with the clerk within five days after the notice of appeal is filed."

Constitutionality of statute. The act of March 12, 1885 (Stats. 1885, p. 114), in so far as it attempts to authorize the acceptance of a corporation, organized for that purpose, as sole and sufficient surety on an undertaking on appeal, is unconstitutional and void. Cramer v. Tittle, 2 Cal. Unrep. 715; 11 Pac. 852.

Construction of code sections. The undertaking referred to in this section and that in § 940, ante, are obviously the same. McAulay v. Tahoe Ice Co., 3 Cal. App. 642; 86 Pac. 912. The provisions of this section, as well as those of §§ 938, 963, ante, must be read as if the words "appeal," "appellant," and "party aggrieved," were plural. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027. This section, in its application to probate appeals, is limited. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486.

Undertaking or deposit, time of filing or making. Construing together §§ 337, 348, of the Practice Act (§ 940, ante, and this section), an appeal is not effectual for any purpose, unless an undertaking is filed or a deposit made with the clerk within five days after the filing of the notice: failure so to file the undertaking or to make the deposit is fatal to the appeal. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383. The filing of an undertaking perfects an appeal, but it is not a part of the taking, in the statutory sense; hence, the filing of an undertaking on appeal, more than sixty days after the rendition of the judgment, does not prevent the consideration of the sufficiency of the evidence, where the notice of appeal was served and filed within such time. Perkins v. Cooper, 3 Cal. Unrep. 279; 24 Pac. 377. A deposit of money in lieu of an undertaking on appeal must be made within five days after the notice of appeal is served and filed: if made after that time, the appeal will be dismissed. Stratton v. Graham, 68 Cal. 169; 8 Pac. 710.

Time of filing undertaking. See note ante, § 940.

Contests and sufficiency of undertaking. An undertaking on appeal, which is properly entitled in the case, and states correctly the date of the rendition and the entry of the judgment, is sufficient to bind the sureties: the specification of one item or incident of the judgment cannot invalidate what is otherwise sufficient. Wadleigh v. Phelps, 147 Cal. 135; 81 Pac. 418. An undertaking on appeal, which does not contain a stipulation for the payment of damages and costs in the event of a dismissal of the appeal, as required by this section, is ineffectual. Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 109 Cal. 602; 42 Pac. 147; Anderson v. Anderson, 123 Cal. 445; 56 Pac. 61; Estate of Fay, 126 Cal. 457; 58 Pac. 936; Jarman v. Rea, 129 Cal. 157; 61 Pac. 790. Where the undertaking on appeal does not contain the stipulation for the payment of damages and costs, the defect is not cured by the insertion of such stipulation in an undertaking to stay execution of the judgment, although the latter undertaking is included in the same document with the former and the sureties on each are the same. Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 109 Cal. 602; 42 Pac. 147. An undertaking on appeal, by one defendant, that the sureties undertake that the appellants will pay all costs and damages, is insufficient: standing on the strict letter of their contract, the sureties could not be liable thereon for anything as costs and damages that could be awarded against only one appealing defendant. Zane v. De Onativia, 135 Cal. 440; 67 Pac. 685. The proper construction of an undertaking on appeal, that the sureties will pay all costs and damages that may be awarded against the appellant, is, that the sureties are liable thereon to the respondent; and the omission of the name of the obligee, in such undertaking, is immaterial. Downing v. Rademacher, 136 Cal. 673; 69 Pac. 415. An undertaking on appeal from a judgment, which properly refers to the judgment, so as fully to identify it, is sufficient. Pacific Paving Co. v. Verso, 11 Cal. App. 383; 105 Pac. 136. An undertaking on appeal, otherwise sufficiently referring to the order from which the appeal is taken, is not rendered insufficient because of a recital therein, that the plaintiff "is about to appeal," instead of that he "has appealed," from such order. Kaltschmidt v. Weber, 139 Cal. 76; 72 Pac. 632. The undertaking on appeal must conform to the notice of appeal; hence, where the notice of appeal is from the whole judgment, and the undertaking recites an appeal from the judgment for costs, the appeal will be dismissed. Stockton School District v. Goodell, 6 Cal. Unrep. 277; 56 Pac. 885.

Execution of undertaking. An undertaking on appeal is an independent contract on the part of the sureties, in which it is not necessary that the appellant shall join: the statute provides that it shall be executed on the part of the appellant, not by him, but by the sureties. Curtis v. Richards, 9 Cal. 34.

Sufficiency of single undertaking for two appeals. A single undertaking on an appeal from the judgment, and from an order denying a new trial, is sufficient (Chester

v. Bakersfield Town Hall Ass'n, 64 Cal. 42; 27 Pac. 1104; Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 326; 9 Pac. 187; Corcoran v. Desmond, 71 Cal. 100; 11 Pac. 815; Centerville etc. Ditch Co. v. Bachtold, 109 Cal. 111; 41 Pac. 813; Estate of Ryer, 110 Cal. 556; 42 Pac. 1082; Granger v. Robinson, 114 Cal. 631; 46 Pac. 604; Martin v. Ornelas, 139 Cal. 41; 72 Pac. 440; White v. Stevenson, 139 Cal. 531; 73 Pac. 421; Buchner v. Malloy, 152 Cal. 484; 92 Pac. 1029); but such undertaking must refer to each of the appeals, and show, upon its face, that it is given in consideration of both: if it recites merely one, the other appeal will be dismissed. Buchner v. Malloy, 152 Cal. 484; 92 Pac. 1029. Where the undertaking on appeal from the judgment makes no reference to the appeal from the order denying a new trial, such last-named appeal will be dismissed. Corcoran v. Desmond, 71 Cal. 100; 11 Pac. 815; Berniaud v. Beecher, 16 Pac. 510; Wood v. Pendola, 77 Cal. 82; 19 Pac. 183; Schurtz v. Romer, 81 Cal. 244; 22 Pac. 657; Crew v. Diller, 86 Cal. 555; 25 Pac. 66; Pacific Paving Co. v. Bolton, 89 Cal. 155; 26 Pac. 650; Forni v. Yoell, 95 Cal. 442; 30 Pac. 578; Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 109 Cal. 602; 42 Pac. 147; Granger v. Robinson, 114 Cal. 631; 46 Pac. 604; Rhoads v. Gray, 5 Cal. Unrep. 664; 48 Pac. 971; Dodge v. Kimple, 121 Cal. 580; 54 Pac. 94; McRae v. Argonaut Land etc. Co., 6 Cal. Unrep. 145; 54 Pac. 743. The undertaking on the appeal from the judgment is distinct from the undertaking on appeal from the order denying a new trial; and although both may be included in the same instrument, yet the validity of each is to be determined by a reference to the appeal for which it is given. Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176. On appeal from a judgment, and from an order denying a new trial, the undertaking must refer to each of the appeals as distinctly as if they were from separate orders requiring an undertaking for each. Granger v. Robinson, 114 Cal. 631; 46 Pac. 604; Corcoran v. Desmond, 71 Cal. 100; 11 Pac. 815. An undertaking on appeal, which, after reciting an appeal from the judgment, and an appeal from the order denying a new trial, declares that the appellants will pay damages awarded against them on the appeal or on a dismissal thereof, not exceeding three hundred dollars, is sufficient to sustain both appeals. Bell v. Staacke, 159 Cal. 193; 115 Pac. 221. Where one undertaking on appeal is sufficient to cover joint appeals from the judgment, and from an order denying a new trial, the fact that the words "or either of them" are omitted after the word "appeals," in the undertaking, does not render it invalid. Martin v. Ornelas, 139 Cal. 41; 72 Pac. 440. Where only one undertaking on appeal was filed, which recited the judgment, and the order appealed from, and provided that, in consideration of such appeal, the appellants would pay all damages and costs, and also contained a further provision and promise for a stay of execution under the judgment, the undertaking is insufficient to support either the appeal from the judgment or the appeal from the order. Corcoran v. Desmond, 71 Cal. 100; 11 Pac. 815. Where two appeals are taken, one from the judgment and the other from an order denying a motion to set aside the judgment, a single undertaking, given "in consideration of the premises and of such appeal," and conditioned that the appellants will pay all damages awarded against them on "the appeal," is insufficient, by reason of its ambiguity, to support either appeal. Carter v. Butte Creek Gold Mining etc. Co., 131 Cal. 350; 63 Pac. 667. Where an appellant, by one notice of appeal, gave notice that he appealed from the judgment, from an order denying a motion to dismiss the action, and from an order denying a motion to set aside a judgment by default, and gave one undertaking upon appeal, not referring separately to either of the appeals, the undertaking is void, and there is no remedy, under this section, to file a new undertaking, so as to preclude a dismissal of the appeal. McCormick v. Belvin, 96 Cal. 182; 31 Pac. 16. An undertaking on appeal is void, and the appeal wholly ineffectual, where there is more than one appeal, and the recitals of the undertaking do not identify the particular appeal which it was intended to perfect. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027; Pacific Paving Co. v. Verso, 11 Cal. App. 383; 105 Pac. 136. An undertaking on appeal from an order denying a motion to dismiss an action, and from an order denying a new trial, which does not state that the appeal has been taken from both orders, is insufficient. Field v. Andrada, 37 Pac. 180. Where an appeal is taken from two distinct orders, and only one undertaking is filed, which fails to designate to which of the appeals it is intended to apply, it is so ambiguous that it must be disregarded as if none had been filed. Home etc. Associates v. Wilkins, 71 Cal. 626; 12 Pac. 799; Crew v. Diller, 86 Cal. 555; 25 Pac. 66; Estate of Heydenfeldt, 119 Cal. 346; 51 Pac. 543; and see People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191. Where there are several appeals in the same action, the record on each appeal may be embodied in one transcript, but each appeal must be accompanied by an undertaking, and the particular appeal to which it applies designated, although the undertakings may be contained in one instrument, if the objects for which they are executed can be clearly distinguished. Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 326; 9 Pac. 187. An undertaking for costs, filed on an appeal from an order dismissing a motion for a new trial, which does not refer to an appeal from the judgment, which is taken subsequently, cannot be treated as an undertaking for costs on such subsequent appeal. Biagi v. Howes, 63 Cal. 384. Where the appeal is from a judgment and any order other than an order denying a new trial, or where the notice of appeal is from more than one order, a separate undertaking must be given on each of such appeals; and this rule is not varied by the fact that one or more of the orders included in the appeal is not appealable. Estate of Kasson, 135 Cal. 1; 66 Pac. 871. Where a notice of appeal from a judgment also specially enumerates numerous unappealable orders as orders appealed from, which are reviewable on appeal from the judgment, it is a notice of appeal from the judgment alone, and a single undertaking is sufficient. Wadleigh v. Phelps, 147 Cal. 135; 81 Pac. 418. Where an appeal was taken from a judgment dismissing the action, and also from an order made after judgment, a single undertaking is insufficient. Gardiner v. California Guarantee Investment Co., 129 Cal. 528; 62 Pac. 110. The word "appeal," as used in the undertaking portion of an appeal bond, means the whole appeal described in the instrument, both that from the judgment and the appeal from the order denying a new trial. Buehner v. Malloy, 152 Cal. 484; 92 Pac. 1029.

Undertaking on joint appeals. The statute does not require separate undertakings for separate interests. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027. A plaintiff and a defendant, who were defendants in a cross-complaint filed by another defendant, may unite in an undertaking on appeal from the order against them on such cross-complaint. Downing v. Rademacher, 136 Cal. 673; 69 Pac. 415. The insufficiency of the three-hundred dollar undertaking on a joint appeal will not defeat the appeal. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027. Where an appeal is taken by more than one party, and an undertaking thereon is given by only one of the appellants, such undertaking is sufficient to perfect the appeal of the appellant by whom it is given; but where an appeal is taken by only one party, and the undertaking thereon purports to be given on an appeal taken by several appellants, such undertaking is insufficient to support the appeal, and it will be dismissed. Zane v. De Onativia, 135 Cal. 440; 67 Pac. 685.

Clerical errors in undertaking. Where the year as well as the date of the judgment is incorrectly stated in the undertaking on appeal, but the mistake in the year is an obvious slip of the pen, and corrects itself, while the mistake as to the day is immaterial, the undertaking is not vitiated, where the judgment is otherwise correctly described, so that sureties on the undertaking are bound by it. Swasey v. Adair, 83 Cal. 136; 23 Pac. 284.

Consideration for undertaking. An undertaking on appeal from an order denying a new trial, before it is entered, is without consideration, and void. Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176; Stackpole v. Hermann, 126 Cal. 465; 58 Pac. 935. The validity of an appeal bond given as required by law to make an appeal effectual, the sureties upon which agree to be liable if the appeal is dismissed, is not destroyed by the fact that the appeal is premature and is not effectually secured; the expense to the respondent in securing a dismissal of the void appeal is a consideration for such undertaking. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64.

Death of obligee, effect on undertaking. The fact that a co-plaintiff died prior to the judgment in the action does not vitiate an undertaking given upon appeal in his favor as one of the co-plaintiffs; his name as obligee represented his executors or distributees as the real parties in interest; the undertaking necessarily follows the judgment, and is valid, both as against the obligors and in favor of the executors or distributees of the deceased obligee named therein. Todhunter v. Klemmer, 134 Cal. 60; 66 Pac. 75.

Liability of sureties. The presumption is, that the surety on an undertaking on appeal intended to undertake for the appeal then in force, and not for a prior ineffectual appeal. Estate of Sutro, 152 Cal. 249; 92 Pac. 486, 1027. An undertaking on appeal from an order denying a new trial, before it is entered, is without consideration; and the subsequent interlineation of the date of the order in such undertaking is an alteration discharging the sureties, and such appeal must be dismissed. Clarke v. Mohr, 125 Cal. 540; 58 Pac. 176.

Attorney as surety. The fact that one of the attorneys of the appellant became a surety for such appellant upon the undertaking on appeal, in violation of a rule of the court, is not a ground of dismissal. De Jarnatt v. Marguez, 127 Cal. 558; 78 Am. St. Rep. 90; 60 Pac. 45.

Estoppel to object to undertaking. Where a respondent stipulates that the appellant has in due time given and filed a good and sufficient undertaking upon appeal in the cause, he is estopped from contradicting, after the time for appeal has expired, his former admissions. Forni v. Yoell, 95 Cal. 442; 30 Pac. 578. Where, on appeal from an order settling the final account of an executor and distributing the estate, there is a stipulation in the transcript, that "an undertaking in due form was properly made and filed," the objection that there are in fact two appeals, and that the undertaking is invalid because it refers to only one, without indicating which one, cannot be raised after the expiration of the time within which another undertaking might have been filed. Estate of Marshall, 118 Cal. 379; 50 Pac. 540; Springer v. Springer, 126 Cal. 452; 58 Pac. 1060. Notwithstanding one undertaking upon two distinct appeals is so defective as to justify the dismissal of both, yet the right to move to dismiss the appeal from the judgment will be deemed waived, where the parties have mutually stipulated for extensions of time for the filing of points and authorities, and no objection was raised to the regularity or sufficiency of the appeal until after such points and authorities were filed, and until it was too late to take another appeal; but such waiver does not apply to a distinct appeal from an order made after judgment, the time of appeal from which had elapsed before any stipulations were made. Gardiner v. California Guarantee Investment Co., 129 Cal. 528; 62 Pac. 110.

Undertaking stays proceedings. Upon appeal from an order appointing an administrator, the required undertaking on appeal stays all proceedings upon the order appealed from. Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 566; 29 Pac. 1108. The undertaking provided for by this section stays proceedings, except in those cases specified in §§ 942–945, post, and a few special matters mentioned in § 949, post. Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 566; 29 Pac. 1108.

Stay of proceedings. See also note post, § 949.

Effect of perfecting appeal to stay proceedings. See note post, § 949.

Withdrawal of deposit. A party who has deposited in the trial court the amount of money required in lieu of an undertaking upon appeal, will not be allowed, upon a motion therefor in the supreme court, to withdraw the money so deposited, and file an undertaking upon appeal in lieu thereof. Wiebold v. Rauer, 95 Cal. 418; 30 Pac. 558.

Appeal dismissed when. In the absence of a bond, deposit, or waiver, the appeal is ineffectual, and will be dismissed. Willow Land Co. v. Goldschmidt, 11 Cal. App. 297; 104 Pac. 841.

Undertaking on appeal from justice's court. See note post, § 978.

Methods of taking an appeal. See note ante, § 940, and note post, § 941b.

Liability of sureties on appeal bonds. See note 38 Am. St. Rep. 702.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. 1. Generally. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383; Gordon v. Wansey, 19 Cal. 82.

3. State and county need not file undertaking. Warden v. Mendocino County, 32 Cal. 655; People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389; Thornton v. Mahoney, 24 Cal. 569. See § 1058 of this code.

§ 941a. Appeals. Alternative method.

Appeals from all judgments, orders or decrees of any of the superior courts of this state, which may pursuant to law be reviewed by the supreme court, or any of the district courts of appeal of this state, may, in addition to the other modes prescribed by law, be taken pursuant to the provisions of the next section.

Legislation § 941a. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 753 (based on §§ 949–554, Bellinger and Cotton's Oregon Ann. Codes and Stats.); the code commissioner saying of this section and of §§ 941b and 941c. "These are entirely new provisions prescribing an alternative method of taking appeals to the supreme court or district courts of appeal."

Constitutionality. The alternative method of appeal is constitutional. Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 154 Cal. 731; 99 Pac. 202.

Construction. The act of 1907 did not repeal the old method of appeal; an appeal perfected under either method is sufficient: all statutes in aid of appeals are to be liberally construed and applied. Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 154 Cal. 731; 99 Pac. 202. Rules of decision are not changed by the alternative method. United Investment Co. v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 10 Cal. App. 175; 101 Pac. 543.

Probate appeals. The alternative method of appeal is applicable to appeals from probate orders. Estate of McPhee, 154 Cal. 385; 97 Pac. 878. This section is limited in its application by the existence of special provisions relative to probate appeals. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486.

Bill of exceptions must be served. The alternative method of appeal, prescribed in §§ 941a, 941b, 941c, does not dispense with service of the bill of exceptions to be used on motion for a new trial. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Consideration of evidence. Under this section and §§ 941b, 941c, post, the appellate court cannot consider the evidence, unless it is embodied in a statement, bill of exceptions, or a transcript, approved as provided in § 953, post. Lane v. Tanner, 156 Cal. 135; 103 Pac. 846. A sufficient record is made, so far as the notice of appeal and the judgment roll are concerned, by the clerk's certificate to their correctness. Totten v. Barlow, 165 Cal. 378; 132 Pac. 749. An appellant, in order to avail himself of the alternative method of appeal, must present a transcript consisting of copies of the moving papers, the evidence taken upon the hearing of the motion, and the rulings of the court thereon, certified by the trial judge; the clerk cannot certify this record. Thompson v. American Fruit Co., 21 Cal. App. 338; 131 Pac. 878; Pouchan v. Godeau, 21 Cal. App. 365; 131 Pac. 879.

Undertaking not required. No undertaking is required on an appeal under this section. Theisen v. Matthai, 165 Cal. 249; 131 Pac. 747.

Undertaking not necessary under new method of appeal. See note post, § 941b.

§ 941b. Notice of appeal, what to contain. Any person to whom the right of appeal from any judgment, order or decree of the superior courts of the state is granted, may appeal therefrom by filing with the clerk of the court in which the judgment, order or decree is rendered, a notice entitled in the cause in which said judgment, order or decree was made, which said notice shall state that the person giving the same does thereby appeal to the supreme court or district court of appeal, as the case may be, from the judgment, order or decree, or some specific part thereof; and the said notice must identify the said judgment, order or decree or the part thereof appealed from, with reasonable certainty. This notice may be filed at any time after the rendition of the judgment, order or decree, but the same must be filed within sixty days after entry of said judgment, order or decree. If proceedings on motion for a new trial are pending, the time for appeal from the judgment shall not expire until thirty days after entry in the trial court of the order determining such motion for a new trial, or other termination in the trial court of the proceedings upon such motion. This notice need not be served upon any of the parties to the action or the proceeding, or their representatives or attorneys, but when filed within the time herein specified it shall, without further action on the part of the appellant, transfer the cause for decision and determination to the higher court. In the event of the death of any person having at his death a right of appeal the attorney of record representing the decedent in the court in which the judgment was rendered may appeal therefrom at any time before the appointment of an executor or an administrator of the estate of the decedent.

Legislation § 941b. 1. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 753; based on §§ 549–554, Bellinger and Cotton's Oregon Ann. Codes and Stats. See ante, Legislation § 941a.

2. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 204, (1) in second sentence, (a) striking out "notice of," before "entry of said judgment," and (b) also striking out, at end of sentence, "has been served upon the attorneys of record appearing in said cause or proceeding, provided, however, that if no notice of entry of judgment be given the notice must, nevertheless, be filed, under any circumstances, not later than six months after the entry of the judgment, order or decree"; (2) inserting the third sentence.

Application of section. This section applies to all appeals; but as to probate appeals it is limited in its application by the existence of special provisions relative to such appeals. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486. An appeal in a probate or guardianship proceeding is not to be taken under this section, but under §§ 1714, 1715, post. Estate of Dunphy, 158 Cal. 1; 109 Pac. 627. The last paragraph of this section is inapplicable, where an administratrix was appointed and letters were issued to her before the filing of either of the notices of appeal. Deiter v. Kiser, 158 Cal. 259; 110 Pac. 921.

Notice of entry of judgment. The notice of entry of judgment is a notice in writing, which may be served in the ordinary manner. Estate of Keating, 158 Cal. 109; 110 Pac. 109. Where the record on appeal does not show that any notice of entry of judgment was served on the appellants, it must be assumed that no such notice was served. Fraser v. Sheldon, 164 Cal. 165; 128 Pac. 33. Actual service of a written notice of the entry of a judgment is essential to start in motion the sixty days within which to appeal. Huntington Park Improvement Co. v. Park Land Co., 165 Cal. 429; 132 Pac. 760. This section does not require that any notice of the entry of the order or judgment shall be filed or put upon the record. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294.

Time of appeal. Under this section, which prescribes a new method of appealing from final judgments, the appeal must be taken within sixty days after the notice of entry of judgment, or if no notice thereof is given, not later than six months after the entry of such judgment. Cook

v. Suburban Realty Co., 20 Cal. App. 538; 129 Pac. 801. This section allows an appeal to be taken from an order at any time after the rendition thereof, provided it is within sixty days after notice of the entry thereof has been served on the attorney of record of the adverse party, or if no such notice is given, then not later than six months after such entry. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294. Where no notice of an order denying a new trial was ever served, an appeal from the order, taken more than sixty days but within six months from the date of its entry, is in time, under this section and § 941a, ante. Brode v. Goslin, 158 Cal. 699; 112 Pac. 280. Though an appeal taken more than sixty days after the entry of the order denying a new trial would be too late under § 939, ante, yet, when measured under the provisions of this section, such appeal is valid and in time, where the record shows no notice to the appellant of the entry of such order. Union Lumber Co. v. Sunset Road Oil Co., 17 Cal. App. 460; 120 Pac. 44. The provisions of this section are also applicable to an appeal assumed to be taken under the older method; the time within which an appeal must be taken, subject to the limitations of the statute, does not commence to run until notice of the entry of the judgment or order has been given. Carr v. Stern, 17 Cal. App. 397; 120 Pac. 35.

Notice of appeal. An appeal may be taken by simply filing a notice of appeal. Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 154 Cal. 731; 99 Pac. 202; Russell v. Banks, 11 Cal. App. 450; 105 Pac. 261. Notice of appeal is essential to the taking of an appeal, either under this section or under § 940, ante: a notice to the clerk to prepare a transcript is not a notice of appeal. Boling v. Alton, 162 Cal. 297; 122 Pac. 461. Prior to the adoption of this section, it was necessary not only to file the notice of appeal but to serve it. Davey v. Mulroy, 7 Cal. App. 1; 93 Pac. 297. This section does not require service of notice of appeal. Potrero Nuevo Land Co. v. All Persons, 155 Cal. 371; 101 Pac. 12; Davey v. Mulroy, 7 Cal. App. 1; 93 Pac. 297; Carr v. Stern, 17 Cal. App. 397; 120 Pac. 35. Notice of appeal must be filed, but need not be served. John Brickell Co. v. Sutro, 11 Cal. App. 460; 105 Pac. 948; Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 154 Cal. 731; 99 Pac. 202. Notice of intention to move for a new trial must be served, though it is not necessary that the filed notice of appeal be served. Ford v. Braslan Seed Growers Co., 10 Cal. App. 762; 103 Pac. 946.

Request for transcript. The appellant, in order to avail himself of the method of appeal in § 953a, post, must file with the clerk a request for a transcript as provided therein. Thompson v. American Fruit Co., 21 Cal. App. 338; 131 Pac. 878.

Transcript. Where a party takes an appeal under this section, he may follow it up by a printed transcript and copies thereof, as required by the rules of the supreme court, or, at his option, by filing the typewritten transcript authorized by §§ 953a, 953b, and 953c. Lang v. Lilley & Thurston Co., 161 Cal. 295; 119 Pac. 100. Where a transcript does not conform to the rules of the supreme court, it cannot be filed, or the appeal be considered, except as to such questions as may be reviewed on the judgment roll alone, when the judgment roll is in a proper, separate, and distinct form from the transcript. Reclamation District v. Sherman, 11 Cal. App. 399; 105 Pac. 277.

Undertaking not required. Under this section, no undertaking is essential to the jurisdiction of the appellate court, although the record may be prepared, according to the former method, in the form of a bill of exceptions, instead of by the reporter's transcript authorized by § 953a, post. Union Collection Co. v. Oliver, 162 Cal. 755; 124 Pac. 435; Bohn v. Bohn, 159 Cal. 366; 116 Pac. 567; Mitchell v. California etc. S. S. Co., 154 Cal. 731; 99 Pac. 202; Estate of McPhee, 154 Cal. 385; 97 Pac. 878; Carr v. Stern, 17 Cal. App. 397; 120 Pac. 35; Russell v. Banks, 11 Cal. App. 450; 105 Pac. 261. No undertaking is required on an appeal under this section. Theisen v. Matthai, 165 Cal. 249; 131 Pac. 747.

Requirements in addition to the giving of notice under this section. See note post, § 953a.

When evidence may be reviewed. Where an appeal is taken under the alternative method, this section and § 941c, post, authorize the sufficiency of the evidence to be reviewed in the same manner as if the appeal had been taken within sixty days of the entry of judgment, under § 939, ante. Fraser v. Sheldon, 164 Cal. 165; 128 Pac. 33; Dennis v. Gordon, 163 Cal. 427; 125 Pac. 1063; Brown v. Coffee, 17 Cal. App. 381; 121 Pac. 309. Where an appeal is taken under this section, within six months from the entry of judgment, the evidence may be reviewed, where no notice of the entry of judgment was given. Fraser v. Sheldon, 164 Cal. 165; 128 Pac. 33; Larson v. Larson, 15 Cal. App. 531; 115 Pac. 340; Brown v. Coffee, 17 Cal. App. 381; 121 Pac. 309. Where no notice of the entry of the judgment was served upon the attorney for the appellant, within sixty days before the taking of the appeal, then, under this section and § 941c, post, the sufficiency of the evidence may be reviewed upon appeal from the judgment. Foss v. Johnstone, 158 Cal. 119; 110 Pac. 294. A party who wishes to take advantage of the fact that notice of the entry of judgment was served, for the purpose of preventing a consideration of the evidence on appeal from the judgment taken more than sixty days after its entry, must show that such notice was served more than sixty days before the taking of such appeal; otherwise the appeal will be considered as having been taken under §§ 941a, 941b, and 941c. Dennis v. Gordon, 163 Cal. 427; 125 Pac. 1063; Brown v. Coffee, 17 Cal. App. 383; 121 Pac. 309.

Certification of record. An appellant, in order to avail himself of the alternative method of appeal, must present a transcript consisting of copies of the moving papers, the evidence taken upon the hearing of the motion, and the rulings of the court thereon, certified by the trial judge; the clerk cannot certify this record. Thompson v. American Fruit Co., 21 Cal. App. 338; 131 Pac. 878; Pouchan v. Godeau, 21 Cal. App. 365; 131 Pac. 879. A sufficient record is made, so far as the notice of appeal and the judgment roll are concerned, by the clerk's certificate to their correctness. Totten v. Barlow, 165 Cal. 378; 132 Pac. 749.

Effect on time to appeal of death of judgment plaintiff. See note 7 Ann. Cas. 393.

§ 941c. Effect of appeal. Appeals perfected pursuant to the provisions of the foregoing section, shall have the same force and effect as appeals taken pursuant to the provisions of sections nine hundred and thirty-nine, nine hundred and forty and nine hundred and forty-one of this code; provided, however, that any question may be reviewed therein, which question could be reviewed upon an appeal taken pursuant to the provisions of section nine hundred and thirty-nine of this code, and within sixty days of the rendition of judgment.

Legislation § 941c. Added by Stats. 1907, p. 754. See ante, Legislation § 941a.

Application of section. This section applies to all appeals; but as to probate appeals it is limited in its application by the existence of special provisions relative to such appeals. Estate of Brewer, 156 Cal. 89; 103 Pac. 486.

Reviewing sufficiency of the evidence. See note ante, § 941b.

Record and undertaking. A sufficient record is made, so far as the notice of appeal and the judgment roll are concerned, by the clerk's certificate to their correctness. Totten v. Barlow, 165 Cal. 378; 132 Pac. 749. No undertaking is required on an appeal under this section. Theisen v. Matthai, 165 Cal. 249; 131 Pac. 747.

§ 942. Undertaking on appeal from a money judgment. If the appeal be from a judgment or order directing the payment of money, it does not stay the execution of the judgment or order unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant, by two or more sureties, to the effect that they are bound in double the amount named in the judgment or order; that if the judgment or order appealed from or any part thereof be affirmed, or the appeal be dismissed, the appellant will pay the amount directed to be paid by the judgment or order, or the part of such amount as to which the judgment or order is affirmed, if affirmed only in part, and all damages and costs which may be awarded against the appellant upon the appeal, and that if the appellant does not make such payment within thirty days after the filing of the remittitur from the supreme court in the court from which the appeal is taken, judgment may be entered on motion of the respondent in his favor against the sureties for such amount, together with the interest that may be due thereon, and the damages and costs which may be awarded against the appellant upon the appeal. If the judgment or order appealed from be for a greater amount than two thousand dollars, and the sureties do not state in their affidavits of justification accompanying the undertaking that they are each worth the sum specified in the undertaking, the stipulation may be that the judgment to be entered against the sureties shall be for such amounts only as in their affidavits they may state that they are severally worth, and judgment may be entered against the sureties by the court from which the appeal is taken, pursuant to the stipulations herein designated. When the judgment or order appealed from is made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, the judgment entered against the sureties upon the undertaking must be made payable in the same kind of money or currency.

Deposit in lieu of undertaking. Ante, § 941; post, § 948.
Qualification of sureties. Post, § 1057.
Specified kind of money. Ante, § 667.
Stay, where no provision made. Post, § 949.

Legislation § 942. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 349 (New York Code, § 335), as amended by Stats. 1863, p. 690, which read: "If the appeal be from a judgment or order directing the payment of money, it shall not stay the execution of the judgment or order, unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant, by two or more sureties, stating their places of residence and occupation, to the effect that they are bound in double the amount named in the judgment or order, that if the judgment or order appealed from, or any part thereof, be affirmed, the appellant shall pay the amount directed to be paid by the judgment or order, or the part of such amount as to which the judgment or order shall be affirmed, if affirmed only in part, and all damages and costs which shall be awarded against the appellant upon the appeal. When the judgment or order appealed from is made payable in a specified kind of money or currency, the undertaking required by this section shall be drawn and made payable in the same kind of money or currency specified in such judgment." When § 942 was enacted in 1872, (1) "does" was substituted for "shall" before "not stay"; (2) "stating their places of residence and occupation," after "sureties," was omitted; (3) "or the appeal be dismissed," after "affirmed," was added; (4) "will" was substituted for "shall" before "pay"; (5) "is" was substituted for "shall be" before "affirmed"; (6) "may" was substituted for "shall" before "be awarded"; and (7) "must" was substituted for "shall" before "be drawn."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 336.

Construction of section. The judgment referred to in this section is the decree passing upon the matter directly involved in the litigation: in all other cases the proceedings are held in abeyance by virtue of the statute itself. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. The words, "or the part of such amount as to which the judgment or order is affirmed, if affirmed only in part," found in this section, are not in § 945, post. Heinlen v. Beans, 71 Cal. 295; 12 Pac. 167.

Application of section. This section is applicable only to appeals from a judgment or order directing the payment of money. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070. Where the fund over which the litigation arose has never been in the possession of the appellants, but was in the custody of the court, no undertaking on appeal to stay execution, under this section, is required. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. This section does not authorize the giving of an undertaking on an appeal from an order, not one directing the payment of money, to stay the proceedings, either on the original judgment or on the execution. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070.

Money judgment, what constitutes. This section is applicable to judgments which direct the payment, by the defendant, of a specific amount of money, and which can be directly enforced by a writ of execution (Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383), and to judgments which require the same process for their enforcement (Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58); it refers solely to judgments in personam for a certain sum of money, and provides that upon affirmance on appeal the sureties must pay the whole amount, or have personal judgment entered against them therefor (Boob v. Hall, 105 Cal. 413; 38 Pac. 977); but it has no application to a judgment which may be satisfied in either of two or more modes, or which cannot be enforced against the defendant until after the plaintiff has exhausted another remedy, and where he is personally liable for only a deficiency in the proceeds of certain property which is primarily chargeable therefor; and if the judgment directs the sale of real property, and the defendant is liable only in case of deficiency, the provisions of § 945, post, control. Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383. An appeal from a judgment directing that the plaintiff recover a certain sum of money, and declaring such sum to be a lien on the land, which is ordered sold, and the proceeds applied to the judgment, the clerk being directed to docket a judgment for any deficiency, is not within this section; hence, an undertaking to stay proceedings, as provided herein, is not required. Owens v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 124 Cal. 331; 57 Pac. 71. A judgment in an action for an accounting between partners, which adjudges that the plaintiffs shall receive from the defendant personally a certain sum of money, and that the defendant's interest in the property shall be sold to realize the amount, and if not sufficient, a personal judgment shall be entered against him for the deficiency, has the effect of postponing the right of the plaintiffs to a personal judgment and to execution thereon until a judgment for the deficiency is entered, and the defendant, after an appeal from such judgment, with an ordinary appeal bond, is entitled to a writ staying the execution of the judgment until the determination of such appeal. Painter v. Painter, 98 Cal. 625; 33 Pac. 483. A judgment against the owners of a vessel, foreclosing liens against the vessel, and providing for a sale thereof, with the engines, apparel, and furniture, and out of the proceeds arising from such sale to pay to the plaintiff the amount found due him, is not a judgment directing the payment of money, within this section. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656; and see Central Lumber etc. Co. v. Center, 107 Cal. 193; 40 Pac. 334; Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383. In order to stay the judgment, where there is a personal judgment in addition to a decree directing a sale of the property, in an action by a vendor against his vendee, an undertaking on appeal must be executed, under this section. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. A judgment for costs is not a judgment directing the payment of money contemplated by this section, and a stay bond is not required, in order to restrain the issuance of an execution to recover such costs: the appeal bond effects that object. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. An order denying a motion to strike out a cost-bill is not an order directing the payment of money, within this section; and an undertaking executed in double the amount of the cost-bill, upon appeal from such order, by the defendant, has no statutory authority, and cannot operate to stay execution; and the plaintiff is not entitled to judgment against the sureties thereon, upon motion, that being a summary remedy created by statute, and applicable only to undertakings allowed by it. Reay v. Butler, 118 Cal. 113; 50 Pac. 375. An order that an original judgment be carried into execution is not one directing the payment of money, and this section does not authorize the giving of an undertaking, on appeal, to stay proceedings. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070.

Stay of proceedings allowed when. The stay of execution on a judgment for the payment of money, under this section, is only allowed on an appeal from the judgment, and on giving the undertaking in double amount, as required by this section; hence, this section does not apply to an appeal from an order made after a final judgment denying a motion to set aside an execution. Carit v. Williams, 67 Cal. 580; 8 Pac. 93; Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070. A stay bond, given on an appeal from an order denying a new trial, has the effect of staying execution on the judgment (Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278; Baldwin v. Superior Court, 125 Cal. 584; 58 Pac. 185; Holland v. McDade, 125 Cal. 353; 58 Pac. 9; Starr v. Kreuzberger, 131 Cal. 41; 63 Pac. 134), though there is no appeal from the judgment. Baldwin v. Superior Court, 125 Cal. 584; 58 Pac. 185. The execution of a judgment in unlawful detainer, where the payment of a specified sum of money is directed, cannot be stayed, unless an undertaking on appeal is given, as provided by this section; hence, an appeal from an order, made after judgment, vacating an order for the satisfaction of a judgment, does not authorize the issuance of a writ of supersedeas. Bateman v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 141; 72 Pac. 922. A judgment against the sureties on an undertaking on appeal to stay execution, executed under this section, does not have the effect of staying execution of the judgment, where the undertaking required should have been executed under § 945, post. Central Lumber etc. Co. v. Center, 107 Cal. 193; 40 Pac. 334. After an appeal is perfected from a judgment of the superior court, that court has no general power to stay execution, though, if execution has been stayed according to the statute, it has power to compel the sheriff to respect and observe such stay. Mannix v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 730; 109 Pac. 264. The supreme court cannot grant a stay of execution upon a final judgment not appealed from, though there is an appeal from an order made after such judgment. Carit v. Williams, 67 Cal. 580; 8 Pac. 93.

Stay of proceedings. See also note post, § 949.

Effect of dismissal of appeal on stay. The dismissal of an appeal from the judgment cannot change the effect of the stay of execution effected by the undertaking given on the appeal from the order denying a new trial. Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal 278; Tompkins v. Montgomery, 116 Cal. 120; 47 Pac. 1006; Starr v. Kreuzberger, 131 Cal. 41; 63 Pac. 134.

Nature of undertaking. An undertaking in the form of and purporting to be an undertaking to stay execution, as provided in this section, must not be considered as the undertaking on appeal required by §§ 940, 941, ante. Duffy v. Greenebaum, 72 Cal. 157; 12 Pac. 74.

Undertaking on appeal from justice's court. See note post, § 978.

Execution of undertaking. It is essential to the validity of an undertaking to stay execution of a money judgment, that it be signed by the judgment debtor. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070.

Amount of undertaking. On appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, after a money judgment, an undertaking in double the amount of the judgment may be given, under this section, and execution on the judgment will be stayed thereby, pending such appeal. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070. An order directing the payment of alimony and counsel fees is properly stayed by an undertaking, under this section, in double the amount of the lump sums and double the amount of the monthly payments for a period of three years. Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185; 7 Pac. 456. Where the ordinary bond on appeal is sufficient to stay execution, a stay bond, given under this section in double the amount found due, is void. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656.

Time of filing. An undertaking on appeal to stay execution may be filed at any time after the appeal is taken, and before the execution is satisfied. Hill v. Finnigan, 54 Cal. 493.

Undertakings not required on appeal in certain actions. An undertaking for the stay of execution of an order of sale upon appeal from a decree foreclosing a mortgage cannot be given, under this section (Boob v. Hall, 105 Cal. 413; 38 Pac. 977); nor an undertaking upon appeal from a decree foreclosing a mechanic's lien (Central Lumber etc. Co. v. Center, 107 Cal. 193; 40 Pac. 334); nor an undertaking upon appeal in an action of claim and delivery. Churchill v. More, 7 Cal. App. 767; 96 Pac. 108. A decree in partition proceedings may be stayed without an undertaking on appeal, under this section. Born v. Horstmann, 80 Cal. 452; 5 L. R. A. 577; 22 Pac. 169; Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64. An appeal from a judgment upon the contest of an election for directors of a railroad company, is not within this section: all proceedings upon the judgment are stayed by the ordinary appeal bond. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Probate appeals, undertaking on. Upon an appeal from an order appointing an administrator, an undertaking on appeal, under § 941, ante, stays all proceedings upon the order appealed from. Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 566; 29 Pac. 1108. An order requiring an administrator to pay money for a family allowance may be stayed without an undertaking under this section. Pennie v. Superior Court, 89 Cal. 31; 26 Pac. 617. A decree of distribution, appealed from by the legatee, is not within this section. Estate of Schedel, 69 Cal. 241; 10 Pac. 334. Provisions authorizing or requiring stay bonds do not apply to a decree of distribution. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64.

New undertaking. Where the surety on an undertaking on appeal to stay execution disposes of his property pending the appeal, the filing of a new undertaking cannot be required. Macomber v. Conradt, 4 Cal. Unrep. 723; 37 Pac. 382.

Rights and liabilities of sureties. The sureties, by signing the undertaking on appeal to stay execution under this section, submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the court, and waive any constitutional or statutory right to object to such jurisdiction or to the enforcement of such security. Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617. Although, by entering into an undertaking on appeal, the sureties are brought under the jurisdiction of the court, yet they are not thereby made actors in the litigation, nor entitled to any part in its conduct; and the party to whom they have given the undertaking is not required to give them notice of any steps in procedure to be taken against the defendant, but they are bound, equally with him, by any order which may be made between the real parties in the action. Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac. 627. The sureties, on a joint appeal by two defendants, are liable on their undertaking to stay execution, on affirmance of the judgment as to one of the defendants, though the judgment is reversed as to the other, and hence judgment is properly rendered against them on the undertaking. Wood v. Orford, 56 Cal. 157. The obligation upon the sureties, upon an undertaking to stay execution pending an appeal, to pay the judgment in case of the default of the defendant, is absolute, and continues until the judgment is actually paid; and when the judgment has been revived against the defendant, under § 708, ante, after having been satisfied by the purchase of property under execution, which belonged to a third party, and was recovered by such third party, the sureties are liable to pay the amount of such revived judgment, and a new judgment may be entered against them for such amount, upon notice to them, unless they can show that the judgment was properly satisfied and that the satisfaction was not properly set aside. Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100; 34 Pac. 627. Where the judgment from which an appeal is taken is not such as calls for the giving of an undertaking to stay execution, the sureties on such an undertaking are not liable thereunder, it being without consideration. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329; and see Powers v. Crane, 67 Cal. 65; 7 Pac. 135. A special stay bond, given upon appeal from a decree of distribution, is without consideration, arising from the fact that the undertaking does not stay the decree, and no recovery can be had against the sureties. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64.

Judgment against sureties upon motion. The statute permitting judgment to be entered, on motion, against the sureties on undertakings on appeal, after affirmance of the judgment, is constitutional. Ladd v. Parnell, 57 Cal. 232; Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617. This section is the only statute authorizing the rendition of judgment upon motion; and a recovery upon any bond, other than one covered by this section, as in claim and delivery, must be by action. Churchill v. More, 7 Cal. App. 767; 96 Pac. 108; United States Fidelity Co. v. More, 155 Cal. 415; 101 Pac. 302. Where an undertaking on appeal to stay execution has no validity as a statutory undertaking, a motion for a judgment thereon, against the sureties, should be denied, even if shown to be supported by a consideration, and to be good as a common-law bond. Central Lumber etc. Co. v. Center, 107 Cal. 193; 40 Pac.

334; and see Powers v. Chabot, 93 Cal. 266; 28 Pac. 1070; McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 422; 33 Pac. 329. Service of the original notice and affidavit, on application for judgment against the sureties on an undertaking on appeal to stay execution, on return of remittitur, is immaterial error, the defendants not having been misled. Wood v. Orford, 56 Cal. 157. Notice of the motion for judgment against the sureties, where the appellant does not pay the amount of the judgment or order within thirty days after the filing of the remittitur, is not required: the sureties stipulate in the undertaking that judgment may be so entered. Meredith v. Santa Clara Mining Ass'n, 60 Cal. 617; Mowry v. Heney, 3 Cal. Unrep. 277; 24 Pac. 301. A judgment against only one of the sureties on an undertaking on appeal, under this section, no reason appearing why the other was not joined, except that he could not be found and served with notice, is erroneous: the provision for a judgment "against the sureties" must be strictly pursued. Hansen v. Martin, 63 Cal. 282. The entry of judgment against the sureties upon an undertaking on appeal to stay execution, is not a special proceeding, but is a part of the procedure in the original action authorized by this section, and is in sequence of the judgment rendered against the appellant; and the reversal of a judgment against the sureties, because prematurely entered, does not affect or impair their obligation on the undertaking; and the plaintiff is still entitled to enforce that obligation by a proper motion for judgment against them. Hawley v. Gray Bros., 127 Cal. 560; 60 Pac. 437.

Effect of stipulation by sureties allowing judgment against themselves. A stipulation by sureties, inserted in an undertaking on appeal, that judgment may be entered against them in case the order recited in such undertaking shall be affirmed, cannot render them liable, since the undertaking rests for its efficiency on the statute alone, and as the undertaking was ineffectual as a stay, because made in a case not provided for by statute, the consent of the sureties to summary judgment against themselves is likewise ineffectual. Reay v. Butler, 118 Cal. 113; 50 Pac. 375. A stipulation by sureties, that, upon the affirmance of the judgment appealed from, if appellant does not pay the amount of such judgment within sixty days after the filing of the remittitur, judgment may be entered against them for the same, makes them parties to the original action, and the proceedings against them are all taken in that action. Hawley v. Gray Bros., 127 Cal. 560; 60 Pac. 437.

Who may recover against sureties. The assignee of a judgment cannot recover on the undertaking given to stay the proceedings, where he is not also the assignee of the undertaking. Chilstrom v. Eppinger, 127 Cal. 326; 78 Am. St. Rep. 46; 59 Pac. 696.

Effect of reversal. Reversal on appeal from an order denying a new trial, and remanding the cause for retrial, as effectually vacates the judgments as does a reversal of the judgment upon a direct appeal therefrom. Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278.

Construction of condition in appeal bond requiring sureties to pay judgment of appellate court. See note 5 Ann. Cas. 90.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. If, on appeal from an order denying a new trial, a full undertaking on appeal, as provided in § 349 of the Practice Act (§ 942 of this code), is given, it stays execution on the judgment. Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278. An appeal will not be dismissed for insufficiency in the justification of the sureties on the undertaking, where the undertaking was both to render the appeal effectual and to stay execution, and the justification was sufficient for the former purpose. Dobbins v. Dollarhide, 15 Cal. 374. The undertaking on appeal providing for the liability of the sureties upon the condition of the affirmance of the judgment, operates as a stay. If by mere neglect to prosecute the appeal, and for that reason it should be dismissed, it would work manifest injustice to the respondent if he should be deprived of his rights under the judgment. This result would, however, necessarily follow, if the sureties could be released upon the pretense that the judgment was not affirmed. In many instances this would encourage a fraud upon the respondents. Karth v. Light, 15 Cal. 327; Chamberlin v. Reed, 16 Cal. 207; Chase v. Beraud, 29 Cal. 138. This section of the code conforms in language to the rule of the cases cited supra. In foreclosure cases, if a judgment in personam is rendered against the defendants, and also one enforcing the lien, and an appeal is taken from the whole judgment, in order to stay proceedings upon the judgment, the appellant must file an undertaking for costs, one in double the amount of the personal judgment, and one for the payment of waste and such deficiency as may remain due after the sale of the property, and all these undertakings may be in one instrument, or several, at the option of the appellant. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 356.

§ 943. Appeal from a judgment for delivery of documents. If the judgment or order appealed from direct the assignment or delivery of documents or personal property, the execution of the judgment or order cannot be stayed by appeal, unless the things required to be assigned or delivered be placed in the custody of such officer or receiver as the court may appoint, or unless an undertaking be entered into on the part of the appellant, with at least two sureties, and in such amount as the court, or a judge thereof, may direct, to the effect that the appellant will obey the order of the appellate court upon the appeal. If the judgment or order appealed from appoint a receiver, the execution of the judgment or order cannot be stayed by appeal, unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant, with two or more sureties, to the effect that if such judgment or order be affirmed or the appeal dismissed, the appellant will pay all damages which the respondent may sustain by reason of such stay, not exceeding an amount to be fixed by the judge of the court by which the judgment was rendered or order made, which amount must be specified in the undertaking. If the judgment or order appealed from direct the sale of personal property upon the foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, the execution of the judgment or order cannot be stayed on appeal, unless an undertaking be entered into on the part of the appellant, with at least two sureties, in such amount as the court, or the judge thereof, may direct, to the effect that the appellant will, on demand, deliver the mortgaged property to the proper officer if the judgment be affirmed, or in default of such delivery that the appellant and sureties will, on demand, pay to the proper officer the full value of such property at the date of the appeal.

Receiver. Ante, § 564.
Undertaking. Ante, § 941.

Legislation § 943. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 350 (New York Code, § 336), which read: "If the judgment or order appealed from, direct the assignment or delivery of documents, or personal property, the execution of the judgment or order shall not be stayed by appeal, unless the things required to be assigned or delivered, be placed in the custody of such officer or receiver as the court may appoint; or unless an undertaking be entered into, on the part of the appellant, with at least two sureties, and in such amount as the court or the judge thereof, or county judge, may direct, to the effect that the appellant will obey the order of the appellate court upon the appeal." When § 943 was enacted in 1872, "cannot" was substituted for "shall not" before "be stayed."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 6, (1) substituting "a" for "the" before "judge thereof," and (2) omitting "or county judge" before "may direct."

3. Amended by Stats. 1897, p. 56.

Construction of section. This section relates only to a case where an appeal has been taken, and has to do only with the matter of staying execution after appeal; hence, a petition for a writ of mandate directing a judge of the superior court to fix the amount of a stay bond on appeal from an order appointing a receiver, which does not show that an appeal has been taken as provided in this section, but merely states that the petitioner is desirous of appealing from such order, is insufficient. Leonis v. York, 140 Cal. 333; 73 Pac. 1058. The judgment referred to in this section is the decree passing upon the matter directly involved in the litigation: in all other cases the proceedings are held in abeyance by virtue of the statute itself. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329.

Assignment or delivery of personal property. This section applies to cases where the appellant has money or other property in his possession which has been adjudged by the lower court to belong to the respondent, or where the appellant has been directed to do some act for the benefit of the respondent, and where it would be unjust to allow the appellant to retain the possession of the property without securing the respondent by a bond. Rohrbacher v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 631; 78 Pac. 22. A judgment in replevin requires an undertaking on appeal, although a redelivery bond was given in the action; hence, supersedeas will not be issued, where the undertaking required by this section was not given. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 203; 26 Pac. 83. The only bond required to stay execution upon appeal is the one prescribed by this section; and an indemnity bond to stay execution upon appeal, in claim and delivery, not conditioned as prescribed in this section, but conditioned under § 942, ante, is without consideration. United States Fidelity etc. Co. v. More, 155 Cal. 415; 101 Pac. 302. Money, under this section, is not included in the term "personal property": this section does not apply to an appeal taken by a legatee from a decree of distribution, where such decree distributes certain moneys (Estate of Schedel, 69 Cal. 241; 10 Pac. 334; Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64); but where the money is a special fund, and capable of identification, it will answer to the term "personal property," as used herein. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. An order directing an insolvent to turn over to a receiver goods, wares, and merchandise, or its avails, is a case provided for by this section, and must be stayed by the undertaking provided herein: an ordinary undertaking for damages and costs on appeal does not stay such order. Ex parte Clancy, 90 Cal. 553; 27 Pac. 411. A judgment determining the ownership of money paid into court does not require an undertaking on appeal, as provided by this section. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. Where the judgment appealed from directs the delivery of both real and personal property, it is the duty of the trial court to fix the amount of the bond to be given to obtain a stay; Doudell v. Shoo, 158 Cal. 50; 109 Pac. 615; 159 Cal. 448; 114 Pac. 579; Clute v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 15; 132 Am. St. Rep. 54; 99 Pac. 362; Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843; Gordan v. Graham, 153 Cal. 297; 95 Pac. 145.

Order appointing receiver. An order appointing a receiver can be stayed only by the filing of a special bond. Coburn v. Hynes, 161 Cal. 685; 120 Pac. 26.

Foreclosure sale of personal property. A decree directing the sale of pledged property, on foreclosure of the pledge, is not within this section: the pledged property is in the possession of the plaintiff, and no delivery is required. Rohrbacher v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 631; 78 Pac. 22. A judgment foreclosing liens on personal property, described therein as "plaintiff's mortgage and lien" and "intervener's mortgage and lien," and declaring that "such mortgages and liens are the ones described in the complaint," is within this section, and cannot be stayed without an undertaking on appeal: the ordinary three-hundred-dollar undertaking does not warrant a supersedeas. Tolle v. Heydenfeldt, 138 Cal. 56; 70 Pac. 1013. A judgment foreclosing liens against a vessel, and directing the sale thereof, and her engines, apparel, etc., and out of the proceeds of the sale to pay the plaintiff the amount found due him, is not a judgment directing the assignment or delivery of personal property upon the foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, within this section. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656.

Decree in partition. A decree in partition is not stayed by an undertaking under this section. Born v. Horstmann, 80 Cal. 452; 5 L. R. A. 577; 22 Pac. 169.

Probate orders. An order appointing an administrator is not stayed by an undertaking under this section: § 941, ante, applies in such case (Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 566; 29 Pac. 1108); nor is an order directing the payment of a family allowance stayed by an undertaking taken under this section, § 941, ante, applying also in this case. Pennie v. Superior Court, 89 Cal. 31; 26 Pac. 617.

Who may give undertaking. One who has the right to appeal from a judgment has also the right to give an undertaking to stay its execution. Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843.

Condition of undertaking. The condition of the undertaking under this section is not that judgment may be taken on motion: an action is a necessary basis for judgment. United States Fidelity etc. Co. v. More, 155 Cal. 415; 101 Pac. 302.

Mandamus to compel fixing amount. The trial judge may be compelled, by mandamus, to fix the amount of the undertaking. Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843.

Stay of proceedings. See note post, § 949.

§ 944. Appeal from a judgment directing execution of a conveyance, etc. If the judgment or order appealed from, direct the execution of a conveyance or other instrument, the execution of the judgment or order cannot be stayed by the appeal until the instrument is executed and deposited with the clerk with whom the judgment or order is entered, to abide the judgment of the appellate court.

Legislation § 944. Enacted March 11, 1872 (based on Practice Act, § 351), substituting "cannot" for "shall not."

Construction of section. The judgment referred to in this section is the decree passing upon the matter directly involved in the litigation: in all other cases the proceedings are held in abeyance by virtue of the statute itself. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329.

Decree of distribution. Provisions authorizing or requiring stay bonds do not apply to an appeal from a decree of distribution. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64; Estate of Schedel, 69 Cal. 241; 10 Pac. 334.

Stay of proceedings. See note post, § 949.

§ 945. Undertaking on appeal concerning real property. If the judgment or order appealed from, direct the sale or delivery of possession of real property, the execution of the same cannot be stayed, unless a written undertaking be executed on the part of the appellant, with two or more sureties, to the effect that during the possession of such property by the appellant, he will not commit, or suffer to be committed, any waste thereon, and that if the judgment be affirmed, or the appeal dismissed, he will pay the value of the use and occupation of the property from the time of the appeal until the delivery of possession thereof, pursuant to the judgment or order, not exceeding a sum to be fixed by the judge of the court by which the judgment was rendered or order made, and which must be specified in the undertaking. When the judgment is for the sale of mortgaged premises, and the payment of a deficiency arising upon the sale, the undertaking must also provide for the payment of such deficiency.

Mortgaged realty, sale or delivery of possession of. Ante, §§ 726, 744.
Deposit with clerk. Ante, § 941; post, § 948.
Undertaking, how executed. Ante, § 941.
Qualifications of sureties. Post, § 1057.
Waste. Ante, §§ 745, 746.

Legislation § 945. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 352 (New York Code, § 338), (1) substituting "cannot" for "shall not," (2) inserting "or the appeal dismissed" after "affirmed," and (3) substituting "must" for "shall" before "be specified" and before "also provide."

Construction of section. This section includes orders as well as judgments; and the provision herein, in regard to use and occupation, refers to cases in which the creditor is entitled to the use, and more particularly to judgments and orders directing a delivery of the possession. Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233. This section provides for two distinct undertakings, upon two kinds of judgments: one directing a sale of real property, and the other directing a delivery of the possession of real property. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. An undertaking for costs and damages, upon an appeal from a judgment for the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien and the sale of the property subject thereto, taken by a lien-holder not in possession of the land, whose lien was adjudged subordinate to the lien foreclosed, is properly given under § 941, ante, and not under this section. Root v. Bryant, 54 Cal. 182. Where the judgment declares the lien of a mortgage subordinate to mechanics' liens, no undertaking on appeal is required, except that for costs. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 35 Pac. 77.

Affidavit for stay of execution. Upon a motion in the supreme court for a stay of execution, the affidavits must state facts, and not mere general conclusions; it is not sufficient for the moving party to state generally that a person was not in possession of the property: he must state that some one else is in adverse possession. McMillan v. Hayward, 84 Cal. 85; 24 Pac. 151.

No stay after judgment executed. Where the judgment has been executed prior to the application for a writ of supersedeas to stay proceedings, the application must be denied. Hoppe v. Hoppe, 99 Cal. 536; 34 Pac. 222.

Undertaking and stay where sale is ordered. This section provides for the undertaking on appeal for the stay of execution of an order of sale in foreclosure proceedings. Boob v. Hall, 105 Cal. 413; 38 Pac. 977. An undertaking on appeal for costs only, without the provision against the commission of waste, is insufficient to stay proceedings under a judgment directing a receiver to sell the mortgaged premises. Hoppe v. Hoppe, 99 Cal. 536; 34 Pac. 222. A defendant in foreclosure, who is residing on the mortgaged premises, but who holds in subordination to another, cannot have a stay of execution without giving the undertaking prescribed by this section; nor can the person in subordination to whom the property is held have a stay without giving such undertaking. McMillan v. Hayward, 84 Cal. 85; 24 Pac. 151. The provision of this section, requiring an undertaking on appeal for a deficiency upon a sale of mortgaged premises, in order to stay execution, does not apply to a judgment of foreclosure and sale, and for deficiency, in an action by an administratrix to enforce an equitable lien upon property conveyed by her to a surviving partner of the decedent, upon a settlement between them, in consideration of his agreement to assume and pay the whole amount of a certain firm note, and to relieve the estate from liability thereon; but a bond, under this section, in an amount fixed by the judge rendering the judgment, to prevent waste pending the appeal, is sufficient to stay execution under the judgment. Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 460; 48 Pac. 383. In foreclosure proceedings, where judgment for deficiency is waived, and a receiver of the rents and profits has been appointed, leaving the tenant of the mortgagor in possession, although no undertaking for deficiency or for the value of the use and occupation is required upon appeal by the mortgagor from the decree, yet, in order to stay execution thereof, an undertaking must be given against waste, notwithstanding the tenancy may expire pending the appeal. Bank of Woodland v. Stephens, 137 Cal. 458; 70 Pac. 293. An undertaking on appeal from a judgment directing a sale of real property merely, need provide security only against waste, unless such sale is of mortgaged premises and the judgment provides for the payment of any deficiency, in which case it must provide for the payment of such deficiency, but no provision need be inserted therein for the payment of the value of the use and occupation of the premises pending the appeal, for the obvious reason that the judgment creditor does not become entitled to the value of the use and occupation until after the sale. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. An undertaking to stay execution, upon appeal from a decree foreclosing a mechanic's lien, must be given under this section: a mere bond in double the amount of the judgment against the owner of the premises, not conditioned as required by this section, does not have the effect of staying execution of the judgment. Central Lumber etc. Co. v. Center, 107 Cal. 193; 40 Pac. 334; and see Corcoran v. Desmond, 71 Cal. 100; 11 Pac. 815. This section governs in the case of a judgment directing the sale of real property to pay a money judgment in an action by a vendee against his vendor; but it does not apply where the vendee of the land is in possession, and he rescinds, and recovers judgment for payments made on the purchase price, and for the value of his improvements, for which amounts the land is directed to be sold: the ordinary undertaking on appeal, in the sum of three hundred dollars, is sufficient to stay proceedings upon such judgment. Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 124 Cal. 331; 57 Pac. 71.

Where delivery of possession is ordered. An undertaking on appeal from a judgment directing a delivery of the possession of real property must provide against waste, and for the payment of the value of the use and occupation, and for these two items only: there can be, in such a case, no question as to deficiency. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337; Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233. An order requiring the plaintiff in condemnation proceedings to pay compensation for the lands, where he had entered into possession, or else restore possession thereof, may be stayed under this section. Neale v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 28; 18 Pac. 790. A judgment in unlawful detainer, which directs the delivery of possession of real property, cannot be stayed, unless an undertaking is given as provided by this section; hence, an appeal from an order made after final judgment, vacating an order for the satisfaction of a judgment, does not warrant the issuance of a supersedeas. Bateman v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 141; 72 Pac. 922.

Undertaking for deficiency required when. An undertaking to stay execution, pending an appeal from a judgment of foreclosure of a mortgage, must provide for the payment of any deficiency. Gutzeit v. Pennie, 97 Cal. 484; 32 Pac. 584. The appellant in an action to foreclose a mortgage must furnish an undertaking to pay any deficiency judgment, whether he is the mortgagor, or a party who claims the mortgaged premises and desires to prevent a sale and enjoy the property during the pendency of the appeal. Johnson v. King, 91 Cal. 307; 27 Pac. 644. An appellant must execute an undertaking for any deficiency, in an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage, although he may not be the mortgagor, and regardless of whether he is in possession or not. Spence v. Scott, 95 Cal. 152; 30 Pac. 202. An undertaking for the payment of any deficiency, on an appeal from a judgment, where the sale of real property is directed for the purpose of satisfying any lien other than the mortgage lien, is not required. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337; Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 35 Pac. 77; Painter v. Painter, 98 Cal. 625; 33 Pac. 483; Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383. To this extent the statute discriminates in favor of mortgage liens, and against other liens; and any further provision in such an undertaking, not being required by law, is utterly void. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. Where the judgment in an action for a partnership accounting directs the sale of real property of the partnership for the satisfaction of the lien of one partner against the others, an undertaking to pay any deficiency to stay its execution is not required, since such lien was not created by mortgage, and it is only in such latter case that an undertaking to pay a deficiency is required. Painter v. Painter, 98 Cal. 625; 33 Pac. 483; and see Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. Where an undertaking on appeal against the commission of waste contains a further clause, that the undertaking is given in compliance with the provisions of this section, such clause does not extend the effect of the undertaking beyond the condition for which it was executed; hence, the undertaking against the commission of waste does not obviate the necessity of the provision for the payment of any deficiency arising after the sale of the mortgaged premises. Gutzeit v. Pennie, 97 Cal. 484; 32 Pac. 584. Where the judgment directs the defendant to pay the amount of certain notes, and in default thereof, that certain property shall be sold, and if the proceeds are insufficient, a deficiency judgment shall be docketed against the defendant, an undertaking on appeal for the payment of the deficiency is not required. Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383.

Purpose of undertaking. The statutory undertaking in each case has reference to a particular judgment and its execution; it is made primarily for the benefit of the plaintiff. Walsh v. Soule, 66 Cal. 413; 6 Pac. 82.

Validity of undertaking. An undertaking on appeal, under this section, sufficient in form and amount, is not vitiated by the fact that some of the sureties are on it twice, for different sums. Wheeler v. Karnes, 130 Cal. 618; 63 Pac. 62.

Amount of undertaking. To stay the execution of the judgment, the appellant must give an undertaking against waste, and also an undertaking to pay any deficiency: against waste, in an amount to be fixed by the judge; against any deficiency, for the entire deficiency, whatever the amount may prove to be. Gutzeit v. Pennie, 97 Cal. 484; 32 Pac. 584. Where the judgment appealed from directs the delivery of both real and personal property, it is the duty of the trial court to fix the amount of the bond to be given to obtain a stay: the supreme court has no jurisdiction to fix such amount. Doudell v. Shoo, 158 Cal. 50; 109 Pac. 615; 159 Cal. 448; 114 Pac. 579; Clute v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 15; 132 Am. St. Rep. 54; 99 Pac. 362; Winsor Pottery Works v. Superior Court, 13 Cal. App. 360; 109 Pac. 843; Gordan v. Graham, 153 Cal. 297; 95 Pac. 145. Under this section, the judge of the court has power to fix the amount of the undertaking on appeal from a decree of foreclosure, in all the three matters mentioned in the section, namely, waste, use and occupation, and deficiency. Boob v. Hall, 105 Cal. 413; 38 Pac. 977. The provision of this section requiring the judge to fix the amount of the undertaking against waste is distinct from the provision requiring that the undertaking shall also provide for the payment of a deficiency; hence, the authority of the judge to fix the penalty of the undertaking is limited to the object named in the provision under which it is granted. Gutzeit v. Pennie, 97 Cal. 484; 32 Pac. 584. Under this section, the judge of the court is authorized, upon an ex parte application, to fix the amount of the undertaking on appeal in foreclosure suits; but the safer and better practice is to give the respondent an opportunity to be heard. Hubbard v. University Bank, 120 Cal. 632; 52 Pac. 1070. The order fixing the amount of undertaking on appeal, under this section, need not specify separately the amounts for waste, use and occupation, and deficiency, but may merely specify the whole amount deemed necessary to meet the requirements, although the undertaking itself must contain covenants for each of the matters covered by this section. Wheeler v. Karnes, 130 Cal. 618; 63 Pac. 62. The question whether a judgment has been executed by the sheriff by a delivery of the possession of the property should not be considered by the judge as a ground of refusal to fix the amount of the undertaking to stay proceedings; but the judge should determine the sufficiency of those matters, when presented upon a direct issue, in which the right to an actual stay of proceedings is involved. Gutierrez v. Hebbard, 104 Cal. 103; 37 Pac. 749.

Mandamus to compel judge to fix amount. The trial judge may be compelled, by mandamus, to fix the amount of the undertaking. Gordan v. Graham, 153 Cal. 297; 95 Pac. 145. One having a right of appeal from an order denying a motion to vacate or modify an order for a writ of possession, may insist upon the duty of the court to fix the amount of the undertaking necessary to stay the operation of such writ, under this section, and the discharge of such duty may be compelled by writ of mandate. Green v. Hebbard, 95 Cal. 39; 30 Pac. 202. Upon application for a writ of mandate to compel the court to fix the amount of the undertaking necessary to stay the operation of a writ of possession, under this section, the merits of the ruling appealed from will not be considered. Green v. Hebbard, 95 Cal. 39; 30 Pac. 202.

Result of giving undertaking. Upon the giving of a bond under this section, one may be rightfully left in the possession of lands, pending the determination of his appeal, he being answerable for the use and occupation of the premises. Agoure v. Lewis, 15 Cal. App. 71; 113 Pac. 882. An undertaking on appeal by a defendant in ejectment, against whom judgment was recovered, that he will pay the value of the use and occupation of the property from the time of the appeal until the delivery of the possession thereof, deprives the plaintiff in ejectment of all right of possession pending the appeal, and operates, by virtue of the statute, to give the defendant a lease of the land during the period specified. Shepperd v. Tyler, 92 Cal. 552; 28 Pac. 601.

Result of failure to give undertaking. A writ of assistance may issue to recover the possession of land sold at foreclosure sale, where no undertaking staying the execution has been given, as provided by this section; hence, the judgment roll is admissible in evidence on the application for such writ, notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal from the judgment. California Mortgage etc. Bank v. Graves, 129 Cal. 649; 62 Pac. 259; and see Montgomery v. Tutt, 11 Cal. 190.

Failure to object to insufficiency of undertaking. The failure of the respondent to object to the insufficiency of the undertaking on appeal to stay execution of the judgment foreclosing the mortgage, at the time it was given, because of its failure to provide for the payment of any deficiency, is not a waiver of his right to the enforcement of the judgment. Gutzeit v. Pennie, 97 Cal. 484; 32 Pac. 584.

Liability of sureties. Where an undertaking strictly complies with the provisions of this section, and the sureties have bound themselves in a penal sum, fixed by the judge of the court, to make good not only any damage which may arise from waste, but also any deficiency judgment which may remain after sale of the mortgaged premises, if the penal sum fixed is consumed by a judgment against the sureties for waste, no recovery can be had against them for deficiency; but if no damage for waste is recovered, the full amount of the penal sum is available to make good any deficiency not exceeding that sum. Ogden v. Davis, 116 Cal. 32; 47 Pac. 772. Where an undertaking on appeal from a judgment foreclosing a mortgage provided, among other things, that if the judgment should be affirmed the mortgagor would pay to the plaintiff the value of the use and occupation of the premises pending the appeal, and the judgment was affirmed, and no sale of the property having been made, an action was brought against the sureties to recover the value of the use and occupation, the undertaking in reference to such use and occupation not being required by the statute, the sureties are not liable. Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233. The sureties on an undertaking against the commission of waste, in foreclosure proceedings, are not liable therefor, where the property is erroneously described in such undertaking, which followed the mortgage, complaint, and judgment. Ogden v. Davis, 116 Cal. 32; 47 Pac. 772. Sureties are not liable on an undertaking under this section, where the judgment is affirmed only in part: this section does not provide for the liability of sureties in such case, as does § 942, ante. Heinlen v. Beans, 71 Cal. 295; 12 Pac. 167. Where an undertaking on appeal for a stay of execution specifies a penal sum, and recites that such sum is the amount fixed by the judge, such recital binds the sureties, equally with the principal, and it may be taken as true against them, and need not be averred in the complaint nor proved at the trial. Ogden v. Davis, 116 Cal. 32; 47 Pac. 772.

Probate proceedings, undertaking on. Provisions authorizing or requiring stay bonds do not apply to an appeal from a decree of distribution. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64; Estate of Schedel, 69 Cal. 241; 10 Pac. 334.

Writ of assistance. All that is requisite to obtain the writ of assistance, as against the parties, and those claiming with notice under them, after the commencement of the action, is, to furnish to the court proper evidence of a presentation of a deed to them, and a demand of possession, and their refusal to surrender it (Montgomery v. Middlemiss, 21 Cal. 103; 81 Am. Dec. 146; California Mortgage etc. Bank v. Graves, 129 Cal. 649; 62 Pac. 259); and such evidence can properly be furnished to the court by affidavit. California Mortgage etc. Bank v. Graves, 129 Cal. 649; 62 Pac. 259. It is the duty of the trial judge, upon proper application, to fix the amount of the undertaking to be given to stay proceedings on a writ of assistance, pending an appeal. Gordan v. Graham, 153 Cal. 297; 95 Pac. 145.

Stay of proceedings. See notes post, §§ 949, 1176.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Whitney v. Allen, 21 Cal. 233; Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 356; Thornton v. Mahoney, 24 Cal. 584; Zoller v. McDonald, 23 Cal. 136; Pierson v. McCahill, 23 Cal. 249.

§ 946. Release of property under levy, on appeal. Attachment not continued. Whenever an appeal is perfected, as provided in the preceding sections of this chapter, it stays all further proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from, or upon the matters embraced therein, and releases from levy property which has been levied upon under execution issued upon such judgment; provided, however, said property shall not be released from the levy, if the respondent excepts to the sufficiency of the sureties within five days after the giving of the undertaking staying execution until such sureties, or others, justify in the manner prescribed by law; but the court below may proceed upon any other matter embraced in the action and not affected by the order appealed from. And the court below may in its discretion, dispense with or limit the security required by this chapter, when the appellant is an executor, administrator, trustee, or other person acting in another's right. An appeal does not continue in force an attachment, unless an undertaking be executed and filed on the part of the appellant by at least two sureties, in double the amount of the debt claimed by him, that the appellant will pay all costs and damages which the respondent may sustain by reason of the attachment, in case the order of the court below be sustained; and unless, within five days after the entry of the order appealed from, such appeal be perfected.

Legislation § 946. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 353 (New York Code, § 339), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 707, which read: "Whenever an appeal is perfected as provided in the preceding sections in this chapter, it shall stay all further proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from, or upon the matters embraced therein; and on appeal, and filing an appeal bond on appeal from an order discharging an attachment, said attachment shall not be dissolved, but shall remain in full force until the cause be disposed of on appeal, but the court below may proceed upon any other matter embraced in the action and not affected by the order appealed from. And the court below may, in its discretion, dispense with or limit the security required by said sections, when the appellant is an executor, administrator, trustee, or other person acting in another's right; provided, that an appeal shall not continue in force an attachment, unless an undertaking be executed and filed on the part of the appellant, by at least two sureties, in double the amount of the debt claimed by him, that the appellant will pay all costs and damages which the respondent may sustain by reason of the attachment, in case the order of the court below be sustained; and unless, also, notice of the appeal be given within five days after service of the notice of the entry of the order appealed from, and such appeal be perfected, and the undertaking in this section mentioned be filed within five days thereafter." The changes from the original code § 946 are noted infra.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 337, (1) in first sentence, inserting "and releases from levy property which has been levied upon under execution issued upon such judgment"; (2) in final sentence, omitting (a) "from an order dissolving an attachment," after "an appeal," and (b) "and," before "such appeal" be perfected.

3. Repeal by Stats. 1901, p. 173; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1913, p. 316, in first sentence, adding the proviso, "provided . . . by law."

Construction of section. The effect of an appeal from a judgment is purely a matter of statutory regulation, to be determined by a construction of the statute under which the appeal is taken. Ex parte Queirolo, 119 Cal. 635; 51 Pac. 956.

Appeal perfected when. Whenever the undertaking on appeal has been properly executed, and the sureties, if excepted to, have justified, or the court has dispensed with security, "an appeal is perfected," in the sense in which these words are used in this section (Hill v. Finnigan, 54 Cal. 493); and when the order of the court, fixing the amount of the undertaking on appeal to stay execution in a foreclosure suit, has been complied with, the appeal is perfected. Hubbard v. University Bank, 120 Cal. 632; 52 Pac. 1070.

Judgment in force until appeal perfected. So far as the execution of the judgment is concerned, the judgment of the trial court remains in full force until the appeal is perfected by the proper undertaking for stay of proceedings, and the justification of the sureties, if excepted to. Hill v. Finnigan, 54 Cal. 493.

What undertaking stays proceedings. The giving of the ordinary undertaking on appeal, mentioned in § 941, ante, stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from. Rohrbacher v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 631; 78 Pac. 22; Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340; 64 Pac. 477. The giving of the undertaking mentioned in § 941, ante, on appeal from an order which is not one of those specified in §§ 942, 943, 944, 945, ante, and 949, post, stays all proceedings; hence, a motion for a stay of proceedings will be granted. Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340; 64 Pac. 477; and see Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 567; 29 Pac. 1108; Root v. Bryant, 54 Cal. 183. The fact that an undertaking on appeal is insufficient because the sureties are not good, and that a new undertaking is given upon exception to the sureties upon the first undertaking, does not affect the stay of proceedings, which takes place upon the filing of the required undertaking, without regard to the sufficiency or insufficiency of the sureties. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong Co., 81 Cal. 222; 15 Am. St. Rep. 50; 22 Pac. 594.

Amount of undertaking must be fixed. No stay of execution upon appeal is effectuated, unless the amount of the undertaking is fixed by the court, or by a judge thereof. United States Fidelity etc. Co. v. More, 155 Cal. 415; 101 Pac. 302.

Undertaking unnecessary when. No undertaking on appeal from a judgment is necessary or authorized to stay proceedings as to moneys deposited in court, by stipulation of the parties to the action, pending litigation. Broder v. Conklin, 121 Cal. 289; 53 Pac. 797.

Appeal stays proceedings. The effect of an appeal is to stay the proceedings (Karry v. Superior Court, 162 Cal. 281; 128 Pac. 760), and to remove the subject-matter of the order from the jurisdiction of the lower court, and that court is without power to proceed further as to any matter embraced therein until the appeal is determined. Stateler v. Superior Court, 107 Cal. 536; 40 Pac. 949; Ex parte Queirolo, 119 Cal. 635; 51 Pac. 956; and see Ruggles v. Superior Court, 103 Cal. 125; 37 Pac. 211. An appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside a judgment for want of findings of fact to support it, which was dismissed because it was not an appealable order, cannot operate to stay proceedings in the trial court, nor deprive the court of power to hear and deny a motion for a new trial. Gregory v. Gregory, 102 Cal. 50; 36 Pac. 364. A stay of proceedings can be had only of orders or judgments which command or permit some act to be done. Bliss v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 543.

Proceedings upon the judgment. Proceedings to enforce a judgment are stayed by the filing of a sufficient undertaking on appeal from an order denying a new trial. Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 124 Cal. 331; 57 Pac. 71; and see Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278; Holland v. McDade, 125 Cal. 353; 58 Pac. 9; Baldwin v. Superior Court, 125 Cal. 584; 58 Pac. 185; Starr v. Krenzberger, 131 Cal. 41; 63 Pac. 135. An attempt to collect alimony by a writ of execution is a proceeding upon the judgment, and may be stayed on appeal. Anderson v. Anderson, 123 Cal. 445; 56 Pac. 61. The right of the appellant to have the execution stayed, pending an appeal from an order denying a new trial, is not impaired by the fact that the appeal from the judgment was dismissed. Tompkins v. Montgomery, 116 Cal. 120; 47 Pac. 1006; and see Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278. Where the supreme court, upon notice to the respondent's attorney, permits the appellant to file an undertaking staying execution on a judgment, pending an appeal from the judgment, and from an order denying a new trial, the issuance of execution is stayed until both appeals are decided; hence, the issuance of execution after the dismissal of the appeal from the order denying a new trial is improper, and the amount collected on the judgment will be ordered to be restored. Romine v. Cralle, 83 Cal. 432; 23 Pac. 525. A judgment declaring the forfeiture of a corporate charter is stayed by the giving of a sufficient undertaking, under this section. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. An appeal from an order setting aside a judgment has not the effect of reviving the judgment; such judgment no longer exists, so far as the assertion of any rights under it is concerned, until it is brought into force again by a reversal of the order setting it aside. Estate of Crozier, 65 Cal. 332; 4 Pac. 109; and see Peyeko v. Keefe, 114 Cal. 212; 46 Pac. 78. The provision that the appeal stays all proceedings upon the judgment in the court below does not restrict its effect elsewhere. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Proceedings upon the order. Pending an appeal from an order modifying a decree of divorce awarding the custody of the children, the power of the court to compel the enforcement of such modified order is suspended. Ex parte Queirolo, 119 Cal. 635; 51 Pac. 956. An appeal from an order granting a new trial operates to suspend the functions of the order, and leaves the judgment subsisting, for the purposes of an appeal therefrom, pending the appeal from the order. Henry v. Mergnire, 111 Cal. 1; 43 Pac. 387. An appeal by an executor from an order directing him to pay a certain sum as an unpaid family allowance, stays all proceedings; hence, he cannot be punished for contempt, where he refuses to obey such order. Ruggles v. Superior Court, 103 Cal. 125; 37 Pac. 211. Proceedings on an order for a writ of assistance are stayed by the filing of an undertaking for that purpose; but such stay is not permanent and final, pending the appeal, since, on the failure of the surety to justify, it becomes nugatory and of no avail. Boyer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 401; 42 Pac. 892. Whether an order appealed from is or is not appealable, will not be determined in advance of the hearing of the appeal upon its merits; and while a motion to dismiss the appeal is pending and undetermined, it is the duty of the trial court to refrain from enforcing the order. Hale etc. Silver Mining Co. v. Fox, 122 Cal. 56; 54 Pac. 270.

Pending appeal, court cannot change direction as to undertaking. When the necessary direction and bond have been given for a stay of proceedings upon appeal from a judgment, the court below has no further control over the matter, and cannot withdraw its direction, nor discharge the order after it has been complied with and the appeal and undertaking have been perfected. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong Co., 81 Cal. 222; 15 Am. St. Rep. 50; 22 Pac. 594. When the order of the court, fixing the amount of the undertaking on appeal to stay execution in a foreclosure suit, has been complied with, the appeal is perfected, and all further proceedings in the court are thereby stayed, and the court has no power to impose further conditions upon the appellant; hence, the court has no power thereafter to require an undertaking to be given in a larger amount. Hubbard v. University Bank, 120 Cal. 632; 52 Pac. 1070.

Cannot change record. While an appeal is pending, the trial court has no jurisdiction to allow an amendment to any pleading. Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 604; 10 Pac. 119.

Effect of appeal from judgment. After an appeal from a judgment, the trial court has no power to change the judgment appealed from so as to prevent, in effect, a review of alleged errors brought up by bill of exceptions. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 67 Cal. 176; 7 Pac. 480. The superior court cannot deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment, by amending it while the appeal is pending. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Myers, 72 Cal. 161; 13 Pac. 403. Pending an appeal from a judgment of divorce, which includes a judgment awarding the custody of minor children, the trial court has no jurisdiction to modify the judgment as to the custody of the children. Vosburg v. Vosburg, 137 Cal. 493; 70 Pac. 473. A bill of exceptions, prepared and settled as the basis of a motion for a new trial, and upon which such motion was heard and denied, and which constitutes the record upon appeal from the order, cannot be corrected by the superior court pending an appeal. Baker v. Borello, 131 Cal. 615; 63 Pac. 914. Pending an appeal from an order, the superior court has no more power to modify it, than it has to proceed and enforce it in its entirety. Stateler v. Superior Court, 107 Cal. 536; 40 Pac. 949.

Cannot entertain motions. A motion to vacate an injunction, contained in a judgment, is a proceeding upon the judgment, and upon the matters embraced therein, within the meaning of this section, and cannot be entertained by the court, pending an appeal, although the judgment contained a condition, upon the performance of which the defendant might move to have the judgment vacated or set aside. Rogers v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 183; 58 Pac. 452.

Cannot try case. Where an appeal is taken from an order setting aside a void judgment, the trial court cannot try the case until the appeal is heard and determined. Livermore v. Campbell, 52 Cal. 75.

Cannot set aside judgment or order. Pending an appeal from a judgment, and from an order refusing to set the same aside, the trial court loses jurisdiction of the cause, and has no authority of its own motion, to set the judgment aside. Peycke v. Keefe, 114 Cal. 212; 46 Pac. 78. Pending an appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, the trial court has no authority to vacate it or to set it aside. Stewart v. Taylor, 68 Cal. 5; 8 Pac. 605; and see Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 604; 10 Pac. 119.

Cannot forbid certification of transcript. After the appeal to the appellate court is complete, the action is removed from the court below, except as to matters not affected by the appeal; therefore an order of the trial court, forbidding the clerk to certify to a proposed transcript on appeal, is void. People v. Center, 54 Cal. 236.

Power of court in insolvency proceedings. Pending an appeal from an order granting an adjudication in insolvency, the court has no jurisdiction to compel the insolvent to prepare and file his inventory and schedules, or to proceed to the selection of an assignee, or to call a meeting of creditors, or to do any further thing in the proceeding, except only such things as may be done through a receiver for taking and preserving the property of the insolvent. Dennery v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 7; 24 Pac. 147. An appeal from a judgment declaring a corporation insolvent suspends the judgment until the determination of the appeal, and while the appeal is pending the court cannot carry into execution that part of its judgment authorizing the appointment of a receiver. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549. The transfer of insolvency proceedings, after the order of adjudication had been made, from the department in which they had been pending to the department in which the action for dissolution of the corporation was pending, cannot confer upon the court any greater power for the appointment of a receiver, pending an appeal, than the court had previously. State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549.

Injunction stayed when. Pending an appeal, a mandatory injunction is stayed and suspended. Schwarz v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 106; 43 Pac. 580; Clute v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 15; 132 Am. St. Rep. 54; 99 Pac. 362. An injunction, though restrictive in form, is mandatory, if it has the effect to compel the performance of a substantive act, and is stayed pending appeal. Mark v. Superior Court, 129 Cal. 1; 61 Pac. 436. Although, pending an appeal, the effect of a prohibitory injunction is not stayed or suspended, yet the court cannot, by attempting to enforce a prohibitory injunction, indirectly enforce a mandatory injunction, the effect of which is suspended on appeal; and where appellants were ordered to remove certain trade-signs from their premises, and prohibited from using the trade name thereon, and made no use of such name pending the appeal, except upon signs the property of their lessors, they cannot be punished for contempt for violation of the prohibitory injunction for merely allowing the signs to remain in the same condition pending the appeal. Schwarz v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 106; 43 Pac. 580. Pending an appeal from a judgment declaring a person entitled to office in a private corporation, all proceedings in the trial court are stayed: the court cannot, after appeal, enjoin the other directors of the corporation from interfering with the right of such plaintiff to the office. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58. An injunction is not dissolved or superseded by an appeal from the judgment awarding the injunction. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 130. Pending an appeal from a judgment granting a perpetual injunction, the trial court is not deprived of its power to punish a disobedience of the injunction as a contempt. Heinlen v. Cross, 63 Cal. 44. Pending an appeal from a judgment declaring that the plaintiff was elected and the defendant was not elected a director of a corporation, and granting no other relief, the plaintiff will not be restrained from performing his duties as such director: his assuming to be such director, while it may be in consequence of the judgment, is not a proceeding upon the judgment. Dulin v. Pacific etc. Coal Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123. An appeal from a judgment granting a perpetual injunction does not suspend such injunction during the pendency of the appeal, where it is merely prohibitory. Heinlen v. Cross, 63 Cal. 44; Schwarz v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 106; 43 Pac. 580; Rogers v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 183; 58 Pac. 452.

Effect of appeal on undertaking to prevent attachment. An undertaking given to a sheriff to prevent the levy of an attachment is neither destroyed nor affected by the giving of an undertaking to stay the enforcement of the judgment upon an appeal therefrom. Ayres v. Burr, 132 Cal. 125; 64 Pac. 120.

On possession of real property. An undertaking on appeal in unlawful detainer, given before the removal of the personal property of the defendant, stays the proceedings, and the defendant is entitled to remain in possession pending the appeal. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong Co., 81 Cal. 222; 15 Am. St. Rep. 50; 22 Pac. 594. An appeal by a defendant, accompanied by his abandonment of all defenses, except a claim for greater compensation, does not so affect the judgment as to destroy the plaintiff's right to possession.

Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rumpp, 104 Cal. 20; 37 Pac. 859.

On powers of receivers. The filing of the undertaking operates as a supersedeas, suspends all authority of the receiver under the order, withdraws from him the right to the control and possession of the property involved, and restores the same to the appealing party, from whom it has been taken. Jacobs v. Superior Court, 133 Cal. 364; 85 Am. St. Rep. 204; 65 Pac. 826. The functions of a receiver, appointed after judgment for the purpose of carrying the judgment into effect, are suspended by an appeal upon which a sufficient undertaking is given to stay proceedings upon the judgment; nor can a receiver be appointed to carry a judgment into effect after a stay bond has been given. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327; 18 Am. St. Rep. 192; 10 L. R. A. 627; 24 Pac. 121. The functions of a receiver, appointed in involuntary proceedings against an insolvent, are not suspended during an appeal from the adjudication in such proceedings. In re Real Estate Associates, 58 Cal. 356.

On motion for new trial. The pendency of an appeal from a judgment does not affect the jurisdiction of the trial court to hear and determine a motion for a new trial. Rayner v. Jones, 90 Cal. 78; 27 Pac. 24. The filing of an undertaking on appeal from a judgment does not stay action upon a motion for a new trial, and the court has power, pending such appeal, to grant a new trial: proceedings on motion for a new trial are not in the direct line of the judgment, but are independent and collateral thereto. Knowles v. Thompson, 133 Cal. 245; 65 Pac. 468. Pending appeal, the trial court has jurisdiction to issue a commission to take the deposition of a witness, with a view to its use on a new trial, should one be awarded. San Francisco Gas etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 30; 17 Ann. Cas. 933; 99 Pac. 359.

Appeal suspends judgment as evidence. The effect of an appeal from a judgment is to suspend the effect of the judgment as evidence until its final determination, even though the execution thereof is not stayed; hence, where an appeal is taken from a judgment foreclosing a mortgage, without a stay of execution, and the mortgagee made a sale, pending the appeal, at which he became the purchaser, and afterwards conveyed the title, pending the appeal, to the respondent, the effect of the reversal of the judgment is to nullify the title in the hands of the respondent, who was bound to take notice of all the proceedings in the cause and of the defeasible title of his grantor. Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106; 101 Am. St. Rep. 84; 65 L. R. A. 419; 76 Pac. 976.

Effect of premature appeal. Where an appeal from a judgment is premature and ineffectual, the trial court is not divested of jurisdiction to enter a subsequent judgment at any time: the appellate court does not acquire any jurisdiction of such appeal, whether its attention is called to the want of jurisdiction or not. Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1; 27 Pac. 52. Where a mandamus proceeding against an officer has been prematurely appealed, an ex parte order substituting the successor in office of the appellant, made by the appellate court inadvertently, is invalid, and must fall with the futile appeal, for want of a case to support it. Home for Inebriates v. Kaplan, 84 Cal. 486; 24 Pac. 119. The dismissal of an appeal as prematurely taken does not operate as an affirmance of the judgment; and such an appeal being absolutely void, it does not deprive the court below of its jurisdiction, and no stay of proceedings is effected thereunder. Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384; 62 Pac. 64.

Motion for new trial does not stay proceedings. The superior court has jurisdiction to preserve the status quo by issuing a restraining order, after judgment for the defendants, denying an injunction, and pending the determination of a motion for a new trial. Pierce v. Los Angeles, 159 Cal. 516; 114 Pac. 818; and see Pasadena v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 786, 109 Pac. 620, where the authorities are cited and reviewed.

No stay where proceedings ended. When the existence of the judgment appealed from affords all the relief awarded, and there is no proceeding to be had under it, the stay provided for in this section does not apply. Rogers v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 183; 58 Pac. 452; and see Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Effect of stay. The stay of proceedings, pending appeal, has the legitimate effect of keeping them in the condition in which they were when the stay was granted: it operates so as to prevent any future change in the condition of the parties. Schwarz v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. 106; 43 Pac. 580; Vosburg v. Vosburg, 137 Cal. 493; 70 Pac. 473; Application of De Lemos, 143 Cal. 313; 76 Pac. 1115; and see State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135; 35 Pac. 549. The superior court, after an appeal is perfected from a judgment, has not general power to stay execution; but where execution has been stayed, it has power to compel the sheriff to respect and observe such stay. Mannix v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 730; 109 Pac. 264. A stay of proceedings upon appeal from an order for the payment of alimony operates as a supersedeas. McAneny v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 6; 87 Pac. 1020. The sureties upon an undertaking to stay execution on appeal cannot be liable to any motion for entry of judgment against them, so long as the principal is protected against the issuance of execution against him. Starr v. Kreuzberger, 131 Cal. 41; 63 Pac. 134. The act of the parties in proceeding in accordance with the judgment is not affected by the provision that the appeal stays the enforcement of the judgment, which is limited to proceedings in the court below on the judgment. Rose v. Mesmer, 131 Cal. 631; 63 Pac. 1010.

Remedies against orders made pending appeal. Where an action of interpleader has been dismissed, and, under order of the court, the plaintiff has withdrawn the money deposited, and has subsequently appealed from an order setting aside the former judgment of dismissal, the court has no jurisdiction, pending such appeal, to grant an order for the repayment of the money into court, and prohibition lies to prevent the entering of such order. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 446; 41 Pac. 476. An order adjudging a person insolvent, and ordering a stay of proceedings, constitutes one order; and where the appeal is from the whole of the adjudication, the court has no power to modify the order staying the proceedings, pending the appeal, and such order will be annulled on certiorari. Stateler v. Superior Court, 107 Cal. 536; 40 Pac. 949. An order amending a judgment appealed from is erroneous, and an appeal lies from such order. Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 130.

Supersedeas. The object of a writ of supersedeas is, to stay proceedings in the trial court upon the judgment appealed from, and to suspend its enforcement until a determination of the appeal. Hoppe v. Hoppe, 99 Cal. 536; 34 Pac. 222. A supersedeas deprives the superior court of all power to enforce the order appealed from, either by execution or by proceedings for contempt, or through the appointment of a receiver. McAneny v. Superior Court, 150 Cal. 6; 87 Pac. 1020. Upon appeal from a judgment in an action to determine water rights, which confers upon the plaintiff the right to lay a pipe through the land of the defendant, the statutory undertaking on appeal in the sum of three hundred dollars stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment; and a supersedeas will issue to restrain any further proceedings. Daly v. Ruddell, 129 Cal. 300; 61 Pac. 1080. Upon appeal from a judgment in favor of a pledgee of a life-insurance policy, foreclosing the lien of the pledge, the ordinary bond upon appeal, in the sum of three hundred dollars, is sufficient to stay execution; and a supersedeas will issue to prevent a sale of the policy under the decree, pending the appeal. Commercial etc. Bank v. Hornberger, 134 Cal. 90; 66 Pac. 74. Where the appellant, in a state court, has filed a supersedeas bond staying execution of the judgment, he has the right to insist that the status quo shall be preserved until the final adjudication of the controversy upon the appeal; hence, pending such appeal, it is error for the state court to order the receiver of the appellant's property, in controversy, to turn it over to a United States marshal. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 147 Cal. 663; 82 Pac. 319. The writ of supersedeas is directed to the court whose action is sought to be restrained, or to some one of its officers; it is limited to restraining any proceeding upon the judgment appealed from, and cannot be employed, for any purpose, upon persons not parties to the judgment. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123; and see Rose v. Mesmer, 131 Cal. 631; 63 Pac. 1010. The power of a guardian is stayed, pending an appeal from the order appointing him, by the filing of a proper undertaking on appeal; but if he, notwithstanding such appeal, threatens to act as guardian, a writ of supersedeas will be issued against him. Coburn v. Hynes, 161 Cal. 685; 120 Pac. 26. An appeal from an order setting aside the satisfaction of a judgment has not the effect of restoring the entry of satisfaction, nor of precluding the execution of the judgment pending the appeal; and execution will not be stayed by a writ of supersedeas, mandamus, or prohibition, in the absence of a direction from the trial judge. Bateman v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 141; 72 Pac. 922. The power to issue a writ of supersedeas is one of the inherent powers of a court of appeals, to be exercised in any proper case, when it appears necessary to protect the rights of a litigant until final determination of his appeal. Reed Orchard Co. v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 648; 128 Pac. 9, 18. A writ of supersedeas may properly be issued by the appellate court to arrest further action by the court below, after the issuance of a mandatory injunction. Clute v. Superior Court, 155 Cal. 15; 132 Am. St. Rep. 54; 99 Pac. 362. The appellate court will grant a writ of supersedeas to stay the execution of a judgment, where an order was made, granting execution, while there was a proper bond on file to stay execution. Brown v. Rouse, 115 Cal. 619; 47 Pac. 601. Pending an appeal from an order made after final judgment for the payment of money, the undertaking on appeal from the order having been waived, but no appeal having been taken from the judgment, the appellate court has no authority to grant a stay of execution upon the judgment. Carit v. Williams, 67 Cal. 580; 8 Pac. 93. Upon appeal from a judgment ordering an accounting in a partnership business, and enjoining the defendants from interfering with the plaintiff in his conduct of the business as a managing partner, the appellate court will deny a writ of supersedeas, where the amount of a stay bond upon such appeal was not fixed. Doudell v. Shoo, 159 Cal. 448; 114 Pac. 579. A writ of supersedeas will not issue, in any case, where the statute does not provide for a stay of proceedings. Reed Orchard Co. v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 648; 128 Pac. 9, 18. A writ of supersedeas, or order for the stay of proceedings pending on an appeal, cannot be used to perform the functions of an injunction against the parties to the action, restraining them from any act in the assertion of their rights, other than to prevent them from using the process of the court to enforce judgment. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123; Rose v. Mesmer, 131 Cal. 631; 63 Pac. 1010. Grounds for staying execution of a judgment, other than upon the taking of an appeal, cannot be urged upon a motion for a writ of supersedeas in the appellate court, but should be first presented in the trial court. Swasey v. Adair, 88 Cal. 203; 26 Pac. 83.

Writ of prohibition. Whether the appellant is a party aggrieved, and entitled to appeal from an order, cannot be determined upon petition for a writ of prohibition to prevent the trial court from acting in the case, until the appeal is heard and determined. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 446; 41 Pac. 476.

Release from levy on execution. Under the provisions of this section prior to its amendment in 1873–74, the perfecting of an appeal from a money judgment, and the filing of an undertaking to stay proceedings, operated merely to stay proceedings on the judgment, but did not release from levy property already seized by the sheriff under an execution issued on the judgment before the appeal was effected. Ewing v. Jacobs, 49 Cal. 72. Upon notice of the filing of the notice of appeal, and the giving of the undertaking on appeal, under this section, to stay execution, it is the duty of the sheriff to release from levy all property taken under execution, regardless of the sufficiency or insufficiency of the sureties, and he cannot retain possession until the sureties have justified, or until their justification has been waived. Sam Yuen v. McMann, 99 Cal. 497; 34 Pac. 80. A sheriff is not warranted in retaining money collected under execution, pending an appeal from the judgment on which execution has not been stayed, the undertaking on appeal being insufficient: he should pay it over to the judgment creditor, for whom it was collected. Maze v. Langford, 16 Cal. App. 743; 117 Pac. 929.

Effect of appeal on attachment. Under this section and § 553, ante, an attachment may be continued in force, pending an appeal by the plaintiff from a judgment in favor of the defendant, upon the plaintiff's perfecting his appeal and filing the required undertaking; and this does not deprive the defendant of his property without due process of law. Primm v. Superior Court, 3 Cal. App. 208; 84 Pac. 786. This section and § 553, post, construed together, permit of an attachment being continued in force, pending an appeal by the plaintiff from a judgment in favor of the defendant, upon the plaintiff's perfecting his appeal and filing an undertaking as required by the final clause of this section. Primm v. Superior Court, 3 Cal. App. 208; 84 Pac. 786. Where, pending an appeal by the plaintiff, the lien of an attachment on real property was continued by an order of the court, under this section, without authority, and the effect of the order is to impose a continuing restraint on the defendant's right to the untrammeled enjoyment of his property, he is entitled to a writ of prohibition restraining the court from continuing the attachment; and, under such circumstances, the order will not be deemed a completed judicial act. Primm v. Superior Court, 3 Cal. App. 208; 84 Pac. 786.

Proceedings in matters not affected by order appealed from. A court has power to proceed upon any matter in an action not affected by the order appealed from. Bliss v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 543; Estate of Thayer, 1 Cal. App. 104; 81 Pac. 658. An appeal from an order refusing to dissolve a temporary injunction has not the legal effect of suspending the jurisdiction of the court over so much of the action as is not affected by the order. Bliss v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 543; and see Rogers v. Superior Court, 126 Cal. 183; 58 Pac. 452. The settlement and filing of the bill of exceptions, after judgment and appeal taken, is a matter embraced in the action and not affected by the judgment appealed from, and is within the power of the court after appeal taken; hence, such bill of exceptions will be considered on appeal. Colbert v. Rankin, 72 Cal. 197; 13 Pac. 491. Pending an appeal from an order decreeing a partial distribution of an estate, the court is not deprived of power to settle the final account of the executor, where such account does not contain any item relating to the distribution. Estate of Thayer, 1 Cal. App. 104; 81 Pac. 658. An appeal from an order granting general letters of administration has only the effect of suspending the order appealed from, and does not in any manner affect or suspend the jurisdiction of the court over the distinct proceedings of special administration of the estate, the object of which is to preserve the estate until general letters testamentary or of administration are granted; hence, the court has jurisdiction, pending such appeal, to order the administrator to turn over all the property in his possession, forthwith, to a special administrator appointed by the court. Estate of Heaton, 142 Cal. 116; 75 Pac. 662. An appeal from an order revoking the probate of a will has not the effect of reviving the powers and functions of the former executor; and the court has power to appoint a special ad ministrator to take charge of the estate. Estate of Crozier, 65 Cal. 332; 4 Pac. 109. After an appeal has been taken from an order pendente lite, directing the husband to pay counsel fees in an action by the wife for permanent support and maintenance, the trial court has power to direct the payment of further counsel fees to enable the wife to prosecute her action on appeal. Ex parte Winter, 10 Cal. 291; 11 Pac. 630. Pending an appeal from a decree of divorce, the trial court still has jurisdiction to grant temporary alimony, as the matter is not affected by the judgment appealed from; such alimony cannot be granted by the appellate court. Reilly v. Reilly, 60 Cal. 624. Where a receiver is appointed at the request of the plaintiff, for a purpose ancillary to the main object of the action, and judgment is afterwards rendered in favor of the defendant, an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment does not deprive the lower court of jurisdiction to hear and determine a motion made by the defendant for the discharge of the receiver. Baughman v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 572; 14 Pac. 207. Pending an appeal, the approval of an undertaking may be set aside by the trial court; and the filing of the transcript on appeal has not the effect of taking away such power. Palmer v. Galvin, 2 Cal. Unrep. 446; 6 Pac. 99. An appeal from an order dismissing a motion to vacate a prior order can have no effect to stay proceedings on such prior order. Credits Commutation Co. v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 82; 73 Pac. 1009. An adjudication in bankruptcy, though filed in the appellate court, by a defendant, subsequently to an appeal, does not stay the appeal in the state court. Reynolds v. Pennsylvania Oil Co., 150 Cal. 630; 89 Pac. 610.

Court may dispense with or limit security. This section applies to cases in which the executor, administrator, or guardian is a party plaintiff or defendant in an action, and he appeals from a judgment or order in such action; but it does not apply to an appeal by an administrator from an order directing him to pay a claim against the estate. Ex parte Orford, 102 Cal. 656; 36 Pac. 928. An appeal from an order of distribution by an executor does not entitle him to claim the benefit of § 965, post, as to undertakings on appeal, such appeal not being from an order made in the settlement of the estate of which he is executor; and to entitle such executor to the benefit of § 946, an order must be made dispensing with the undertaking, within the time allowed for filing the same. Estate of Skerrett, 80 Cal. 62; 22 Pac. 85. An administrator, in appealing from an order revoking his appointment, is not acting in another's right, within the meaning of this section, providing for an order dispensing with the undertaking on appeal. Estate of Danielson, 88 Cal. 480; 26 Pac. 505. It is not indispensably necessary that a judgment should have been rendered against an executor in his representative capacity, in order to warrant the county in dispensing with the undertaking; but it is sufficient if a showing is made that the matter in litigation really involves the rights of the estate, and that if the judgment shall be affirmed the property rights of such estate will be affected and its assets diminished. Kirsch v. Derby, 93 Cal. 573; 29 Pac. 218. A municipal officer, proceeded against in his official capacity, and not as an individual, is within this section, and on appeal by him the undertaking on appeal may be dispensed with. Scheerer v. Edgar, 67 Cal. 377; 7 Pac. 760; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109. The board of education of the city and county of San Francisco must, upon appeal, give an undertaking, or procure an order of the court dispensing with it: such board does not represent the city and county. Mitchell v. Board of Education, 137 Cal. 372; 70 Pac. 180. To entitle an executor to the benefit of this section, the order dispensing with the undertaking must be made within the time for filing the same: after the appeal has lapsed, it cannot be restored by an order subsequently made; and a direction that such order shall be entered nunc pro tunc is unavailing. Estate of Skerrett, 80 Cal. 62; 22 Pac. 85. To entitle certain parties to appeal, without filing an undertaking, the order dispensing with the undertaking must be made within the time fixed by law for filing the same. Crowley Launch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 10 Cal. App. 342; 101 Pac. 935; Estate of Skerrett, 80 Cal. 63; 22 Pac. 85. An order dispensing with an undertaking on appeal, made by the judge who tried the case, while the court was in session, and filed with the clerk, but not entered in the minutes, is an order of the court, within this section. Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511; 34 Pac. 109.

Necessity that executor or administrator give bond on appeal from revocation of probate or grant of letters. See note 20 Ann. Cas. 416.

Effect of appeal from injunction upon jurisdiction of trial court to punish contempt for its violation. See note 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1150.

Jurisdiction to award temporary alimony, suit money, or counsel fees pending appeal in divorce suit. See note 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 712.

Power of trial court to correct its record after appeal. See note 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 207.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 132; Hicks v. Michael, 15 Cal. 109; Mokelumne Hill etc. Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 10 Cal. 185; Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183; Woodbury v. Bowman, 13 Cal. 634; Smith v. Pollock, 2 Cal. 92; Dobbins v. Dollarhide, 15 Cal. 374.

§ 947. Undertaking may be in one instrument or several. The undertakings prescribed by sections nine hundred and forty-one, nine hundred and forty-two, nine hundred and forty-three, and nine hundred and forty-five, may be in one instrument or several, at the option of the appellant.

Legislation § 947. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 354 (New York Code, § 340), which read: "The undertaking prescribed by sections 348, 349, 350, and 352, may be in one instrument, or several, at the option of the appellant."

Undertaking may be in several instruments. If, in foreclosure cases, a judgment in personam is rendered against the defendants, and also one enforcing the lien, and an appeal is taken from the whole judgment, in order to stay proceedings upon the whole judgment the appellant must give an undertaking for costs, one in double the amount of the personal judgment, and one for the payment of waste and such deficiency as may remain due after the sale of the property, and all these undertakings may be in one instrument or several, at the option of the appellant. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 337. The undertakings on appeal and to stay execution may be contained in one instrument, where the undertakings, and the objects for which they are executed, can be clearly distinguished. Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 326; 9 Pac. 187.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. Englund v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 356.

§ 948. Justification of sureties on undertakings on appeal. The adverse party may except to the sufficiency of the sureties to any of the undertakings mentioned in sections nine hundred and forty-one, nine hundred and forty-two, nine hundred and forty-three, and nine hundred and forty-five, at any time within thirty days after notice of the filing of such undertaking; and unless they or other sureties, within twenty days after the appellant has been served with notice of such exception, justify before a judge of the court below, upon five days' notice to the respondent of the time and place of justification, execution of the judgment, order, or decree appealed from is no longer stayed; and in all cases where an undertaking is required on appeal by the provisions of this title, a deposit in the court below of the amount of the judgment appealed from, and three hundred dollars in addition, shall be equivalent to filing the undertaking; and in all cases the undertaking or deposit may be waived by the written consent of the respondent.

Justification of sureties. 'Ante, § 495.

Legislation § 948. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 355 (New York Code, § 341), as amended by Stats. 1865–66, p. 708, which read: "An undertaking on appeal shall be of no effect unless it be accompanied by the affidavit of the sureties that they are each worth the amount specified therein over and above all their just debts and liabilities exclusive of property exempt from execution, except where the judgment exceeds three thousand dollars and the undertaking is executed by more than two sureties; they may state in their affidavit that they are severally worth amounts less than that expressed in the undertaking, if the whole amount be equivalent to that of two sufficient sureties. The adverse party, however, may except to the sufficiency of the sureties to the undertaking or undertakings mentioned in section three hundred and forty-nine, three hundred and fifty, three hundred and fifty-one, and three hundred and fifty-two, at any time within thirty days after the filing of such undertaking; and unless they or other sureties, within twenty days after the appellant or appellants shall have been served with notice of such exception, justify before a judge of the court below, a county judge, or county clerk, upon five days' notice to the appellant, execution of the judgment or decree appealed from shall be no longer stayed; and in all cases where an undertaking is required on appeal by the provisions of this act a deposit in the court below of the amount of the judgment appealed from, and three hundred dollars in addition, shall be equivalent to filing the undertaking, and in all cases the undertaking or deposit may be waived by the written consent of the respondent." When enacted in 1872, § 948 read as now, except for the amendments of 1873–74, 1880, and 1905.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 338, (1) omitting "undertaking or" before "undertakings"; (2) substituting "respondent of the time and place of justification" for "appellant"; (3) inserting "order" after "judgment."

3. Amended by Code Amdts. 1880, p. 6, (1) inserting "any of" before "the undertakings mentioned," (2) omitting "a county judge" after "court below," and (3) substituting "shall be" for "is" before "equivalent."

4. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 173; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

5. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 155, (1) inserting "notice of" before "the filing" and (2) omitting "or county clerk" after "court below."

Exception to sureties. An objection to the form of the affidavit attached to an undertaking on appeal is not an objection to the sufficiency of the sureties, nor an objection which requires them to justify before the court below. Schacht v. Odell, 52 Cal. 447. The time to except to the sureties begins to run from the filing of the undertaking, and not from the service of the notice of appeal. Brown v. Green, 65 Cal. 221; 3 Pac. 811.

Justification of sureties. The justification of the sureties on a bond is a thing apart from its validity; but the qualification of the sureties is a material part of the bond. Maze v. Langford, 16 Cal. App. 743; 117 Pac. 929. A corporation organized for the purpose of becoming a surety upon bonds or undertakings, notwithstanding the provisions of §§ 1056, 1057, post, may be required, upon exception to its sufficiency as surety, under this section, to show surplus assets equal to the amount of its undertaking. Fox v. Hale etc. Mining Co., 97 Cal. 353; 32 Pac. 446. In a proper case, where the sureties on a stay bond have been excepted to, the appellant may give a new notice of justification, and, at the time noticed, if sufficient time within the prescribed limits is left, may tender a new bond, the sureties upon which may then justify. Brown v. Rouse, 115 Cal. 619; 47 Pac. 601. Where, on account of the insufficiency of the undertaking on appeal, the appellant files a new undertaking in the appellate court, approved by one of the justices, the respondent cannot require the sureties in the substituted undertaking to justify. Stevenson v. Steinberg, 32 Cal. 373.

Justification before whom. Before the amendment to this section in 1905, the county clerk and a judge of the superior court were vested by the statute with equal authority as to the justification of sureties. Boyer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 401; 42 Pac. 892. The decision of the clerk of the court, upon the justification of the sureties before him, could not be reviewed by the appellate court; the statute designated that officer as a tribunal for hearing and determining that question, and provided no mode by which his conclusion might be reviewed. Kreling v. Kreling, 116 Cal. 458; 48 Pac. 383; Boyer v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 401; 42 Pac. 892. Where the respondent excepts to the sureties on the undertaking on appeal, the sureties must justify before a county judge of the county where the suit is pending, where that officer is selected; and where such justification was before the county judge of another county, where the sureties resided, the appeal will be dismissed. Roush v. Van Hagen, 18 Cal. 668 (decided before the amendment to this section in 1880).

Effect of failure to justify. The failure of the sureties to justify, where excepted to, does not establish a failure to perfect the appeal, and is not a ground for a dismissal of the appeal (Schacht v. Odell, 52 Cal. 447; De Jarnatt v. Marquez, 127 Cal. 558; 78 Am. St. Rep. 90; 60 Pac. 45; Klingler v. Henderson, 137 Cal. 561; 70 Pac. 617): it merely affects the stay of execution. Swasey v. Adair, 83 Cal. 136; 23 Pac. 284; and see Wittram v. Crommelin, 72 Cal. 89; 13 Pac. 160. There is no effectual provision for the justification of the sureties on the undertaking for the appeal; although they may be required to justify under this section, yet, if they fail to justify, the only consequence is, that the execution is no longer stayed: the appeal would therefore be effectual although the sureties are worthless. Duncan v. Times-Mirror Co., 109 Cal. 602; 42 Pac. 147. The statutes contemplate but one proceeding to stay the execution, and the failure of the sureties to justify leaves the plaintiff in a position to enforce the execution of his judgment; and although a new undertaking cannot afterwards be filed in the court below, yet the appellate court has an inherent power to secure to the appellant the fruits of a successful appeal, if it can be done without depriving the respondent of a substantial right, and may make an order to operate as a supersedeas, upon proper terms. Hill v. Finnigan, 54 Cal. 493. Where the appellant filed the statutory undertaking to stay proceedings pending the appeal, but, through a mistaken method of procedure, failed to have the sureties justify when required, and two stay bonds were disapproved by the clerk, the proceedings were not thereby stayed; yet, good faith being shown, a new stay bond will be permitted to be filed in the appellate court, when approved by the superior judge upon notice, and a writ of supersedeas will be granted. Nonpareil Mfg. Co. v. McCartney, 143 Cal. 1; 76 Pac. 653. A stay bond upon appeal from a judgment foreclosing a mortgage is operative, notwithstanding the pecuniary insufficiency of the sureties, until the failure of the sureties to justify after exception taken; and a sale made after the giving of such stay bond, and prior to exception taken to the sureties, is void, and should be set aside upon motion. Wheeler v. Karnes, 130 Cal. 618; 63 Pac. 62.

Waiver of undertaking. Under a stipulation that the appellant has in due time given and filed a good and sufficient undertaking on appeal, it must be supposed either that a good and sufficient undertaking was filed, or that the filing of the undertaking was waived. Forni v. Yoell, 99 Cal. 173; 33 Pac. 887. Waiver of the undertaking on appeal must be made before the time for filing the undertaking has expired; but it need not be filed within that time, if it is required to be filed at all. Newman v. Maldonado, 3 Cal. Unrep. 540; 30 Pac. 833. A stipulation to have the case placed on the calendar out of its order for hearing does not constitute a waiver of the filing of the undertaking on appeal. Little v. Jacks, 68 Cal. 343; 8 Pac. 856; 9 Pac. 264; 11 Pac. 128. Where the sureties on a stay bond, after exception to their sufficiency, offered to justify, but the matter was continued, from time to time, at the respondent's suggestion, and he apparently abandoned the proceeding to justify, his contention that the sureties failed to justify cannot be sustained. Hubbard v. University Bank, 120 Cal. 632; 52 Pac. 1070.

Requisites of undertakings. See post, § 1057.

CODE COMMISSIONERS' NOTE. A party gave notice of justification before the clerk of the court on the 7th of November, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 5 P. M. of that day, and the sureties appeared upon such notice soon after ten of that day. It was held that the clerk acted properly in refusing to take their justification, the opposite party being absent, until the last hour stated in the notice. Lower v. Knox, 10 Cal. 480. A respondent gave notice April 20th, excepting to the sufficiency of the sureties on an undertaking on appeal, and appellant then gave notice that the sureties would justify on the 25th of the same month, and orders were afterwards made extending the time of justification to May 1st. Held, that the statute upon this point is peremptory, and that the court had no power to extend the time. Roush v. Van Hagen, 17 Cal. 121. Where respondent excepts to the sureties, they must justify before a county judge of the county where the suit is pending, where that officer is selected, and where such justification was before the county judge of another county, where the sureties resided, the appeal will be dismissed. Roush v. Van Hagen, 18 Cal. 668. Justification made before a county judge of a county other than that where the judgment was rendered, is not effectual for any purpose. Tevis v. O'Connell, 21 Cal. 512. A failure to justify when exceptions are taken, leaves the appeal as though no undertaking had been filed, and ineffectual for any purpose. Lower v. Knox, 10 Cal. 480. After notice of exception to the sufficiency of the sureties, they cannot justify without notice to the adverse party. Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361. When, on account of the insufficiency of the undertaking on appeal, the appellant files a new undertaking in the appellate court, approved by one of the justices, the respondent cannot require the sureties to justify. Stevenson v. Steinberg, 32 Cal. 373. If the sureties are excepted to, and appear before the justice to testify, and the party excepting then states before the justice that he knows the sureties to be good, and only excepted because his attorney told him to do so, this is a waiver of justification. Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 49.

§ 949. Undertakings in cases not specified. In cases not provided for in sections nine hundred and forty-two, nine hundred and forty-three, nine hundred and forty-four, and nine hundred and forty-five, the perfecting of an appeal by giving the undertaking or making the deposit mentioned in section nine hundred and forty-one, stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from, except where it directs the sale of perishable property; in which case the court below may order the property to be sold and the proceeds thereof to be deposited, to abide the judgment of the appellate court; and except, also, where it adjudges the defendant guilty of usurping, or intruding into, or unlawfully holding a public office, civil or military, within this state, and except, also, where the order grants, or refuses to grant, a change of the place of trial of an action; and except also where it orders a corporation or its officers or agents, or any of them, to give to a person adjudged to be a director, stockholder or member of such corporation a reasonable opportunity to inspect or take copies of such books, papers or documents of the corporation as the court finds that such director, stockholder or member is entitled by law to inspect or copy.

Appeal in condemnation proceedings is not a stay when. See post, § 1257.

Legislation § 949. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 356 (New York Code, § 342), which read: "In cases not provided for in sections 349, 350, 351, and 352, the perfecting of an appeal, by giving the undertaking, and the justification of the sureties thereon, if required, or making the deposit mentioned in section 348, shall stay proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from; except that where it directs the sale of perishable property, the court below may order the property to be sold, and the proceeds thereof to be deposited, to abide the judgment of the appellate court." When enacted in 1872, § 949 read as at present, except that it did not contain the last two exceptions.

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 408, adding the second exception.

3. Amended by Stats. 1905, p. 22, adding the last exception.

Scope of section. This section refers only to a stay of execution upon the order or judgment appealed from, in cases not provided for in §§ 942–945, ante. Rohrbacher v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 631; 78 Pac. 22; Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340; 64 Pac. 477; Carit v. Williams, 67 Cal. 580; 8 Pac. 93.

Construction of section. The provision of this section, declaring that the perfecting of an appeal stays proceedings in the court below upon the judgment or order appealed from, creates a statutory supersedeas, or a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from, or if a writ of execution is issued, a prohibition against the execution of the writ. Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 98 Cal. 304; 33 Pac. 123. The amendment to this section in 1905 did not, by implication, repeal § 1254, post. Reed Orchard Co. v. Superior Court, 19 Cal. App. 648; 128 Pac. 9.

Application of section. This section does not apply where there is not an appeal from the judgment, but only from an order made after judgment, denying a motion to set aside an execution. Carit v. Williams, 67 Cal. 580; 8 Pac. 93.

Sufficiency of undertaking. On appeal from a judgment foreclosing liens against a vessel, and providing for a sale of the vessel, with her engines, apparel, etc., the undertaking prescribed by § 941, ante, is sufficient to stay execution, and an undertaking under § 942, ante, is without consideration and void. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656. On appeal from an order granting a new trial, an undertaking for damages and costs is a sufficient undertaking to obtain a stay of proceedings pending the appeal. Ford v. Thompson, 19 Cal. 118.

Undertaking not required is void. A stay bond, where none is required, is without consideration and void. Olsen v. Birch, 1 Cal. App. 99; 81 Pac. 656.

Proceedings stayed. An undertaking on appeal, under § 941, ante, stays the proceedings pending the appeal, except in the cases provided for in §§ 942–945, ante, where it does not appear that the property to be sold under the execution on the judgment appealed from is perishable property (Root v. Bryant, 54 Cal. 182); hence, a motion to stay the execution will be granted. Cummings v. Cummings, 2 Cal. Unrep. 744; 13 Pac. 322; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340; 64 Pac. 477. A judgment determining the right to money deposited in court is stayed by the ordinary appeal bond for costs, although a judgment for costs is also made. McCallion v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc., 98 Cal. 442; 33 Pac. 329. Upon appeal from a judgment giving the plaintiff the right to lay a pipe through the land of the defendant, the undertaking prescribed by § 941, ante, stays proceedings in the court below. Daly v. Ruddell, 129 Cal. 300; 61 Pac. 1080. On appeal from a judgment for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon personal property, execution is stayed by the undertaking on appeal as provided by § 941, ante. Snow v. Holmes, 64 Cal. 232; 30 Pac. 806. A judgment foreclosing a pledge, and directing a sale of the pledged property, is stayed by an undertaking in accordance with § 941, ante, and a writ of supersedeas will issue to prevent the execution of the decree, pending the appeal. Rohrbacher v. Superior Court, 144 Cal. 631; 78 Pac. 22. An undertaking on appeal, as prescribed by § 941, ante, stays proceedings on the judgment in an action by a vendee against his vendor, by which, after directing that the plaintiff recover a certain sum of money from the defendant, the sale of the land is directed, and deficiency judgment provided for, where, at the time, the plaintiff is in possession of the premises. Owen v. Pomona Land etc. Co., 124 Cal. 331; 57 Pac. 71. A judgment in a partnership accounting, adjudging that the plaintiff is entitled to a certain sum, and directing the sale of partnership real estate, and if there be any deficiency, a judgment for such deficiency against the defendant, is stayed by the undertaking prescribed by § 941, ante. Painter v. Painter, 98 Cal. 625; 33 Pac. 483. An appeal from an order appointing a receiver to collect alimony does not operate to enlarge the rights of the plaintiff to issue an execution on a judgment awarding alimony, so as to prevent its being stayed by the undertaking required by § 941, ante. Anderson v. Anderson, 123 Cal. 445; 56 Pac. 61. Where, in divorce proceedings, an order modifying a judgment awards the custody of a child of the parties to the father, and the mother delivers the child to the father in pursuance thereof, the giving of an undertaking on appeal, under § 941, ante, does not entitle the mother to the custody of the child, pending the appeal. Application of De Lemos, 143 Cal. 313; 76 Pac. 1115. A decree in partition, settling rights of property, is stayed by an undertaking executed in accordance with § 941, ante. Born v. Horstmann, 80 Cal. 452; 22 Pac. 169. Upon appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside an order directing execution to issue, the giving of a three-hundred-dollar undertaking operates to stay proceedings on the order appealed from, but proceedings on a former judgment and execution are not stayed. Weldon v. Rogers, 154 Cal. 632; 98 Pac. 1070. On appeal from an order refusing to vacate a prior order settling the account of a receiver, and directing him to pay a large sum of money upon certain claims, the ordinary bond on appeal merely stays the order appealed from, but can have no effect to stay proceedings on the prior order. Credits Commutation Co. v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 82; 73 Pac. 1009. Upon an appeal from an order appointing an administrator, an undertaking under § 941, ante, stays all proceedings upon the order. Estate of Woods, 94 Cal. 566; 29 Pac. 1108. An order directing an administrator to pay money, as a family allowance, to the heir of the estate, is stayed by an undertaking given as required by § 941, ante. Pennie v. Superior Court, 89 Cal. 31; 26 Pac. 617. A proceeding on a decree of distribution is stayed by an undertaking in accordance with § 941, ante, on appeal by a legatee from such decree. Estate of Schedel, 69 Cal. 241; 10 Pac. 334. An order granting an adjudication of insolvency, not being a case in which a separate stay bond is required on appeal, is stayed by the ordinary appeal bond for costs. Dennery v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 7; 24 Pac. 147. An appeal from a judgment rendered in favor of the contestant in an election contest has the effect to suspend the judgment; hence, where the contestee had entered office before the rendition of the judgment, he is entitled to retain it pending appeal. Day v. Gunning, 125 Cal. 527; 58 Pac. 172. An appeal from a judgment removing a board of supervisors, ipso facto, operates as a supersedeas, and suspends the effect of the judgment, so as to restore the board to its right to continue in office until the final determination of the appeal. Morton v. Broderick, 118 Cal. 474; 50 Pac. 644. A judgment granting or denying an application for a writ of mandamus is stayed by the undertaking prescribed by § 941, ante. Palache v. Hunt, 64 Cal. 473; 2 Pac. 245.

Sale of perishable property not stayed. Upon appeal from a judgment foreclosing liens on personal property, described as "mortgages and liens," the court having also found that the property ordered to be sold was "perishable property," the ordinary three-hundred-dollar bond will not stay the judgment nor warrant a writ of supersedeas. Tolle v. Heydenfeldt, 138 Cal. 56; 70 Pac. 1013. The supreme court has power to order a stay of proceedings, pending an appeal from an order directing a sale of certain property as perishable property. Rogers v. Superior Court, 158 Cal. 467; 111 Pac. 357. An order made after final judgment, for the sale of perishable property, is appealable, notwithstanding a stay of proceedings by virtue of an appeal. Rogers v. Superior Court, 158 Cal. 467; 111 Pac. 357.

Usurpation, etc., of public office. An appeal from a judgment declaring that the defendant had usurped and intruded into and was unlawfully exercising office, and that the relator was entitled to the office, has not the effect of staying execution of the judgment. Ex parte Henshaw, 73 Cal. 486; 15 Pac. 110. An appeal by an intervener in an action, where it is determined that the defendant unlawfully held office and that the relator was entitled thereto, does not operate to stay the judgment. People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11; 70 Pac. 918. The provision in this section, that the appeal does not stay proceedings upon the judgment, where it adjudges the defendant guilty of usurping or intruding into or unlawfully holding public office, civil or military, within the state, authorizes the construction, that proceedings upon the judgment are stayed when it affirms the right of the plaintiff to any office which is not public. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Order refusing to change place of trial. An appeal from an order refusing to change the place of trial does not operate to stay proceedings in the lower court. Howell v. Thompson, 70 Cal. 635; 11 Pac. 789; and see People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584. Although an appeal from an order denying a motion to change the place of trial entitles the appellant to a continuance of the case in the court below while such appeal is pending, yet it does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to proceed and try the action, in such sense that prohibition would lie. People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584. Where an order refusing to change the place of trial is reversed on appeal, a judgment rendered against the appellant before the reversal of the order will be reversed on an appeal therefrom, without inquiring as to the commission of errors on the trial, although the appellant may have appeared at the trial and contested the right of the respondent to recover. Howell v. Thompson, 70 Cal. 635; 11 Pac. 789; and see People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584.

Injunction. An appeal from a judgment granting a perpetual injunction does not suspend the injunction during the pendency of the appeal, nor does it deprive the court in which the judgment was rendered of the power to punish a disobedience of the injunction as a contempt. Heinlen v. Cross, 63 Cal. 44.

Writ of assistance. A writ of assistance to recover the possession of land, sold under mortgage foreclosure sale, will not be stayed, where the only undertaking on appeal is that given under § 941, ante. California etc. Savings Bank v. Graves, 129 Cal. 649; 62 Pac. 259.

Judgment not evidence, pending appeal. This section includes a judgment which is self-executing; and an appeal therefrom does not impair this effect, except that while the appeal is pending it is not available as evidence of the facts adjudged. Foster v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 279; 47 Pac. 58.

Implied power of courts to issue supersedeas. See note 67 Am. St. Rep. 714.

Legislation § 950. 1. Enacted March 11, 1872; based on Practice Act, § 346, as amended by Stats. 1863–64, p. 247, which read: "On an appeal from a final judgment, the appellant shall furnish the court with a transcript of the notice of appeal, the pleadings, or amended pleadings, as the case may be, which form the issues tried in the case, the judgment, and such other parts of the judgment roll, and no more, as are necessary to present or explain the points relied on, and the statement, if there be one, certified by the attorneys of the parties to the appeal, or by the clerk, to be correct. On appeal from a judgment rendered on an appeal, or from an order, the appellant shall furnish the court with a copy of the notice of appeal, the judgment or order appealed from, and a copy of the papers used on the hearing in the court below, such copies to be certified in like manner to be correct. If any written opinion be placed on file in rendering the judgment or making the order in the court below, a copy shall be furnished. If the appellant fail to furnish the requisite papers, the appeal may be dismissed." When enacted in 1872, § 950 read: "On an appeal from a final judgment, the appellant must furnish the court with a copy of the notice of appeal, the pleadings, or amended pleadings, which form the issues tried in the case, the judgment, bills of exception, and such other parts of the judgment roll, and no more, as are necessary to present or explain the points relied on."

2. Amended by Code Amdts. 1873–74, p. 338, to read: "On an appeal from a final judgment, the appellant must furnish the court with a copy of the notice of appeal, of the judgment roll, and of any bill of exceptions or statement in the case upon which the appellant relies. Any statement used on motion for a new trial or settled after decisions of such motion when the motion is made upon the minutes of the court, as provided in section six hundred and sixty-one, or any bill of exceptions settled, as provided in sections six hundred and forty-nine or six hundred and fifty, or used on motion for a new trial, may be used on appeal from a judgment equally as upon appeal from the order granting or refusing the new trial."

3. Amendment by Stats. 1901, p. 173; unconstitutional. See note ante, § 5.

4. Amended by Stats. 1915, p. 205, (1) in first sentence, striking out (a) "an" in the phrase "On an appeal," and (b) "or statement in the case," after "bill of exceptions"; (2) striking out the second sentence.
